BOOK REVIEW DIGEST

1924

LIBRARY
OF THE
SAN FRANCISCO THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY
SAN ANSELMO
CALIFORNIA

THE
BOOK REVIEW DIGEST

TWENTIETH ANNUAL CUMULATION

REVIEWS OF 1924 BOOKS

EDITED BY
MARION A. KNIGHT
AND MERTICE M. JAMES

Property of Graduate Theological Union
Return to
San Francisco Theological Seminary

NEW YORK
THE H. W. WILSON COMPANY
1925

PRINTED IN U. S. A.

PREFACE

The twentieth annual volume of the Book Review Digest brings together about twenty-four hundred books with descriptive notes and excerpts from reviews. There has been but one addition during the year to the list of reviews indexed, the Saturday Review of Literature, but quotations have frequently been made from reviews not on the list, especially in the case of technical books. Excerpts appear from the Journal of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry, Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering, Science, Journal of the American Chemical Society, American Journal of Public Health, and the American Anthropologist, though these journals have not been regularly indexed. Arrangements have been made for the inclusion of these publications and some others on next year's list. Announcement of such additions will be made in the March number, which marks the beginning of the Digest's year.

Once more we make grateful acknowledgment to Mr Ellwood H. McClelland, Technology Librarian of the Carnegie Library of Pittsburgh, for checking technical books to be included; to Miss Mary E. Furbeck, of the Economics Division of the New York Public Library, for the list of public documents for small libraries; and to Wilma Adams, Lillian Bender, Elsie Corwin and Caroline Keller, members of the staff of the Book Review Digest, for their interested and faithful service.

M. A. K.

Publications from which Digests of Reviews are Made

Am Econ R—American Economic Review. $5. American Economic Association, New Haven, Conn.
Am Hist R—American Historical Review. $5. Macmillan Company, 66 Fifth Av., New York.
Am J Soc—American Journal of Sociology. $3. University of Chicago Press, Chicago, Ill.
Am Pol Sci R—American Political Science Review. $4. Frederic A. Ogg, University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis.
Ann Am Acad—Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science. $5. 39th St. and Woodland Av., Philadelphia, Pa.
Atlantic's Bookshelf—Atlantic Monthly. The reviews are reprinted separately in pamphlet form. Copies may be had by any librarian, without charge, on application to the Atlantic Monthly Company, 8 Arlington St., Boston.
Booklist—Booklist. $2. A. L. A. Publishing Board, 86 East Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.
Bookm—Bookman. $4. G: H. Doran Co., 244 Madison Av., New York.
Boston Transcript—Boston Evening Transcript. $5.50. (Wednesday and Saturday). Boston Transcript Co., 324 Washington St., Boston, Mass.
Canadian Hist R—Canadian Historical Review. $2. University of Toronto Press, Toronto, Ont.
Cath World—Catholic World. $4. 120-122 West 60th St., New York.
Class Philol—Classical Philology. $4. University of Chicago Press, Chicago, Ill.
Dial—Dial. $5. Dial Pub. Co., 152 West 13th St., New York.
Educ R—Educational Review. $3. Doubleday, Page & Co., Garden City, N.Y.
El School J—Elementary School Journal. $2.50. Dept. of Education, University of Chicago, Chicago, Ill.
Eng Hist R—English Historical Review. 32s. Longmans, Green & Co., (39 Paternoster Row, London), 55 Fifth Av., New York.
Freeman—Freeman. Discontinued Mar. 5, 1924.
Ind—Independent. $3. Independent Publications, Inc., 9 Arlington St., Boston.
Int Bk R—Literary Digest International Book Review. $2.50. Funk & Wagnalls Co., 354-360 Fourth Av., New York.
Int J Ethics—International Journal of Ethics. $3. Prof. James H. Tufts, University of Chicago, Chicago, Ill.
J Geol—Journal of Geology. $6. University of Chicago Press, Chicago, Ill.
J Home Econ—Journal of Home Economics. $2.50. American Home Economics Assn., 1211 Cathedral St., Baltimore, Md.
J Philos—Journal of Philosophy. $4. Sub-Station 84, New York.
J Pol Econ—Journal of Political Economy. $4. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av., Chicago, Ill.
J Religion—Journal of Religion. $3. University of Chicago Press, Chicago, Ill.
Lit R—Literary Review of the New York Evening Post. $1. N.Y. Evening Post, Inc., 20 Vesey St., New York.
Management and Adm—Management and Administration. $5. Ronald Press Company, 20 Vesey St., New York.
Mod Philol—Modern Philology. $4. University of Chicago Press, Chicago, Ill.
Nation—Nation. $5. Nation Press, 20 Vesey St., New York.
Nation and Ath—Nation and Athenæum. $8.58. 10 Adelphi Terrace, London, W. C.
Nature—Nature. £2 17s. $14. Macmillan Company, 66 Fifth Av., New York.
New Repub—New Republic. $5. Republic Publishing Co., Inc., 421 West 21st St., New York.
New Statesman—New Statesman. 30s. Statesman Pub. Co., 10 Great Queen St., Kingsway, London, W. C. 2.
N Y Times—New York Times Book Review. $1. N.Y. Times Co., Times Square, New York.
N Y Tribune—New York Herald and Tribune. $2. 225 W. 40th St., New York.
N Y World—The World. $4. Pulitzer Building, Park Row, New York.
No Am—North American Review. $4. North American Review Corporation, 9 East 37th St., New York.
Outlook—Outlook. $5. Outlook Company, 381 Fourth Av., New York.
Pol Sci Q—Political Science Quarterly. $5 (including supplement). Academy of Political Science, Kent Hall, Columbia University, New York.
R of Rs—American Review of Reviews. $4. Review of Reviews Co., 55 Fifth Av., New York.
Sat R—Saturday Review. 30s. 9 King St., Covent Garden, London, W. C. 2.
Sat R of Lit—Saturday Review of Literature. $3. The Saturday Review, 236 East 39th St., New York.
School Arts M—School Arts Magazine. $3. Davis Press, Inc., 44 Portland St., Worcester, Mass.
School R—School Review. $2.50. Dept. of Education, University of Chicago, Chicago, Ill.
Spec—Spectator. £1 10s. 13 York St., Covent Garden, London, W. C. 2.
Springf'd Republican—Springf'd Republican. $6. The Republican Pub. Co., Springf'd, Mass.
Survey—Survey. $5. Survey Associates, Inc., 112 East 19th St., New York.
The Times [London] Lit Sup—The Times Literary Supplement. 17s 4d. $3.80. The Times, North American Office, 247 Park Av., New York.
Theatre Arts Mo—Theatre Arts Monthly. $4. Theatre Arts, Inc., 7 East 42d St., New York.
World Tomorrow—World Tomorrow. $1. Fellowship Press, Inc., 396 Broadway, New York.
Yale R n s—Yale Review (new series). $4. Yale Publishing Assn., Inc., 120 High St., New Haven, Conn.

In addition to the above list the Book Review Digest sometimes quotes from the Cleveland Open Shelf; Commission on the Church and Social Service, Information Service; Detroit News; Engineering News-Record; Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News; New York Public Library New Technical Books; Pittsburgh Monthly Bulletin; Pratt Institute Quarterly Booklist; Pratt Institute Quarterly List of New Technical and Industry Books; St Louis Library Bulletin; Wisconsin Library Bulletin; and other bulletins.

EXPLANATIONS

[2] This book is mentioned for the first time in this issue.

Abbreviations of publisher's names will be found in the Publishers' Directory at the end of this number.

The descriptive note is separated from critical notices of a book by a dash.

The plus and minus signs preceding the names of the magazine indicate the degree of favor or disfavor of the entire review.

In the reference to a magazine, the first number refers to the volume, the next to the page, the letters to the date and the last figures to the number of words in the review.

Book Review Digest

Devoted to the Valuation of Current Literature

Reviews of 1924 Books

ABBOT, CHARLES GREELEY. Everyday mysteries; secrets of science in the home. (Young people's shelf of science) 198p il $2 Macmillan

600 Science 23-13328

" 'Everyday Mysteries' discusses many familiar things revealing the scientific background of operations which one usually takes for granted, as: fixing the clock, doorbells, how blueberries are cultivated, what baking powder and yeast do, and story of the old shoes. Each chapter treats of a different subject and may be read without reference to the rest of the book. The form of narrative varies enough to avoid the monotony which a simple description might have had."—Educ R

Reviewed by S. W. Vought
Educ R 67:118 F '24 60w

"The book is a success and both the editor and author are to be congratulated. There are surprisingly few slips." W. D. Bancroft
+ J Phys Chem 28:672 Je '24 320w

"Persons of all ages will find its pages entertaining and instructive."
+ Lit R p354 D 8 '23 100w

"The book contains a quantity of excellent photographs and is not labored in any part. The average high-school boy who is taking general science or elementary physics should find it both valuable and pleasing." G. M. Goldman
+ N Y World p2e Je 29 '24 90w
Wis Lib Bul 20:99 Ap '24

ABBOTT, EDITH, comp. Immigration. (Social service ser.) 809p $4.50 Univ. of Chicago press

325.7 Immigration 24-8650

"This is not a book of 'readings.' It is a source book, compiled to make available for students of immigration a collection of published documents and hitherto unpublished case records that will throw light on some of the historical, legal, and social aspects of the subject. It is hoped that this collection of material will make it possible for large numbers of students to use conveniently an important series of documents heretofore accessible to very few, and will place at the disposal of students and others interested in immigration problems a body of case records hitherto not available in any form."—Preface

Am Pol Sci R 18:647 Ag '24 150w

"A comprehensive and invaluable textbook for the student of the problems of the alien. While designed for the specialist rather than for the general reader, it contains a large amount of material of interest to all who are concerned with social advancement."
+ Bookm 59:481 Je '24 80w
Boston Transcript p6 My 24 '24 330w
Cleveland p54 Jl '24
St Louis p336 O '24

ABBOTT, JOHNSTON. La Roux. 348p $2.25 Macmillan

24-24947

The setting of this tale of adventure is the wilderness of Canada in the early days of its settlement. To a little town of New France comes Mlle. de Chatillon, a high-spirited French girl, in search of one Vicomte de la Roux who had been robbed by her father and to whom she wishes to make restitution. The search for La Roux involves many perils, but with courage and persistence Mademoiselle continues her search, aided by a few friends, among whom is M. Regnier, a young bachelor highly esteemed by the governor of New France. The searching party has a severe encounter with the Iroquois Indians which would have been fatal but for the bravery of Regnier. At length when hope of finding La Roux is abandoned, strange happenings take place and Regnier is accused of murder and bigamy. Happily a friend comes to his aid, proves the charge false, and Regnier comes to his own.

"Not until afterward do we feel skepticism for the story, some sympathy for the villain, and some shame for ourselves; and even now we confess pleasure that, gently persuaded by the good English language well used, we were caught reading fast." D. F. H.
+ Boston Transcript p5 N 15 '24 600w

"We only wish that all stories offered in the guise of 'adventure' would prove to be so well written and thoughtfully planned." E. S. A.
+ Lit R p12 D 6 '24 200w

"The quieter passages are the best, because best suited to the author's calm and pleasant style. Père Dufour, the Jesuit priest who proved so good a friend to Regnier and to Mademoiselle, is a very likable character."
+ — N Y Times p17 Ja 4 '25 400w
N Y Tribune p14 Ja 18 '25 200w
Outlook 138:565 D 3 '24 70w
Springf'd Republican p7a D 28 '24 240w

ABBOTT, WILBUR CORTEZ. Conflicts with
2 oblivion. 404p il $4 Yale univ. press [18s Milford]

920 Great Britain—Biography 24-23619

The biographical essays in this volume are illustrations of the vicissitudes of fame, stories of the struggle to achieve reputation, and the adventures of those reputations when once achieved. They are studies in the "universal conflicts with oblivion." Contents: Proem; Introduction; The serious Pepys; An accidental Victorian; Benjamin Disraeli: A true Elizabethan: Sir William Monson; Colonel Thomas Blood: crown-stealer; The fame of Cromwell; A servant of the crown: Sir John Wentworth; An uncanonized saint: The Venerable Bede; Colonel John Scott of Long Island. Index.

Subject, title and pseudonym index at end of alphabet

ABBOTT, W. C.—Continued

"Professor Abbott does not always differ, after all, with the verdicts of history. But he usually gives us some new sidelight on the matter. His volume about others proves him to be a great scholar. Whatever becomes of his subjects, in the race with oblivion he will not be left behind." I. W. Lawrence

+ Boston Transcript p3 D 6 '24 1500w

N Y Times p14 O 26 '24 660w

"Professor Abbott has rehearsed the careers of these men with spirit and humor and a lively sense of the romantic, ironical and profoundly human elements with which he is dealing." G. H. Carson

N Y Tribune p12 Ja 18 '25 1000w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p10 Ja 1 '25 180w

ABDULLAH, ACHMED. Shackled. 245p $2 Brentano's

24-22269

"Mr. Abdullah in 'Shackled' explains the Eastern mind of a proud Shareef, his hate of modern life, the marriage of his daughter with one less in blood, his forgiveness of this frightful outrage to his dignity."—Int Bk R

"The story is excellently told; it is beautifully written." K. S.

+ Boston Transcript p7 O 18 '24 700w

"Mr. Abdullah splashes about in rich colors; but he never gets far from the truth." A. D. Douglas

Int Bk R p858 N '24 40w

"The pictures are brilliant, swiftly done, poignant with richness of feeling for the Eastern traditions. The story itself is simple; the telling of it is a great part of the pleasure it will give." W. de Wagstaffe

+ Lit R p12 O 11 '24 650w

"If Mr. Abdullah were a finer writer, a deeper intellect and more surely master of his material, his book might have taken a foremost place among those short masterpieces of modern composition of which Frank Swinnerton's 'Nocturne' is an example. As it is, a certain violence in handling, a desire for emotional tension that narrowly escapes melodrama at times, limits the appeal of 'Shackled.'"

— + N Y Times p16 O 12 '24 580w

"Too many ingredients, one perceives, have gone into the making of this bizarre life. The result is interesting. At times it is tasty. But it is strangely indigestible."

— + N Y Tribune p9 D 21 '24 360w

Reviewed by Waldo Frank

Sat R of Lit 1:375 D 13 '24 900w

ACKERMANN, ALFRED SEABOLD ELI. Popular fallacies explained and corrected (with copious references to authorities); with an introd. by Sir Richard Gregory. (Readers reference lib.) 3d ed 984p $6 Lippincott [12s 6d Old Westminster press]

Errors, Popular [24-153]

The 1909 edition of this book contained 460 fallacies. The present edition deals with 1350. These are popular and mistaken notions covering a widely diversified field of subjects, the largest division belonging to the scientific and medical class. The fallacies are classified in twenty-five sections, each one is corrected, its origin usually explained and authorities are quoted.

"Most amusing and instructive book."

+ New Statesman 22:sup28 O 13 '23 150w

"The book is as interesting as a dictionary, than which the whole world of print affords nothing more fascinating. Whoever begins looking up in it some particular thing is likely to keep on reading and looking for other matters, regardless of the flight of time. It is also as useful as a dictionary."

+ N Y Times p20 Jl 6 '24 320w

"Interesting and instructive work."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p693 O 18 '23 40w

ADAM, HELEN DOUGLAS. Elfin pedlar, and tales told by Pixy Pool; with a foreword by John A. Hutton. 184p il $2.50 Putnam [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

821 24-7133

A little Scottish girl of twelve is the author of this volume of verses. She "lisped in numbers," for the foreword tells us that at the age of two she rhymed when playing with her dolls. Her verses show a sure sense of form and rhythm and are full of fancy.

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Bookm 60:165 O '24 130w

"Little Helen Adam may write more and she may write better, but if nothing else comes from her pen this one volume places her in the class with Sara Teasdale, for delicacy of thought, beauty of word, perfection of line and that exquisite reticence of words which is the very essence of pure poetry." L. H. G.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 12 '24 380w

Cleveland p83 N '24

"It is well to say that Helen Adam achieved her position in the literary world not because of her lack of years but because of her possession of art. Of an entirely different character from the usual abnormalities of works by young authors, the poetry of Helen Adam is remarkable for its finish. There is nothing childish about her work whatever. It is full-grown, and, of its kind, perfect. If experience be necessary for the production of poetry, then we need to revise our understanding of experience. . . Already she has taken England by storm." Fletcher Allen

+ Int Bk R p448 My '24 1950w

N Y Times p6 Je 8 '24 550w

"In 'The Elfin Pedlar' there is not the naïveté of the child, for which we value the unspoiled mind, but lively fancy, expressing itself through a speech that reflects familiarity with literary forms and usages." D: Morton

Outlook 137:318 Je 25 '24 170w

St Louis p418 D '24

ADAMS, FRANKLIN PIERCE. So much velvet. 144p $2 Doubleday

811 24-29881

This is a collection of humorous verses, with some prose passages, all of which have appeared in The Conning Tower of the New York World. Included in the varied contents are parodies and renderings from Horace and Propertius in modern idiom.

"In this collection jest and soberness, satire and sympathy jostle each other. Mr. Adams writes sincerely, and when he attempts to lampoon any subject his den is dipped with gall. On the other hand, if the subject requires a different treatment he is able to write as sympathetically." J. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p2 N 15 '24 300w

Outlook 139:71 Ja 14 '25 360w

"The charm of the man sparkles in his verse. It consists of a salty sincerity."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:410 D 27 '24 460w

"F. P. A.'s work is full of delicate humor and formal beauty, and thus fulfills the prime requirements of light verse. It worthily maintains a fair tradition." H. M. P.

+ Springf'd Republican p14 D 5 '24 280w

ADAMS, JOSEPH QUINCY, ed. Chief pre-^{2} Shakespearean dramas. 712p $3.75 Houghton

822 English drama. Mysteries and miracle-plays, English 24-23608

This collection of plays illustrates the origin and development of the English drama down to the Elizabethan period. The dramas include liturgical plays dealing with the story of Christ, with miscellaneous biblical stories and with the legends of saints, folk plays, farces, school plays, court dramas, and plays of the professional troupes. For the convenience of the college student the author has furnished translations of the medieval Latin texts and explained all difficult words in footnotes.

Boston Transcript p4 D 10 '24 380w

"It is to be hoped that Professor Adams's book will prove seductive. It differs, by reason of its material, in an interesting, not to say, illuminating, way, from the Matthews-Lieder collection. It is not so much the mirror of a changing culture—although since several countries are covered, it is also that—as it is an exhibition of the evolution of English drama." P. A. Hutchison

N Y Times p27 D 14 '24 260w

ADAMS, SAMUEL HOPKINS. Siege. 402p $2 Boni & Liveright

24-4507

Aunt Augusta Ruyland, a forceful personality belonging to the days of benevolent despotism, in the environment of a modern factory town is the main character of the story. She is the old and fiery leader of her clan of Ruylands, meek and submissive to her orders by divine right. The town that Ruyland money has built likewise lies in the palm of her hand. Into this feudal atmosphere comes Fredericka Gage when she marries Kennion Ruyland. Modern, independent, she strongly resents Aunt Augusta's interference and takes sides with the factory workers when they strike against her overlordship. The battle is long and bitter, and ends only when an accident to Aunt Augusta paves the way for smoother going. Her somewhat doubtful victory leaves her a pathetic figure, while Fredericka is at last sure in her mind that the weak-spirited Kennion is not the man she loves.

Booklist 20:337 Je '24

"No author has come nearer to getting on paper the real problem of woman in the present age than Mr. Adams has done in this book." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p8 F 27 '24 1350w

"Mr. Adams has written a distinctly interesting novel in spite of the fact that his character-drawing seems at times to be influenced more by his mood than by consistency." Tracy Lewis

+ — Int Bk R p475 My '24 350w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton

Lit R p687 Ap 19 '24 520w

"Few recent novels dealing with the antagonism of the old and the new generation have presented the theme as successfully."

+ Nation 118:sup456 Ap 16 '24 70w

"Though a very long novel, 'Siege' does not often drag, and some of it is emphatically interesting while in Augusta Ruyland, powerful and lonely, learning at the last that though she was still 'potent to ban,' she could no longer bless, the author has added a vivid and effective, if somewhat overdone, portrait to the long line of tyrannical, forceful old women who have helped to give an especial kind of vigor to the fiction in which they appear."

+ — N Y Times p8 F 24 '24 1200w

"In this story Mr. Adams has once more exhumed the Victorian dowager and propped her up for extended and thorough, if possibly superfluous, re-examination. We know all about her after two chapters; we have known all about her since the days of Trollope and earlier. We don't quite see why she should be trotted out again for such elaborate scrutiny."

— Outlook 136:613 Ap 9 '24 320w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:343 Jl '24

"'Siege' is a long novel, packed with stirring incidents. It centers around the character of Augusta Ruyland, a somewhat extravagant creation."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 6 '24 600w

Wis Lib Bul 20:98 Ap '24

ADES, ALBERT. Naked king; tr. by Joseph T. Shipley. 295p $2 A. & C. Boni

25-1774

"The material difficulties and spiritual crises of a single-minded painter in the midst of studio, gallery and drawing room 'politics' of the art world of Paris are magnificently portrayed in 'A Naked King,' the last novel of the brilliant young Egyptian, Albert Adès. In Henri Fauvarque, the author has created a robustly complex figure of the stature of those giants of the Renascence. His gigantic faith in himself sustains his empty, doubting friends, and leaves them so dependent on him that they must turn and rend him and destroy his assurance to bring him within their own atmosphere of defeat and sterility."—N Y Times

---

"'A Naked King' is a strong story well told, and it is admirably translated. Among novels in which sex has its part, among novels in which temperament has its part, among novels in which love and men of every degree have their parts, it is sure of its place." K. S.

+ Boston Transcript p8 N 26 '24 600w

"As it stands, . . . a torso built up by strange hands into full figure . . . the book, nevertheless, indicates pretty clearly a talent that might in the course of time have matured into genius. In it there are power, artistic courage and sincerity, felicity of phrasing, capacity for observation, and other qualities that make for literature of a lasting value. The general impression is fortified by our consciousness of the author's foreign origin, so that his grasp on French conditions and ideas becomes the more remarkable." Edwin Bjorkman

+ Lit R p3 N 22 '24 1150w

"Mr. Shipley's translation, otherwise adequate, falls in a little too readily with the stilted jerky impressions of the original. It is a provocative novel which was well worth the effort of translator and publisher, and merits a sympathetic public."

+ — N Y Times p8 N 2 '24 750w

N Y Tribune p7 D 21 '24 30w

"Had Adès been able finally to polish and fully shape this novel it might stand as a really unusual work. As it is it has much power and vibrant movement. The Fauvarque theme is not new, but is well developed."

Sat R of Lit 1:319 N 29 '24 300w

ADLER, ALFRED. Practice and theory of individual psychology; tr. by P. Radin (International lib. of psychology, philosophy and scientific method) 352p $6.50 Harcourt [18s K. Paul]

132 Psychoanalysis. Psychology, Pathological

24-4985

"This consists of papers contributed by the author to various publications during the past sixteen years, mainly on the treatment of various forms of neurosis, but also taking into its scope nervous insomnia, hallucinations and dreams, 'the neurotic hunger-strike,' and certain general problems of child psychology. Differing from many of his predecessors in this field, he asserts that the real meaning of the 'unconscious' resolves itself into 'the patient's failure to understand his impulses in relation to his social environment.'"—Boston Transcript

---

Boston Transcript p7 My 10 '24 420w

"Adler cannot account satisfactorily for the manifold phenomena of normal and abnormal psychology with the limited theoretical tools at his disposal." Alix Strachey

— Nation and Ath 34:708 F 16 '24 980w

New Statesman 22:608 Mr 1 '24 700w

"In all its aspects this is a work of the first importance, and is sober and cautious, while by no means timid. . . The practical mind will find most interest and profit in the author's dissertations on nervous insomnia, melancholia, and paranoia, and the problems presented by demoralized children."

ADLER, ALFRED—Continued
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p83 F 7 '24 250w

ADLER, FELIX. Reconstruction of the spiritual ideal. 218p $1.50 Appleton
170.4 Ethics. Social ethics 24-4875

In six lectures delivered in Manchester college, Oxford, on the Hibbert foundations, Dr Adler urges as his main thesis that in order to reconstruct society we must reconstruct the moral ideal. In particular he applies his ethical philosophy to three crying questions of the day—marriage and divorce, industrial relations and a society of nations.

"These lectures grip the attention at once because of their practical idealism." E. E. F.
+ Bookm 59:adv Ap '24 150w
Boston Transcript p5 Ap 19 '24 320w

Reviewed by J. F. Newton
Int Bk R p360 Ap '24 100w

"Along with the energetic concentration of Dr. Adler's philosophy one is impressed also by its balance—achieved, perhaps, without being aimed at. Reason and intuition, contemplation and creative effort, ceaseless growth and the ideal of perfection, the individual and the group, the ethical and the religious aspects of life, all have a significant place in his teaching. The result is a wholeness which justifies the use of the term 'spiritual' as applied to his ideal, and which, coupled with the prophetic quality of his teaching, evinces the author as one of the leading religious personalities of our country." E. W. Lyman
+ J Philos 21:633 N 6 '24 4000w

Reviewed by H. A. Overstreet
Nation 119:167 Ag 13 '24 130w
Nation and Ath 35:360 Je 14 '24 250w

"Whether or not one agrees with Dr. Adler's conclusions, or even with his premises, his book is both intellectually and spiritually stimulating and notably provocative of thought. Moreover, his argument is so clear and his purposes so definite and of such moment to the daily life of every individual that a certain tensity of interest not without an emotional quality vitalizes his pages. The book is a signal contribution to the current diagnostic and remedial discussions of the ills of the time."
+ N Y Times p15 Mr 30 '24 720w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:340 Jl '24
Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 1 '24 480w

"Dr. Adler's Hibbert lectures are worthy to be kept side by side with those of his great predecessors, Muller, Renan, Royce and William James. His style moves in the placid rhythm of the English philosophical essay; his thought is expressed lucidly, candidly, provokingly. His distinguishing characteristic, perhaps, apart from the originality of his thought, is his clear analysis of the 'spiritual pains' of our time." B. L.
+ Survey 52:246 My 15 '24 460w

"Mr. Adler works his theory out in its application to social questions, especially marriage, to which a long chapter is devoted, expounding his doctrine as he has already expounded it in the Hibbert Journal. Here and elsewhere Mr. Adler is perhaps too much inclined towards metaphysical and abstract thoughts to make a very effective intellectual appeal."
The Times [London] Lit Sup p243 Ap 17 '24 140w
Wis Lib Bul 20:121 My '24

ADSHEAD, STANLEY DAVENPORT. Town planning and town development. 204p il $5 Dutton [10s Methuen]
710 City planning [24-11043]

A textbook on town planning in its larger aspects. The author begins with an inquiry into the sociological basis of town planning, the relation between towns and between the different parts of the town. From this he goes on to a discussion of town extension and questions relating to transport, traffic requirements, roads and road administration. There are chapters on zoning, on housing and town planning acts, and on town planning on the continent and in America. Illustrations consist of plates and diagrams in the text.

"The book is well-written and contains numerous excellent illustrations and maps."
+ Am Pol Sci R 18:653 Ag '24 200w
Eng N 92:499 Mr 20 '24 430w

"Professor Adshead has the advantage of bringing to his subject a rare and comprehensive knowledge of cities both ancient and modern. The chapters on town extension, traffic requirements, road administration, and zoning, are full of original criticism. The discussion on zoning is especially valuable for its insistence on the human element." A. T. E.
+ Nation and Ath 34:612 Ja 26 '24 650w

"If none of Professor Adshead's material is uniquely new, it at any rate represents fresh observation and experience." L: Mumford
+ New Repub 39:79 Je 11 '24 1200w

"It is not a good textbook, for it is diffuse where it should be concise, and superficial where it should be profound. It reads rather like a course of popular lectures. And it contains some really extraordinary slips."
— New Statesman 22:458 Ja 26 '24 200w

"The section that deals with British private initiative in town planning is particularly interesting, so informing is it on all the many developments there have been in this method. The story is told quite fully also of the efforts that have been made by the British Government and by municipalities to control and better housing conditions."
+ N Y Times p20 F 10 '24 600w

"From the doctrinaire spirit and from overabsorption in physical detail this genial book is singularly free. The pace is leisurely, the material arranged with no very rigorous care." G. S.
+ Survey 51:713 Mr 15 '24 200w

AFFELDER, WILLIAM MAURICE. Contractors' accounting practice; with procedure also for owners, architects, and engineers. 386p il $5 Ronald 657 Accounting 24-3717

"Specific, practical information on general accounting and cost accounting in the whole field of construction work. Based on experience of 20 years."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:315 Je '24

AGATE, JAMES EVERSHED. Fantasies and ² impromptus. 248p $3 Dutton [7s 6d Collins]
824

The first introduction to the American public of this British dramatic critic is thru a volume of essays the subjects of which are various and not wholly confined to the drama. Contents: Fanfare; Sarah Bernhardt; Clouds over the Caspian; The ring and the tan; The happy cricketer; The piece of old brocade; "Thus to revisit"; A peg for Balzac; In search of Prince Charming; Twin Nestors; One circus for the rich . . . ; Like father like sons; "Upon this picture and on this"; Looking and leaping; Derby day.

New Statesman 22:428 Ja 19 '24 560w
Outlook 139:117 Ja 21 '25 20w

"Taken all in all, Fantasies and Impromptus remains chiefly an evidence of Mr. James Agate's deep, delightful, inspiriting devotion to the art and sport of the theatre. If you read the essay on Bernhardt carefully enough, you will know that Mr. Agate is past fifty. It makes one gasp—with hope—to know that a critic, in this our day, can have gone to the theatre so many years and still regard it with faith and write of it with pleasure." E. J. R. Isaacs
+ Theatre Arts Mo 8:573 Ag '24 390w

AKELEY, CARL ETHAN. In brightest Africa. 284p il $5 Doubleday

916.7 Africa, East. Hunting—Africa. Gorillas 23-17409

For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

"'In Brightest Africa' is one of those books which make good reading and poor reviewing. It is written in a straightaway, personal style that carries one along with it without stopping, and its flavor is necessarily lost in any short notice. Incidentally it reveals much of the author's character as well as the habits of his animal friends." J. G. Whiteley

+ Int Bk R p853 N '24 4100w

"This is one of the best books dealing with big game which has appeared for a long time. Mr Akeley's record of his travels, adventures, and observation of animal life is fascinating."

+ Nation and Ath 34:776 Mr 1 '24 90w

New Statesman 22:678 Mr 15 '24 180w

"Mr. Akeley is the man who stuffed Jumbo; this is sufficient introduction to English readers. Moreover—the appeal to sentiment apart—it implies both that Mr. Akeley is the Jumbo of his own kind and that he is an authority on that inexhaustible subject, elephants."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p72 F 7 '24 900w

Wis Lib Bul 19:505 D '23

AKSAKOV, SERGEI TIMOFEIEVICH. Chronicles of a Russian family; tr. by M. C. Beverley. (Broadway translations) 398p $5 Dutton [12s 6d Routledge]

24-18368

"The three books upon which Aksakov's fame rests—'Family Chronicle,' 'Recollections,' and 'Years of Childhood'—profess to be, and doubtless largely are, reminiscences of his own life, or accounts of certain periods in the lives of his parents and other relatives. The time is the latter part of the eighteenth century, and the scene the then newly colonized province of Orenburg, which was still populated, for the most part, by Tartars and various Finnish tribes. Of these works the 'Family Chronicle' is probably the most popular, and it is certainly the most dramatic. The chief characters concerned are Aksakov's mother, father and grandfather, and it is in the description of his grandfather that Aksakov most clearly manifests his peculiar power and achieves one of his greatest triumphs. . . The grandfather has the simple traits of the heroes of antiquity. Honesty, courage, truthfulness, a warm heart, and an uncontrollable temper—these are the simple constituents in the character of this old Russian giant. . . Miss Beverley's translation comprises the 'Family Chronicle,' part of the 'Years of Childhood,' and part of the 'Recollections.'"—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by A. W. Porterfield

Bookm 60:527 D '24 360w

Reviewed by Avrahm Yarmolinsky

Lit R p6 D 6 '24 500w

"The present edition affords, if not a complete English version of Aksakov's crowning work, at least a coherent conspectus of the whole. But alas! to most readers the translation will surely appear strangely forbidding. . . It represents a retrograde step in the English translations of Russian literature, back to the pre-Garnett, pre-Maude era of laboriously pedestrian work, and accords ill with the book's ambitious scope, handsome binding and not negligible price."

— New Statesman 23:388 Jl 5 '24 1350w

Reviewed by A. I. Nazaroff

N Y Times p10 D 14 '24 1600w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson

N Y Tribune p8 S 28 '24 1050w

N Y World p9e N 16 '24 600w

"It is interesting to have a chance to read in English a work so well known to educated Russians and so little known abroad, and the Westerner will find here something of that solid domestic background, the seeming absence of which may have perplexed him." Arthur Ruhl

+ Sat R of Lit 1:352 D 6 '24 480w

"Aksakov wrote, as fiction, in the middle of the nineteenth century, his memories of the end of the eighteenth century; and we feel perfectly sure as we read that in the strange, newly-colonized stretch of Russia, Bashkiria, events, and thoughts even, were just as he describes them. To us, undoubtedly, he gives sidelights into Russian character; yes, into universal character; never a full blaze of revelation, but useful, small candle flickers. Excellent above all is his picture of the patriarchal system; the father estate-owner, farmer, practical man in all things, and undisputed tyrant of the family." Alan Porter

+ — Spec 132:842 My 24 '24 850w

"No such perfect reconstruction of a boy's life exists elsewhere. To read this book is to live through Aksakov's childhood, and every reader is left free to form his own judgment. Aksakov provides the raw material, exquisitely selected and wonderfully shaped, but with no more arrière pensée than is shown by a biologist in describing the habits of animals. Aksakov is, in fact, the natural historian of his family. It is this objectivity which makes him so fascinating to read and so difficult to describe. There is here no 'message,' no 'vision of life,' nothing that lends itself to exposition and explanation. The only thing the critic can do is to point out the qualities, which are both merits and defects, which make Aksakov unique amongst Russian classics, and for the rest—the reader must read him."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p265 My 1 '24 1500w

ALBERT, CALVIN DODGE. Machine design drawing room problems. 320p il $3 Wiley [15s Chapman & H.]

621 Machinery—Design 23-15487

"Text-book for engineering students who have a knowledge of kinematics, mechanics, and engineering drawing. The first half contains general reference data, properties of materials commonly used, and a short discussion of the factor of safety and allowable stress. The remainder is devoted to problems in the design of machines, worked out in some detail."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:363 Jl '24

ALBERT, EDWARD. History of English literature. 632p $2.50 Crowell

820.9 English literature—History and criticism 23-13674

A comprehensive work intended for use as a textbook. The entire field of English letters is covered, including present-day authors. The material is admirably arranged and condensed. Exercises follow each chapter and there is a full index.

"For an interpretation of English literature Mr. Albert's book will not serve, but in its own field it is to be recommended."

+ — Springf'd Republican p10 F 29 '24 140w

"A comprehensive work, including many of the minor names. The exercises following each chapter add to its value for students."

+ Wis Lib Bul 20:146 Je '24

ALDINGTON, HILDA (DOOLITTLE) (MRS RICHARD ALDINGTON) (H. D., pseud.). Heliodora. 127p $1.50 Houghton [5s J. Cape]

811

"In 'Heliodora and Other Poems' the reader will find the very best of H. D., sparkling trifles that include the already far-famed 'Oread' and such compelling later achievements as 'Lais' and 'Nossis.' One needs but to run through the contents list of this book to note her métier; 'Heliodora,' 'Helen,' 'Centaur Song,' 'Thetis,' 'Cassandra,' 'Towards the Piraeus,' 'At Eleusis,' 'Orion Dead,' and 'Charioteer.'"—N Y Times

ALDINGTON, HILDA—Continued

Booklist 21:101 D '24

"She is, in my opinion, one of the few living poets who speak with absolute accents of genius. Many of you are doubtless impatient of her mannerisms, do not catch the slow but nevertheless certain cadence of her verse, do not certainly understand her meaning. Yet, to me, there are few poets who speak so movingly of the subtle cadencies of love, its ardors, its languors, its disillusions." J: Donelson

+ Bookm 60:226 O '24 300w

"There is a singular absence of dramatic power in this latest volume of verse from the pen of Mrs. Aldington. It is a little fancy of our own that such a lack detracts from the essential merit of her poetry. Intrinsically a little cold, although the stanzas are pervaded with a curiously glacier-like emotion, there is great variety in form and distinction in her phrasing."

— + Boston Transcript p3 Ag 16 '24 150w

Dial 77:348 O '24 120w

"The quality of H. D.'s work, fine as alabaster, and with the same hard, smooth surface, if not as apparent in these later poems, is yet indisputable. Here, as before, is the intensity of her short, sharp line, the weight of emotion in her monosyllabic repetitions. But if there are the same beauties (and the old weakness), there are also new faults." Babette Deutsch

+ — Lit R p980 Ag 23 '24 350w

"It is futile, after reading these poems, to argue the distinction between poets whose hypnosis lies in music and those in whom images are the charm. Her lines sing always, and her phrases break constantly into images so vivid that they fairly hurt with beauty." Irwin Edman

+ Nation 119:526 N 12 '24 1000w

Reviewed by E. B. C. Jones

Nation and Ath 35:sup250 My 24 '24 210w

"H. D. stands quite alone among the new poets. She has bathed deeply in the true Pierian Spring, she thinks ancient Greek, she exists as a poet solely through her surprising kinship with the Hellas of classical times." H. S. Gorman

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 31 '24 600w

Reviewed by Arthur Guiterman

Outlook 138:730 D 31 '24 100w

"Her work has certain remarkable characteristics; its 'free' rhythms are never unmelodious: its austerity of epithet never degenerates into affectation: it conveys clear pictures. But somehow it does not seem to achieve either grandeur or intensity."

+ — Sat R 137:640 Je 21 '24 280w

Reviewed by L: Untermeyer

Sat R of Lit 1:260 N 8 '24 820w

Reviewed by A. Williams-Ellis

Spec 132:1044 Je 28 '24 140w

"There are indications in H. D.'s work that what hinders and confuses the reader of it has confused the writer too. Her weights being improperly distributed, she not only mishandles them from time to time, but seems frequently to imagine that she has developed power when in fact she is relying on her reader's tension and suspense and hope, emotions which easily overreach themselves and give way to distrust and disillusion. These are somewhat negative or destructive criticisms, but H. D.'s positive achievement, in its delicacy, reticence, and glacial purity, in its classic finish, is substantial and will not be affected by them."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p416 Jl 3 '24 1100w

ALDINGTON, RICHARD. Literary studies and reviews. 253p $2.50 Dial press

804 Literary criticism. French literature—History and criticism 24-26929

These literary studies are devoted chiefly to French writers, but an essay on the poetry of T. S. Eliot is included and one on James Joyce's "Ulysses." Contents: Pierre de Ronsard; Joachim du Bellay; A satirist at the court of Henri IV; L'Espadon satyrique de Claude d'Esternod; Saint-Evremond; La Mothe le Vayer; Gui Patin's letters; Jean Dehénault; Cowley and the French epicureans; Madame du Deffand and Voltaire; Letters of Mme de Maintenon; The Prince de Ligne; Landor's "Hellenics"; Victor Hugo and "La légend des siècles"; Remy de Gourmont; The approach to Marcel Proust; The poetry of T. S. Eliot; Mr. James Joyce's "Ulysses"; The poet and his age; Et ego in Arcadia; Theocritus in Capri; Index of proper names.

Booklist 21:101 D '24

"Much pleasant entertainment and no little recondite information is stowed away in these essays, and the general reader, who might be frightened by the liberal citations in French and Italian and the sprinkling of foreign words, would do well to read the thirteenth, seventeenth, eighteenth and nineteenth first." N. H. D.

+ Boston Transcript p2 N 1 '24 600w

Dial 78:79 Ja '25 230w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd

Lit R p4 S 27 '24 2000w

"He writes with quiet authority, interest, and humour. A sense of balance—a quality none too common—is his most conspicuous virtue."

+ Nation and Ath 35:418 Je 28 '24 130w

"Mr. Aldington is at times inclined to use special pleading unnecessarily. One can appreciate the 'Hellenics' of Landor, the 'diaphanous' style, without finding Matthew Arnold 'merely prismatic.' 'The Approach to Marcel Proust' is an interesting, though brief and tentative, study in literary origins."

— + New Statesman 23:446 Jl 19 '24 250w

Reviewed by P. A. Hutchison

N Y Times p5 O 5 '24 1000w

Outlook 138:382 N 5 '24 40w

"There is charm in exploring by-paths of literature. Minor worthies are not exposed to noisy rapture or disparagement. And thus Mr. Aldington can exhibit his sensitive qualities. His manner is elegant in austerity. He is distinguished in what he phrases and in what he omits to phrase."

+ Sat R 137:567 My 31 '24 280w

"There is not an essay in the book which is not all right as far as it goes; there are only one or two that seem to go far enough. Perhaps as an aristocrat of the mind, all excess is distasteful to him, any obscure grouping in the dark undignified." J: P. Bishop

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:143 S 27 '24 3000w

"His review of Landor and his Hellenics is particularly delightful and informing, and every one of the articles is worth reading. They are, incidentally, full of excellent anecdotes." A. Williams-Ellis

+ Spec 133:22 Jl 5 '24 950w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p336 My 29 '24 850w

ALDINGTON, RICHARD, comp. and tr. Book of 'characters.' (Broadway translations) 559p $5 Dutton [12s 6d Routledge]

828 Characters and characteristics 24-28474

Mr Aldington presents in this volume a collection of five hundred and fifty characters drawn from the best of the French and English character-writers. The book can best be described as "a collection of descriptive notices of various characteristic types and fashions of men." It opens with the pen-sketches of Theophrastus describing persons of mean and unpleasant habits. These are followed by pen portraits by Joseph Hall, Sir Thomas Overbury, Nicholas Breton, Thomas Fuller, Samuel Butler and others. The book is prefaced with a lengthy introduction on character-writing.

Boston Transcript p4 S 20 '24 800w

"A wealth of personality covers the 559 pages of this worthy and fascinating book."
+ Lit R p985 Ag 23 '24 200w

New Statesman 23:525 Ag 9 '24 1000w

Outlook 138:382 N 5 '24 40w

"Popular rather than scholarly in character, and this is all to the good, as it has allowed the editor considerable freedom in his choice of extracts, while it will prepare the way for an edition which will present the subject in a fuller and stricter way."
+ Sat R 137:620 Je 14 '24 150w

"Our English character-writers had more verbal wit and more subtlety than Theophrastus; but their very cleverness grows tiring in the end. The volume should be read from time to time, not at a rush; but it contains excellent material, and is a thorough survey of all set portraits from Theophrastus to Félicité, Comtesse de Genlis."
Spec 132:961 Je 14 '24 350w

Reviewed by Alan Porter
Spec 132:1004 Je 21 '24 1500w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p423 Jl 3 '24 150w

ALDRICH, BESS (STREETER) (MRS CHARLES S. ALDRICH). Mother Mason. 269p $1.75 (7s 6d) Appleton
24-23601

The Mason family, well-to-do, educated, fun-loving middlewestern folks, are daily conducted thru the various vicissitudes of life by Mother Mason, whose love for her robust family is seasoned with a keen sense of humor. To her come the five Masons—father, Katherine, Marcia, Eleanor, and Junior, when everything goes dead wrong, and all are given comfort and wise advice. Even when faithful Tillie, friend and maid-of-all-work, leaves the cramped atmosphere of the Mason household to enter a larger world where she "can stretch her soul" Mother complacently watches for her return. Then one day Mother goes on a lark of her own which is nothing more than an innocent reunion of her old college classmates but which almost ends in a scandal! So the problems of matrimony, school teaching, high-school plays, picnics and peevish neighbors are all met by Mother Mason with a smile and a sturdy heart.

"It would be a carping critic who could find fault with 'Mother Mason.' Certainly, I would not claim for the book that it is great literature, but I do claim that it is happy reading."
+ — Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 O 26 '24 450w

"The book is a novel of home happiness, which, although it does not sentimentalize, will make many a family smile over its own humor and vicissitudes." L. W. F.
+ Lit R p13 D 13 '24 120w

N Y Times p14 N 9 '24 370w

"A story of family life without the cloying sentimentality that usually characterizes this type of fiction."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:383 D 13 '24 120w

"An innocent, good-humoured, mildly sentimental story."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p828 D 4 '24 140w

ALEXANDER, ELIZABETH (MRS NORBERT HEERMANN). Rôles. 310p $2 Little 24-7479

"In 'Roles' Elizabeth Alexander rebuilds romance on the familiar grounds furnished through one woman's chance likeness to another. Gwynne Sheldon, with a fever for the stage, leaves her home and husband in the Middle West and comes to New York to make a name behind the footlights. She finds herself the image of Eva Grahame, a second-rate actress. The two women change places and Gwynne saves the play for which Eva had been cast. Later, complications are furnished by the husband of Mrs. Sheldon and the lover of Miss Grahame."—N Y World

"'Rôles' has that perfect blend of wealth, struggle and happy endings for everyone which makes such a novel distinctly satisfactory for readers of a certain class. Miss Alexander writes with sparkle and vitality."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 30 '24 230w

"The dialogue is fairly good and the stage management of the whole thing is excellent, making a cheerfully amusing tale."
+ Lit R p793 My 31 '24 200w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e Mr 30 '24 100w

Wis Lib Bul 20:125 My '24

ALEXANDER, FREDERICK MATTHIAS. Constructive conscious control of the individual; with an introd. by John Dewey. 317p $3 Dutton

150 Psychology, Educational 23-14702

A continuation of the argument pursued in the author's previous volume, "Man's supreme inheritance." (Book Review Digest, 1918) The basis of his argument is the substitution of conscious for unconscious control of actions. The larger part of the present volume is given to an examination of the part played by sensory appreciation in the process of education and re-education. In the course of the book he deals with various human defects, peculiarities and imperfect uses of the psycho-physical organism which tend to increase and become settled bad habits before adolescence has been reached.

Reviewed by L. L. Bernard
Am J Soc 30:356 N '24 300w

Booklist 20:251 Ap '24

Boston Transcript p4 N 8 '24 400w

Cath World 120:279 N '24 600w

"Mr. Alexander's statement of the 'psycho-mechanical' aspect of self-control is admirable and possessed of high medical importance. But his rigidly narrow conception of method has limited his vision; the disharmony in the individual so far expresses the disharmony in the situation which surrounds him. All this, however, is a warning to the reader rather than criticism in the strict sense. Mr Alexander in effect pays no heed to neurological or mental problems; he is entirely concerned with the problem of developing satisfactory sensory and muscular coördinations. In this field, which he has made his own, the interest of his study cannot be denied." Elton Mayo
+ — Lit R p537 F 23 '24 2300w

Reviewed by L. G. Shaw
Lit R p952 Ag 9 '24 650w

"There is a good deal of wisdom and quite sound psychological application scattered throughout this volume; but the leading tenor of its claims and their vindication is by no means free from the odium attaching to the propagandist in the unfavorable sense of that mission." Joseph Jastrow
+ — Nation 118:235 F 27 '24 850w

"Mr. Alexander's claims far outrun the range of application that he himself makes. The author lays the foundation for a modern fort and builds a dog kennel on it." B. H. Bode
— New Repub 38:sup10 Ap 9 '24 1200w

Reviewed by Howard Devree
N Y Times p12 Ag 17 '24 1450w

N Y Tribune p19 Mr 16 '24 160w

Survey 52:119 Ap 15 '24 150w

ALEXANDER, HORACE GUNDRY. Revival of Europe; can the League of nations help? 215p $2 Holt [5s Allen & U.]

341.1 Reconstruction (European war). League of nations 24-21891

The author states in his introductory note that in this volume he has attempted to do two things: "First, to examine the machinery and activity of the League of Nations, and to see where and why it has succeeded and where and why it has failed; secondly, to sug-

ALEXANDER, H. G.—Continued
gest, in no Utopian sense, but with a recognition of actual human weaknesses no less than human strength, what are the true foundations of political morality."

Boston Transcript p2 D 27 '24 330w

"Fearless and candid in criticism, he nevertheless brings out very clearly the advance which has already been made by the League, and the extraordinary value for the future of the new methods and attitude of mind which it has created. A better analysis of the main criticisms of the League could hardly be imagined, while the account of its actual achievements and reverses is remarkably clear and complete."

+ Nation and Ath 35:542 Jl 26 '24 420w

"Amid all the welter of League propaganda this book stands out in refreshing contrast. For those confused by this propaganda and yet desirous of unprejudiced evidence, this book is invaluable. It is far the best on the subject." Nathaniel Peffer

+ New Repub 41:177 Ja 7 '25 270w

Reviewed by J. D. Adams

N Y Times p1 Ag 31 '24 3200w

N Y Tribune p10 O 5 '24 400w

Spec 132:1008 Je 21 '24 370w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p227 Ap 10 '24 120w

ALEXANDRA FEODOROVNA, ex-czarina of Russia. Letters of the Tsaritsa to the Tsar, 1914-1916. 478p $5 McBride

B or 92 Russia—History. European war, 1914-1919—Russia

A collection of extremely intimate letters covering the period from April, 1914 to the death of Rasputin in December, 1916, shortly before the Czar's abdication. During his absences on visits to the army or while he was at General Headquarters the Czarina wrote him nearly every day, sometimes twice a day. The evident object of the letters was to keep the Czar in closest touch with his family, to give him political counsel and to wrap him in her love. The letters have interest for the light they cast on the character of the writer and of the Czar and on the court and politics of Russia while revolution impended.

Booklist 20:333 Je '24

Bookm 59:475 Je '24 280w

"Better than any recent novel are the letters from the Czaritza to her beloved husband, the Czar." D. F. G.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 19 '24 580w

Cleveland p62 Jl '24

"The letters are a historical document of considerable importance. Not for any light they shed on the huge forces gathering for the coming explosion, but rather for their picture of the isolation and essential ignorance of the court, and all the queer, obscurantist influences that surround it and shut it off, no less from the best minds of Russia than from the mass of the people." Arthur Ruhl

+ Lit R p608 Mr 22 '24 1200w

"These letters are one of the most powerful self-indictments of autocracy yet written. Nevertheless, so poignant are they that the chief sentiment left after their perusal is an overmastering pity." Eileen Power

Nation and Ath 34:575 Ja 19 '24 150w

"It would be a mistake to dismiss them as anything less than historical documents of the greatest importance. . . In the first few months of the war there is so much that is personal and so little that is public in the letters that there seems no excuse for printing them. But after a while, when the Czar had taken over the supreme command of the army in the field, the correspondence becomes full of important matters of historical interest. The Czarina wrote to the Czar every day that he was away from her. Toward the end of the period covered by the letters, she appears to have considered her daily letter almost in the light of an official report." C. E. Beckhofer

+ N Y Times p1 Ap 22 '23 2650w

Reviewed by A. V. Ende

N Y Tribune p22 Ag 3 '24 700w

"One will search in vain for other such intimate revelations of the domestic life of royal courts. Never before such a fascinating and cruel lifting of the veil upon the love of monarchs. But for the tremendous historical import of these disclosures, ordinary delicacy and decency would forbid their publication." C. G. Bowers

N Y World p6e Mr 16 '24 2200w

"The Introduction is thoroughly interesting and informative. To read that and to look at a few pages of the letters is all that most readers will care to do. More will require perseverance."

— + Outlook 136:568 Ap 2 '24 100w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:376 Jl '24

The Times [London] Lit Sup p779 N 22 '23 1450w

ALFORD, LEON PRATT, ed. Management's
2 handbook. 1607p il $7.50 Ronald

658 Efficiency, Industrial. Factory management 24-23024

"Complete manual of practical, working information covering the whole field of management. While it does not, and cannot present a complete plan of management, it does show how to design and operate all of the elements and mechanisms of management, including those of organization and administration."—Preface

"In several respects this volume is decidedly unique. It is, no doubt, the first attempt to bring together the most up-to-date management information in one book, at one time, and at one perspective. To compile a work serving at one and the same time the engineer, consultant and the field of management, business executives and students, was a prodigious task." L. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 17 '24 700w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:603 D '24

ALLAN, LUKE, pseud. The beast. 335p $2 Small [7s 6d J. Cape]

24-30859

"It is the conflict of an educated man turned wanderer and leader among the Indians with a girl who, as is usual in such cases, is at first thoroughly disgusted with her male antagonist's coarseness and brutality, and then secretly impressed by the sheer physical power and force of the creature. He discovers the girl after she becomes lost from her party, carries her away to his cabin in the mountain fastnesses. Incidents arise that tend to draw the two together; propinquity, coupled with the hero's brawn and the heroine's beauty, does its work, and we leave the two comfortably and contentedly settled in their mountain cabin."—Lit R

"It is a good story, full of unusual incidents, and told with great consistency in the representation of the two leading personages. The descriptions are interesting and the conversations are lively and emphatic. Once the reader is thoroughly interested in the story it will be difficult to lay it aside, so intensely exciting are the incidents."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 S 6 '24 450w

"Mr. Allan tells an exciting, thrilling, and interesting, if at times, melodramatic, tale."

+ — Lit R p14 S 13 '24 350w

N Y Tribune p10 S 21 '24 470w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p389 Je 19 '24 300w

ALLCROFT, ARTHUR HADRIAN. Downland pathways; with a preface by E. V. Lucas. 292p il $2.50 Houghton [7s 6d Methuen]

914.225 Sussex, England—Description and travel 24-23302

"The book traverses in leisurely style all the southern shore of Sussex, both east and west, for a distance of some ten miles or more from the coast, dwelling especially upon all the more interesting points, hills, valleys, castles, villages, roads, the works of nature and of man alike."—N Y Times

"Mr Allcroft knows the whole extent of those downs, and his love of them equals his knowledge. Moreover, he writes so engagingly, with such grace and charm and delight in his theme that it is a pleasure to read him, whether or not one knows anything about his subject."

+ N Y Times p20 S 14 '24 620w

Outlook 138:380 N 5 '24 80w

"I wish I could adequately express the pleasure that I have received from 'Downland Pathways.' "

+ Sat R 137:358 Ap 5 '24 280w

"For vestiges of the past attractively arrayed; for people without history and castles with; for a generous sympathy for facts and a graceful handling of fictions; for stories and tales and information generally about the South Downs and the Sussex of romance and actuality; for all these things, and a glimpse of a light-hearted cicerone whose knowledge is varied and interestingly conveyed, we cheerfully rcommend 'Downland Pathways.' Its purpose is to please those who know and those who want to know their Sussex. Both classes will be satisfied."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:217 O 18 '24 300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p187 Mr 27 '24 1100w

ALLEN, H. WARNER. Wines of France. 261p ^{2} $3 Brentano's [8s 6d Unwin]

663.2 Wine and wine making

"[The author's] primary object, to judge from the preface, is to analyse and expound the qualities of great wines and teach the wine drinker how best to appreciate them; and he does this very fully in the first chapter. But the bulk of the work is devoted to a detailed description of the principal wine-growing districts, the several classes of wines produced there, the vineyards, the gathering of the grapes, their conversion into wine, the bottling, storage, and other treatment, with shorter notes on the numerous less important districts, all of which have their own characteristics. The great districts are Bordeaux, Burgundy, and the Champagne country, and these are treated in great detail."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"Mr. Allen writes with a certain ease and brings great sympathy to his subject." Matthew Josephson

+ Lit R p11 O 4 '24 480w

"The author of 'The Wines of France' blends knowledge, reverence, and tolerance—qualities not too prevalent in our home-brewed literature, qualities with which one wishes it was possible to mellow the domestic spirits who are so sure of having reached final truth that they burn in their zeal to impose it by force upon all others. Unfortunately, those who most need to read this book will not." Arthur Warner

+ Nation 120:98 Ja 28 '25 500w

"To the connoisseur of wine this book will be absorbing, but even one who is no wine-drinker will find it extremely interesting. The author is sometimes too prolix on what he calls the aesthetics of taste and smell, and on the sensations which great wine produces on the drinker."

+ — Nation and Ath 36:28 O 4 '24 100w

"There is not a dull page in 'The Wines of France.' Even the catalogs of 'great wines' recall the vanished literature of the liquor dealers." J: W. Crawford

+ N Y World p6e S 14 '24 600w

Sat R 138:609 D 13 '24 600w

"For those who desire full detail about the best growths of Bordeaux, Burgundy and Champagne, Mr. Allen's book will have value and interest."

+ Spec 133:396 S 20 '24 270w

"In spite of the detail the work is in no way heavy or dull—a book about wine can hardly be dry. The author has not only thorough knowledge but a light touch and an infectious enthusiasm."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p515 Ag 21 '24 170w

ALLEN, HENRY TUREMAN. My Rhineland journal. 593p il $6 Houghton

940.48 Germany—Occupation by allies, 1918. United States—Army. Reconstruction (European war) 23-17485

For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

"It certainly records a multitude of interesting facts concerning the American occupation and the consequent dealings with many representatives of other nations. It is likely, however, to be a matter of surprise to many readers that the author, however able and successful, should think it important to record, at such length and in so minute detail, his social successes, luncheons and dinners and hunts which he attended, and the flattering things said to him by persons of high position."

+ — Am Hist R 29:604 Ap '24 220w

"The volume is one of the very best among the flood of books on post-war problems in Western Europe."

+ Am Pol Sci R 18:205 F '24 90w

"General Allen tells his story in a modest way, but this does not mean that his journal is written in an impersonal or self-effacing strain. On the contrary he is himself the central figure on every page of it. But he writes so deftly, with so much enthusiasm for a great variety of things, and with such unfailing appreciation of the humor involved in each situation that the reader keeps his mind on the play rather than on the principal actor. For those who want a pen-portraiture of life in the Rhineland during the post-war days there is no better source than this book." W: B. Munro

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf F '24 650w

Bookm 58:669 F '24 200w

Cleveland p14 F '24

"His impressions of people are sharp and set down with considerable frankness. Altogether, the American commander records his ideas and his emotions with a marked degree of skill in narrative, and provides a picture of the gradual disintegration of Germany which—although it is testimony after the event—makes his journal a document of considerable value." L. B.

+ Freeman 8:479 Ja 23 '24 350w

"While the volume has some of the defects inseparable from the diary of exposition, it presents an extraordinarily interesting and penetrating picture of present-day European problems as viewed by one who has done not a little to aid in their solution."

+ — Ind 117:79 F 2 '24 140w

Wis Lib Bul 19:508 D '23

ALLEN, MRS IDA COGSWELL (BAILEY). Mrs Allen on cooking, menus, service. 1001p il $2.25 Doubleday

641 Cookery 24-7070

A cook book which takes up the preparation of food from many angles. There are three main divisions in the book: A review of food from the store to the table and the equipment needed in its preparation; How to cook—with twenty-five hundred original, tested recipes; Serving all kinds of meals and refreshments. Index.

ALLEN, I. C.—Continued

"Mrs. Allen's book is an excellent prop for the untried housekeeper and a treasure-house of suggestions for the more experienced."

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 10 '24 100w

J Home Econ 16:399 Jl '24 40w

"A wise book and refreshing withal." D. C. Seitz

+ N Y World p6e Mr 16 '24 450w

Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 30 '24 150w

ALLEN, LUCY GRACE. Choice recipes for clever cooks. 282p il $2 Little

641 Cookery 24-8037

This book, altho written purposely for the veteran cook, will be helpful also to the amateur in varying her menu. Each recipe has been carefully tested by constant use in the classes of the author, who is the director of the Boston school of cookery. In the 540 recipes both simple and rather elaborate ones are included. They are never extravagant dishes, altho the author recommends that the best materials be used. In many cases illustrations show the completed dish.

Boston Transcript p6 My 10 '24 360w

Cleveland p79 S '24

J Home Econ 16:337 Je '24 40w

St Louis p343 O '24

Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 13 '24 150w

ALLINSON, ANNE CROSBY (EMERY) (MRS FRANCIS GREENLEAF ALLINSON). Friends with life. 196p $1.75 Harcourt

170 Conduct of life 24-21947

Mrs Allinson has been dean of women in two universities and her discussions of personal relationships and problems of living are born, she says, of conversations between the older and the younger generation. The questions she discusses are being faced by young men and women everywhere today. She meets them candidly and with a high idealism. Contents: Friends with life; The garrison commander; Personal power; Personal happiness; Personal religion; Odds and ends of practical philosophy; An ideal challenged; Freedom and family life; Mothers and daughters; The open door in marriage; Men, women, and work; Friendship.

Booklist 21:134 Ja '25

Cleveland p70 S '24

"It is an excellent book for both young men and young women. [The essays] are all written with charm and dignity, and evidence much clear insight, sympathy, understanding and a warm and friendly feeling toward life and people."

+ N Y Times p21 O 12 '24 450w

N Y World p9e N 9 '24 250w

ALLPORT, FLOYD HENRY. Social psychology. 453p il $2.50 Houghton

301 Social psychology 24-4464

Two main lines of achievement are brought within the scope of this volume. These are the behavior viewpoint and the experimental method. There is also a chapter given to the Freudian contribution to psychology. The book is intended to be used as a text in courses in social psychology and in courses in various social sciences.

"Although Dr. Allport's contribution is intended as a text, and has one or two chapters rather excessively technical for the lay reader, the general scope of this book gives the reader a hopeful insight and makes him feel a constructive collaboration with the author in the solution of incessant and ubiquitous social perplexities." C. L. Stone

+ Am Econ R 14:365 Je '24 70w

Am Pol Sci R 18:651 Ag '24 30w

"The book merits a careful reading by all students of the social sciences, and it will almost certainly prove to be the best text available for courses in social psychology." T. V. Smith

+ Int J Ethics 35:101 O '24 200w

"Based on the latest scientific research and covering in a refreshingly objective manner a field hitherto characterized by much superficiality, this volume makes a near approach to the ideal textbook. Suggestive and stimulative, it merits a more extended critical review than can here be given it." A. B. Wolfe

+ J Philos 21:583 O 9 '24 1350w

"This book is a very adequate account of the fundamental mental mechanisms behind social relations. To hold with the author, however, that the province of social psychology consists in this sort of treatment only is to ignore the important contributions to this field of such writers as Tarde, Le Bon, Graham Wallas, J. M. Williams, and the type of studies now being published under the direction of Professor Park at Chicago." Kimball Young

+ — Nation 119:127 Jl 30 '24 700w

"Much of human nature is here brought closer to systematic psychology than it has yet been. . . It seems a book to be studied rather than read, well adapted for teaching, out of which it presumably grew, but more so for relatively advanced students." F. L. Wells

+ Science 59:440 My 16 '24 820w

"This is an interesting book because it is a bold adventure into new fields. It is really an important attempt to give a fresh interpretation to 'social psychology' and I for one wish that the author had gone the whole way and left consciousness out as a part of the method."

+ — Survey 52:247 My 15 '24 220w

ALMACK, JOHN CONRAD. Education for citi-
3 zenship. (Riverside textbooks in education) 287p $2 Houghton

370 Citizenship. Education 24-21279

Civic education, as here treated, consists of much more than a knowledge of our political machinery and organizations. It is a conception, rather, of the school as a vast laboratory of citizenship training in which teaching discipline and all school activities become a means to this end. The book shows the practical ways and means by which school practices may be brought more in line with the civic goal, and the necessity of further reorganization and modification in order to keep step with social progress. To each chapter is appended a list of exercises and problems most of which contain suggestions which can be adapted to daily school work. The book is divided into three parts: Part one, Putting the school on a civic basis; Part two, Using civic materials and methods; Part three, Integration of the school and the community.

Boston Transcript p6 N 8 '24 660w

Reviewed by R. M. Tryon

El School J 25:314 D '24 410w

ALVAREZ, ALEJANDRO. Monroe doctrine; its
3 importance in the international life of the states of the New world. (Carnegie endowment for international peace. Division of international law) 573p $3 Oxford

327.73 Monroe doctrine 24-21291

A collection of declarations of statesmen and opinions of publicists of Latin America and the United States in regard to the Monroe doctrine. The opinions are prefaced by an exposition of the principles of the Monroe doctrine and of the attitude of European countries toward it, and an enumeration of the principal cases where it has been applied.

"Students of politics must welcome this volume of documents compiled by a distinguished Chilean publicist, whose writings in the field of international law have qualified him to make a judicious selection of South and Central American, as well as North American, expressions of opinion." C. G. F.

+ Cath World 120:426 D '24 200w

"The monumental work of Mr. Alvarez on The Monroe Doctrine is of chiefly academic and historic interest." W. F. Johnson
No Am 220:371 D '24 160w

AMINOFF, LEONIE, baroness. Success. 386p $2 Dutton
24-11880

"Fourth of the twelve volumes of that Torchlight Series in which Leonie Aminoff has attempted to give a history of the private life of Napoleon Bonaparte through the medium of the novel. 'Success' takes up the narrative where 'Ambition' dropped it, describing Napoleon's stay at Milan with Josephine and his family, Pauline Bonaparte's marriage to Leclerc, the death of Josephine's little dog Fortuné, and the return of Napoleon and Josephine to Paris. The book ends with Napoleon's departure for Egypt, and a hint of the coming battle of Aboukir."—N Y Times

"In this book, Napoleon has grown strongly in reality and in his driving power of achievement. There is more humor here than in the preceding volumes of the series and more brilliancy of execution." D. L. M.
+ — Boston Transcript p6 Ag 20 '24 700w

"The jerky, awkward, monotonous style is unchanged, and the author's attempts to be witty are numerous and unsuccessful. Napoleon and his life are made tedious, a result which would seem difficult of achievement. One must, however, give Mme. Aminoff credit for unusual industry."
— + N Y Times p11 My 4 '24 400w

"A scamped and slovenly performance, the less creditable because of the abundance of material available, which Mme. Aminoff has barely glanced at and tossed aside with a petulant air. Between the two possible stools of fact and fancy, she has left her audience sitting uncomfortably on the bare floor, buried to the neck in an avalanche of mere words." Isabel Paterson
— N Y Tribune p27 Ap 20 '24 750w

"She has rolled out the thick dough of Napoleon's life and times into such thin material that it threatens to disappear. Yet it must be admitted that out of the Baroness's apparently infinite and infinitesimal knowledge of the Corsican and his entourage there do creep out (whatever the source) brilliantly apt summarizations and glimpses of men and women possessing decided charm." Harry Salpeter
— + N Y World p6e Ap 13 '24 660w
Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 19 '24 130w

ANBUREY, THOMAS. Travels through the interior parts of America; with a foreword by William Harding Carter. ltd ed 2v 276;322p $10 Houghton
917.3 United States—Description and travel 24-987

"Anburey was a lieutenant in Burgoyne's army, 1776-1781, who wrote full and graphic letters home, and later collected them in two volumes which were published anonymously in London in 1789, and with the author's name in 1792. He gives an excellent account of eight months' service in Quebec and Montreal at the outset of the war, of the disastrous Burgoyne campaign, and of his long peripatetic captivity, in which he traversed much of the United States between Boston and Richmond, Va. The second volume throws some illuminating sidelights upon relations between Whigs and Tories or neutrals in the various States, currency difficulties, the grumblings against Congress, and the tide of emigration from Virginia to the new Southwest."—Lit R

"His narrative is lively, although the author evidently striving at all times to keep closely unembellished facts. It is the soldier, rather n the author, who is speaking, and while the narrative is filled with keen observations on the forests, lands, animals, game foods and roads—or lack of roads—of America, and presents with fascinating detail an appraisal of the qualities and habits of the people, the value of the work today lies principally in the soldier's personal observations and incidents of his travels on foot for more than a thousand miles from Montreal to Virginia." G. H. S.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 19 '24 800w
Canadian Hist R 5:175 Je '24 400w

"In their observation of American life in these stirring times, Thomas Anburey's letters are very much outdone by the mature and genial Chastellux. The young lieutenant's delightful letters are interesting as a record only in his vivid account of Saratoga. But, as in the case of Chastellux, there is a strong preservative of personal charm in this writing that keeps it readable and fresh from start to finish." E: T. Booth
+ Freeman 8:501 Ja 30 '24 1100w

"An interesting picture of America as viewed by an Englishman nearly one hundred and fifty years ago." S. F. Reavis
+ Int Bk R p531 Je '24 100w

"Lieutenant Anburey writes as a loyal British officer, but with a candor and generosity which do him credit. Natural history particularly interested him, and his descriptions of the beaver, flying squirrel, buzzard, and other animals, though of no scientific value, are quaintly interesting. The reprint would have been more valuable to historical students if given a little editing, and it is particularly to be regretted that an index was not prepared."
+ — Lit R p841 Je 21 '24 500w

"Though a soldier, he tells little which is of great value to the military historian, but his book is full of observations about the domestic life and local characteristics of the Americans. And how copiously, if at times credulously, he went into details which after nearly a century and a half seem more fascinating than almost any historical novel devoted to the times."
+ Nation 118:320 Mr 19 '24 250w

ANDERSON, MADGE. Heroes of the puppet stage. 420p il $3 Harcourt [12s 6d J. Cape]
792 Puppet-plays 23-12862

"This book is a record of puppet experiments, puppet theatres and the décor and management of puppet stages. The history of marionettes is to some extent set forth, in Japan, China, primitive America, Europe and Africa, and other lands, and finally in our own theatres. Puppet material, stories, authors, and many delightful illustrations are included."—Theatre Arts Mo

"That so large a book on this seemingly simple subject should continuously maintain itself lightly, gracefully, be humorsome and interesting, is something which one would hardly expect, and yet that is exactly what it accomplishes. No reader can enjoy such a volume by barricading himself against it. But if he will but approach it in a spirit of self-surrender, he will follow its every page."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 12 '24 750w

"Miss Anderson professes to have produced a book for children of all ages, from six to sixty. The children of six will recognize a kind of fluttery femininity in diction and handling, akin to that often employed by the enraptured kindergartener. The children of sixty, for the sake of much sound and interesting material, will adjust themselves to this manner as best they may. The volume is enlivened with much music and verse, and with many pictures by the author herself. Some of these deal with the technique of the art; others, in colour, present its poetic possibilities." H. B. F.
Freeman 8:359 D 19 '23 560w
New Statesman 22:710 Mr 22 '24 180w

"Miss Anderson's book comes in on the crest of a wave of revivalist energy, and it is written with an enthusiasm that is tremendous enough to be after some four hundred pages, tiresome. It is 'writ sentimental,' and the au-

ANDERSON, MADGE—Continued
thoress does not appear to have made up her mind whether she is merely galloping her own hobby-horse or endeavoring to write a serious history of a serious artistic subject. As a history her work is confused, un-indexed, and sometimes ill-supported by authority. For those who are not deterred by the writer's happy-go-lucky historical method and indiscriminating enthusiasm for her puppet heroes, there is a good deal of interest to be obtained from the book."
— + Sat R 137:163 F 16 '24 800w

"A book which may be read for the sheer enjoyment of reading, yet which, subtly, and with an ease which is baffling, conveys to the reader all of the important facts about the making, the management and the history of puppets."
+ Springf'd Republican p14 O 5 '23 560w

"The attraction of Miss Anderson's book is less in the strictly historical information she gives than in her lively descriptions of various types of puppet-show, and her power of conveying her own enjoyment to us. If there is a convenient vagueness about the time and place where some of these puppets were seen, that is, we take it, because the author wished to exercise her right of mixing a little dream-stuff with her memories."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p77 F 7 '24 1000w

"Very useful and suggestive. A very happy venture in the puppet field, this volume and the plan of its arrangement."
+ Theatre Arts Mo 8:70 Ja '24 70w

"Fascinating book for anyone whose interest has been aroused. Good bibliography."
+ Wis Lib Bul 19:505 D '23

[2] ANDERSON, OSCAR GUSTAF, and ROTH, FREDERICK CARL. Insecticides and fungicides, spraying and dusting equipment; a laboratory manual with supplementary text material. 349p il $3 Wiley
632.9 Insecticides. Fungicides. Spraying
23-2217

An instruction manual in the preparation of insecticides and fungicides as applied to horticultural crops. A detailed study of spraying and dusting equipment is also included.

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:515 N '24

ANDERSON, ROBERT GORDON. For love of a sinner. 314p $2 Minton, Balch & co.
24-11236

A romance of fifteenth century France with that poet of evil repute, François Villon, as its hero. One night while Villon was prowling over the roofs of Paris he caught a vision of the lovely Comtesse Denise de Lorney at her prayers in her tower chamber and in a moment of impulsive penitence for his misdeeds he scratched this message on her window-pane:

"To the Unknown Ladye,
The Love of a Sinner!"

This was the beginning of a romantic attachment, for Denise discovered the identity of the sinner and went out to save his soul, seeking him in low places at the peril of her good name, testifying for him when he was tried for robbery, and going to King Louis XI to secure a pardon for him.

"Robert Anderson has written more beautiful books than this one, but he has never written a more surprising book. We do not find any preparation in his other books for this particular story. The lure of this type of story is sufficient refutation of the idea that the world will ever embrace the realistic novel to the exclusion of other types. The swashbuckling tale, the picaresque novel never wholly pass." D. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p3 My 10 '24 1300w

"A somewhat pretentious and cumbrous romance."
— N Y Times p14 Ap 27 '24 850w

"A novel which is both wise and entertaining."
N Y Tribune p26 My 4 '24 1100w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e My 18 '24 80w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 24 '24 180w

ANDERSON, SHERWOOD. Story teller's story. 442p $3 Huebsch
B or 92
24-27699

Mr Anderson himself describes his autobiography as "the tale of an American writer's journey through his own imaginative world and through the world of facts, with many of his experiences and impressions among other writers." It is more than this—the story of an artist and idealist in his unequal yet undaunted struggle against the materialism and standardization of American life.

Booklist 21:147 Ja '25

"This is a beautiful book and one that is gravely and, in portions, superbly written in a style which must impress even the bitterest critics of the author." L: Bromfield
+ Bookm 60:492 D '24 620w

Boston Transcript p4 D 31 '24 800w

Reviewed by H. S. Gorman
Int Bk R p15 D '24 2600w

"The book seemed strangely alive, not only with the personality of Mr. Anderson, but with other personalities who wander through it—his amiable father, his dark-eyed mother, Alonzo Berners and many more. But beyond all it seemed a most complete picture of a man. And for once I could read a publisher's blurb with no smile—'our best story teller here tells his best story.' That's as near my own brand of truth as I can get." Walter Yust
+ Lit R p4 N 1 '24 900w

"This autobiography has the singular merit of presenting in a most engaging manner a key to all sides of its author's literary character. . . If we judge the book in the light of its function, we have to agree that it presents most accurately the mental growth of the man who wrote not only 'Windy McPherson's Son' but also 'The Triumph of the Egg' and 'Many Marrages.' In the field of literary autobiography it stands practically alone in America." Harry Hansen
Nation 119:640 D 10 '24 1450w

"The record gains in vividness and reality, as do many of Mr. Anderson's stories, by the fact that he does not impose a pattern, even a simple chronological order, on his material, but lets that material possess him in retrospect and tell itself in a form which is inherent in its substance and grows with its unfolding. The book is less notable as an account of physical than of mental activity. . . He has written a story of spiritual adventure, a fascinating and moving revelation of the artist's mind." R. M. Lovett
+ New Repub 40:255 N 5 '24 2050w

"As an antidote to the complacent acceptance of industrial America celebrated by Mr. Edward Bok, one can do no better than ponder Mr. Anderson's volume, a book probably unequaled in our recent literature for austerity of moral courage and sincerity of conviction. . . Whatever our individual opinion may be of the merit of his work as a contribution to our literature, his experience is invaluable to an understanding of what happens to the creative temperament, the honest and serious craftsman, in our national life. In its widest application, as a whole challenge to our life to justify itself ideally, Mr. Anderson's autobiography is a book which should be read by every intelligent and reflective American." Lloyd Morris
+ N Y Times p6 O 12 '24 1750w

"On the whole, this book is a curiously faithful record. It exhibits ever and again the fullest powers of one of the truly creative writers of our time. It possesses documentary value. And Anderson has the gift of intimacy." W: R. Benet
Sat R of Lit 1:200 O 18 '24 1700w

" 'A Story Teller's Story', keenly analytical, gives the impression of a confession rushing forth from the lips of a rugged, powerful individualist, a man who belongs to no school or type, but whose artistic urge has fought its way toward expression, moulding all conditions, however adverse, to its purpose. It is the story of the education of a rough-hewn, literary talent."

Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 4 '25 450w

Reviewed by Arthur Kellogg

Survey 53:288 D 1 '24 1050w

ANDRADE, EDWARD NEVILLE DA COSTA. Structure of the atom. 314p il $6 Harcourt [16s Bell]

541.2 Atoms [24-2009]

"To give a comprehensive critical survey of the prevailing theories of atomic structure and to indicate their triumphs and inadequacies in a volume of reasonable size is the professed object of the book under review. Such a book has until now not been available in English, and the want is scarcely filled by the recent translation of Sommerfeld's classic work. The book is divided into two parts dealing with the existence and properties of the nucleus and with the extra-nuclear structure respectively."—Nature

---

Cleveland p75 S '24

"A scientific book, with a charming style. . . A sane treatment, but not a treatise, of the most important phase of modern science, this book approaches literature as closely as can any text which involves mathematical symbolization." J: Mills

+ Lit R p593 Mr 15 '24 780w

"This is a bold design. It is all the greater pleasure therefore to record that the book is an almost unqualified success. It is, moreover, heartily welcome, for it provides just that critical introduction to modern atomic speculations which should be in the hands of every student, and can be read with profit by most researchers." R. H. Fowler

+ — Nature 112:577 O 20 '23 1050w

"Atomic structure is a subject upon which a comprehensive book in English was urgently needed. Professor Andrade's book is more all-embracing (than Sommerfeld's) though possibly a chemist would feel that his side of the study of atoms might have been more emphasized. The mathematical knowledge required is not great—considerably less than in Sommerfeld's book." Bertrand Russell

+ New Repub 37:341 F 20 '24 1550w

" 'The Structure of the Atom' is a somewhat technical work. It is more technical than Bertrand Russell's 'The A B C of Atoms'; but, provided you can wade through the reasoning and the mathematics, it is a far more satisfying work. It is more satisfying because it answers all the whys and hows." B: Harrow

+ N Y Times p19 Mr 9 '24 1600w

Sat R 136:359 S 29 '23 2200w

"Even as a compilation and arrangement of existing knowledge the book is remarkable. But Professor Andrade has done much more than collect information. He gives a very illuminating critical discussion of the various points raised, and this critical presentation extends to the very structure of his book."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p564 Ag 30 '23 2000w

ANDREIEFF, LEONID NIKOLAEVICH. Katerina (Yekaterina Ivanovna); a drama in four acts; auth. tr. from the original manuscript, with a preface by Herman Bernstein. 181p $1.50 Brentano's

891.72 23-16804

"A posthumous play in which a husband's unfounded suspicion and brutal accusation disturb the delicate balance of his wife's sensitive nature and drive her to a career of vice."—Cleveland

---

Booklist 20:290 My '24 60w

"The characterization is varied and masterly and the theme is powerfully developed."

+ Cleveland p2 Ja '24

Dial 76:561 Je '24 70w

" 'Katerina' is one of those later plays of Andreieff in which realism and symbolism are finely blended, producing a visible actuality whose convincing power is self-sufficient and independent of the underlying significance." Alexander Kaun

+ Lit R p703 Ap 26 '24 420w

"Andreyev's depiction of Katerina is masterly in the extreme; and once the reader has the clue to her character as a woman 'dancing' through life her progress through the pages will become ever a fresh source of wonderment." P. A. Hutchison

+ N Y Times p8 Ja 6 '24 1300w

"Frankly, the emotional tone of the play is not very deep. There is some love and some disillusionment; but Katerina, when once started on her 'downward' or 'dancing' career, does not hold our sympathy or interest. She has no inner conflict to face and, indeed, no serious social conflict, once she has yielded to the circumstances and inclinations which keep her apart from her husband; for we cannot take her profession of love very seriously. She seems essentially light and wayward."

— Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 20 '24 500w

ANDREIEFF, LEONID NIKOLAEVICH. Samson in chains; posthumous tragedy; auth. tr. from the original manuscript, and a preface, by Herman Bernstein. 207p $1.50 Brentano's

891.72 23-13680

"The material is treated in a mood of elevation. We confront Samson, broken, blinded and in chains. To him comes the Delilah who betrayed him, with her brothers. Her emotion at seeing him, his rapture at realizing her presence, are wonderfully suggested to us. Her final admission that she has always loved him, he hears with the indifference of a man whose mind has been enfeebled through misery and torture. As the drama sweeps forward, we feel that curious inevitability which must lie at the heart of all tragedy to make us tremble before it."—Boston Transcript

"It is a magnificent, a stupendous conception of love and ambition highly colored, beautifully phrased." D. F. G.

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 27 '23 670w

Dial 76:560 Je '24 70w

" 'Samson in Chains' adds nothing to Andreyev's glory. It is uneven as all Andreyev has written. Andreyev, to an unprecedented extent, had suffered from the mania of foisting Freudian complexes on his female characters."

— Lit R p889 Jl 12 '24 320w

"The story is made the vehicle of the real and potent feelings of the writer. As far as these feelings are manifested through the play, so far the play is moving. But there is throughout an appearance of effort and a desire for sensation and violence which go a long way to destroy the genuine tragic emotions which are sometimes stirred. The characters are little more than abstractions, what we hear is not their words and what we see is not their actions, but the dimly apprehended chaos of the author's mind."

— + New Statesman 22:610 Mr 1 '24 700w

"Its movement is unbelievably turgid, and one begins to yawn in the second act, to be aroused from his heavy stupor by exquisite passages depicting luxurious Byzantine beauty. Otherwise 'Samson in Chains' is laden with the bulky, grieving genius of Andreyev, a pathetic Russian whose shattered sensibilities and disemboweled spirit were never utterly manifested through his dramas." J: Armstrong

— N Y Tribune p19 Ja 20 '24 480w

"Inexorable as one finds the tragic pessimism of his vision, one must also feel in the work a sublimity which is sadly lacking in the tenor of our literary thought."

— + Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 20 '24 500w

ANDREWS, BENJAMIN RICHARD. Economics of the household; its administration and finance. 623p $3.25 Macmillan

647 Home economics. Domestic finance
23-11197

"The book is intended as a text book in colleges and other higher institutions. The topics discussed are grouped into sixteen chapters devoted to such subjects as 'Household Income,' 'Household Expenditure,' 'Household Capital and Savings,' 'Investments and Life Insurance,' 'Housing and the Home,' 'Social Aspects of Housing,' and nine chapters devoted to the usual categories in consumption. In each chapter there is a very comprehensive summary of the material available on the subject."—J Home Econ

"Whether or not the volume be opened with expectation, it will be closed with profit, since it cannot fail to impress the mind of the reader at many points. Mr. Andrews accentuates the significance to the nation that lies in a recognition of the full economic meaning of the homes of its people. He presents the results of numerous surveys of living conditions, and his suggested budget adjustments for the establishment and maintenance of homes of the right type are very valuable. My only criticism of the book is that it is unnecessarily voluminous." G. B. Biddle

+ — Ann Am Acad 111:379 Ja '24 500w

"The obligation under which workers in the field of household administration already lie to Dr. Andrews is greatly enhanced by the publication of this comprehensive and scholarly volume." S. P. Breckinridge

+ J Home Econ 16:207 Ap '24 800w

"Designed as a college text, and admirably adapted to such use, 'Economics of the Household' presents much to be advantageously digested by the average homemaker."

+ Lit R p678 Ap 12 '24 230w

ANDREWS, CHARLES MCLEAN. Colonial
1 background of the American revolution. 218p
$2.50 Yale univ. press

973.2 United States—History—Colonial period. United States—History—Revolution—Causes. Great Britain—Colonies 24-25115

In these four essays the Farnam professor of American history in Yale university explains the relationship of the American colonies with Great Britain. He deals with the larger aspects of this relationship and the motives which actuated the colonial policy of Great Britain. He shows how for a hundred years before the Revolution the colonies and the mother country were moving in exactly opposite directions and how the conflict between antagonistic interests grew thruout this period. The last essay is a summing up of the chief obstacles to the popularization of an accurate interpretation of the revolutionary period.

"Although at the close of the preface Professor Andrews indicates that he has written for his fellow workers rather than for the public, it is to be hoped that the public will read and profit by these lucid and wholly admirable essays." J. T. Adams

+ Sat R of Lit 1:430 Ja 3 '25 1650w

ANGELO, PASCAL D'. Pascal d'Angelo, son
3 of Italy. 185p $2 Macmillan

B or 92

The autobiography of an Italian immigrant who came to America from the Abruzzi and who, after working here for some years at the hardest physical labor, left his pick and shovel behind him to become a poet. He gives a simple account of his childhood in Italy, his coming to America, his life as a road laborer, his resolution to become a writer and the hardships he endured before realizing his ambition. Carl Van Doren, from whom he obtained his first recognition as a poet, has written the Introduction.

"Among the autobiographies of immigrants which have been fairly frequent of recent years, this of Pascal d'Angelo stands alone because, out of them all, his aim is not to get on and make money and a secure position for himself in this country, but to say something which his very soul felt needed to be said." D. L. Mann

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 6 '24 1150w

"It is a fascinating, if gruesome story, utterly devoid of literary cosmetics." Rae Richter

+ Lit R p6 D 13 '24 400w

"His poems, a few of which are inserted in the present text, deserve to be better known. But his story as told here is thus far the most important thing about him." Mark Van Doren

+ Nation 119:682 D 17 '24 460w

"Certainly d'Angelo's observations on American life, while possibly of sociological interest, are pleasing rather than profound, interesting rather than significant."

N Y Times p18 Ja 4 '25 820w

"The story is real and yet like a grotesque fairy tale. Throughout the book you see the man and his story with the same mystery, amazement, and bewilderment as he sees it. You watch the whole thing from the same position and you wish, at times, that it were not so truthful, just as he must have wished that same thing when it was happening." Margery Latimer

N Y Tribune p3 D 21 '24 750w

Reviewed by W: R. Benet

Sat R of Lit 1:411 D 27 '24 920w

"Intense and fascinating."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 D 29 '24 500w

ANGERVILLE, MOUFFLE D'. Private life of Louis XV; tr. from the French by H. S. Mingard. 364p il $3.50 Boni & Liveright [16s Lane]

B or 92 Louis XV, king of France

"This history of the private life of the King was written pretty promptly after his death and, broadly speaking, in no very friendly spirit. The author was a lawyer and an experienced publicist. Not having access to official sources of information, he disclaims all effort to write a history of the dead King, but he thought that in such cases, 'so soon as he has breathed his last the intending chronicler cannot be too prompt in collecting the multitudinous facts that make up the story' of a monarch's private life. So he set to work collecting 'oral tradition' from 'original witnesses' and published his book in London 1781, just seven years after the death of its chief character. His modern editor, M. Meyrac, supplements its story with a vast array of notes drawn from the verse makers, the chroniclers and the critics of the period."—N Y Times

"It is entertainingly written, and while a magistrate might protest against its being in his daughter's library, it has the excellent excuse of being history."

Bookm 60:350 N '24 150w

Boston Transcript p4 D 10 '24 1000w

Dial 78:78 Ja '25 70w

"This excellently edited book is yet another volume of tittle-tattle about Louis XV. It is, as its title suggests, a chronique scandaleuse, to a degree that makes us occasionally regret that we have not been permitted a few extracts from the author's book about Maupeou. Yesterday's revolutions are more interesting sometimes than yesterday's gossip." F. B.

— + Nation and Ath 35:386 Je 21 '24 800w

"The result as now done into English is a piquantly entertaining and very instructive narrative out of which the reader is led to reconstruct Louis as a character to be pitied at least as much as condemned." James Luby

+ N Y Times p11 My 25 '24 1600w

Outlook 138:259 O 15 '24 160w

"The value of this book appears to be that it shows how much courage and virtue could be mingled with cowardice and vice in a period of history which will always be black."
Springf'd Republican p10 O 8 '24 770w

"The book of M. Meyrac, here translated, is no more than a series of extracts from the original, but it has the advantage of his historical knowledge, being corrected and supplemented from contemporary memoirs and having added certain pamphlets and satirical songs. It is interesting in parts—in others gross without being so."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p260 My 1 '24 450w

ANISSIA. My life; as told by the peasant Anissia to T. A. Kouzminskaya, rev. and corrected by Leo Tolstoi; tr. with notes and a preface by Charles Salomon. 136p $1.50 Duffield [5s G. Bles]

B or 92 Tolstoi, Leo Nikolaievich, ed. 24-7981

Mme Kouzminskaya, sister-in-law of Leo Tolstoi, took down this story from the lips of Anissia, a simple peasant of central Russia. Tolstoi himself, who was intensely interested in Anissia and her story, sometimes came to hear the recital. The brief story is told with a simplicity which gives it true dignity. It is a photograph of Russian peasant life, of serfdom and oppression in Siberia—a tale of sorrow and bereavement borne with childlike resignation. Opinion differs as to the extent to which Tolstoi's own hand appears in the narrative.

"A chapter out of human experience, apparently unmarred by literary finish, and moving one by its very simplicity and directness."
+ Bookm 59:479 Je '24 140w

"There is something strangely moving about the simplicity of the whole story." D. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p4 My 28 '24 1100w

Cleveland p45 Je '24

Reviewed by A. I. Nazaroff
Int Bk R p592 Jl '24 750w

"Folksong, traditional tale and parable have a natural style and simplicity of their own, almost beyond the reach of art: it is no matter for wonder now that a peasant should speak in vivid idiom; but the detailed descriptions of peasant customs and manners in this story of Anissia are obviously explanatory, and argue an objective attitude. But the story is disappointing, since it is not the untouched expression of a simple aged woman, and, if Tolstoy's own, adds nothing to his name. So quiet a problem need not raise storms in a samovar." Austin Clarke
— + Nation and Ath 35:150 My 3 '24 370w

Reviewed by Desmond MacCarthy
New Statesman 23:497 Ag 2 '24 550w

"It is stark, pitiful and beautiful, a photographic account of the life of a woman unable to read or write, but possessing in a high degree the gift of tale telling."
+ N Y Tribune p26 Je 22 '24 90w

St Louis p354 O '24

"Tolstoy informed the whole story with beauty by those few touches in which he shows that Anissia was alive to beauty; but inasmuch as that sensibility would have brought unhappiness in its train, we think he also falsified it." L. P. Hartley
— + Spec 132:678 Ap 26 '24 500w

"Whether or not Tolstoy must be considered its author, the tale is a little masterpiece. The grim horror and tragedy of Anissia's life, relieved only by the fortitude of her spirit, is recorded in a narrative of fine simplicity."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p233 Ap 17 '24 700w

ANNIN, ROBERT EDWARDS. Woodrow Wilson; a character study. 404p il $2.50 Dodd

B or 92 Wilson, Woodrow 24-6460

The author's expressed purpose is not to present a life of Woodrow Wilson "but merely to give such account of striking incidents in a distinguished career as may aid in throwing light upon character and mentality." The period covered by the study is about thirty years—from 1890 to 1920—and the account given of his Princeton career and the controversy it raised is particularly full. In spite of the author's studied attempt to be impartial, his judgment is in effect distinctly adverse. He finds Wilson's life work to have been hindered by a "faulty perspective—personal and political"—and grave faults of character and temperament, but he makes no attempt to account for his influence or the fervor and loyalty of his following.

"This careful and exceptionally well written study shows no evidence whatever of having been hastily prepared to meet a sudden demand created by the death of its subject. It is far too analytical and in too many places bears marks of time spent in preparation and careful and judicial weighing of circumstances and evidence to be the book of an opportunity." S. L. C.
+ Boston Transcript p15 Mr 29 '24 1500w

Eng J 13:685 N '24 100w

"Mr. Annin's book is a labor of hate. There will be no difference of opinion on this score, despite the amazing statement in the 'Foreword' by Prof. William M. Sloane that the volume 'is distinctly an impartial contribution to contemporary history' and that Mr. Annin 'believes himself to be without rancor.' . . . While the author loses no opportunity to bring every direct charge collectable against his villain, the bulk of the indictments are made by a sort of poisoned innuendo. There is charge upon charge brought against Mr. Wilson on such flimsy evidence as 'there can be little doubt,' 'it is often said,' 'according to the judgment of many,' 'competent observers noted,' 'there was widespread feeling,' 'it was whispered.'" Hamilton Holt
— Int Bk R p509 Je '24 2350w

"Mr. Annin has presented a picture of the mind of Woodrow Wilson which is as complete as it is possible to paint at the present time." M. R. Werner
+ Lit R p721 My 3 '24 780w

"While the book is to be taken cum grano, and should be constantly paralleled by the account in Professor Dodd's apologia, yet it is unquestionably the most searching and significant study which has thus far been made of the interesting personality of Woodrow Wilson. But we shall never attain any satisfactory definitive estimate of that baffling psyche until we have been more adequately oriented by better historical perspective, and have been able to obtain from acquaintances, physicians, and neurologists some credible and significant information as to his ancestry, youth, and physical and mental health." H. E. Barnes
+ — Nation 119:378 O 8 '24 1000w

Reviewed by H. E. Barnes
New Repub 40:sup3 O 1 '24 1100w

"Partisanship is rampant over a grave just closed. This is no time for judgment. The truth on both sides now awaits the historian, and it is due to Mr. Annin that that far-off investigator will not find one side alone." C: W. Thompson
N Y Times p3 Mr 23 '24 2050w

"We have here Col. Harvey's view, and McComb's view, and Henry Cabot Lodge's view, and Roosevelt's view, but no hint of the world view so impressively disclosed at the time of Wilson's death. Even Wilson, the War President, fails to impress Mr. Annin—which doesn't matter. If any future Mrs. Partington attempts to sweep back the oncoming tide of Wilson's fame, it is to be hoped, in the interest of good sport, that she, or he, will find a mop of something other than old and dirty rags." C. G. B.
— N Y World p6e Mr 23 '24 360w

Outlook 136:704 Ap 23 '24 720w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:326 Je '24

"The reader will be glad to have the subject placed in this large setting, and he will doubtless admire the skill with which the author has constructed the narrative so as to underline naturally and with apparent unconsciousness the incidents that give point to his argument." C: Seymour

ANNIN, R. E.—Continued
+ Pol Sci Q 39:683 D '24 1350w

"In this book is expressed more fully than elsewhere the estimate of Woodrow Wilson held by a large and representative group of Princeton men."
+ R of Rs 69:558 My '24 120w

"Robert Edwards Annin's Woodrow Wilson exhibits an anti-Wilson 'complex' that is not explained. In the preface the author claims for himself 'moderation of thought and expression' and declares that he means to appeal neither to Mr Wilson's extreme admirers nor extreme detractors. Had he carried out this intention, the abstract ability disclosed in his hostile analysis of Mr Wilson's career might have contributed to a historical estimate of the late ex-President's position. Mr Annin shows zeal and acuteness in the role of prosecuting attorney, and it is to be regretted that the same qualities were not transferred to the worthier role of historian."
— + Springf'd Republican p6 My 12 '24 520w
Wis Lib Bul 20:125 My '24

ANSELL, MARY. Dogs and men. 152p $1.50 Scribner [5s Duckworth]
636.7 Dogs—Legends and stories 24-24397

The author of this book, who was formerly the wife of Sir James Barrie, says at the outset that a dog makes a most desirable accompaniment to a husband. She charmingly describes the character of her wonderful dogs that for twenty-one years filled her life with love and devotion. There was Porthos, the St Bernard, who was named by Barrie himself; then Luath, the beautiful Newfoundland who was made famous by playing the part of Nana in "Peter Pan"; then Billy, Sammy and Biddy, less distinguished pets, but just as devoted to their mistress.

"It 'may not be cricket' to do the thing which Mary Ansell has done, but it makes entertaining reading unfortunately. She should not—there is no question of that—have told how much more satisfying she found her dogs than she found her two famous husbands. No matter how cleverly nor how charmingly she covers her telling, the act in itself is unsportsmanlike, and for that reason she does not come out of the pages of this book in better guise than do either of her husbands. It does not, however, detract from the normal curiosity of readers that they disapprove what Mary Ansell has done." D. L. M.
— + Boston Transcript p4 N 29 '24 1250w
New Statesman 24:370 Ja 3 '25 200w
N Y World p8e D 7 '24 80w

"Her use of her material is frugal and is kept within 'good taste,' yet there is no doubt of its being a bid for readers. Apart from it the book is hardly noteworthy. The general effect of the writing, confirmed by the tenor of some passages, is to suggest a rather childlike personality, embittered by hard experience, doing its best in the character of a captivating essayist."
— + Sat R of Lit 1:331 N 29 '24 100w
Springf'd Republican p10 D 17 '24 180w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p670 O 23 '24 220w

ANTHONY, EDWARD (EDAR, pseud.). "Razzberry!" 340p $1.75 Holt
817 Sports 24-9907

A newspaper columnist who has apparently watched every game that Americans enjoy, from horse-race to street fight, writes about sports and sport crowds. Partial contents: The house team organizes; All around the razzberry bush; The baseball exhibit; Milady at the ringside; A lady takes a swimming lesson; The campfire girls' athletic carnival; Song of the dog-shop puppy; Babe Ruth, the headline king; The busy fan; The family camps out; Sally of our bowling alley; Touring without a touring car.

"Edward Anthony's 'Razzberry!'—the bleacher's cry of derision—is an amusing though uneven performance." T. R. Coward
+ — Bookm 59:596 Jl '24 20w

"Sharp, witty, incisive, he deals with all kinds of sportsmanship and all conditions of sportsmen. It lacks somewhat that touch of the effortless humor which we had hoped to find. Sometimes Mr. Anthony is a bit heavy-handed. But on the whole he is shrewd in his conceptions and he does know 'the game' from every angle."
+ — Boston Transcript p1 Je 7 '24 150w

"Mr. Anthony understands the feminine attitude toward the sports and his descriptions of the flapper in a ringside seat and at the track are very vivid. He is a sports writer of the first rank. He knows his way around as few do."
+ N Y Times p12 Je 29 '24 300w

"Mr. Anthony is good fun, but he doesn't go very deep, and in destroying the absurdities of the sport world he has not created a new world of complete humor. None the less, he gives us admirable fooling and ingenious delight." A. D. Douglas
+ — N Y Tribune p24 Jl 20 '24 130w

ANTHONY, IRVIN. Down to the sea in ships. ² 358p il $4 Penn
623.8 Ships. Shipping—History 24-23181

"Mr Anthony delved into marine history, ancient and modern, to obtain the data for this book and the result is a comprehensive popular survey of shiplore, detailing every major step of progress in shipbuilding through the ages. The book is illustrated with pictures of models, showing ships from the Athenian trireme and earliest Greek merchant vessel to the modern Olympic."—Springf'd Republican

Boston Transcript p5 D 6 '24 1200w
N Y Times p8 D 21 '24 450w

"I do not doubt that a deal of honest, enthusiastic work went to the making of this book, and that libraries and pamphlets and records were ransacked in a thorough and whole-hearted way. There are odds and ends of interesting information scattered through the text, all probably quite sound and well enough documented. I defy any one, however, to bear with the college theme manner and the enthusiast mind for more than three hundred pages. The feat is beyond human possibility. 'Down to the Sea in Ships' simply does not get down."
— + N Y Tribune p7 Ja 11 '25 180w

"The chapters have a poetical touch that the sea often inspires in writers, thereby divesting a technical subject of the dryness that otherwise the average reader might find in such a compilation."
+ Springf'd Republican p5a Ja 11 '25 500w

ANTHONY, JOSEPH. Golden village. 321p $2 Bobbs
24-24951

"Arpad Romer was leader of a Hungarian farming group that emigrated to America in the crisis of a conflict with the native authorities. The group came without Arpad, since he was thrust into prison at the moment when his compatriots were grieving over false tidings of his death. After eighteen years he reaches America, beset by a fanatical hope of finding his lost friends. We first see him upon a road in a region we may recognize as that of New Jersey, following a tramp-like course, inquiring by name for the Hungarian associates of his proud days. It is here that he is met by his grandson, Stephen Romer, orphaned and lonely as himself, to whom the spectacle of the old man's devoted quest makes an extraordinary appeal. The two start off with their packs. To Pop Romer, dreamer of European dreams, religiously devoted to the ideal of an elemental grouping, too old to be remolded by the nervous mechanism of newness, the end of the journey is a frustration. It comes about that the Golden Village is but a gray town. The lost Hungarians are found in a heterogeneous community, shorn of their native ways, absorbed in new struggles, answering new calls." —Int Bk R

Bookm 60:488 D '24 240w
Boston Transcript p4 D 24 '24 450w
Cleveland p91 D '24

"'The Golden Village' has the virtues of the earlier books and others that are quite its own. It moves like one of its own pilgrims toward a destination. The implicit philosophy (it is never more than implicit) gives the fine allegorical significance to the simple, graphic, pungent action of a tale whose medium is realistic, but whose essence is romance." Alexander Black
+ Int Bk R p898 N '24 800w

"The best study of modern boyhood in a novel, according to our opinion, is 'The Gang.' The present book shows the same careful and thoughtful craftsmanship and the same deep honesty of purpose. The simplicity of its flowing narrative is a joy to the heart." Walter Yust
+ Lit R p15 O 18 '24 450w

"'The Golden Village' has the fragrance, the charm, the warm friendliness of the happy countryside. Here is the romance of the open road, gay with sunshine, but not forgetful of the shadows. It is picaresque in its kindly vein."
+ N Y Times p9 O 19 '24 650w

Reviewed by Mary Ross
N Y Tribune p8 O 12 '24 780w
N Y World p9e O 26 '24 320w

Reviewed by R. D. Townsend
Outlook 138:602 D 10 '24 250w

"The artistic values of this novel lie in its lucidity, the poetry of its moods, and its almost ingenuous simplicity. In it Mr. Anthony has managed to convey some of the childlike faith and fervor with which multitudes of immigrants have waited for the American skyline to lift itself above their horizon; and to show us, ever so gently, the poignancy and pathos of 'Americanization.'" R. L. Duffus
+ Sat R of Lit 1:223 O 25 '24 800w
Springf'd Republican p5a Ja 11 '25 540w

ANTHONY, JOSEPH, ed. Best news stories of 1923. 406p $2.50 Small
070 Journalism 24-15507

The book is an anthology of the best reportorial work or newspaper stories of 1923. "The range of stories included is wide. They deal with murder, rum running, science, the Ku Klux Klan, catastrophes, personalities, every phase of the kaleidoscopic pages of the press. There is a section devoted to foreign correspondence which contains, among other things, Captain Francis McCullagh's notable story of the trial of the priests in Moscow. Sport stories are given a separate grouping, as are human interest stories. One-fourth of the volume is given over to feature and magazine page articles." (N Y Times)

Booklist 21:134 Ja '25

"To Mr. Anthony, the editor, should go much praise for his worthy task in gathering together the worth-while work of these men and women and placing them on paper which will last long after the files of the newspapers are yellowed and torn. It is a worth-while undertaking and he has done his work well." K. S.
+ Boston Transcript p2 My 24 '24 1000w
Ind 113:77 Ag 2 '24 750w

Reviewed by R. E. MacAlarney
Nation 119:422 O 15 '24 850w

"This book contains not a few pages of excellent writing, aside from the quality of the reporting it represents; and it contains no very bad writing. That is more than can be said of the average contents of many popular magazines or of many books."
+ N Y Times p11 Jl 13 '24 680w

"Astonishingly good it is; astonishingly readable; and yet, somehow, astonishingly old. Just because the passage of President Harding's funeral train across the continent and the Yale-Harvard game of 1923 were news about a year ago these newspaper accounts of them seem curiously antique to-day."
+ — Outlook 137:30 S 3 '24 50w
Wis Lib Bul 20:210 O '24

APOLLINAIRE, GUILLAUME. Poet assassinated; tr. from the French; with a biographical notice and notes, by Matthew Josephson. 158p $5 Broom pub. co.
24-15706

"'The Poet Assassinated' is more the collected fragments of a novel than a complete effort in itself. But it is smoothed out enough to give the reader a fair chronological idea of the career of Croniamantal, the poetical hero, who is presumably a symbol for the modern poetical consciousness in these modern times. The situations through which he passes to his martyrdom (for he is killed during a world-wide pogrom on poets led by Horace Tograth of Adelaide, Australia!) are heavily burlesqued, but there are times when the reader will recognize the justice of some of these deplorable scenes."—N Y Times

"Likely enough, someone possessed of the requisite Urim and Thummim can see in 'The Poet Assassinated' all that the writer of the introduction does. Unfortunately, those lacking the blessed Egyptian spectacles may think that the Broom Publishing Company and Matthew Josephson wasted precious time, paper, and excellent composition and presswork on this translation."
— + Bookm 59:228 Ap '24 140w

"Now that the tradition of St. Apollinaire is on the point of being accepted, the book is losing its controversial value. It is becoming a novel like any other. Critics are at liberty to blame it for being loosely constructed and a little smutty, or to praise its vigor, rapidity, and continual surprise. Unlike Apollinaire's poems, it fails of being a great book. It will, however, continue to be read when more pretentious volumes are forgotten." Malcolm Cowley
+ — Lit R p835 Je 21 '24 1400w

"This Rabelaisian extravaganza in prose by one of the most important of modern French poets begins better than it ends. On the whole, an amusing and reckless book by a diabolically gifted writer."
— + Nation 118:404 Ap 4 '24 80w

Reviewed by M. E. Opdycke
New Repub 38:318 My 14 '24 600w

"At times it is amusing; at other times it approaches a rather incoherent brilliance; but for the most part it is a shattered fantasy that does not come off."
— + N Y Times p16 Ja 13 '24 600w

Reviewed by W: A. Drake
N Y Tribune p24 Ag 3 '24 950w

"At times witty, and startlingly smutty in some of its conceits. But for antic characters one can offer any of Cabell's creations—even the poorest—as immensely his superior. It certainly is by no means satire in the eighteenth century sense." Laurence Stallings
— + N Y World p7e D 30 '23 460w

APP, FRANK, and WOODWARD, CARL RAYMOND. Farmer and his farm. 338p il $2 Harcourt
630 Agriculture 24-10310

"Frank App, Ph. D., was formerly head of the department of agricultural economics, New Jersey State College of Agriculture and Agricultural Experiment Stations, and Carl Raymond Woodward, A. M., is editor and secretary of the same institution. Their book is on the management of a farm in its double aspect—

APP, F., and WOODWARD, C. R.—Continued
that of a business and of a home. The acquiring of a farm, its size, arrangement of buildings and fields, choice of crops and livestock, rotation of crops, balancing the farm business, investment of capital, use of credit, tenantry, labor problems, marketing farm produce, the keeping of farm records, cost accounting, and other pertinent topics—are treated at length, especially in reference to their practical application. The book is especially adapted to the individual farmer."—Boston Transcript

Am Econ R 14:736 D '24 110w
Booklist 21:53 N '24
Boston Transcript p2 S 13 '24 130w

"An important omission under the discussion of acquiring a farm must be noted: no mention is made of coöperative ventures in land settlement, means of acquiring ownership of land which may still be too unconventional for inclusion by economists. The peculiar merit of this volume is its simplicity of style and directness of approach." E. C. Lindeman
+ — New Repub 40:supl1 O 1 '24 220w

"The treatment throughout is simple and lucid, but indicative of ample knowledge, so that the volume will serve admirably for the instruction of the beginner and will also be useful for the more experienced farmer who wants to improve his methods of farm management."
+ N Y Times p17 Je 15 '24 500w

Reviewed by C. F. Ansley
Survey 52:466 Jl 15 '24 210w

ARCHER, DOROTHY. Corsica, the scented isle. 266p il $3.50 Houghton [10s 6d Methuen]
914.59 Corsica—Description and travel [24-16786]

"Miss Archer has spent, she tells us, twelve years in Corsica, and the information that she has acquired at her leisure and out of interest in her surroundings she now passes on. She moves easily from one topic to another, as if replying to inquiries put during a walk by a companion with eyes to see. She can give the names of the flowers and advice on the season for picking those that keep moths away; she knows on what bushes to look for particular birds. She can conduct you to the point round the rocks where the storm will have washed up shells, she can call up the lizards by whistling, and find—though she allows it is difficult—the nests under the olive trees which the trapdoor spiders hide with bits of moss laid over the lid."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"Her information is certain to help those who visit the island, as she recommends countless routes, giving distances, directions and bits of advice in each case. For general reading, her book is less interesting, as it is made up for the most part of short, jerky sentences, and has a decided encyclopaedic tendency. Her illustrations are well chosen, but an incomplete index and the omission of a map of the island detract from the value of the book." D. W.
+ — Boston Transcript p3 S 27 '24 750w

"Nobody having once dipped into her book could endure a sojourn in the island without it. She tells you exactly where to go, and at what seasons. She does not bore you with politics—conditions in Corsica seem to be happily static—or with history. To the flower-lover it is a fragrant and seductive book, and seems to exude the smell of thyme." Edmund Candler
+ Nation and Ath 35:328 Je 7 '24 250w

"Miss Archer's book is as unpretentious as it is pleasing."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p248 Ap 24 '24 420w

ARCHER, HERMAN. Mr Archer, U.S.A., as told to R. H. Platt, jr. 326p $2.50 Doubleday
B or 92 24-6127

Herman Archer enlisted in the army when he was only sixteen years old and entered upon a life of adventure. Naturally and frankly he tells the whole story of it to Mr Platt, who in turn tells it to us. Young Archer knowing no fear, constantly sought out adventure, which he found in plenty. He saw service in the Spanish war, in China during the Boxer rebellion, in the Philippines when Aguinaldo was captured by Funston, and was with the American filibusterers in Honduras at the time of its revolution. It is interesting to know that Richard Harding Davis has used this same Archer for the hero of his "Captain Machlin" as a result of his exploits in the South American revolution.

"Nothing just like it is among the current biographies. Though the character himself was not an important figure in this country's development and military performances, Archer stands for the army which has had a big rôle. His narrative is frank, naïve, and delightful."
+ Bookm 59:478 Je '24 100w

"The career of Mr. Archer of the United States Army makes a fascinating tale of adventure and we are told that it all happens to be true. The story is set down as it was related to Mr. Platt and it is marked by the easy discursiveness of the natural storyteller." D. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 23 '24 1000w

"The book is inconceivably rich, colorful and persuasive. From it one gets the best of the old army, the army that was, the army of the days prior to 1914. . . It is a stirring book, a thriller far more effective than the best efforts of the fictioneers. No lovers of adventure stories can afford to miss it." G. W. J.
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Je 15 '24 600w

"This volume is an interesting recital of adventure, but poorly written. The writer, who apparently has absorbed Mr. Archer's experiences via shorthand, tried his best to, as it were, 'step into his character,' but failed miserably. Mr. Archer, despite Mr. Platt's laborious and illogical attempts to delineate character, manages to emerge as a colorful individual." J: Armstrong
— + N Y Tribune p27 Ap 27 '24 1300w

"Archer's story is told with the ease of a book of adventure and it is truly, as the picture of an army man's life, an adventure story. The realism is carefully surrounded by glamour." L: Weitzenkorn
+ N Y World p7e Mr 30 '24 700w
St Louis p416 D '24
Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 3 '24 200w

ARCHIBALD, MRS EDITH JESSIE (ARCHIBALD). Life and letters of Sir Edward Mortimer Archibald; with foreword by the Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Laird Borden. il $3.50 G: N. Morang, Toronto, Canada
B or 92 Archibald, Sir Edward Mortimer 24-19486

"As Attorney General of Newfoundland, Sir Mortimer Archibald was actively interested in the laying of the first Atlantic cable, landed by the U.S.S. Niagara at Trinity Bay, Aug. 15, 1858. In 1857 Lord Clarendon appointed Sir Mortimer Consul General in New York, and it was his fortune to convoy the then Prince of Wales during his American stay in 1860. The Civil War period affords one series of episodes; the settling of the Alabama claim another."—N Y World

"In the writing of this biography of one of Britain's 'faithful servants' who in every position he held 'did his best,' Mrs. Archibald also deserves well of that empire. In the publication of Sir Edward's letters relative to the Civil War, she deserves well of the United States also." F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p6 My 24 '24 1200w

"A biography of singular clarity and interest. Mrs. Archibald has worthily honored her distinguished parent."
+ N Y World p7e Je 8 '24 240w

"His daughter in presenting this generation of Canadians with the record of a life of single-minded devotion and integrity has performed more than an act of filial piety. She has added to Canada's historical documents the biography of a man who 'nothing common did or mean' at any moment in a long and useful career."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p378 Je 19 '24 800w

ARDEN, CLIVE, pseud. (LILY CLIVE NUTT). [2] Enticement. 392p $2 Bobbs [7s 6d Parsons] 24-23481

"The author has tried to show how a woman may be in love with two men at once. The conflict of loyalties is made to bear an allegorical interpretation. Richard Valyran, a singer with whom the heroine's soul is in love, stands for spiritual values. Harry Wallis, head of the Wallis-Milne motor works, whom she loves as a husband, stands during most of the book, for the material."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"Clive Arden is the one modern writer whose work has some of the passionate redeeming quality of a Ouida. The theme may be sentimental, incident may be preposterous, but there is an intense sincerity in execution that transmutes it from medodrama to rather effective literature."

+ N Y Times p9 O 5 '24 800w

Reviewed by Francis Loretz
N Y Tribune p14 Ja 18 '25 850w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p8e O 5 '24 200w

"Perhaps the tedium and sense of staleness produced by all this may be partly due to the labouring points not generally in dispute, and partly to the author's dependence on the clichés of the inferior sex-novel. Everybody must be a little tired of 'soft warm flesh' and 'savage kisses that scorched.' But one can linger gratefully over those [pages] which describe, with real humour and penetration, her failure to fit into provincial society."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p222 Ap 10 '24 520w

ARLEN, MICHAEL, pseud. (DIKRAN KUYUMJIAN). The green hat. 350p $2.50 Doran

Reduced to simple terms this is the story of an enduring boy and girl love thwarted, with disastrous consequences, by an overbearing father. The modern, indirect and often flippant manner of the telling conceals the simplicity of the theme. Iris March, the wearer of the green hat, who figures thruout as a declassée and wanton breaker of hearts emerges at the last as both victim and slave of a love which she cloaked with a mask of recklessness.

"It puzzles, it dazzles, it is embroidered with gaiety of color and of phrases—and its interest seldom flags." J. F.

+ Bookm 60:220 O '24 200w
Boston Transcript p5 S 27 '24 1300w
Cleveland p84 N '24

Reviewed by E. A. Niles
Ind 113:200 S 27 '24 700w

Reviewed by Shane Leslie
Int Bk R p769 O '24 2500w

Reviewed by Edwin Bjorkman
Lit R p3 S 13 '24 1250w

"For all its faults, the story is decidedly attractive; there is conflict in it, and at times a suggestion of beauty; it is difficult to skip and still more difficult to lay aside when once begun, and it hangs in the memory like an evil dream."

— + Nation and Ath 35:546 Jl 26 '24 210w

"Mr. Michael Arlen seems to me an irritating writer. His faults are of a kind to make it almost impossible for sensitive readers to forgive him anything on the ground of his cleverness." Ralph Wright

— + New Statesman 23:382 Jl 5 '24 850w

"A finely wrought, sound piece of work, for the ending is an achievement that any modern novelist might well be proud of, a challenge to perfect craft."

+ N Y Times p9 S 21 '24 650w

"Perhaps because Mr. Arlen is so young he writes with a fine gusto, like a surf-rider sweeping over great billows of prose, then holding the onlookers open-mouthed while he disappears in a porpoise-turn to come up laughing in the strength of his own skill. There are phrases, sentences, paragraphs, whole pages, to blind the reader with sheer brilliancy, a brilliancy which would alienate if it did not good-humoredly include you and the whole world of sophisticaton in its edged fun." Mary Ross

N Y Tribune p4 S 28 '24 700w

"In 'The Green Hat' vice is treated flippantly, perhaps under the writer's idea that he is seeing it through brilliantly. Its verbal fireworks are the sort that say phut-phut when they are intended to say bang-bang. And its would-be flares simply do not flare." E. W. Osborn

— N Y World p7e S 14 '24 240w

"Of Michael Arlen's truthfulness about his charming people I can only say, since I do not know them, that he creates well the impression of tastefully heightened verisimilitude. There cannot be quite so many beautiful, clever, wealthy, high-born, fluent, uncensored persons all together at one time in one place—even in England. There must be something like them, though—just as there was something in 1695 like the persons in Restoration Drama." C. B. Hammond

Sat R of Lit 1:159 O 4 '24 1200w

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley
Spec 132:102 Jl 19 '24 120w

"Here, as before, he seems to be at great pains to be vivacious and superficial; yet seriousness will keep breaking in. The result is both irritating and amusing. The story is told with a wealth of gay commentary, in a style that is pert, mannered, but undeniably witty."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p386 Je 19 '24 500w

ARLEN, MICHAEL, pseud. (DIKRAN KUYUMJIAN). These charming people. 302p $2.50 Doran 24-6734

In and out thru the tapestry of Michael Arlen's book are threaded the fortunes, follies and adventures of a group of English society folk, friends and companions, whose lives are constantly crossing and re-crossing. The tales are episodes merely, secret affairs of the heart, bits of impulsive self-revelation, never ruffling the smooth outer surface of life and narrated with a studied cynicism and detachment. Contents: Introducing a lady of no importance and a gentleman of even less; When the nightingale sang in Berkeley square; The hunter after wild beasts; The man with the broken nose; The luck of Captain Fortune; The ancient sin; The cavalier of the streets; Major Cypress goes off the deep end; Consuelo Brown; The irreproachable conduct of a gentleman who once refused a knighthood; Salute the cavalier; The shameless behaviour of a lord; The loquacious lady of Lansdowne passage; The smell in the library; The real reason why Shelmerdene was late for dinner.

"These are just the sort of entertaining stories, told in precisely the clever fashion, that each one of us would secretly give our eye teeth to tell ourselves, shortly after the fish course, but which alas, we can never seem to accomplish." S. L. R.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 9 '24 700w
Cleveland p51 Jl '24

"He may suggest pathos, or bitter irony or Machian mysticism, or stirringly mysterious tragedy, but always he chooses for his readers a path of gay and irresponsible charm along which they may travel in smiling appreciation toward a goal so subtly conceived that its final realization largely remains discretionary with themselves." Edwin Björkman

+ Int Bk R p476 My '24 500w

ARLEN, M., pseud—Continued

"Now and again a book comes along that will not be content with less than superlatives, and Mr. Arlen's collection of stories, in which the same group of characters appears, falls easily in this favored class. Added to unusual gifts as a story-teller this author has a feeling for pattern and color that works out in results which are often thrilling. They prompt one to lay aside the book and comment mentally upon how exactly and how easily he sets down the right and the lovely thing in the proper place." Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p771 My 24 24 500w

Reviewed by Raymond Mortimer

New Statesman 21:330 Je 23 '23 550w

"Mr. Arlen's publishers venture too much when they suggest for him a close kinship to either Max Beerbohm or Aldous Huxley. He has neither their wit nor their sparkle, humor or malice, but he has what both those gentlemen lack—a mellow pleasantness, much playfulness and an agreeable whimsicality. He is just an entertaining story-teller."

+ N Y Times p9 Mr 30 '24 850w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 13 '24 190w

"Whatever means Mr. Arlen may use to reproduce his fictions, there is no suspicion of mechanism in the reading of them."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup Je 28 '23 180w

ARMSTRONG, EDWARD FRANKLAND, ed. Chemistry in the twentieth century: an account of the achievement and the present state of knowledge in chemical science; prepared under the guidance of a committee representing the scientific societies. 281p $5.25 Macmillan [15s Benn]

540.9 Chemistry—History [Agr24-583]

The contributors to this survey of modern chemistry are British experts in their special fields of research. Some of the subjects covered are: X-ray analysis; Fats and oils; Structure of the atom; Alloys; Flame, fuel and explosion; The chemistry of photography.

"In most cases the monographs are so written as to be interesting to the lay as well as the technical reader, and to the latter the book will bring a fresh viewpoint on subjects of general interest and specifically in his own field."

+ Ind & Eng Chem 16:875 Ag '24 160w

"Since these monographs deal with British chemistry, the contributions of foreigners to the science are duly kept in the background. It is satisfactory that British chemists can claim so much to their credit as is shown by the series of papers written by men who really know their subject."

New Statesman 23:392 Jl 5 '24 310w

ARMSTRONG, MARTIN. Bazaar, and other stories. 287p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d J. Cape]

Nineteen short stories and sketches, some of which have already appeared in English magazines. The title-story is a war allegory; another tale is a realistic story of battle; "Mrs Symington at home" is a study in aristocratic arrogance. "Little Miss Millett" tells the story of a fragile, sweet young woman who was so completely under the domination of a selfish invalid mother that she could not shake off that influence even after the mother's death. Contents: Mrs Barber's Christmas; Helm hall; Symphony in G minor; The bazaar; The birthday; Mrs Symington at home; The pursuit of the swallow; The defensive flank; Escape; Little Miss Millett; Mrs Lovelace; The inn; Interview with a genius; A dog's life; The materialist; Miss Webster's dream; In the park; The soft-hearted man; Farmer Brock's funeral.

"There is a genial humor about some of the stories in this first American collection of Martin Armstrong's work that is nothing short of irresistible—a humor blended of rich fantasy, gentle irony, and a pretty sympathy and tolerance." J. F. S.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 13 '24 500w

"Most of the sketches are very brief and hardly to be called stories at all. They are bits out of human lives; some humorous, some gently ironic, some sorrowful, but all suggestive of much more than is found on the printed page. This instinct for capturing significant moments and leaving the rest of the story to be drawn from semi-obscurity by the imagination is reminiscent of Browning's Dramatic Lyrics."

+ Int Bk R p741 S '24 320w

"As broad and all-inclusive as is the term short story, it can hardly be forced far enough to include most of Mr. Armstrong's fragile and delicate bits, which, with a few outstanding exceptions, classify properly as sketches, and very good sketches they are." Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p966 Ag 16 '24 400w

"Mr. Armstrong writes beautifully. The most tangible quality of his work is its distinction, which survives when his colours have grown faint and his tone so low as scarcely to be heard. One can never be forgetful of his technical proficiency, and one does not wish to be." L. P. Hartley

+ Nation and Ath 34:894 Mr 22 '24 300w

Reviewed by Raymond Mortimer

New Statesman 22:574 F 23 '24 70w

"His style is of that rather perfect kind that does not obtrude itself. The language is simple, intelligible and charming, the words chosen with an exact nicety."

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 3 '24 1100w

"He is clever, but he writes so well, with such restraint, such mastery over the individual sentences, that there is no interstice through which mere cleverness can raise its head. There is a modesty in his work. Indeed, there is much too much of that rare and engaging quality." Gerald Gould

+ Sat R 137:272 Mr 15 '24 280w

"His narratives, always informal and often brief, have that ease and freedom of action which distinguishes the contemporary English short story from the typical American product, and they are real stories, skilfully told which English short stories too often are not."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:34 Ag 9 '24 200w

Reviewed by Percy Lubbock

Spec 132:430 Mr 15 '24 500w

"Shows a considerable advance on its predecessor in individuality of both theme and treatment."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p94 F 14 '24 280w

ARNOLD, SIR THOMAS WALKER. The caliphate. 223p $3.50 Oxford [10s 6d Clarendon]
2

297 Mohammedanism. Caliphs

"This is perhaps the first comprehensive study of the Caliphate. It surveys the development of the Caliphate from the beginning to the present day and is written by one of the foremost contemporary Islamic scholars, whose learning and exactitude the reader may safely trust to guide him through the intricacies of this fascinating but difficult field of research." —Nation and Ath

"A most scholarly work about a little known and yet important subject is this latest masterpiece of the famous Professor of Arabic and Oriental studies in the University of London."

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 31 '24 120w

"Since this work displays a considerable amount of industry and research, the reviewer is most unwilling to criticize it unfavorably, and he has many other reasons for such reluctance. Yet duty must be done, and he must confess that the number of apparently untenable propositions or propositions which require modification appears to him altogether out of proportion to the size." D. S. Margoliouth

— + Eng Hist R 40:143 Ja '25 1500w

"The book is of the highest interest from the point of view of current international politics, and it is equally interesting from the historical standpoint." A. J. Toynbee

+ Nation and Ath 36:156 O 25 '24 1550w

Reviewed by W. G. Tinckom-Fernandez
N Y Times p23 Ja 4 '25 1100w

"This painstaking and scholarly book is doubly welcome and valuable. Sir Thomas Arnold is a scholar of wide knowledge on all questions appertaining to Islam—the importance of which to the British Empire is beyond exaggeration—and his book, a product of profound research, is as readable as it is sound."
+ Spec 133:648 N 1 '24 650w

"A most illuminating study."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p603 O 2 '24 1800w

ARTHUR, WILLIAM. Appraisers' and adjusters' handbook. 616p il lea $5 U.P.C. bk.
692.5 Building—Estimates 24-3464

"Valuation data for engineers, architects, appraisers, adjusters, realtors, assessors, builders, insurance men, and others. Revised and issued separately from the author's New Building Estimators' Handbook."—Cleveland

"Practical, based on present conditions."
Booklist 20:326 Je '24
Cleveland p78 S '24
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:315 Je '24

ARTZYBASHEV, MIKHAIL PETROVICH. Jealousy; Enemies; The law of the savage. 320p $2.50 Boni & Liveright
891.72 23-17448

Three plays about marriage, with an introductory essay by the author embodying the thoughts which underlie the trilogy.

Cleveland p3 Ja '24

"After reading Artsybasheff we want to wash our hands; the impression he produces is disagreeable, but not lasting, like that of a clammy hand." Alexander Kaun
— Lit R p702 Ap 26 '24 620w

"Here is something old enough to make almost anything seem new: old situations—marital quarrels, assignations, discoveries, deceits, crimes of passion; old familiar characters reminiscent of his pre-revolutionary books—the student with tuberculosis, the pessimistic old doctor, journalists, officers, idle and aimless women; hoary old generalizations about men and women, particularly women which boil down to some biological truism like 'men are men' and 'women are women." Dorothy Brewster
— Nation 118:119 Ja 30 '24 650w

"The interest of the plays lies in the variety of character and incident which he brings into his scene—a variety held, however, strictly within the limits of his theme."
+ — Theatre Arts Mo 8:791 N '24 220w

ARTZYBASHEV, MIKHAIL PETROVICH. The savage; tr. from the Russian by Gilbert Cannan and Mme. A. Strindberg. 213p $2 Boni & Liveright
24-11138

A tale of middle class Russia that concerns the Dikoy family. In the family there were four: Mother Anna, the head of the family; Klim Ivanovich, the eldest son, who ran the business of the store; Zakhar, the second son, who cared little for business and a great deal for women, and Petenka, who was an indiot. Klim married Glafira, a beautiful and sensual girl. As time went on Zakhar coveted her and took her. Their illicit love continued for a long time, but one day Klim discovered the relationship, Glafira was beaten unmercifully and Zakhar was left to live alone on the farm. A few weeks later Klim was shot dead. Zakhar was accused, tried and pronounced guilty by the jury, though Petenka, not Zakhar, killed Klim, and the jury knew it. By a strange course of reasoning however, Zakhar is guilty. "Has he not killed Petenka's soul, ruined Glafira, and brought Klim to his death." He must expiate his sins on earth.

"The story is concise, vivid, arresting; but its motive force is not that of indignant or penetrating imagination. The emotions it arouses are not purged by pity or terror."
— + Dial 77:264 S '24 80w

"'The Savage' is a very terrible and very powerful novel, whose absolute honesty is its justification. To give it the cheap and paltry label 'unpleasant' is very like launching a straw against a whirlwind. If an atmosphere of fatality and unrelieved gloom weighs upon the reader from the first sentence to the last—if we have not read a page before we know we have been set down to strong meat which only a strong stomach can relish, on the whole, the effect is well worth while."
+ N Y Times p9 My 25 '24 900w
Outlook 137:515 Jl 30 '24 300w

"It is a convincing interpretation and portrayal, not merely a skilfully contrived fabrication of plot and incident."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Jl 6 '24 280w

ARVIN, NEIL COLE. Eugène Scribe and the French theatre, 1815-1860. 268p $3 Harvard univ. press [12s 6d Milford]
B or 92 Scribe, Augustin Eugène. French drama—History and criticism 24-10863

"Eugène Scribe is the father of the modern theatre, both in France and in this country. To-day, when his plays are almost forgotten, when nothing of them, indeed, is remembered except their prodigious number, his hand is to be traced in hundreds of popular London and Parisian successes, though it is probable that their authors have never read a line of him. Whether it was worth while to compile a learned book on this prolific ancestor is perhaps questionable. Mr Arvin has examined and set forth the plots of numberless plays. He has shown how well they represent the audiences who applauded them. He has given his author what credit he deserves as an originator, and is not often misled into pronouncing too strongly in favour of the thing originated."—New Statesman

"The stories of the many plays [of Scribe] are tense, and Professor Arvin is entertaining while he summarizes them. He is less so in his constant and unnecessary apology for Scribe, as though a writer of farces and comedies had somehow to come into the company of dramatists hesitant, hat in hand, like a yokel unexpectedly intruding upon a company of gentlemen in evening dress." J. T. Shipley
— Lit R p918 Jl 26 '24 900w

"Mr. Arvin's book is a very careful and conscientious piece of work. He does not overrate his author's importance if at times he exaggerates his rather dim interest. And if the book is just a little dull, it is hard to see how, considering the subjects, it could very well have been otherwise."
+ — New Statesman 23:712 S 27 '24 600w
St Louis p381 N '24

"Professor Arvin has done his work extremely well, and although its appeal is likely to be restricted to the student, the book is by no means without general interest. It is agreeably written, not without humour, and its picture of the French theatre as a whole during the first half of the nineteenth century is excellent."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p414 Jl 3 '24 800w

ASHMUN, MARGARET ELIZA. The lake. 300p $2.25 Macmillan
24-21920

Tho the theme is grim the story is not so in the telling. The scene is laid on a Middle west farm where live Willard Faraday, his wife Averil, and young Hubert, who is twelve when the story opens. It is apparent from the beginning that tragedy is hanging over the house. Willard is subject to insane fits of rage, brought on by jealousy of his wife and suspicions of his neighbor, Alexander McLean. When Willard is killed, by accident as it appears, Alexander and Averil are free to marry but the shadow remains over the house. Hubert is a grown man and about to marry when he discovers the truth about his paternity. His sensitive soul is torn. He is outraged by his mother's deception and filled with a sense of shame. But the girl he loves, thru her devotion and understanding, brings him back to a saner mind.

ASHMUN, M. E.—Continued

"An exceptionally interesting novel, well written, artistically conceived and with an ultimate emotional significance both fervent and exalted." D. F. G.
+ Boston Transcript p3 S 20 '24 1050w

"Margaret Ashmun has written nicely a dreary story. Her writing has a light charm that awakens sympathy for the wrongdoer and the wronged alike. The reader feels only pain that such nice people should have become involved in such a hopeless situation. Only a miracle could have helped them and, fortunately for the book, none comes."
+ — Lit R p10 S 20 '24 160w
Nation 120:74 Ja 21 '25 40w
N Y Times p17 S 21 '24 500w

"With a more finished style and an intenser feeling for the poignant, delicate beauty of the Wisconsin Lake country, this might have been one of the preëminent novels of the year. Throughout, the dialogue and character drawing are very sound. At the lowest estimate it is a real story, honestly and convincingly told."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:210 O 18 '24 200w

ASHTON, LEIGH. Introduction to the study of
2 Chinese sculpture. 131p $15 Scribner [45s
Benn]
730 Sculpture, Chinese [24-8504]

"The author traces the history of Chinese sculpture from the primitive ages to the decline of the art in the later Myng dynasty. He contrasts the pre-Buddhist era with the epoch of the rise and expansion of Buddhist doctrines in China, and at the same time weaves into his theme the political influences at work throughout the period. He has excluded from the illustrations all fragmentary heads, rightly assuming that a work of art, possessing as it does a quality of unity, must necessarily be reproduced in its entirety or not at all."—Spec

"There were real artists even in China, and Mr. Ashton has done excellent service in telling of their achievements, as well as in adding a remarkable series of illustrations to his text. Naturally enough he makes no attempt to exhaust the subject—it would take many volumes to do that even if all the material were available." E. N.
Boston Transcript p3 Je 21 '24 1050w

"It is sad to have to say, at the outset, that this is a very disappointing book; nothing of the sort has hitherto appeared, and the need for it is great, but unfortunately this does not satisfy it." Hamilton Bell
— Lit R p6 D 27 '24 1450w

"The collector who gets the greatest satisfaction from his pursuit is he who has the historic sense richly tempered by a well-developed appreciation of beauty. It is this latter type of collector to whom Mr. Leigh Ashton's book on Chinese sculpture will be of greatest value; although it may be said the pure aesthetic will find very little with which to find fault, while the other types of collectors will be rewarded with material enough to provide them with the manifest disguises for their obsessions and their snobbism."
+ Spec 132:722 My 3 '24 250w

ASHTON, WINIFRED. See Dane, C., pseud.

ASQUITH, HERBERT. Wind's End. 259p $2 Scribner [7s 6d Hutchinson]
24-16566

Wind's End was a field in the region of the Severn Hills about which sinister traditions clung and there were few men brave enough to cross it after nightfall. Peter Blunt made a wager to sleep there one night—and from that sleep he never wakened. In unravelling the mystery of his death a gruesome tale of crime develops.

Boston Transcript p6 Jl 23 '24 650w

"The characterization is good, but some of the characters have no part in the story, and the love affair is entirely irrelevant. The impression given is of a stone of rather huge dimensions suddenly dropt into a quiet pool of village life." Elizabeth Wyman
— + Int Bk R p739 S '24 280w

"In spite of its lack of novelty the story is not uninteresting; it is told in an easy and rather graceful style, and the characterizations are above the average."
+ — Lit R p970 Ag 16 '24 150w

"Wind's End is for fiction lovers, pure and simple, who will be delighted to meet so many of their old friends and revive so many charming memories within one small book. No wonder Mr. Asquith toward the close of his feast, droops a bit languidly and writes as if he were jolly well fed up with it all." R. M. Lovett
— New Repub 39:307 Ag 6 '24 120w

"Admirably written. The descriptions of the countryside are excellent; some passages in this book are probably too good. It is doubtful if description in such stories should ever go far beyond Dr. Watson's appreciation of nature." Desmond MacCarthy
+ — New Statesman 23:497 Ag 2 '24 500w

"The book is neither great fiction nor even pleasantly trivial; it is mediocre. Well written throughout in clear and graphic English, presenting an array of varied character and scene and a wealth of atmosphere, it yet fails to hold the interest. The plot is purposeless." J: Carter
— + N Y Times p11 Jl 20 '24 1250w

"This, presumably his first specimen, has all the defects usually exhibited by the novice, such as superfluous characters and irrelevant conversations, and the structure is rather wabbly; but the making of a good story of the conventional kind is in it."
— + N Y Tribune p23 Jl 27 '24 280w
N Y World p6e Jl 6 '24 60w
St Louis p399 D '24

"Mr. Asquith tells this story in what seems to be a deliberately quiet manner which is effective, though we are not sure whether the dénouement quite succeeds in arousing the necessary thrill."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p42 Jl 3 '24 120w

ASQUITH, HERBERT HENRY. Studies and sketches. 212p $3.50 Doran [10s 6d Hutchinson]
824 24-14167

A collection of literary and historical essays which includes some recent addresses and two periodical articles of nearly fifty years ago. Contents: Some aspects of the Victorian age; The last crusade; Some popular frenzies in the eighteenth century; Dr. Johnson and Fanny Burney; Sir Henry Wotton; Reading and writing; Teaching and learning; Economic theorizing; Modern biographers; The 'Antigone'; The art of Tacitus; The age of Demosthenes; Joseph Chamberlain; Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman.

Bookm 59:747 Ag '24 140w

Reviewed by H. W. Horwill
Nation 119:314 S 24 '24 500w

"His style always attains clarity, concision and dignity, and it is a little disconcerting to other writers to find him speaking of himself as a mere amateur. I have seldom read a miscellaneous book which contained fewer disputable statements or fewer sentences from which the fastidious would wish to delete, or to which the exuberant would wish to add, a word."
+ New Statesman 22:668 Mr 15 '25 1200w

"Himself devoid of passion and prejudice, he has been too honest, perhaps too proud, to appeal to prejudice and passion in others. He would prefer to lose the verdict. And in these pages, it is with deceptive ease that he picks up popes and toys with treaties. His ease is the result of mastery. He is an utter and unrepentant Victorian, who praises Macaulay as a serious student and believes that good writing must have style . . . Mr. Asquith has given to the world a charming little book." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p3 Je 1 '24 1750w

"The sporadic essays here tied together in a certainly neat bundle have nothing in common except that they were written by the same man; and if he had not been distinguished and much before the public and therefore a more or less safe publisher's 'draw,' they would not have been published in book form at all. Selection there is none—any subject will do; all knowledge is pressed into service—history, biography, literature, oratory. Everything human is touched on—the touch is good—and nothing fathomed."

— + Sat R 137:266 Mr 15 '24 360w

Reviewed by J. St L. Strachey
Spec 131:125 Ja 26 '24 3100w

"It is a miscellaneous volume, only held together by the not very insistent or compelling personality of the author. All the papers show the marks of the Balliol type. The whole Romanes Lecture is very readable. The historical and literary essays, without being at all remarkable, provide pleasant browsing for people interested in our literature and history."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p51 Ja 24 '24 900w

ASTERISK, pseud. See Fletcher, R. J.

ATHEARN, WALTER SCOTT, and others. Religious education of Protestants in an American commonwealth. (Indiana survey of religious educ.) 580p il $5 Doran

268 Religious education. Religious surveys. Sunday schools

"This book is the first of three volumes which will be issued under the general title: 'The Indiana Survey of Religious Education.' This survey was begun under the auspices of the Interchurch World Movement and was completed by the Committee on Social and Religious Surveys. This volume gives an exhaustive analysis of the quantity and quality of the religious education of Protestants in the state of Indiana. Because of the methods of analysis and interpretation used in this survey and because Indiana may be said to represent in a general way a large section of the United States, it is believed that this volume will be of great value to religious leaders of other states and to technical students of education who are projecting similar inquiries in other sections of the country."—Preface

Reviewed by G. T. Buswell
El School J 24:714 My '24 880w

"This bulky survey bristles with facts. The facts will serve a good purpose in stimulating a more fundamental approach to the task of religious education. However, this survey does not face the whole problem. The real tests of religious education will be found in character-forming. We greatly need to know what kind of behavior boys and girls exemplify as leaders in homes, in the community, in the state, in business and social life. With all its valuable material, this survey does not give us ways of verifying actual character development." J. M. Artman

— + J Religion 4:215 Mr '24 680w

"Indiana is enough like most northern states so that the facts discovered there through this survey may be largely true of other places. It is the sort of careful study that will aid vitally in the forming of a more adequate program." W. E. Brooks

+ Survey 51:354 D 15 '23 200w

ATKESON, MARY MEEK. Woman on the [2] farm. (Century rural life books) 331p $2 Century

630.1 Farm life. Country life 24-27827

The book pictures the interests and activities of American farm women, the home life of the farm and its economics, boy and girl life on the farm, rural school and church, and the social and community aspects of country life.

Boston Transcript p2 D 27 '24 120w

"An inspiring book, with much practical information."

+ Ind 113:409 N 15 '24 30w

"Miss Atkeson alienates her reader early by a certain incorrigible effusiveness about the minor beauties of country life." R. G. Tugwell

— + Nation 120:73 Ja 21 '25 1000w

ATKIN, RANDOLPH HENRY. Ballads of a beachcomber. 115p $1.75 Holt [4s 6d Unwin]

811

The setting of these ballads of the tropics is for the most part in South America.

"There was a certain quality about the jingles in Randolph H. Atkin's 'The Spell of the Tropics' that recommended them, but there seems very little excuse for the addled sentiments and poorly expressed thoughts of this later book." J. F.

— Bookm 59:730 Ag '24 30w

"When Mr. Atkin wanders in touch with his various thoughts, a delightful variety of poems is the result. Some are picturesque, some are sentimental, others are tragic; there is deep sentiment and religious thought in some, while others are rollicking, light and ephemeral. They are all so good that more of them should be better, and had this collection been carefully revised, they might have gained in attractiveness and inspiration."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 My 24 '24 250w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p882 D 13 '23 260w

AUSLANDER, JOSEPH. Sunrise trumpets; with an introd. by Padraic Colum. 73p $2 Harper

811 24-7630

The first poem is entitled Words and thruout the book the poet is much occupied with the imagery and pattern of his words.

"There is a Shelleyan ardor in him, and his astonishing use of color and striking image is an excellent adjunct to this passion. The vari-colored world flows through him and reveals itself in his poetry to such an extent that the reader fairly feels the water flowing, hears the birds singing, sees the barbaric vision of bright hills." H. S. Gorman

+ Bookm 59:468 Je '24 200w

"In his beautifully chiselled verse, Joseph Auslander's manner is made visible, is objectified, as bas-relief. He does not often allow the third dimension to exceed the design. He is mostly concerned with accurate contour, precise outline. And without such linear incisiveness, such nicety of modelling, his special penetration—his insight—it would be lost." Malcolm Vaughan

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 26 '24 1850w

Cleveland p69 S '24

Dial 77:348 O '24 70w

Reviewed by W: R. Benet
Lit R p918 Jl 26 '24 80w

Reviewed by Mark Van Doren
Nation 118:711 Je 18 '24 400w

"Mr. Auslander is a distinctive poet who has developed a style which will amply repay his readers. . . Mr. Auslander's chief fault is his fear of verbal weakness. He does not always manifest sufficient faith in simplicity of utterance. In certain of these poems the melody breaks under the strain of vocabulary, and in a few instances the thought is obscured as well." Glenn Hughes

AUSLANDER, JOSEPH—Continued
+ — New Repub 39:218 Jl 16 '24 650w

"One must not search for too much in 'Sunrise Trumpets' but rather accept the beautiful imagery, the ever-present ecstasy, the obvious delight in delicately tinted pictures. . . Mr. Auslander's two major faults appear to be a tendency toward overelaboration and a rather fatal facility."
+ — N Y Times p7 My 4 '24 380w

"It would be a rare delight to read Mr. Auslander's verse aloud. His pleasure of words, his delicate phrasing, his eagerness would make the reciter paint vivid words on the air, words that one could almost touch. They are very lovely, quite the loveliest this reviewer has seen in a long time." Milton Raison
+ N Y Tribune p26 Je 8 '24 200w

"It seems to me these trumpets blow their best when the musician forgets his craft and allows a mood to run away with him, as occasionally he does. At such a time all the more cerebral efforts are relegated to the position of practice work in which he was learning how to let go when he had something to sing." Maxwell Anderson
+ — N Y World p6e Ap 13 '24 680w

"There is vigor and freshness in his phrasing—poetic suggestiveness too, but a taint of artificiality."
+ — Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 13 '24 120w
Wis Lib Bul 20:124 My '24

AUSTIN, MARY (HUNTER). Land of journeys' ending. 459p il $4 Century
917.8 Arizona. New Mexico. Southwest—Description and travel 24-23160

The "land of journeys' ending" lies between the Colorado and the Rio Grande and comprises the western half of New Mexico and all of Arizona. From a wide knowledge and deep love of the country Mrs Austin writes of its vegetation and animal life, its natural beauties and peculiarities, the remains of its ancient people, the coming of the Spaniards, and then of the pioneering American. There is a chapter on the Franciscans, one on the Penitentes or Flagellants, and another on the two great rivers that form the boundaries of the region.

Cleveland p96 D '24
Ind 113:297 O 18 '24 30w

" 'The Land of Journey's Ending' is a memorable, life-increasing book filled with the profoundest implications of human experience." Mary Siegrist
+ Int Bk R p42 D '24 2700w

"This is no easy book to read, no work to be gulped or guzzled; you must be attuned, calm yet expectant, and, above all, you must have your windows open and the heat turned off. For this book is treacherous, waiting to overwhelm you with its abundant poetry. Therefore make yourself cool and comfortable, as Mrs. Austin herself always seems to be—sympathetic, containing in herself the subterranean culture of these ancient neighborhoods. She is painter, poet, prober: eye, ear, heart—and mind." H. A. Potamkin
Lit R p19 N 15 '24 320w

"Mrs. Austin writes with singular force and charm and with an intensity of conviction of their worth that is truly stimulating. Her final chapter as to their value in the development of a genuine American culture is especially interesting."
+ N Y Times p3 O 12 '24 450w
Outlook 138:512 N 26 '24 150w

AUTOLYCUS, pseud. See Bacon, L.

AYRES, RUBY MILDRED (MRS REGINALD [2] WILLIAM POCOCK). Candle light. 298p $2 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]
24-28338

Minnie Atherton's love for William Winter dated back to their childhood days, but by an ironic turn of affairs she marries Peter. Years later Minnie and William, himself now married, meet again in Switzerland. William's discovery of his love for Minnie is quickly followed by the tragedy which ends the story.

"In spite of a lack of originality, certain monotony of incident and a deplorable slightness of structure, it has appeal."
+ — Boston Transcript p6 D 27 '24 280w
N Y World p9e N 23 '24 110w

"It is a pitiful tale, told with great fluency and with sufficiently distinctive characterization to make it enjoyable."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p580 S 18 '24 50w

AYRES, RUBY MILDRED (MRS REGINALD WILLIAM POCOCK). Man without a heart. 207p $2 Doran 24-9356

"This is the story of how Rufus Asher comes back to England, after years spent in Australia, to find the whole English world made over. He gets in quite wrong as to the loyalty of the girl he loves at sight, as to the faithfulness of the sister he has worshipped, and as to the character of his sister's husband. Time sets him right sooner than, in his unreasoning jealousy, he deserves."—N Y World

" 'The Man Without a Heart' will serve to pass some idle hours in light amusement, if it can hardly be termed a serious contribution to the season's output of literature."
— + Boston Transcript p4 My 7 '24 150w
Lit R p710 Ap 26 '24 170w

"To the discrepancies in plot and character the author has brought no alleviating beauty of style or play of humor. The writing throughout is ordinary and the many scenes of melodrama do not serve to make the book less dull. A few sensible words from any one of the characters at any turn in the story would end the unfortunate tangle where it started, but of course they are never spoken."
— N Y Times p19 Mr 30 '24 650w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p6e Mr 23 '24 110w

AZORIN, pseud. See Ruiz, J. M.

B

BABBITT, IRVING. Democracy and leadership 349p $3 Houghton [15s Constable]
321.8 Democracy. Leadership 24-11387

"This is Mr Babbitt's first considerable excursion into the field of political and social science, but his critical method has already been so completely worked out, and its applicability has been so general (at least by implication), that we need look for nothing essentially novel here. In this volume Mr Babbitt simply directs at a new point the attack on naturalism, and re-phrases in a new connection the defense of humanism, in which he has been engaged from the beginning. Here it is not romanticism, the literary expression of naturalism, but democracy, its political expression, which is the object of his attack."—Springf'd Republican

Reviewed by A. C. Cole
Am Hist R 30:115 O '24 680w
Booklist 21:50 N '24
Dial 77:526 D '24 160w
Ind 113:203 S 27 '24 520w

"If one were inclined to be facetious—and after all, that is a happier attitude than scorn or anger—he might lament the fact that Professor Babbitt has not given freer rein to his expansive desires in the field of literary criticism without ever so much as attempting to subdue them to a conscience made weighty by brooding over social woes. It would not be fair, however, to leave the impression that this book has no virtue. Its grievous defects will serve one good purpose if it stirs up minds sympathetic with democratic institutions and aspirations to reflect upon the problem of leadership." T. V. Smith

— + Int J Ethics 35:194 Ja '25 680w

"It is to be regretted that the author is not able to apply his thesis, both historically and to current issues, with the same skill and finesse with which he formulates it. The ease with which he uses it to sanction many of his New England, Republican prejudices smacks too much of the American political 'leader,' rather than of that leadership in critical political imagination to which this book is devoted." H. W. Schneider

+ — J Philos 21:529 S 11 '24 1200w

"Lucid, temperate, equable in his judgments—if one forgets the bête noir of Rousseau—Mr. Babbitt is perhaps our most valuable critic of democracy. Even when Mr. Babbitt is wrong he is consistently, intelligently wrong; and his very vices may prove more invigorating than the virtues of more genial and easy-going critics." L: Mumford

+ — Lit R p10 S 20 '24 230w

"All of Mr. Babbitt's customary bitter brilliance is in this latest book of his. His learning is very great and he has a high gift for apt quotation. But in the bitterness with which he excoriates his enemies is the seed of his defeat. One tends closely to examine his positive arguments and their speciousness becomes apparent. By his own confession his ideal personality is 'easier to outline than to accomplish.'" C. H. Grattan

— + Nation 119:293 S 17 '24 1150w

"It is more than likely that the unified essays that go to make up Professor Babbitt's latest book constitute brilliant literary studies. They certainly have excellence of style, they have breadth of sweep, they have keen insight into historical characters, they have robust confidence in themselves. But the book claims to be more than literary criticism: it pretends not only to sublime art but to mundane truth. . . Political prejudices buttressed by psychological (im)pieties confessedly do not furnish ground for great expectation. Indeed, further notice of such a book in critical circles would need apology were it not so thoroughly representative of any number of wisdom books now issuing from the citadel that humanism has erected on the banks of our democratic stream as an asylum for retired aristocrats." T. V. Smith

— + New Repub 40:49 S 10 '24 1900w

"Why disagree with Professor Babbitt, if specifically his case against democracy is strong in contemporary detail and in evidence from the past? Because the emphasis is all wrong. The evil that democrats do receives the very fullest exposition. The good that democrats do is interred in Professor Babbitt's minor reservations or entirely consigned to silence. The emphasis errs in passing over, virtually, the sins of the alternatives to democracy. . . If Professor Babbitt had called his book 'Leadership' instead of 'Democracy and Leadership,' the unjust slant against democracy and the modern life would have been avoided." Simeon Strunsky

— + N Y Times p4 Je 15 '24 1800w

"In reviewing the development of democracy and its condition and outlook today, it cannot be said that he looks through rose-colored glasses. We should not call him a pessimist, but he certainly is an observer who sees the seamy side of political life, and who does not hesitate to call a seam a seam. It is a stimulating and thought-provoking gospel that he preaches, regardless of whether it is acceptable to all his hearers or not." W. F: Johnson

No Am 220:180 S '24 320w

"To comprehend this book requires the utmost effort of concentration, but the effort is richly rewarded; no greater compliment could be paid. It displays immense learning, gallantly carried. It is a book of very great importance, the 'lecture' whereof none can afford to omit." H: W. Bunn

+ Outlook 138:99 S 17 '24 780w

R of Rs 70:111 Jl '24 60w

St Louis p482 D '24

Reviewed by M. Y. Hughes

Sat R of Lit 1:162 O 4 '24 1100w

"Though it suffers from an inadequate title, this is an able, brilliant, and suggestive book." J. St Loe Strachey

+ — Spec 133:563 O 18 '24 2200w

"His attack, based as it is on first principles, is of the most cogent sort, and if it is to be met, must be met on very fundamental grounds. Fortunately Mr Babbitt's philosophy has the merit of perfect dialectic integrity, and stands or falls quite definitely according as one admits or denies its central dogmas." Newton Arvin

Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 3 '24 580w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p531 S 4 '24 1950w

BACON, CORINNE, comp. Standard catalog, fiction section. (Standard catalog ser.) 153p pa $1 Wilson, H. W.

016.8 Fiction—Bibliography 23-18445

"This section of the Standard Catalog contains about 2,350 of the best novels for the average public library. Some 750 titles have been starred for first purchase by the smaller libraries. Collections of short stories have been included. Many novels and short stories translated from foreign languages have been listed. Novels are listed in one alphabet under both author and title, with a partial subject index."—Preface

Booklist 20:196 Mr '24

Bookm 59:358 My 24 '24 40w

Reviewed by Ralph Bergengren

Boston Transcript p1 Ja 5 '24 1500w

Nation 118:211 F 20 '24 180w

Springf'd Republican p7a F 10 '24 370w

BACON, LEONARD (AUTOLYCUS, pseud.). Ulug Beg. 292p $2.50 Knopf

811 23-18404

For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

"'Autolycus' has done a big, strong piece of work, worthy to be remembered, and the easy, self contented, frivolous piping of a horde of petty songsters is swept into insignificance by the crude, substantial humanity of this wayward epic." Gamaliel Bradford

+ Bookm 59:212 Ap '24 1250w

"Autolycus might have been as vigorous as his model; pretentious archaism, and cyncial carelessness, and the lack of concentration in any one mood, spoil his work. The self-conscious satirist has taken refuge in fancy dress; he wields an imitation rapier; and his sardonic beauty is beneath a mask."

— + Dial 76:467 My '24 180w

"Like Byron, Autolycus maintains a tone of semi-burlesque, permitting himself fantastic associations and an abundance of feminine rhymes. He packs his story with incident, and by an exhilarating ingenuity in versification avoids any slackness throughout seven cantos. The narrative is swift, and the satire as native to it as marrow to a bone." L. S. Morris

+ Freeman 8:596 F 27 '24 1400w

"One of the outstanding books of poetry of this year so far. It is a direct and deliberate, so far as a poet is capable of being deliberate, reversion to the Byronic-satiric poem in cantos. It is interesting in itself, and likewise as being one of the straws which show the way of the poetic wind." Margaret Widdemer

+ Int Bk R p646 Ag '24 300w

"Perhaps the poem is clever rather than great; but its cleverness is unquestionable, and its lack of greatness not to be assumed without argument. It is part of the general protest going up from modern literature against unworthy 'traditions' and undeserving 'demi-gods.'" F: E. Pierce

BACON, LEONARD—Continued

+ Lit R p539 F 23 '24 950w

"It is an obstreperous epic, dashing from the extravagantly trivial to the starkly brutal,—but so fluent, vigorous and impulsive as to sweep away critical rigidity." D. B. Woolsey

+ — New Repub 38:132 Mr 26 '24 370w

BADE, WILLIAM FREDERIC. Life and letters of John Muir. 2v 398;454p $7.50 Houghton

B or 92 Muir, John

The life of the explorer and naturalist whose name is so closely identified with forest conservation thru his activities in behalf of our national parks and reservations is largely autobiographical, for it is told mostly from his letters and memoirs. These letters and journals recording his wanderings in Canada, his excursions into the Yosemite Valley and the High Sierra and his Alaska trips are of high literary merit and instinct with poetic feeling. The concluding chapter is an appreciation of John Muir's public service.

"These two volumes are destined to furnish not merely a transient enjoyment for those who like to read about a unique character, or who have a special admiration for an attractive literary style, or who have a scientific interest in certain theories of glaciation, or who desire to know more about Mr. Muir's labors in behalf of public reservations. They are bound to give, to every receptive soul, a new revelation of the wonder and beauty of Nature as beheld by one of her most sympathetic and well-informed interpreters, and to stimulate also to a larger appreciation of that wonder and beauty through personal contact." H. W. Gleason

+ Boston Transcript p1 D 13 '24 4100w

Reviewed by N: Roosevelt

N Y Times p1 D 28 '24 2000w

"Professor William Frederic Badè has rendered important service to present and future lovers of nature in collecting this new material and in weaving it into a sympathetic account of Muir's life. He has devoted years of patient work to these volumes, and has further interesting matter which should be published." Le Roy Jeffers

+ Outlook 139:32 Ja 7 '25 1200w

BAERLEIN, HENRY PHILIP BERNARD. Mariposa. 318p $2 Boni & Liveright [7s 6d L. Parsons]

24-23482

A satirical tale, and frothy, of a Spanish dancer who is imported from Seville to London by an English impresario. She wins no great fame by her dancing, but has one fantastic adventure after another. Her mother accompanies her everywhere and shocks the English sensibilities with her coarseness and crudities. Mariposa is fascinated by a nonconformist costumier who begs her to restrain the passion of her Andalusian dances. She takes his advice to heart and loses her job as a result. After filling a brief contract in America she goes back to Spain to her matador lover.

"From beginning to end the story is a huge, good humored satire. A view of English society through the eyes of Mariposa or her mother is a laughable picture. Everybody catches it, yet there is not a trace of venom. Mariposa is one of the cleverest bits of this sort of writing we have hit upon for many a moon." S. L. R.

+ Boston Transcript p8 D 6 '24 560w

"Truly, Mr. Baerlein's book is not a novel in the accepted sense. It is much better. It has the peculiar virtue of an absorbing autobiography—it bears within itself a rich, ingratiating, provocative spirit of actual moving life. Which doesn't mean much, unless you take it to mean that the book, with a peculiar magic, takes you momentarily out of all consciousness of reading and drops you for quick surprised intervals into vivid experience." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p4 N 29 '24 720w

"A gay, ingratiating and most attractive, if not intrinsically novel, piece of fiction."

+ — N Y Times p9 O 19 '24 680w

N Y Tribune p14 D 14 '24 350w

N Y World p9e N 2 '24 200w

Outlook 138:340 O 29 '24 30w

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley

Spec 132:134 Jl 26 '24 110w

"A singularly dull novel."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p466 Je 26 '24 50w

BAGLEY, WILLIAM CHANDLER, and KEITH, JOHN ALEXANDER HULL. Introduction to teaching. 400p $1.80 Macmillan

371 Teaching 24-15405

A text book for students of collegiate grade in professional schools for teachers. After setting forth the advantages and disadvantages of teaching as an occupation, it explains in simple terms the nature of teaching and learning and of the different subjects of instruction. Succeeding chapters treat the psychology of teaching, the organization of public education as a social enterprise and the qualifications of teachers. There are questions and references at the end of each chapter and an index.

"This book opens with the declaration that teaching is fascinating. When you have read it through, a decidedly easy and pleasant task, you will say Q. E. D."

+ Educ R 68:274 D '24 580w

N Y Times p21 S 21 '24 750w

"Numerous biographical footnotes throughout the book make it especially helpful to beginning students of education. The volume should prove valuable as a text in the introductory courses of teacher-training institutions." C. V. Good

+ School R 33:77 Ja '25 640w

BAIKIE, JAMES. Century of excavation in the land of the Pharaohs. 252p il $3 Revell

913.32 Excavations (archeology). Egypt—Antiquities 24-11650

"Mr. Baikie is the author of numerous popular works on Egypt, Assyria, and other parts of the ancient world. In the present volume he tells the story of the excavation in Egypt during the last hundred years, beginning with the pioneers, including the exploration of the pyramids and temples and concluding with chapters on Tutankhamen, and on Egyptian arts and crafts. Over thirty full-page illustrations are included."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"Though not the output of one who has actually engaged in exploration work, it is none the less a masterly survey of the whole field, furnished by a scholar in complete mastery of his subject and in full command of its material." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 22 '24 1300w

"It is a scholarly and thorough presentation of the facts, written in the fullness of knowledge." E. Leighton

+ Lit R p905 Jl 19 '24 150w

"Mr. Baikie is an expert in putting past epochs before the reader in clear and attractive fashion." C: de Kay

+ N Y Times p15 Mr 9 '24 270w

N Y Tribune p27 Jl 20 '24 100w

"The account is well written and well illustrated and is published at an opportune time."

+ Outlook 136:748 Ap 30 '24 80w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:380 Jl '24

The Times [London] Lit Sup p80 F 7 '24 80w

BAILEY, CHARLES WILLIAM. Brain and golf. 93p il $1.25 Small [2s 6d Mills & B.]
796 Golf 24-8034

A little book which applies the principles of the new psychology to the game of golf. It explains in a simple way how the nervous system works, shows the relation between practice, habit and skill and how habit may be acquired thru practice. The importance of concentration, attention and interest are also discussed.

Booklist 21:58 N '24

"Mr. Bailey uses very few technical terms and puts his explication into simple and readable English."
+ N Y Times p21 My 18 '24 540w

" 'To relate the raison d'être of practical maxims for obtaining proficiency with the clubs to underlying principles of physiology and psychology is a venture at once bold and desirable.' So says Sir Charles Sherrington in his foreword, and Mr. Bailey has made the venture very entertaining."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p55 Ja 24 '24 280w

BAILEY, HENRY CHRISTOPHER. Mr Fortune's practice. 246p $2 Dutton [6s Methuen]
24-1974

A second collection of mystery tales in which the clever amateur detective, Reggie Fortune, brings his uncanny power to bear on baffling cases, supplying clues which elude the professional detectives of Scotland Yard. Contents: The Ascot tragedy; The president of San Jacinto; The young doctor; The magic stone; The snowball burglary; The leading lady; The unknown murderer.

"Never was Reginald Fortune in finer fettle than in the seven cases of his practice this volume records: his wit more blithesome, his shrewdness more amazing, his cynical charm more irresistible."
+ Boston Transcript p8 F 27 '24 230w

"The stories are all very ingenious, and, provided you are in the right mood, entertaining. Mr. Fortune is hardly so grave and impressive as Mr. Sherlock Holmes, but in his own carefree way he is diverting."
+ — Int Bk R p477 My '24 300w

"This is a pleasant, plausible, entertaining collection of detective tales."
+ Lit R p635 Ap 29 '24 180w

"They are swiftly moving, well told and ingenious tales and Mr. Fortune is a very engaging person, endowed with the saving grace of humor."
+ N Y Times p9 F 10 '24 550w

"We are not deeply impressed by Mr. Bailey's narrative brilliancy as here exhibited, but we are greatly taken with the sunny personality of his titular character." E. W. Osborn
+ — N Y World p6e F 3 '24 320w

"Detective stories, ingenious in plot, but so staccato in style as to be irritating."
+ — Outlook 136:399 Mr 5 '24 20w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p424 Je 21 '23 180w

BAILEY, JOHN CANN. Continuity of letters. 274p $4.20 Oxford [12s 6d Milford]
824 Literature

"In Professor John Bailey we have another of that delightful group of English scholar-gentlemen whose race seems to flourish in our own day no less than in that of Sir Thomas Hoby. Mr. Bailey writes on 'The Grand Style,' 'Poetry and Commonplace,' 'Shakespeare's Tragedies,' Don Quixote, Thackeray, and so on. Of special interest, because of its controversial character, is the essay on 'A Mistaken view of Wordsworth'—a criticism of the 'Life' by Harper."—Ind

Reviewed by M. L. Franklin
Ind 112:52 Ja 19 '24 950w

"Mr. Bailey is a real critic, a discriminating lover of great literature, widely read in the literature of his own and other nations, and much that he has to say is worthy of more than cursory reading. If he is not brilliant, neither is he dull. If he seems old-fashioned, he does so largely because much of his thinking is of a type as permanent as the sort of literature he discusses."
+ — Lit R p921 Jl 26 '24 250w

"He tries to cruise with too slack a sail along the shores of the world's literature, and he seldom arrives definitely in any port. His vast commonplaces settle fewer questions than at first they seem to settle." Mark Van Doren
— Nation 118:147 F 6 '24 120w

"There is much hero-worship in Bailey. He never tires of Milton and Wordsworth—they can appear in a paper on almost anything. Too, he is curiously prejudiced, and his prejudices have an odd way of tripping him up in quite bald contradictions. Bailey is primarily interested with the great in life, and in the quality of greatness."
— + N Y Times p6 Ja 13 '24 1300w

"If we neglect the title of this volume, which is not happily chosen, Mr. Bailey's essays can be read with much satisfaction and profit. He is a conservative critic, who displays none of the eccentricities which have deformed, or perhaps enlivened, a good deal of recent literature."
+ — Sat R 136:598 D 1 '23 800w

"There is nothing technical, in the dry sense, about this book, though it appeals to an instructed love of letters; but there is a practised and humane appreciativeness, and a life as of the spoken word, which Mr. Bailey seldom misses, whether he is writing an essay or a lecture. The virtues of an exposition like his are breadth and sanity—none the less sane because there is a genuine enthusiasm underneath it."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p704 O 25 '23 1600w

BAILEY, LIBERTY HYDE. Manual of cultivated plants. 851p $7 (31s 6d) Macmillan
581.97 Botany. Plants, Cultivated 24-3187

"A flora for the identification of the most common or significant species of plants grown in the continental United States and Canada, for food, ornament, utility, and general interest, both in the open and under glass."—Subtitle

Nation 118:485 Ap 23 '24 180w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:360 Jl '24

BAILEY, LIBERTY HYDE, ed. Cultivated evergreens. 434p il $7.50 Macmillan
715 Evergreens 23-16068

A handbook of the most important evergreens planted for ornament in the United States and Canada. The various sections of the book, on the place of evergreens in the landscape, the cultivation and propagation of conifers, their adaptation to different climates, and their diseases, the classification of conifers, the cultivation of broad-leaved evergreens and a check-list of woody evergreens, are contributed by experts on the subject, under the general editorship of Liberty Hyde Bailey. There are 48 half-tone plates and 97 illustrations in the text.

Booklist 20:207 Mr '24
Cleveland p36 My '24

"Learned and complete handbook, beautifully illustrated." A. D. Douglas
+ Int Bk R p445 My '24 60w
Lit R p695 Ap 19 '24 350w

"An altogether handsome volume."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 30 '24 550w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p193 Mr 27 '24 40w

BAILEY, TEMPLE. Peacock feathers. 340p $2 Penn
24-18768

"Mimi Le Brun's crowning glory was a mass of shining auburn hair. But Mimi was beautiful too, and possessed of a charm of manner that was strong enough, even when she was a slender girl of fourteen, to catch and hold the imagination of sixteen year old Jerry Chandler. He saw her first when he and his Uncle Jerry, on a visit to Washington, chanced to eat lunch in the Senate dining room of the Capitol at the same time Mimi was having lunch with her distinguished uncle, the Senator from Missouri. From that time forward, Jerry's life revolved around one idea, fantastic as it seemed: to win the lovely Mimi. Which he succeeds in doing some years later after much heart ache and suffering."—Lit R

"She writes of life as she would like to have it, rather than life as it is. And it chances that there are a good many people who are dissatisfied with life as they find it and who therefore are glad to escape for a while into this region where, no matter how bad things may seem for a time, they always turn out rightly."
— + Boston Transcript p4 O 8 '24 400w

"For those who must seek relief from the too constant pressure of a disagreeable reality, this romance is to be recommended. It is sensitively and intelligently written, with some very clever characterizations. That it is so evidently the work of a woman is in this case a defect." Bernice Kamsler
+ — Int Bk R p64 D '24 520w

"Temple Bailey is one of that group of writers whose ever increasing audience awaits impatiently the appearance of each new book and whose every new book seems to move inevitably into the best seller class almost before it is published. I think her latest will be no exception to the rule." R. M. B.
+ Lit R p12 S 27 '24 420w

BAKER, BERNARD GRANVILLE. From a terrace in Prague. 262p il $4.50 Brentano's; for sale by Baker & Taylor [16s Allen & U.]
914.371 Prague, Bohemia [24-14387]

"Colonel Baker, who writes D. S. O. after his name and is a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, has a great affection for the picturesque capital city of Bohemia, on the Moldau. But whether the book is travel or history it would be difficult to say, for it is of amorphous breed and although it starts out clearly headed for the travel shelves it gradually works over toward history. Haste should, however, be made to assure the reader that the history contained in the Colonel's cheery and chatty volume is presented in a vastly entertaining fashion: the author slaps the ancient Kings of Bohemia on their broad backs, approaches Crusaders with levity, and treats the Czech language (for the integrity of which Bohemians fought and died) with good-humored indulgence."—N Y Times

"Aided by the admirable pictures, some in color, with which the book is illustrated, one may make a delightful journey either in fact or fancy. An exemplary and unusually interesting travel book, from a writer with much charm and understanding."
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 5 '24 200w

Reviewed by S. F. Reavis
Int Bk R p529 Je '24 80w

"For Prague, a city full of tradition, Colonel Baker has achieved something eminently suitable and necessary." T. J. C. M.
+ Lit R p926 Jl 26 '24 200w

"An average sample of the familiar chronicle, spiced with a humour that will appeal to some tastes." H. J. Massingham
— + Nation and Ath 34:sup406 D 8 '24 350w

"A likeable book for one who combines the instinct for travel with a leaning to the historical. For those who have been frightened away by dry-as-dust methods of teaching history in school or college, the genial Colonel may succeed in making clear that a man could be human whether he lived 100 or 700 years ago, and whether he happened to be king or commoner."
+ N Y Times p11 F 17 '24 1450w
N Y Tribune p15 S 21 '24 300w

"The only element in his book which we have not found enlivening is the too persistent facetiousness of his style. It is the author's particular pride that he has completely eschewed the 'guide-book manner,' but only at the expense of a school-girl archness which on occasion becomes infuriating."
+ — Sat R 136:523 N 10 '23 600w

"Mingles historical reminiscences with impressions of scenery in a way which is always entertaining, though a trifle tedious at length."
+ — Spec 131:562 O 20 '23 50w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p658 O 11 '23 600w

BAKER, RAY PALMER. Chapter in American education. 170p $1 Scribner
607 Rensselaer polytechnic institute 24-24054

A sketch of the hundred years' history of Rensselaer polytechnic institute.

"This book differs from most volumes of the sort, prepared for special occasions, in that there are no traces of carelessness or hurried, slipshod writing. From a large mass of material, Dr. Baker has digested and given to us an admirable account of an interesting adventure, which has proved by its fruits not only to have reached but to have exceeded by far the dreams of its founders." M. T.
+ Boston Transcript p3 N 22 '24 750w

"Prof. Baker's story of the development of the Institute is worth reading by every engineer and certainly by every engineering educator. The remainder of the book, a hasty though charming review of the individual successes among the alumni in the hundred years gone, has interest more specifically to those particularly concerned with the Institute, but nevertheless rounds out admirably the purpose of the book."
Eng N 93:638 O 16 '24 270w

"The purpose of the volume is to set forth the Institute as an educational pioneer. It did so much that one welcomes its history. As the author has set forth innumerable statements which arrest attention and cause reflection, it is a very worthy contribution. Read it, is the recommendation to those who see these lines." E. F. Smith
+ Ind & Eng Chem 17:105 Ja '25 860w

"An inspiring and interesting story."
+ N Y Times p26 N 9 '24 480w

BAKER, RAY PALMER. Preparation of re-
2 ports, engineering, scientific, administrative; a textbook. 468p il $3.50 Ronald 620.7 Reports—Preparation. Technical writing 24-26224

"Designed primarily for the use of students, but valuable also for those in active professional and business life."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:597 D '24

BALFOUR, ANDREW, and SCOTT, HENRY HAROLD. Health problems of the Empire; past, present and future. (British Empire ser.) 413p $4 Holt [16s Collins]
614 Public health—Great Britain [24-19320]

A survey of the public health problems in all parts of the British Empire, in its army and navy and overseas possessions. Part two of the book is given to an account of the so-called imperial diseases—communicable diseases widespread thru the Empire and having a hurtful effect on its resources. Part three is devoted to the questions of maternity and child welfare, alcoholism, the drug habit and the financial aspect of public health.

Boston Transcript p7 D 6 '24 270w

"The title and the subject may appear forbidding, but the chapters which deal with the great imperial diseases such as plague and malaria, and the methods adopted for fighting them, are of great interest even to the ignorant layman."

+ Nation and Ath 35:418 Je 28 '24 100w

Sat R 138:45 Jl 12 '24 140w

"The whole book is written with enthusiasm, and is full of suggestive ideas."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p411 Jl 3 '24 400w

BALFOUR, ARTHUR JAMES BALFOUR, 1st earl. Theism and thought; a study in familiar beliefs. 283p $4 Doran [15s Hodder & S.]

211 Philosophy and religion. Theism 24-8912

"In this, as in the first course of his Gifford Lectures, 'Theism and Humanism,' Lord Balfour is most closely concerned with a particular challenge, that of the system called 'Naturalism.' . . . The book takes shape as an examination on the lines of 'methodological doubt' into that set of fundamental beliefs, those assumptions of 'common sense' from which the deepest mysteries, the most daring flights of science, start, and to which they return for verification. That we are living beings in a world of living beings, that there are permanent material objects, that regularity prevails in Nature, that memory is a trustworthy instrument, are specimens of these necessary assumptions."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Int J Ethics 35:98 O '24 390w

J Religion 4:660 N '24 60w

"In style and temper the book is irreproachable. It is the work of a highly gifted amateur —gracious, modest, fluent, and neatly turned." R. B. Perry

+ Lit R p867 Jl 5 '24 850w

N Y Tribune p32 Ap 27 '24 150w

St Louis p401 D '24

"These Gifford lectures are as lucid, as much to the point, and as repressive of premature enthusiasms as his former treatises; the same line of thought runs through all. . . He says much that ought to be said and remembered; and he says it in a polished literary style. But, though his works are a distinct asset to English speculation, the assent with which we read them is cold. He is possessed, it has been said, by the philosophy of conservatism." Alfred Fawkes

+ — Spec 132:sup414 Mr 15 '24 660w

"It may be stated, without much fear of contradiction, first, that this is as fine and polished a piece of writing as has ever come from the illustrious author's pen, and, secondly, that, at the age of 75, Lord Balfour has lost nothing of his former skill in the matter of close reasoning and penetrating criticism." H. G. Ross

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 6 '24 550w

"A criticism that may perhaps be passed upon this work as a whole is that Lord Balfour is sounding his defiance at the gates of a giant who has already been decapitated. In fact, 'Naturalism' is already far gone in decline. This fact does not make Lord Balfour's work superfluous. One of the secure achievements of philosophy which even he admits is that 'over some alluring paths "No Thoroughfare" has been writ so large that even the boldest explorer must pause and turn.' He has helped to set up one more of those serviceable noticeboards."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p861 D 13 '23 2100w

BALLARD, COLIN ROBERT. Napoleon; an ^{2} outline. 325p $5 Appleton [18s Duckworth]

B or 92 Napoleon I, emperor of the French

General Ballard's book is a military life of Napoleon. The history and strategy of his compaigns are clearly sketched and illustrated with twenty-six maps. The introductory chapter is given to the man and his personality, and the last twenty-five pages are devoted to Napoleon's relations with Josephine and other women, his family and court, his marshals and the authorities on his life.

"Frank and refreshingly abrupt in style."

+ Outlook 138:608 D 10 '24 20w

"The books dealing with Napoleon are to be numbered by hundreds, but there are relatively few good ones dealing with his campaigns as a whole within a reasonable compass. There was therefore room for Brigadier-General Ballard's work. . . His scheme is a laudable one, but he has tried to cram too much into his space."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p816 D 4 '24 900w

BALMER, EDWIN. Fidelia. 368p $2 Dodd

24-6459

When the story opens the three young people who are its chief characters are students at a coeducational university. David Herrick and Alice Sothron are seniors, very much in love with each other and looking forward to marriage at the end of the college year. Then the surpassingly beautiful Fidelia Netley comes on the scene and changes the course of life for a while for David and the gentle, faithful Alice. Fidelia does not deliberately set out to attract David but her beauty and something of mystery about her prove irresistible to him. So it is she and not Alice who marries David in June. Their happiness is short-lived, for the mystery surrounding Fidelia proves to be a previous marriage and a husband whom she believed to be dead but who suddenly reappears. Alice had remained faithful and forgiving and the two who were meant for each other come together once more.

"This is no 'book for the young,' and certainly, speaking for ourselves, no book for the old either."

— Boston Transcript p4 Ap 30 '24 500w

"It is the typical problem novel written without too much regard for or knowledge of good fiction. At its best the prose is merely passable and at its worst it is quite mediocre."

— N Y Times p16 Mr 30 '24 300w

Wis Lib Bul 20:125 My '24

BALZ, ALBERT GEORGE ADAM, and POTT, WILLIAM SUMNER APPLETON. Basis of social theory. 252p $2.50 Knopf

301 Social psychology 24-6979

A discussion of the province of psychology and of the relation of social psychology to psychology in general and in its special forms. The writers take the position that social psychology is not a sub-division of a more general science nor the application to social subject-matter of the conceptions of general or individual psychology, but that psychology is, fundamentally, social psychology. Contents: The field of social psychology; Human nature and social forces; Inherited tendencies and action; The function of instinctive tendencies; The function of capacities; The problem of control; Index.

"The book, although speculative, is well reasoned, sponsors a definite point of view, and makes an undoubted contribution to social theory."

+ Bookm 59:746 Ag '24 120w

Cleveland p53 Jl '24

Dial 77:349 O '24 100w

Reviewed by T. V. Smith

J Philos 21:712 D 18 '24 1050w

BALZ, A. G: A.—Continued

J Religion 4:663 N '24 90w

Reviewed by E. C. Lindeman
New Repub 41:sup15 D 10 '24 1200w

"Apparently Mr. Balz did not have a very clear conception of what he meant to accomplish by his book. There is no evidence of any original investigation, nor is there any statement of principles which might have been expected from the word 'basis' in the title. It is hardly a book for the layman and is little more than a discussion."
— N Y World p6e Mr 23 '24 800w

BANDELLO, MATTEO. Tragical tales; tr. by Sir Geoffrey Fenton; with introd. by Robert Langton Douglas; modernized and ed. by Hugh Harris. (Broadway translations) 564p $5 Dutton

Bandello is regarded as preëminent among Italian novellieri of the renaissance. Sir Geoffrey Fenton, in 1567, made a free translation of the French rendering of Bandello's novellè which had wide popularity in England. It is from his "Tragical discourses" that the following thirteen have been selected. They vividly portray the free and luxurious life of the Milanese: Anselmo and Angelica; Livio and Camilla; Pandora of Milan; The Albanian captain; The lovers of Milan; The villainous abbot; The countess of Celant; A modern Lucretia; The lady of Cabrio; Luchina and Janiquette; The silent lover; Perillo and Carmosina; Genivera La Blonde. The book contains a lengthy introduction by R. L. Douglas embodying facts about the lives and works of Bandello and Fenton.

Boston Transcript p4 D 17 '24 380w

"Though Bandello be unreadable to anyone not endowed with an abnormally historical mind, we can give him full credit for his talents. He wrote for his own generation, which was an unusually remarkable generation, and few writers can hope to do more. I have nothing but respect for Bandello, but for light reading give me any intelligent novel in a modern bookshop." Francis Birrell
+ — Nation and Ath 36:120 O 18 '24 660w
Outlook 138:513 N 26 '24 10w

"Bandello is second only to Boccaccio in a literature which possesses scores of able writers of novelle; his prose, if less elegant and charming than the Florentine's, is swifter and his gift of story-telling is almost as happy. None of the swiftness and little of the story-telling were preserved by Fenton. Whatever might be objected to Fenton's Bandello as a faithful translation, it is surely a monument of decorative English prose. What prose in the world can match the Elizabethan Englishmen for beauty, richness, stateliness and harmony? Where else will you find language so pithy, vivid and expressive?" R: Aldington
— + Spec 133:sup553 O 18 '24 700w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p572 S 18 '24 800w

BANFIELD, E. J. My tropic isle. 315p il $2.50 Appleton [7s 6d Unwin]

919.43 Queensland—Description and travel. Natural history—Queensland

The author's tropic isle is off the coast of North Queensland. He settled there in 1897, building his home and furniture with his own hands. Life there is very peaceful, isolated and quiet. The pages of the book are concerned with the customs and habits of the author on that lonely isle, and lengthy descriptions of the flora and fauna found there. Much of the contents of this book was published under the title of "Rural homilies" in the North Queensland Register.

"Mr. Banfield has a pleasant, slightly humorous style of writing and he describes quite frankly the difficulties as well as the delights of their lovely tropical island and all that they learned from it."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ag 2 '24 250w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p5 My 25 '24 2100w

"Those to whom no small detail of life is without interest will revel in the minute descriptions of tropical plants and in the particulars of animal life which the author has observed and carefully recorded. One cannot read far without being impressed by the author's keen power of observation."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Je 1 '24 650w

BANKS, HELEN WARD. House of the lions. 249p il $1.75 Century

24-20564

A book for young people telling the story of the charming Boynton family and their wholesome influence upon a likable lad, Nick Gay, whose abundance of money and freedom was undermining his character. The "House of the lions," a beautiful place next to the Boynton's insignificant cottage belonged to their crabbed Aunt Grace, Nick's grandmother, and figured in the mysterious disappearance of a beaded bag. After a prolonged search the bag was discovered, with surprising consequences, but even more satisfying than this is the reformation of Nick thru the persistent faith and unselfishness of Bab and the Boynton family.

" 'The House of the Lions' is a healthy, lively, well done story for persons in their teens." D. W.
+ Lit R p11 S 27 '24 260w

"There's a mystery written into the story, just enough to keep the reader on the qui vive, and there's plenty of fun and a background of serious character building with the 'preaching' very nicely sugar coated."
+ Springf'd Republican p5a N 23 '24 230w

BANNING, MRS MARGARET CULKIN. Handmaid of the Lord. 320p $2 Doran

24-22006

The Pearse home located in the coal mining town of Valhalla, is the scene of perennial upheaval due to the ungovernable temper of Mrs Pearse. Veronika, the older girl, bravely shoulders the domestic responsibilities but dreams of beautiful living. There are two ways for Veronika to escape from this unlovely life—marriage either to a poor, devoted architect or to Stewart Royden, a clever business man. Altho she is in love with neither, she marries Stewart. In the years that follow, the most vital problem that Veronika faces is that of adjusting herself to life. It is only after she has suffered the death of a child and the varying fortune of Stewart in business, that she comes to believe that she would always be at the mercy of chance, circumstance, emotion. "She would never cheat life and she could not control it. Her only weapon was bravery."

"This is a fine novel, fine in grain." Isabel Paterson
+ Bookm 60:497 D '24 250w
Boston Transcript p4 O 15 '24 400w

"Mrs. Banning writes with severe, often cruel, realism and without glamour. This does not make for a completely happy ending. Beyond question 'The Handmaid of the Lord' is the strongest novel Mrs. Banning has yet done." Florence Milner
+ Lit R p10 S 27 '24 340w
N Y Times p19 D 14 '24 520w
Springf'd Republican p5a N 2 '24 600w

BARBER, THOMAS H. Along the road; with a preface by Edward Streeter. 141p il $1.50 Dodd

940.48 European war, 1914-1919—Personal narratives

24-14723

The writer was in command of a company of pioneer infantry in the Argonne advance. A period of twelve days is covered by his narrative—three days of quiet and nine of attack—which he describes as just average days, neither the dullest nor the most exciting. In its simplicity and faithfulness of detail, this account presents an evidently truthful picture of a small cross-section of the war and of the American soldier.

"Marvelously photographic in its simplicity, directness and sense of actuality. There is no attempt at fine writing, no painting of the lily, no unconscious effort at dramatic effect. There is nothing but the simple, unadorned account of what Captain Barber saw and did and experienced during each twenty-four hours."
+ N Y Times p20 Jl 6 '24 700w

BARBOUR, RALPH HENRY (RICHARD STILLMAN POWELL, pseud.). Infield rivals. 258p $1.75 Appleton
24-7315

"'Infield Rivals' is the title of Ralph Henry Barbour's latest schoolboy story in which the young hero finds himself beaten for the position of third baseman by an unpopular rival. Tom's Uncle Ira is a conservative farmer who frowns on wasting time in play and money in equipment, and who is set against a new schoolhouse that will contain a gymnasium. The story has a plot within a plot, the conversion of Uncle Ira. Another character is a rich young man playing hobo who becomes interested in Tom, hires out for a while on the farm, and makes a pitcher of Tom instead of a third baseman. So when the inter-school series ends in a tie and the regular pitching staff goes to pieces in the crucial play-off game, Tom is drafted to pull the team out of a hole and does it."—Springf'd Republican

Boston Transcript p5 My 10 '24 80w
N Y Tribune p25 Jl 27 '24 80w

"It is a typical Barbour book, maintaining the author's quality and prestige."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a My 25 '24 160w

BARBOUR, RALPH HENRY (RICHARD STILLMAN POWELL, pseud.). Spaniard's cave. 324p il $1.75 Century
24-20562

Bermuda is the background of this glorious adventure of Joe Whitmore who unexpectedly accompanies his father on a business trip to Bermuda. On board ship he becomes friendly with an English boy, Ned Clyde, who entertains him at his uncle's plantation. Joe and Ned explore the island and with the aid of a young collector of marine specimens, they discover Spaniard's cave where Joe and Ned have a thrilling time with an octopus. Joe's two weeks in Bermuda also prove to be profitable for he helps his father land a government contract.

"He spins an interesting, vigorous yarn, with considerable kinship to truth and very little sentimentality." J. C.
+ Lit R p10 S 13 '24 220w
Sat R of Lit 1:151 S 27 '24 100w
Springf'd Republican p8 D 24 '24 200w

BARING, MAURICE. C. 2v 355;383p $5 Doubleday [15s Heinemann]
[24-26747]

"Mr. Baring is evidently at great pains to create an illusion that what we are reading is fact rather than fiction. Thus, he resorts to the slightly worn device of writing a preface in his own name to introduce an imaginary author, Walter Wright, who in his turn explains that he is only compiling from papers bequeathed to him on a deathbed. Caryl Bramsley's fugacious personality is suggested by the very fact that he has for his friends no more salient nickname than an initial. The book is a study in the temperament of failure. 'C's' annals are but a succession of frost-nipped springs. He had the makings, and the opportunities, of a poet, a diplomat, a journalist, a lover, and a suicide; and, when it came to a pinch, found he lacked the stuff to be any of them. Can a life that is all frustration be made absorbing? That is what Mr. Baring sets himself to prove." —The Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 21:25 O '24

"This biographical novel is said to have made a good deal of a stir in London, but it is a little difficult for an American reader to see why it should greatly excite any one. 'C' is very far indeed from being a 'Forsyte Saga,' tho it is entirely realistic in its pictures of Victorian society, and its account of a pitifully wasted, pitifully blighted life." L. M. Field
— Int Bk R p738 S '24 600w

"'C' has a marked quality of limpidity which reminds one of a brook in a meadow, not too deep, and always permitting an undistorted view of what lies at the bottom through its clear waters; less soul-stirring perhaps than a mountain torrent or a great river, but with a distinctive beauty of its own." Herschel Brickell
Lit R p931 Ag 2 '24 560w

"C is real, amazingly so. There are moments when he is painfully real, so much so that the reader is intensely perturbed at suspecting certain things and desiring that C notice them also. But C never does." H. S. Gorman
N Y Times p7 Jl 27 '24 1700w
Outlook 138:382 N 5 '24 50w

"Mr. Baring's detail is conventional and rather dull—preparatory school, Eton, Oxford, diplomacy, journalism, a mild Bohemia. But out of all this we do get a clear picture of 'C' himself, his failure to adjust himself to life, his talent, his charm, his inadequacy in love. And I suppose it was to achieve this that Mr. Baring wrote the book." Gerald Gould
— Sat R 137:642 Je 21 '24 250w

"One cannot leave Mr. Baring's book without commenting on the really flawless quality of its emotion. That emotion might well be greater in volume; it could not be purer or clearer, felt more finely or expressed more appropriately. It gives his book an air and tone of faultless taste." L. P. Hartley
+ Spec 132:64 Jl 12 '24 700w

"We are not sure that the method of drawn-out detail was the best. Mr. Baring's gift is really more for the brief phrase or paragraph that illuminates a character or a situation in a flash; he has not an equal power of suffusing a long ribbon of narrative with light, and he makes us traverse some grey stretches of road."
— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p354 Je 5 '24 600w

BARING, MAURICE. Punch and Judy and other essays. 370p $2.50 Doubleday [10s 6d Heinemann]
824

A collection of essays on books and authors and the stage, reprinted from magazines and newspapers. The earliest of them is dated 1899, the latest, 1923. Partial contents: Punch and Judy; Sarah Bernhardt; Gilbert and Sullivan; Mrs Patrick Campbell; Chaliapine; Goethe and Victor Hugo; La Fontaine's Fables; Racine; Hippolyte Taine; French poetry; The poetry of Crabbe; Mary Coleridge; Edward Lear; Tchekov; The epic songs of Serbia; Eleonora Duse (1905-1923); Peter Ibbetson; Sir James Barrie and the Guitrys; The Guitrys and La Fontaine.

"With quiet dignity, free from all affectation, superiority, or striving after effect, he tells us about his own enthusiasms, literary and dramatic and generously besprinkles his talk with personal reminiscence."
+ Nation and Ath 36:120 O 18 '24 430w
New Statesman 24:sup10 O 11 '24 500w

BARING, MAURICE—Continued

Reviewed by W. R. Trask

N Y Tribune p10 Ja 18 '25 460w

N Y World p8e N 9 '24 120w

Springf'd Republican p6 N 17 '24 210w

"He is a classicist, and, if anyone wants to know how charming and supple a classicist can be, let him begin this book in the middle with the paper on Racine. The study of La Fontaine might rival it for grace and penetration, but La Fontaine does not pervade the whole book like Racine. There is a double pleasure in reading this essay. It shows Mr. Baring's style at its best, and it carries on the work, already begun by Mr. Strachey, of bringing home to English opinion the fact that love of Racine is neither a French nationalist foible nor a pose of English 'highbrows.' "

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p593 S 25 '24 780w

BARKER, J. ELLIS. Cancer; with an introd. by Sir W. Arbuthnot Lane. 478p $3 Dutton [7s 6d Murray]

616.994 Cancer 24-16904

An exhaustive book on the cause and prevention of cancer, written in plain and quite untechnical language by a layman who has laboriously gone through a mass of literature both English and foreign, bearing on the subject. He summarizes some of these writings and brings together a collection of extracts. Mr Barker's thesis is that cancer is a disease of civilization and that it is caused by chronic poisoning and vitamine starvation. He explains the defects of modern feeding and wrong habits of life and how they influence cancer.

"The author cannot be said to have advanced the subject of cancer control in any way." E: A. Soper

— Am J of Public Health 14:787 S '24 2100w

"There is no doubt that if every one followed the dietary and other recommendations contained in this very amusing and interesting book the world would be very much better off and there would be fewer neurasthenics, but probably just as many deaths from cancer." F. C. Wood

— + Lit R p966 Ag 16 '24 850w

"We cannot agree with Sir W. Arbuthnot Lane that this book 'will prove a great boon to mankind' or 'that it is easily the most important practical work on cancer existing in English or in any other language.' These statements are extravagant or, at least, very doubtful. Mr. Barker's book is the work of a journalist and is from beginning to end uncritical in a scientific sense."

— Nature 114:496 O 4 '24 400w

"He has written a very excellent and valuable book that is receiving the cordial indorsement of physicians of high repute."

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 24 '24 600w

"I have read the book from cover to cover, and I have to acknowledge that my time has been wasted, my sense of propriety has been shocked and my professional pride as a serious student of cancer has been injured." James Ewing

— N Y Tribune p4 S 28 '24 3400w

R of Rs 70:335 S '24 120w

St Louis p405 D '24

"If this book is to be regarded seriously it should have been written for the medical profession and not for the layman; in producing the volume in such form that the public in general are invited to feast upon it, the author as well as the publisher have committed a grievous error; it detracts from the practical application of this prevention of cancer." H. O. Mosenthal, M.D.

— Sat R of Lit 1:208 O 18 '24 1250w

Reviewed by James Young

Spec 132:129 Jl 26 '24 2000w

Reviewed by Haven Emerson, M.D.

Survey 53:103 O 15 '24 520w

"The book shows a remarkably wide knowledge of this difficult subject; it presents the facts in clear and easily understood language."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p412 Jl 3 '24 450w

BARKER, LEWELLYS FRANKLIN, and COLE, NORMAN BROWN. Blood pressure; cause, effect and remedy. 154p $1.25 Appleton

612.14 Blood—Pressure 24-4597

This volume goes thoroughly, but without technicalities, into a subject that is of growing concern to both doctor and patient. Beginning with an account of the normal mechanism of the circulatory system, the authors show the fluctuations of blood pressure in health and disease, the causes of high blood pressure, its relation to hardening of the arteries and its effect on heart, kidneys and brain. In the last chapter the hygienic rules are laid down that will keep blood pressure within proper bounds.

"It appears to us that the book accomplishes its purpose in an excellent manner. The book can be recommended to the class of persons for whom it is designed. It is a book which might with advantage be placed in the waiting room of physicians."

+ Am J of Public Health 14:440 My '24 250w

Booklist 20:327 Je '24

"Men and women over sixty will find this book very well worth reading. Nor is it in the least discouraging. Those who are in early middle age can certainly profit by it. This is an excellent medical book, with the added value of being quite suitable for lay readers."

+ Boston Transcript p7 My 24 '24 180w

"As an exposition of our present knowledge of what 'blood pressure' is and does, this work is strikingly good, but the very unsettled state of the problems connected with the cause and the remedy of hypertension render it exceedingly problematical whether these aspects of the subject can at present be handled adequately for a lay audience."

+ — Lit R p722 My 3 '24 450w

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Mr 19 '24 300w

Springf'd Republican p7a Je 8 '24 120w

Wis Lib Bul 20:146 Je '24

BARNES, GEORGE NICOLL. From workshop to war cabinet; with an introd. by D. Lloyd George. 315p $2.50 Appleton [7s 6d Jenkins]

B or 92 Labor and laboring classes—Great Britain. European war, 1914-1919—Great Britain [23-17764]

Mr Barnes's autobiography may serve as a history of the British labor movement since he has been all his working life a leader first in trade-unionism and later in parliamentary politics. The son of a workingman, he knew all the vicissitudes of the manual laborer's lot both in England and Scotland. He was apprenticed as a boy to the engineering trade and later became secretary of the Amalgamated society of engineers. The chapters on the birth and development of the Labor party, which Mr Barnes represented in Parliament for many years, are particularly interesting now. During the war Mr Barnes was a member of Lloyd George's coalition cabinet and later was one of the British delegates to the first assembly of the League of nations. His brief character sketches of the statesmen and labor leaders with whom he has come in contact through his long political life are shrewd, good-natured and impartial.

"Mr. Barnes's book is opportune; he is well worthy of a hearing."

+ Boston Transcript p3 F 9 '24 600w

Cleveland p45 Je '24

"For those who wish to fathom the inner mind of labor in Britain, the life of himself which George Barnes now gives us will be welcome as a valuable 'exhibit.'" P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p3 F 3 '24 2600w

Spec 131:431 S 20 '23 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p611 S 20 '23 850w

BARNES, HARRY ELMER. Sociology and political theory; a consideration of the sociological basis of politics. 260p $2.50 Knopf

320 Sociology. Political science 24-2464

"This book takes the writings of the classical, political theorists, sociologists and economists and classifies these writings topically. The author tells us what each of the classical sociologists have had to say on such subjects as the process and mechanism of government, the scope of state activity, the state and social progress, sovereignty, social environment, etc."—Ann Am Acad

---

Am Pol Sci R 18:424 My '24 70w

"As a topical compendium of the tenets of the leading sociologists the book is invaluable. It does not purport to contribute anything new in theory."

+ Ann Am Acad 114:159 Jl '24 80w

Cleveland p53 Jl '24

"Like all of Barnes's work, this production is heavily documented. His copious footnotes and extensive bibliography will doubtless be found useful by sociologists, and by political scientists interested in looking up what this or that social philosopher has thought a propos governmental origins, development, organization, or function. The mature, political student while he may gain a broader perspective from a perusal of such a book, will perhaps emerge with a heightened conviction of the necessity for realism in the study of government, and a shade of suspicion that Ford and Beard have had some ground for their skepticism as to the value of sociology." A. B. Wolfe

J Philos 21:387 Jl 3 '24 320w

"The brevity of the evolutionary and environmental treatment is compensated for by a most valuable scheme of classification. The usefulness of the book indeed may be likened to that of a small encyclopædia." W: F. Ogburn

+ Lit R p610 Mr 22 '24 620w

"Professor Barnes has made an exceptionally important contribution to the literature of both political science and sociology. Nowhere else can one find in such brief compass and such readable form as accurate and comprehensive summary of the contemporaneous developments in both political and social thinking as in this little volume. But one cannot refrain from suggesting that there are branches of inquiry in political science that Professor Barnes does not touch." R. L. Mott

+ — New Repub 40:103 S 24 '24 1400w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:300 Je '24

"Mr. Barnes has produced a book indispensable to the political scientist in any endeavor to group the significance of sociological thought to his own field. The material has been most conveniently arranged for this purpose." R. T. Crane

+ Pol Sci Q 39:535 S '24 580w

BARNES, WALTER. Children's poets. 264p $1.80 World bk. [5s Harrop]

821 Children's poetry. Poets 24-7334

"A book which is not designed for children themselves but for those who work with children, such as teachers, librarians and discriminating parents. Here is something which has not been done before, and which was worth the doing. Mr. Barnes has analyzed the qualities of verse which appeal to the young, with appreciative interpretations of the spirit and accomplishments of such work as that of the Mother Goose rhymes, and of such authors as Stevenson, Ann and Jane Taylor, Riley, Lear and de la Mare."—N Y World

---

Booklist 21:14 O '24

"Mr. Barnes has made a contribution of considerable value." A. C. Moore

+ Bookm 60:166 O '24 120w

"All persons so fortunate as to have been given by the gods that gift of 'childlikeness' which never grows old, although they may not be the 'parents' or 'teachers' or 'students' for whom these critical analyses were primarily written, will read them happily, adding to the fascinating data many a childhood memory of their own."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 21 '24 360w

Cleveland p83 N '24

El School J 25:236 N '24 150w

"For the overmodernized adult who, forgetful of the charm which these poets exercised over his own youth, would force his children to climb up the ladder of appreciation to things beyond their grasp, this volume should prove vastly enlightening. The ample illustrative material and profuse references to the minor children's poets are also valuable." G. M. Goldman

+ N Y World p8e Jl 6 '24 210w

BARNETT, ADA. Joyous adventurer. 497p $2 Putnam

24-3713

One day when Professor James Godolphin was returning to his forest-surrounded home he discovered a four-months-old baby lying in his path. No one came to claim the child so the professor adopted him and named him James Godolphin, but the lad was never called anything but Copper Top. Kathleen, the professor's housekeeper, insisted that "They" had left the child and certainly he did seem part fairy. The birds and beasts were his best friends, and he was at home in the treetops, the meadows of the upland and in the lakes, but not in the world of men. When he grew up Copper Top fell in love with Ishtar, the granddaughter of Lady Condor, the professor's cousin. For a few short weeks they were very happy, but a sturdy Scotch wooer won Ishtar from Copper Top. Then Copper Top vanished into the unknown whence he had come. Only the professor knew about his going and he would never tell.

Booklist 20:337 Je '24

"The novel is charming, well if sentimentally written, and ought to appeal to all lovers of nature. Lovers of human nature may be disappointed."

+ — Boston Transcript p8 F 27 '24 360w

Cleveland p51 Jl '24

"One need not burrow very far within these covers to deduce that the progress of the tale will be gentle, fanned by zephyrs of sympathy, and accomplished without unseemly haste. These qualities it has, and in addition, a note of fantasy which is freshly conceived and not overdone."

+ — Dial 76:370 Ap '24 90w

"Her plot has an allegorical quality about it, and in bare outline may sound somewhat far-fetched, if not preposterous. But her handling of it, shot through as it is with humor and quaint conceits, and lit up by an always sprightly imagination, has about it an indefinable yet very definite charm."

+ N Y Times p9 F 17 '24 780w

"The author writes fluently, the few characters are lifelike and likeable, and the story is not without beauty and originality. But it is too long, and most readers will probably be glad to indulge in a little judicious skipping."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p753 N 8 '23 280w

BARNS, H. E. Naju of the Nile. 277p il $3 ª Houghton [7s 6d Putnams]

"The life story of the son of an African king, and his adventures with wild beasts and with his own enemies. Admirably illustrated by Warwick Reynolds."—Outlook

"A black man's Swiss Family Robinson, with a natural history almost as inaccurate as that queer work's and stuck in as a foil to the adventures of the black prince." H. J. Massingham

— Nation and Ath 36:sup386 D 6 '24 80w

"In spite of its lurid theme the book owes all the vitality it has to the sixteen full page illustrations by Warwick Reynolds."

— + N Y Tribune p5 N 16 '24 280w

Outlook 138:564 D 3 '24 30w

"The author of this African story, which is plainly written for children, treads in the trail of Mr. Kipling and Sir Rider Haggard—but at a considerable distance behind those authors in both invention and technique."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p778 N 20 '24 160w

BARNS, THOMAS ALEXANDER. Across the great craterland to the Congo; with an introd. by J. W. Gregory. 276p il $7.50 Knopf [25s Benn]

916.7 Tanganyika territory—Description and travel. Kongo, Belgian—Description and travel. Natural history—Africa 24-7825

"Mr. Barns had already skirted these hospitable wilds in his previous book, 'The Wonderland of the Eastern Congo.' In his new book he comes from the East Coast and Tanganyika to the Congo fringes. He did not come as a Red Slayer but in search of a rare butterfly, the Antizox, which he had one day seen floating out of reach during his first trip. Though he never found this Antizox he discovered other entomological wonders, and was compensated for his disappointment by a wealth of scientific data and the enjoyment of a region as yet unspoiled by man."—N Y Times

"True irony, feeling, and understanding escape him. Mr. Barns has a great reputation as an explorer, so that to say that the only readable and interesting portion of his ponderous volume are Prof. Gregory's few words on the geology of the great craters west of Mombasa seems a sad heresy." H. J. Massingham

— Nation and Ath 34:sup408 D 8 '24 450w

Reviewed by Raymond Holden

New Repub 40:51 S 10 '24 280w

Reviewed by W. G. Tinckom-Fernandez

N Y Times p13 Ap 27 '24 580w

"A book which, though not written with distinction, is nevertheless distinguished through the very interest of its narrative. Mr. Barns performed a memorable journey, and his achievements both in collecting and in exploration were notable. His book is of real value to the geographer, and his story for itself will attract many a reader."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p682 O 18 '23 1200w

BAROJA Y NESSI, PIO. Red Dawn; tr. from the Spanish by Isaac Goldberg. 347p $2.50 Knopf

25-4

The third and last book of the "Struggle of Life" series, in which Manuel, the adventurer and vagabond, ends his pilgrimage and settles down to a peaceful life with La Salvadora. An important part of this story is played by Juan, Manuel's younger brother who, having left the seminary where he had been preparing for the priesthood, gives his life to the cause of anarchism. There are vivid descriptions of the turbulent meetings which take place at "Red Dawn," a tavern used for that purpose, where every variety of anarchist expounds his theories.

N Y Times p9 N 9 '24 820w

"Baroja is a great man, though he may not perhaps be a great artist. But one forgives him his formlessness, the sketchy and sometimes incoherent nature of his work, and any other defects he may possess. For one can only admire a man who has seen, as few have, beyond the hypocritical surface of a mendacious world, and is impatient with all but its finest possibilities." Eliseo Vivas

+ N Y Tribune p10 N 2 '24 800w

"In its English form, 'Red Dawn,' through Isaac Goldberg, translator, strives to attain, with more or less success, the facility and vividness of Baroja's style as well as his severe dispassionateness. Strangely enough, the facility is better represented than that intellectual reserve, which, perhaps, is the source of Baroja's power and raises his work above mere realism. Yet even in the English form, 'Red Dawn' gives more than a glimpse of the mind that conceived it and the hand that wrote it." F. V. Roman

+ N Y World p9e O 26 '24 860w

BARRETT, HAROLD JAMES. Patricia's awakening. 419p $2 Crowell

24-11556

The love story of a modern girl of the jazz type. Patricia Keller, daughter of a wealthy contractor, was twenty-five and still unmarried. She had her own ideas as to the type of man she would marry, but when she first met him as one of her father's superintendents she did not recognize him. Gordon was of the quiet intellectual type, but a good superintendent. As time went on Gordon and Patricia each became engaged. Then Gordon was accused of falsifying his accounts and in the troubled days which followed Patricia awoke to the fact that Gordon was the man she loved.

"The story is well written and rather summery and should be found interesting either in the mountains or at the sea shore."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Jl 26 '24 100w

Lit R p986 Ag 23 '24 220w

N Y Times p24 Je 8 '24 280w

"It is all romantic and none too probable, but on the other hand, it is not excessively sentimental."

— + Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 17 '24 250w

BARRETT, RICHMOND BROOKS. Rapture. 310p $2 Boni & Liveright

24-2895

A story of New York and New York society centering about the marriage of Lilla Colby and Townsend Prime. The sensitive, high-strung, keenly critical Lilla had no illusions about Townsend when she married him except her infatuation with his physical perfection. His failings and limitations were apparent and their first few weeks of living together showed her how weak and untrustworthy he was, but his physical spell grew steadily stronger. She bent all her will and energy to keeping him and she succeeded, but she killed herself doing it and all the time she realized how petty her triumph was.

"Written in a vivid, beautiful, occasionally over lush style. In many ways it is the most brilliant technical performance we have had in many years from a young author." J. F.

+ — Bookm 59:339 My '24 130w

"The man's excellent writing has made interesting, indeed fascinating, reading of a book devoted to an inane and worthless theme. 'Rapture' is not recommended to sober-minded readers, and is positively contra-indicated in cases of impaired mentality. Nevertheless, fairness demands the additional observation that Mr. Barrett will unquestionably write a tremendous novel if he ever finds anything to write about."

— Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 My 18 '24 300w

"This is Mr. Barrett's first novel and, while he understands something of life's complexities, he stumbles here and there in technique. Like a child learning to walk, he gets there, but has not yet achieved a normal gait." Dora Mulkins
— + Int Bk R p476 My '24 560w

"A work of considerably more than average acumen, peopled with characters which—even though they do not sink deeply into one's sympathy—have been allowed to develop naturally and to take on the colors of life. Mr. Barrett has drawn a group portrait, in which each figure is distinct and in which the relationships are fundamentally faithful to reality."
+ Nation 118:662 Je 4 '24 80w

"The story is written with sustained power. The theme and the situation are unique and original and the author has given an added tang to his story by the mordantly cynical implications with which it is crowded."
+ N Y Times p19 F 10 '24 600w

"A clever, compact. finished piece of work. It carries conviction also as an authoritative first-hand study of a milieu and atmosphere seldom exploited in American fiction." Isabel Paterson
+ N Y Tribune p20 F 3 '24 750w

BARRETTO, LARRY. Conqueror passes. 309p $2 Little 24-1142

To many American soldiers in the World war, the return to humdrum business or professional life was an almost unbearable change from the constant tension and excitement of war. Stephen Wicker was one of those to whom readjustment seemed most difficult, and the book describes his reactions in business, social life, and in his love affairs. For a time his restlessness almost caused his undoing, but the need of another, the girl he had been in love with, calls him to her again, and in marriage and the taking up of the old job he regains his feet.

"Mr. Barretto's power of understanding and of making clear to us his understanding is almost uncanny in its brilliancy." D. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p6 Ja 30 '24 1150w
Cleveland p15 F '24

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton
Ind 112:78 F 2 '24 420w

"The author only gives us half of the psychological transition, with the result that the character of Wicker is never quite distinct. The most definite impression we get of him is one of extreme weakness, which rather impairs the value of what is otherwise an extremely interesting and realistic study of the disastrous mental after-effects of war felt by thousands of young men today." Cass Canfield
+ — Lit R p519 F 16 '24 650w

"This novel, interesting and very well written —extraordinarily well written, if it is indeed as would seem to be the case, a first book—is difficult to estimate when one does not know whether or not it is largely autobiographical. If autobiography, it is excellently handled, valuable as a vivid record of personal experience. But if it is the product, not of experience but of imagination, then it marks the appearance of a new writer of distinction, one rarely and richly endowed. In either case, it shows narrative ability and descriptive power."
+ N Y Times p16 Ja 6 '24 1000w

"Most of the book is an indigestible mass of mawkish, obviously fiction matter. But here and there were passages that gripped me and made me really understand, though I was not of the war generation, the anguish in the mind of the hero." Milton Raison
— + N Y World p7e Ja 20 '24 600w

"It 'rings true'; but not true as universal or general experience. Yet the book, if not taken too seriously as a large study of unrest, is a live thing and keeps the reader's interest alive also by its tenseness and sharp action."
+ — Outlook 136:318 F 20 '24 120w

Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 30 '24 400w
Wis Lib Bul 20:98 Ap '24

BARRIE, SIR JAMES MATTHEW, 1st bart. Mary Rose; a play in three acts. 139p $2 Scribner
822 24-24826

The printed version of "Mary Rose" appears four years after its production at the Haymarket theatre, London, where it created much discussion. The story is that of a young wife and mother who on a visit with her husband to a tiny island of legendary fame, is suddenly spirited away. Twenty-five years later she mysteriously reappears to her husband and parents who during that time have naturally aged, while she is unchanged in youth and beauty. She is in quest of her son who had run away to sea and whose whereabouts are unknown. Years later she meets him, a soldier back from the war, and, her longing now satisfied, she hearkens once more to the "call" of the island.

Lit R p9 D 20 '24 100w

Reviewed by V. Sackville-West
Nation and Ath 36:368 D 6 '24 400w

Reviewed by M. J. Moses
Outlook 138:510 N 26 '24 150w

"It is just one of the most beautiful and original ghost stories ever written by a poet for the theatre. Do not let us be so banal as to exclaim at its 'incredibility.' After all, it is no more 'incredible' than the wonderful opening scene of 'Hamlet,' and to Sir James Barrie, himself, it is, I am certain, only the faithful picture of a number of perfectly simple things." H. M. Walbrook
+ Sat R of Lit 1:376 D 13 '24 900w

BARRINGTON, E., pseud. Divine lady. 417p il $2.50 Dodd
24-14710

A novel founded on the historic romance of Lord Nelson and the beautiful Lady Hamilton. She was the inspirer of his great naval victories for England culminating in the battle of Trafalgar in which Nelson died, leaving Lady Hamilton and his daughter as a legacy to his country. The facts in their lives are strictly adhered to and Emma Hamilton's various affairs before her meeting with Nelson form the first half of the story. But its chief interest centers in the episodes at Naples where, as wife of the British envoy, Sir William Hamilton, she met Lord Nelson, became the absorbing passion of his life and was entangled with him in political actions and intrigues between England and the Neapolitan court.

Booklist 21:25 O '24
Int Bk R p902 N '24 500w

"The story, after Nelson's appearance is dramatic enough, but it lacks the novelty of the earlier chapters. Good use has been made throughout of the great mass of authentic data, of memoirs, letters and so on, and for the most part the background is very well done. But the erudite Greville, amateur of the classic arts, really ought not to have compared Emma's throat in the 1780's to that of the 'Venus of Milo,' since the marble lady did not emerge to the light of day until 1820." Harvey Parrish
+ — Lit R p915 Jl 26 '24 450w

"If the reader's tastes are not too high, this is an exciting story, and probably is ideal Summer reading."
+ — N Y Times p9 Je 29 '24 750w
N Y Tribune p27 Je 22 '24 950w

"'The Divine Lady' as a portrait is as lifelike as the many paintings by Romney of the beautiful, daring woman, who has only Mme. Du Barry as a prototype of achievement." F. V. Roman
+ N Y World p2e Je 29 '24 200w
Wis Lib Bul 20:212 O '24

BARRINGTON, E., pseud. The gallants, following according to their wont The ladies! 308p il $3.50 Atlantic monthly
24-21588

In a companion volume to "The Ladies" E. Barrington recreates in the same novel way some romantic figures in English history, drawing upon imagination for the words and manner they might themselves have used in telling their own stories. Each gallant is linked with a lady—Henry II and Rosamond de Clifford, the Duke of Monmouth and Henriette Wentworth, Henry Thrale and Sophy Streatfield, Lord Nelson and Lady Hamilton, and others. Contents: The king and the lady; Her majesty's godson; The prince's pawns; The pious coquette; The two and Nelson; The beau and the lady; The wooing of Sir Peter Teazle.

Booklist 21:101 D '24

Reviewed by A. B. Maurice
Bookm 60:345 N '24 130w

Boston Transcript p4 D 20 '24 1450w

"The printing and binding are on an equality with the stories of which it is comprised. Both are impeccable." E. B. S.
+ Lit R p9 S 20 '24 200w

N Y Times p14 Ja 4 '25 850w

"'The Gallants' strengthens the author's claim to be recognized as a romantic biographer with a light and winsome touch." G. H. Carson
+ N Y Tribune p8 O 5 '24 470w

"Readers whose special delight is in tales of the grand old times will give joyful hail to 'The Gallants.'" E. W. Osborn
+ N Y World p7e S 14 '24 110w

"'The Gallants' is a good book, an especially good book for those with a taste for history, an excellent book for romancers who spin their webs from moonshine, and for specialist historians who reduce brilliant years to dull facts."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:167 O 4 '24 350w

Springf'd Republican p14 D 5 '24 600w

BARRY, DAVID S. Forty years in Washington. 349p $3.50 Little 973.8 United States—Politics and government. Statesmen, American. Presidents—United States
24-5963

The author's forty years in Washington extends from the Hayes administration thru that of Harding. During this time he has served as page in the Senate, and Washington correspondent of the New York Sun and the Providence Journal and he continues his observation of men and events from the position of sergeant-at-arms in the Senate. His reminiscences of presidents, cabinet members, senators and congressmen are lightened by many anecdotes.

Am Pol Sci R 18:655 Ag '24 50w

"By no means written in newspaper vein, being in fact more critical than witty, more historical than clever. These memoirs seem more valuable than some mirrors, and it is hoped that the sins of omission will be blotted out by the publication of a second volume."
+ — Bookm 59:749 Ag '24 180w

"Few books of reminiscence speak of so many men or give so much enlivening detail. The reader who enjoys politics, the student who looks for sidelights on history, will both read Mr. Barry's book with exhilaration and pleasure, and then go back through its pages to re-read much that has delighted them and to be sure that in their eagerness they have not missed anything. Perhaps then the reader will say to himself: 'I wish I could get hold of another book like that.'" S. L. Cook
+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 22 '24 1050w

"Mr. Barry is neither critic nor analyst. He has no pet theories to promulgate, no scheme of reform to advance and no remedy for the ills of the body politic. He simply tells a straightforward story with the skill of a trained raconteur and only as an incident sometimes narrates a bit of political history which is an addition to the literature of the subject. The book abounds in characterizations and felicitous anecdotes which one will sit up nights to read." W: E. Brigham
+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 22 '24 2650w

Cleveland p61 Jl '24

"He has done a splendid job of it, writing scores of fascinating footnotes to the history of our country." Al Weeks
+ Detroit News p13 Ap 13 '24 1000w

"The book is so packed with anecdotes, descriptions and recollections, that it is impossible to make a selection. Its judgments are practically all correct, and its descriptions are of great power and beauty without any effort at fine writing. It would be impossible to find a dull page." C: W. Thompson
+ Int Bk R p792 O '24 850w

Reviewed by Bruce Rae
N Y Times p13 Mr 30 '24 1800w

"Mr. Barry's knowledge is direct and authentic. His comment is marked by no artificial acidity or venom. He writes with the self-respect and comity of a man who instinctively respects the teeming confidences of politics and has no marked passion for scraping the paint off popular idols. If he is less sensational and malicious than his information might have allowed him to be, that is all the more to his credit as a memorialist and a gentleman." W: L. McPherson
+ N Y Tribune p22 Je 15 '24 600w

"His book is thoroughly readable in every page."
+ N Y World p6e Mr 16 '24 200w

"An entertaining, readable, and good-humored book."
+ Outlook 136:703 Ap 23 '24 60w

Pratt p36 summer '24

R of Rs 69:558 My '24 150w

St Louis p356 O '24

"One discovers that Mr Barry, while an agreeable raconteur, must not be taken too seriously. He slips now and then on dates, but perhaps he can charge those to the proofreader."
+ — Springf'd Republican p8 Jl 21 '24 350w

Wis Lib Bul 20:177 Jl '24

BARTLEY, MRS NALBRO ISADORAH. Judd & Judd. 365p $2 Putnam
24-4506

The story of the efforts of two young people to adjust themselves to the partnership of marriage. Blair Norcross and Anthony Judd married fresh from college, where they had been classmates specializing in the same subject—advertising. Blair found after marriage that her husband wanted her complete attention and did not care for her advice or even her interest in his business. For a while she devoted herself to her home and to fulfilling her husband's ideal of a wife, but it was with a smouldering resentment. Then for a time she broke away from home and entered the advertising field herself. Finally, after seventeen years of marriage and various vicissitudes, they drew up a new partnership of Judd & Judd, in which she was to be as vital in his business as he was to be in the home and with the children.

Booklist 20:337 Je '24

"The story is told in the easy manner of magazine fiction. It 'reads well,' altho at times the author becomes so interested in the brief she is holding that she neglects to dramatize her facts and becomes a bit wearying. However, she will reap applause from a great many members of her own sex who are looking eagerly for a champion." M. M. W.
+ — Int Bk R p904 N '24 350w

"Miss Bartley does not improve upon an annoyingly choppy style of writing."
— Lit R p858 Je 28 '24 180w

"Miss Bartley's comments on masculine and feminine psychology, and the modern home, are blurred by her slightly messianic exhortations on the text that the man should 'share home responsibilities and let the wife share business.' The reader begins to feel that what is really needed is a time limit on the endless joint debates on this subject in the Judd family. . . Her people, however, are authentic, and most of the situations carry a conviction of careful and sympathetic observation."

— + N Y Times p19 F 24 '24 750w

"So far as we can see it has borrowed nothing from the plots and pages of its predecessors. It is a story standing on its own interests, which are romantic and social as well as commercial." E. W. Osborn
+ N Y World p7e Mr 9 '24 420w

"If only the author could have forgotten that she was demonstrating a theory, she might have told a worth-while story. Blair and Tony, when they are not mouthpieces, are real people."
— + Outlook 136:440 Mr 12 '24 180w

BARTON, RALPH. Science in rhyme without reason. 147p il $1.75 Putnam
817 24-7237

"Professor J. Arthur Thomson's 'The Outline of Science' inspired Mr Barton to make use of certain poetical material overlooked by the prosier narrators of the world's adventures. Here is a garland of verse and pictures containing libelous portraits of the master scientists of the ages and many a gem of thought which never occurred to any of them. All the leading problems are rhythmically considered, from aeronautics, aesthetics and astronomy straight through to zoology."—N Y Tribune

Boston Transcript p6 Mr 15 '24 500w
N Y Tribune p26 Mr 11 '24 150w

BASTIAN, GEORGE C. Editing the day's news; an introduction to newspaper copyreading, headline writing, illustration, makeup, and general newspaper methods. 252p il $2.75 Macmillan
070 Journalism. Newspapers 24-147

"Twenty years' experience on the Chicago Daily Tribune has given Mr. Bastian the material for a course in copyreading and editing at the Medill School of Journalism at Northwestern University. From this series of lectures a textbook on newspaper methods has been prepared. There has always been opportunity for the aspiring newspaper worker to acquire knowledge of English composition from books, but little chance for him to learn its application to newspaper work outside of actual experience. Familiarity with the information contained in this book would have made the way easier for many a young reporter."—Boston Transcript

"A thoroughly practical treatise. There are many enlightening illustrations."
+ Am Pol Sci R 18:430 My '24 50w
Booklist 20:245 Ap '24

"While essentially a textbook, Mr. Bastian has written in an absorbing manner for anyone interested in how the day's news is prepared for the public and the volume ought to be both valuable and fascinating to that ever-increasing number of writers who yearn to make a livelihood on the daily press." F. C. B.
+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 22 '24 600w

"No previous book on newspaper editing of more than a score which have come before this reviewer excels the present one in clear exposition of the essentials of work on a daily newspaper desk."
+ Lit R p732 My 3 '24 110w

"A thoroughly practical book by an expert of the highest competence who has had broad experience in newspaper work and who possesses the faculty of explaining processes and stating theories deduced from practice."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 11 '24 600w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p581 S 18 '24 230w

BATCHELDER, SAMUEL FRANCIS. Bits of Harvard history. 323p $3.50 Harvard univ. press
378.73 Harvard university 24-2152

"Mr. Batchelder digs up a few skeletons which he subsequently hides in the closets of some venerable buildings in the Harvard Yard. Then he takes them from their places of concealment and puts flesh and blood on their white old bones. The result is a whimsical and valuable addition to accounts of manners and customs in early New England. Mr. Batchelder's book should not be limited to Harvard consumption. His bits of Harvard history have to do with livelier things than academic policies, theological schisms and enumeration of benefactions, for he has sketched the life of the college student, the godless as well as the pious, for nearly three hundred years of peace and war."—N Y Times

"A remarkable and utterly delightful volume." D: T. W. McCord
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 12 '24 2600w

"In these sketches of Harvard history the author has shown an ability for original research and a true antiquarian spirit, undulled by ponderousness that would appear to qualify him to widen his activities to depicting the social history of the Colonies." S: T. Williamson
N Y Times p13 F 17 '24 1900w

"Now and then Mr Batchelder's humor lapses into facetiousness. But there is never any lack of spirit or of mirth, and Mr Batchelder is to be thanked for having achieved so admirably this popularization of research into a phase of our social and academic history that has not been sufficiently explored."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7a F 10 '24 1100w

BATES, KATHERINE LEE. Little Robin Stay-behind, and other plays in verse for children. 240p $1.75 Woman's press
812 Children's plays 23-17717

"Twelve fanciful plays in verse, one appropriate for each month of the year. 'The bon bon tree,' which was published in the Churchman, is forty pages in length while the others range from fourteen to twenty-two."—Booklist

Booklist 20:221 Mr '24

"A book of imaginative plays combining beautiful fancifulness with an underlying strain of practical idealism. It illustrates more concretely than any book I have seen in a long time the perfect blending of moral lessons with the spirit of enjoyment." M. G. Bonner
+ Int Bk R p546 Je '24 300w

"It is truly delightful and should prove of great value to schools as well as families and small groups of children. Though simple in form, there is thought in each little drama, much information and considerable wealth of imagination. All are rhymed and are therefore easy to memorize."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 29 '24 350w

"Children will delight in the rhythm and teachers and librarians in the fact that they have found holiday material of merit."
+ Wis Lib Bul 20:149 Je '24

BATTYE, J. S. Western Australia; a history
2 from its discovery to the inauguration of the Commonwealth. 480p $8.35 Oxford [25s Milford]
994.1 Western Australia—History

"Mr. Battye is a faithful analyst of the State of which he is the Public Librarian. He tells its story from 1606 to 1900 in a businesslike manner, and with accurate references to his authorities, and no one who reads his book will be ignorant of the main outline of a remarkable piece of history. His chapters cover anything from one to nine years, and each of them deals with each of the important topics of the period it treats. Each Governor in turn comes up for judgment, and being, like the rest, susceptible to human frailty, is dismissed with a qualified eulogy which does not differ materially from one case to another."—New Statesman

BATTYE, J. S.—Continued

"Dr. Battye's richly freighted addition to the story of British colonial development will be welcomed." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p3 D 27 '24 750w

"His point of view is, naturally enough, that of a citizen of Perth rather than of Europe, and to interpret his story aright the reader will need a good deal of knowledge of contemporary history elsewhere. He will need, too, to be robust enough to fit together into connected stories the development of the various aspects of Mr. Battye's subject which are divided by him into strict chronological departments. On facts and figures the author is the safest of guides, but when he holds the scales between, for instance, the home and the colonial authorities, or the respective merits of successive governors, his grasp is not so firm or so convincing."
+ — New Statesman 24:supxiv N 8 '24 410w

"He tells, clearly and well, all that there is to be told; and his judgments on men and things are moderate and well-balanced. Among the appendices is a valuable note on the convict system as applied in Western Australia."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p723 N 13 '24 1500w

BAUDOUIN, CHARLES. Psychoanalysis and aesthetics; tr. from the French by Eden and Cedar Paul. 328p $4 Dodd [16s Allen & U.]
130 Psychoanalysis. Verhaeren, Emile. Symbolism in literature 24-9556

The book is a venture into psychoanalytical literary criticism, an application of psychoanalysis to the theory of esthetics as illustrated by a detailed study of Emile Verhaeren's works. M. Baudouin analyzes the many symbols encountered in the poems to find in them the expression of the poet's personal life and a guide into the intimate recesses of his soul.

"The translation, by Eden and Cedar Paul, is especially good, but the fact that it is French poetry to which the psychoanalytic method is applied furnishes an added difficulty to the English reader. Even without that he would find M. Baudouin's speculative flights somewhat giddy."
— + Bookm 59:744 Ag '24 170w

"His approach is commendably sympathetic, open and cautious. It is not likely that either the psychologist or the æsthetician will find his book a thoroughly expert and exhaustive work. That is not to be expected at this day, and, besides, M. Baudouin has popularized his subject somewhat. It is, nevertheless, a suggestive and stimulating study toward which the layman in these matters need have no fears in approaching." G. B. Munson
+ — Lit R p958 Ag 9 '24 600w

"The book is of importance, of vast importance, not because of Baudouin's analysis but because through the wealth of quotation, both in the original French and in the excellent rendering by the translators of the book, Eden and Cedar Paul, a host of readers may become acquainted with the poetry of Verhaeren. The Belgian poet is one of the most important of the moderns, a craftsman of great skill, profound. And he is but little known to English-speaking readers." P. A. Hutchison
+ N Y Times p6 Jl 20 '24 2100w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p156 Mr 13 '24 1200w

BAUDOUIN, CHARLES. Tolstoi the teacher; auth. tr. by Fred Rothwell. 218p $2.50 Dutton [6s 6d K. Paul]
B or 92 Tolstoi, Leo Nikolaievitch, count. Education

Tolstoy was intensely interested in education and it is the purpose of this book to follow the development of his educational theories. M. Baudouin examines Tolstoy's distinctively pedagogical writings and brings together from his writings memories of his own education, his masters and their methods and his observations of child life. He shows him too as head of the school for peasant children which he opened on the grounds of his estate and later, as the teacher of his own children. From all these sources Tolstoy's ideas on education are built up and applied.

Bookm 59:749 Ag '24 100w
Reviewed by A. I. Nazaroff
Int Bk R p593 Jl '24 440w
Reviewed by Arthur Ruhl
Lit R p820 Je 14 '24 600w

"This is not another sentimental effusion about the ideal universe as it might be run by realizing the gospel of Tolstoi. It is a serious study in pedagogy especially designed to meet the needs of the child. M. Baudouin, who is an educator in his own right, interprets Tolstoi the humanist and practical man."
+ Nation 118:617 My 28 '24 80w

"This book will interest many who are not especially interested in the psychological theories of the Nancy and Genevan schools of thought. It throws a light upon Tolstoi himself."
+ New Statesman 22:404 Ja 12 '24 200w

"An interesting study of a little-known phase of the many-sided intelligence of Tolstoi, a new view from a fresh viewpoint that will be attractive to students of educational matters and to students of Tolstoi's ideas. The book is written with true French clarity of thought and logical presentation, on a well-balanced plan that keeps constantly in view the important objective points of the author's argument."
+ N Y Times p23 My 4 '24 450w

"An astoundingly tragic and moving story. Part of its force and power are due to the utter simplicity of the telling, the total lack of literary ornament or conscious dramatic effect."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 5 '24 300w

BAX, CLIFFORD. Midsummer madness; a play for music. (Contemporary British dramatists) 100p $1.50 Stokes [3s 6d Benn]
822

This gay and inconsequent little comedy, though its characters have the old labels of Pantaloon and Harlequin and Columbine, is essentially modern in the story it tells and in its cynical manner.

"Should prove a boon to amateur organizations during the vacation season. I venture to prophecy that no summer resort will be proof against it this year, for it is a quite charming handling of the old figures of Pierrot and Columbine, with plenty of modern satire to bring them up to date." Theresa Helbrun
+ Lit R p932 Ag 2 '24 220w

"Mr. Clifford Bax's 'play for music' prattles along with a very accomplished gaiety, enclosed within a neat artifice of double construction. A very light and very, very sweet wine."
— + New Statesman 22:490 F 2 '24 100w
N Y Tribune p26 Ag 3 '24 30w

"Midsummer Madness cries out for a composer—and a composer with a blue pencil. It would make a very pretty little formal ballad-opera."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p36 Ja 17 '24 180w

"Not so very mad, at that, and crying loudly for the music for which it was written." R. G.
Theatre Arts Mo 8:348 My '24 140w

BAYNES, ERNEST HAROLD. The Sprite. 134p il $1.75 Macmillan
24-24369

The story of the love of a beautiful red fox for a man. The author found Sprite in a fox's den when he was just a tiny ball of tawny fur and took him home to make a study of him. For two years Sprite was a guest of the Baynes' household, and the author gives here an account of the little animal's development during that time. This is interestingly illustrated by photographs.

Booklist 21:156 Ja '25

"No lover of animals or of literature about them should miss this altogether charming account."
+ N Y Times p26 N 9 '24 380w
Springf'd Republican p7a N 30 '24 220w

BAZALGETTE, LEON. Henry Thoreau: bachelor of nature; tr. from the French by Van Wyck Brooks. 357p $3 Harcourt
B or 92 Thoreau, Henry David

"M. Bazalgette produces a life of Thoreau on about the same scale as his 'Whitman'; and it is promptly brought back to us in a racily American translation by Mr. Van Wyck Brooks. What the book aims to do is to popularize with the novel-reading public a dead man who in his lifetime showed small talent for popularity. M. Bazelgette's method has some very great merits and some crying defects. . . His direct references to Thoreau's own works are few and his direct citations from them are infrequent. It is clear, however, that he knows them very well indeed. He has devoured and digested them, journals and all. Having thus taken possession of his author, he proceeds in the historical present to talk about him and to him, from the cradle to the grave."—N Y Tribune

"Thanks to an extraordinary faculty for divination, as well as capacity for assimilation, he has fused the details in Thoreau's books, journals and letters and in those of his contemporaries into a narrative that is not only coherent, but, on the whole, convincing and even alluring. As a tour de force, no less than as an example of patient, painstaking labor, the work is worthy of warm commendation." A. F. Sanborn
+ — Boston Transcript p2 N 1 '24 3850w

"Bazalgette has avoided making this biography erudite. He writes in a simple colloquial style. Yet the book has a rare literary charm." A. Ende
+ Lit R p951 Ag 9 '24 820w

"In the first extended work on Thoreau by a Frenchman and brilliantly translated by Van Wyck Brooks, M. Bazalgette has written of him lyrically in a vivid style chiefly as a poet. Mr. Bazalgette has wiped his plate clean and taken a brilliant impression. This may not be good biography in the academic sense. But it is lively and picturesque and 'mighty good reading' in the bargain."
+ N Y Times p2 D 7 '24 2150w

"So far as I have been able to check it, M. Bazalgette's account of what 'Henry' said and did is adequately comprehensive and very trustworthy indeed. He is always vivid and lively; in the earlier part of the book he is fatiguingly lively. His sustained dithyrambic harangue gives a kind of dancing animation and the effect of sociability, and even of garrulity, to a laconic tight-lipped man who seldom danced and who was addicted to solitude and to silence." S. P. Sherman
+ — N Y Tribune p1 D 21 '24 3300w

"Even the most devout student and lover of Thoreau will soon fall victim to the charm and grace of this Frenchman's style and cease to care where Thoreau ends and Bazalgette takes up the thread. For the author has kneaded his own supple style into the simple direct language of 'Walden,' and the famous Journals."
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 5 '25 980w

BEACH, LEWIS. Ann Vroome. 130p $1.50 Little 812 24-6036

"A play in which the younger generation is held down by the dying or dead hand of its elders. Ann Vroome gives up her fiancé and her life to care for her aging mother and father, and when she is released finally by their death, and goes to the man she dreamed was waiting for her, as she has been waiting for him, it is only to find that he is to be married on the morrow to another and younger girl."—N Y Times

"Let us say that 'Ann Vroome' in execution is less good than in its promise, that it has excellent moments and one memorable scene, and that these latter qualities will make it worth reading."
+ — Boston Transcript p4 Je 11 '24 440w

"There is some good characterization in the play; and the author is more or less successful in his objectification at times. 'Ann Vroome' does not measure up to Beach's 'A Square Peg.'"
— + N Y Times p5 Mr 23 '24 230w

"The dramatist has treated his material with great sincerity and technical ability, particularly in his use of the element of suspense. The dialogue has a crisp colloquial quality that leaves nothing to be desired from the standpoint of naturalness. Mr. Beach deserves commendation for the restraint with which he handles tense situations. A worthy contribution to contemporary drama."
+ Outlook 137:400 Jl 9 '24 130w

BEACH, LEWIS. Goose hangs high. 158p $1.50 Little 812 24-6037

A drama of American home life which has for its theme the conflict between the older and younger generation and which brings out the failure of both in their relations to each other. Bernard and Lois Ingals had made a charming home for their children and sacrificed everything to them but their devotion was repaid with selfishness and a callous disregard. The hurt became acute when the youngsters came home from college for the Christmas holidays bringing with them the most objectionable ways of the jazz age and using the home, where such loving preparations had been made for their coming, simply as headquarters for a hectic social program. But when unexpected reverses came to Bernard Ingals the young people had a chance to show those qualities of courage, honesty and initiative which the younger generation claims for itself, and the parents had a revelation of their own failure toward their children.

Lit R p729 My 3 '24 380w
Wis Lib Bul 20:175 Jl '24

BEALS, CARLETON. Mexico; an interpretation. 280p $2.50 Huebsch
917.2 Mexico 24-3473

Mr Beals's qualifications for writing of Mexico include several years' residence in the country, during the Carranza administration and again during the régimes of Obregón and De la Huerta. He has taught in the Mexican schools and for three months before the fall of Carranza was employed as instructor to members of his staff. He sketches in the background of Mexican civilization and the contributions to it of Indian and Spaniard. He traces the rise of Mexican nationality and the threads of which the social fabric is woven—proletariat, middle class, aristocracy, church, military class, women. Lastly, he considers the part the foreigner has played in Mexico's evolution, the rôle of American capital and the diplomacy of the United States government in Mexico.

Am Econ R 14:299 Je '24 40w
Booklist 20:334 Je '24
Reviewed by S. F. Reavis
Int Bk R p529 Je '24 60w
Reviewed by Osgood Hardy
Lit R p594 Mr 15 '24 420w

"To point out that a few of Mr. Beals's brilliant portraits seem slightly overcolored, that his American colony pictures its worst and to some extent its departed elements, is not to alter my judgment that on the whole his book is an extraordinary achievement in artistic photography, shrewd analysis, and masterly condensation. It has lifted the steadily rising level of contemporary literature about Mexico several notches." Ernest Gruening

BEALS, CARLETON—Continued

+ — Nation 117:660 D 5 '23 800w

Reviewed by J. G. McDonald
New Repub 40:231 O 29 '24 1900w

R of Rs 69:334 Mr '24 80w

"It is the best current book on Mexico. This is due not only to the care with which the work was done, the genuine sympathy with the people of Mexico, the artist's sense of color, the broad historical perspective and economic insight—but also to the fact that Mr. Beals has tramped on foot all over Mexico, that he almost died of thirst in the Durango Mountains, that he lived with the Indians, ate their food and learned both to love and to understand them as human beings." F. T.

+ Survey 52:251 My 15 '24 240w

BEARD, CHARLES AUSTIN. Administration and politics of Tokyo; a survey and opinions. 187p $2.50 Macmillan

352.052 Municipal government. Tokyo—Politics and government 23-18831

"Among the assets of Tokyo before the earthquake was a newly organized Institute for Municipal Research and a group of well informed municipal administrators keenly alert for any help they could get in dealing with the city's confused political organization and sadly underdeveloped facilities. At the invitation of Viscount Goto, then mayor, Professor Beard spent the winter and spring of 1922-23 there, surveying the government of Tokyo and cooperating in an effort to broadcast better municipal thinking. The result of the survey is a brief, simple, plain-speaking handbook which presents the city's outstanding problems in the light of American and European experience—particularly in relation to the standards worked out by the New York Bureau of Municipal Research—and makes some well-considered suggestions as to betterment. Though its publication was suspended at the time of the earthquake, there proved to be an insistent demand from Tokyo for copies, and it was therefore issued while Professor Beard was again in Japan at Goto's invitation to give more immediate aid in the task of reconstruction."—Survey

"Every student of municipal administration will find this an interesting book. It was sent to the press, however, before the occurrence of the earthquake and hence does not deal with the present reconstruction program."

+ Am Pol Sci R 18:428 My '24 100w

"The extensive knowledge which Dr. Beard here brings to bear upon his problems, his frequent comparisons of Tokio with American and European cities and his clear statement of principles of municipal administration, give the book a value which far transcends the immediate subject indicated by the title." K. F. Geiser

+ Ann Am Acad 114:162 Jl '24 540w

R of Rs 69:223 F '24 180w

"As an educational tool now being used to further the intelligent reconstruction of the city's life it is a notable addition to municipal literature; but aside from that it bears so directly on underlying problems in all great cities that it will be of wide interest here too. More than one American mayor and constable would read with profit the two or three pages which are devoted to a temperate discussion of the role of the police in controlling public expression of opinion." G. S.

+ Survey 51:417 Ja 15 '24 270w

BEARD, HARRIET ELIZABETH. Safety first for school and home. 223p il $1.28 Macmillan

614.8 Accidents—Prevention 24-2878

"Deals with the principles that underlie the prevention of accidents in our streets and homes, and gives practical suggestions. The last half of the book outlines courses in safety education from the kindergarten through the eighth grade and has a First Aid chapter of especial value to teachers and leaders. The author is supervisor of safety education in the Detroit public schools."—Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 20:327 Je '24

"It is valuable for its concrete suggestions, and it presents in simple form a discussion of the causes of accidents. The book, however, lacks unity both of purpose and of material." E. G: Payne

+ — El School J 25:66 S '24 580w

J Home Econ 16:274 My '24 70w

Wis Lib Bul 20:122 My '24

BECHDOLT, FREDERICK RITCHIE. Tales of old-timers. 367p il $2 Century

978 West—History 24-20378

True tales of early days in the West, chiefly in New Mexico and Texas, when the spirit of adventure was high. They are gathered from many sources, from old-timers who witnessed the events described and from old histories. Contents: The warriors of the Pecos; The warriors of the Canadian; The law-bringers; Tascosa; Adobe walls; Red blood and white; The first cowboy; The forgotten expedition to Santa Fé; The Texans; The most consummate villain; Cassidy and the wild bunch; The last of the open ranges.

Booklist 21:110 D '24

Cleveland p88 N '24

Reviewed by E. A. Niles
Ind 113:374 N 8 '24 150w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
N Y Tribune p8 S 28 '24 750w

"If you want to revive your boyhood interest in cowboys and rustlers and bad men, purchase Mr. Bechdolt's book and take your West in the raw." M. M.

+ N Y World p8e S 7 '24 230w

Sat R of Lit 1:232 O 25 '24 360w

BECK, JAMES MONTGOMERY. Constitution of the United States; yesterday, today—and tomorrow? new rev ed 352p $3 Doran

342.73 United States—Constitution 24-18344

The book is an enlargement and revision of the edition of 1923, which had its origin in a series of lectures delivered in Gray's Inn Hall, London. In this edition the lecture form has been eliminated and considerable material added.

Reviewed by D. S. Muzzey
Bookm 60:92 S '24 700w

"That it is vividly written, revealing the scholar as well as the student of jurisprudence and politics, will go without the saying for all who have read the author's previous deliverances in these fields or heard him 'talk out' on them in public meeting." Edmund Noble

+ Boston Transcript p3 Jl 19 '24 1400w

Boston Transcript p5 D 31 '24 660w

"I do not at the moment recall any similar treatment of this vital subject that in combined brilliance and learning, in so compact a form, equals this engaging narrative." A. J. Beveridge

+ Int Bk R p114 Ja '25 3850w

"The essential parts of the book can be read in a few hours, and it may well take a place as an indispensable work of reference not in the libraries of lawyers only, but in those of intelligent citizens, for whom it is primarily intended." D: J. Hill

+ Lit R p18 O 18 '24 2000w

"While Mr. Beck tells the story in an interesting fashion, and contrives to include a mass of personal incident which makes his pages easy reading, he has nothing to add, simply because there is nothing of significance to add to the facts which historians have already set in order." W: MacDonald

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 3 '24 2550w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p835 D 11 '24 1050w

BECK, L. ADAMS. Treasure of Ho. 303p $2 Dodd
24-9127

The hero, John Mallerdean, an English customs house officer in China, beats a retreat from the intolerable heat of a Peking summer to a little lost Buddhist temple beyond the western hills. There by marvel of Buddhist lore a strange vision of the past is revealed to him, and the tragic end of an ancestor of his, a pioneer trader in China, and his lovely wife. This earlier Mallerdean had left a daughter behind him and rich treasure. John Mallerdean sets out to find both. The outbreak of the Boxer uprising complicates the quest, which leads thru curious and daring adventure to a successful finish.

"Buried treasure, old animosities and feuds, sinister intrigue, and adroit circumvention make the tale of 'The Treasure of Ho' an exciting one, while Mr. Beck's power of description and intimate knowledge of customs of the land enhance its interest greatly."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 11 '24 180w
Cleveland p51 Jl '24
Lit R p873 Jl 5 '24 260w

"With running drama and plenty of thrills the book comes to a happy close. The wisdom of the East is scattered through its colloquial telling."
+ N Y Times p9 My 4 '24 650w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Wyman
N Y Tribune p25 Je 1 '24 650w

"A romance both brilliant and dignified." H. W. Boynton
+ Outlook 137:442 Jl 16 '24 340w

BECKER, MAY LAMBERTON (MRS LAMBERTON-BECKER). Reader's guide book. 374p $2.75 Holt
028 Books and reading. Bibliography
24-20386

Here is brought together in permanent form the help for readers which under the title of "Reader's Guide" has made such a successful column in the Literary Review of the New York Evening Post and is now continuing its usefulness in the new Saturday Review of Literature. The questions asked by readers cover a wide range and the answers include helpful lists of books on all sorts of subjects. Mrs Becker dedicates her book in gratitude to the librarians of America. They in their turn will bless her.

"Aside from its informative value it is good reading and lures one on."
+ Booklist 21:59 N '24
N Y Times p20 S 21 '24 340w
St Louis p400 D '24

"The book should be in every library that is active and gracious enough to deserve its title. And in spite of its name, which will condemn it to those unfortunate and self-confident ones who are so boldly ignorant as to travel abroad and yet condemn Mr. Baedeker—it is a book that will bear reading. It is not to be picked up for relaxation, but for refreshing one's desire for knowing. Find in it a topic on which you feel that, as a constant and interested reader, you are well informed, and you will quickly discover that after all you are not up with the times even on your favorite subject." J: C. Dana
+ Sat R of Lit 1:226 O 25 '24 1000w

BECKMAN, THEODORE N. Credits and collections in theory and practice. 465p il $4 McGraw [2]
658.88 Credit. Collecting of accounts
24-15657

"Intended for the college student and the business man. Aims to provide exact, definite, and practical information, and to cover the entire field of credits and collections, both foreign and domestic. Gives special attention to mercantile credit."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:602 D '24

BEDELL, MRS MARY (CREHORE). Modern gypsies. 262p $2.50 Brentano's
917.3 United States—Description and travel
24-10508

"A vivacious account of a 12,000-mile motor trip which encircled the country from Florida to Northern New York, via the Southwest, the Pacific Coast and the Northwest. The writer had on the whole a pleasant experience, with a small number of mishaps, and describes the trip agreeably."—N Y World

"It is all told pleasantly with many anecdotes of small things, and should prove excellent geography material for the inquiring mind."
+ Boston Transcript p5 My 31 '24 320w

"Written in a simple, straightforward style and with a good sense of selection."
+ N Y Times p23 Je 22 '24 360w

BEDFORD, CLAYTON W., and WINKELMANN, HERBERT A. Systematic survey of rubber chemistry. 385p $7 Chemical catalog co.
016.678 Rubber—Bibliography 24-120

"A bibliography, with copious abstracts, of the entire literature of rubber chemistry and closely allied subjects; thoroughly indexed by authors and subjects, and completely cross-referenced: together with a patent index, and introductory chapters summarizing the present status of rubber chemistry."—Subtitle

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:198 Ap '24

BEDFORD-JONES, HENRY JAMES O'BRIEN. Star woman. 293p $2 Dodd
24-20724

This is a tale of the conflict between the English and French to gain control of the fur trade of the Hudson Bay territory. The story is centered around Hal Crawford, an adventurer, in quest of the Star woman, a mystical and powerful person wearing on her breast a magnificent star of silver and turquoise. Crawford's journey is beset with perils every step of the way but he finally reaches his destination and finds a beautiful young girl in whom he recognizes his ideal—the Star woman. In the preface the author gives the sources from which the historical settings and events have been taken.

Boston Transcript p3 S 20 '24 500w
Cleveland p85 N '24

"All the stuff of adventure is here. Historical facts support it. Good writing adds beauty of word and of scene. Could an adventure-lover ask for more? Not so far as action goes, perhaps; but there is a certain unreality in the characters, due to the author's bookish style, which makes one think that a cruder tale might be more alive." Stella Heilbrunn
+ — Int Bk R p63 D '24 300w

"All in all, it is one of the outstanding novels of the year."
+ Lit R p9 S 6 '24 380w

"It is sufficiently exciting and sufficiently bloody to satisfy even the most avid lover of melodrama, and yet its historical basis combined with its vivid descriptions of the geographical setting should give it a following among those readers to whom mere melodrama does not appeal."
— + N Y Times p24 S 14 '24 600w

BEDFORD-JONES, H: J. O.—Continued

N Y World p7e Ag 31 '24 130w

Outlook 139:36 Ja 7 '25 80w

"Perhaps the chief source of annoyance to the reader is Mr. Bedford-Jones's style, which is at times irritating in the extreme. However, his admirers will doubtless find much to please them in his latest work."

— + Sat R of Lit 1:170 O 4 '24 200w

BEEBE, WILLIAM. Galapagos, world's end. 443p il $9 Putnam

591.98 Natural history—Galapagos islands. Galapagos islands—Description and travel 24-4777

"This is a popular history of the expedition on the yacht Noma taken last year for the New York Zoölogical Society. It lasted over two months from New York to New York again, but the members of the party were actually ashore on the Galápagos less than one hundred hours. Their stay was cut short because they had the same difficulty about drinking water which has tormented every voyager to these equatorial islands since the sixteenth century. But into those hundred hours they crowded more strange and fascinating experiences than most of us who stay at home see in our whole lives. Ruth Rose has contributed an excellent chapter upon the discoverers, explorers, and visitors to this forlorn archipelago—a tale of pirates, naval officers, scientists, turtle-hunters, and convicts."—Outlook

"Altogether this chronicle of the World's End of the last and loneliest islands in the high seas, ranks as one of Mr. Beebe's most fascinating books." S: Scoville, jr.

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Je '24 660w

Booklist 20:295 My '24

"Here is a volume that is not only beautiful to behold and interesting to skim, but readable every inch of the way. It is filled with passages of romantic beauty of phrase." J. F.

+ Bookm 59:457 Je '24 400w

Cleveland p36 My '24

Ind 112:210 Ap 12 '24 470w

Reviewed by C: de Kay

Int Bk R p268 Mr '24 4000w

"Here is a travel book that is also both scientific and literary in the best sense, and, furthermore, made up with as excellent illustration and care for accuracy as the best scientific report." H: S. Canby

+ Lit R p592 Mr 15 '24 560w

"Galapagos is a glorious book. It is high romance, exact science, fascinating history, wild adventure. One wishes that the expedition had lasted more than its two and a half months and that the scarcity of water had not forced the Noma back to Panama and shortened the actual time on the islands." L: S. Gannett

+ Nation 118:sup443 Ap 16 '24 800w

"A remarkable volume, remarkable not only as regards subject, but in the treatment of that subject, on which Mr. Beebe and his collaborators are to be congratulated. Without any sacrifice of scientific exactitude they have produced a book that holds the interest of even the non-naturalist from beginning to end, and at the same time is a valuable contribution to zoological and biological literature." Frances Pitt

+ Nation and Ath 35:124 Ap 26 '24 860w

Reviewed by G. K. Noble

New Repub 38:319 My 14 '24 220w

+ New Statesman 24:50 Ap 19 '24 230w

"More than eighty admirable photographs and six colored plates of lizards, snakes, spiders and fish painted with astounding skill and perfection by Miss Isabel Cooper, add much to the excellent make-up of the book." N: Roosevelt

+ N Y Times p1 F 24 '24 1950w

Reviewed by L. F. Crandall

+ N Y Tribune p17 Mr 16 '24 1600w

"Since this account is written by a man who combines the very unusual qualities of the knowledge of the scientist, the sight of the observer, and the peculiar ability of the literary artist, it is a matter of doubt whether any more interesting book will be published in America during this year. It is difficult to write about the book without becoming merely breathless and exclamatory. Beebe cannot be dull, conventional, nor dreary." E. L. Pearson

+ Outlook 136:399 Mr 5 '24 850w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:380 Jl '24

Pratt p19 summer '24

St Louis p340 O '24

"The book's main interest is, of course, biological. Here its success is undoubted. The layman will find it an exciting and interesting piece of natural history, the professional biologist a most stimulating introduction to all kinds of problems. Add that it is well written and most beautifully produced and illustrated, and you have the assurance that it is one of the most attractive books on nature and exploration which has been published of recent years." J. S. Huxley

+ Spec 132:882 My 31 '24 1350w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p235 Ap 17 '24 600w

Wis Lib Bul 20:173 Jl '24

"A book beautiful in its typography and illustration, and dramatic, romantic and, withal, scientific in its writing." Vernon Kellogg

+ Yale R n s 14:171 O '24 600w

BEER, GEORGE LOUIS. African questions at the Paris peace conference; with papers on Egypt, Mesopotamia, and the colonial settlement; ed. with introd., annexes, and additional notes by Louis Herbert Gray. 628p $6 Macmillan

940.314 Africa—Colonization. European war, 1914-1919—Territorial questions. Germany—Colonies. Peace conference, 1919 23-15285

For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

"The best guide that the reviewer has ever read for the student of the history of Africa during the last half-century. To the historian, Mr. Beer's book affords access to information concerning problems and events of recent African history, digested and impartially stated, that could not have been accessible before except by wide and laborious readings." H. A. Gibbons

+ Am Hist R 29:603 Ap '24 480w

"It is sound; it is illuminating; and it is a safe and convenient guide to problems of government, internal and international, in Africa." H. A. Gibbons

+ Am Pol Sci R 18:642 Ag '24 480w

"Mr. Beer's admirably compiled and documented memoranda deserve to be read, by others than professed students, as models of clear, detailed, and impartial discussion on a host of difficult and contentious problems. As an American, Mr. Beer approaches African questions with complete detachment; yet his studies had cured him both of facile idealism and of a predominantly commercial outlook." A. E. Zimmern

+ Nation and Ath 34:464 D 22 '23 900w

Reviewed by A. E. Zimmern

New Repub 37:235 Ja 23 '24 950w

Pol Sci Q 39:361 Je '24 300w

"To English readers the volume is of particular interest and importance; for we have here from an impartial neutral observer a general survey of the actual facts concerning the rule of Western races in Africa, including, as any such survey necessarily must do, a judgment on the relative merits of the system pursued by this and other countries."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p230 Ap 17 '24 750w

BEER, THOMAS. Sandoval; a romance of bad manners. 219p $2 Knopf 24-12286

"The New York of 1870 is its background. The action covers a few vivid days in the life of Thorold Gaar, a seventeen-year-old boy, who tells the story. Though he is the son of a newly rich Civil War profiteer he has in him the making of a sincere gentleman. In his vague groping for an ideal he finds the embodiment of virile manhood in his reticent brother Christian. A mysterious, fascinating scoundrel from the far South, Christian Coty de Sandoval, comes to agitate the hearts of society for a moment, and to unearth for his own gain a shady business deal of Civil War times, in which the boys' father was presumably implicated. Christian is already the victim of an empty love affair and Sandoval's revelations, while working his own destruction, complete the disillusionment of the two brothers. We take leave of them as they are setting sail from New York to seek their escape in fabulous California. The scene shifts from Dobbs Ferry to New York and the gay theatrical whirl, with Clara Morris starring at Daly's Theatre, and again to the haunts of Boss Tweed and his kind and the life of the docks." —Cleveland

Booklist 21:25 O '24

"Thomas Beer's 'Sandoval' is so well written, so sparkling, so subtle, so filled with quiet humor, that it is difficult to appraise it in any terms except those of most elaborate adulation. He writes better than Joseph Hergesheimer; his innuendos, while not of the same sort, are as clever as Aldous Huxley's; and for a certain impudent swagger Carl Van Vechten can scarcely be mentioned in the same breath with him. . . His technique is sure and he is a superb stylist."

+ Bookm 59:589 Jl '24 380w

Cleveland p50 Jl '24

"Something in its imaginativeness, its saltness, its quiet strength, pushes through a plot that would otherwise hardly even arrest the reader's attention. And back of this style there is the impact of the creative spirit, the heard call of a far horizon." Mary Siegrist

— + Int Bk R p673 Ag '24 480w

Reviewed by J. L. Ford

Int Bk R p786 O '24 150w

"The story which serves as an excuse for his mise en scène is melodramatic and trivial enough, but nowhere are his documents in evidence, and he moves with quiet ease through forgotten scenes which he conjures up with a casual air and none of the portentousness of the historical romancer of the old school." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 119:125 Jl 30 '24 850w

New Repub 39:280 Jl 30 '24 100w

"Mr. Beer, being an excellent craftsman, does not let his background run away with his book. Instead of being the chief end it serves as an accompanying obbligato to a series of vivid characters who are moved deftly through the plot that is simple and yet extremely absorbing. . . In 'Sandoval' he has written a better book than 'The Fair Rewards,' which was in itself a surprisingly fine novel."

+ N Y Times p9 My 25 '24 800w

Reviewed by Gerald Gould

Sat R 138:527 N 22 '24 400w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p598 S 25 '24 300w

Wis Lib Bul 20:178 Jl '24

BEGBIE, HAROLD (GENTLEMAN WITH A DUSTER, pseud.). Windows of Westminster. 193p il $2.50 Putnam

923.2 Statesmen, British. Great Britain—Politics and government 24-28452

"A gentleman with a duster" here gives us ten portraits of Conservative statesmen. Contents: Introduction to the American edition; Introduction; Mr. Stanley Baldwin; Sir Robert Horne; Mr. Edward Wood; Mr. Neville Chamberlain; The Duke of Northumberland; Sir Philip Lloyd-Greame; Sir Douglas Hogg; Captain Algernon Fitzroy; Sir William Joynson-Hicks; Mr. Oliver Stanley; Conclusion.

Booklist 21:147 Ja '25

Reviewed by W. K. Kelsey

Detroit News p20 N 30 '24 380w

Ind 113:521 D 13 '24 900w

"In spite of the fact that 'The Windows of Westminster' indicates its partisanship at every turn, the book is clearly of moment in grouping together in short, accessible form pen-pictures of the notables of the party which won so sweepingly in Great Britain. If the party returned to power should write history, as it has every likelihood of doing, American readers will be glad to have this excellent 'Who's Who.'"

+ — N Y Times p7 N 9 '24 1750w

"By far the best of the ten sketches of human life and character printed here is that devoted to the present Prime Minister, Mr. Stanley Baldwin. It is a thoughtful, fair and intimate portrait of a man of whom curiously little is known by the outside world." Marie Belloc-Lowndes

+ N Y Tribune p3 D 14 '24 900w

"Brilliant characterizations, sparkling phrases, illuminating sidelights, but the sentiments! It is painful, sometimes to find oneself thinking that we were still reading Sinclair Lewis's recent interview with George Babbitt in The Nation." C. G. Bowers

+ — N Y World p8e N 2 '24 1450w

Outlook 138:513 N 26 '24 30w

"'A Gentleman with a Duster' is evidently not without prejudices. But his main purpose is to be trenchant and interesting. He is—but in varying degrees."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7a N 30 '24 1050w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p467 Jl 24 '24 100w

BEHIND the scenes in politics; a confession. 308p $2.50 Dutton

324 Politics, Practical. United States—Politics and government 24-16311

The anonymous author writes with zest about the game of American politics which he loves and considers the 'greatest game in the world.' His book is written to show that the game is simpler and more sensible than is popularly supposed. He deals chiefly with the psychology of politics, the art of political strategy, campaign oratory, candidates in victory and defeat, political reformers, politicians' wives and their capacity for making or marring their husbands' careers. He is a Republican in politics who took part in the Bull Moose campaign of 1912 and he draws his most admiring illustrations from Roosevelt and Harding.

Bookm 60:235 O '24 100w

Boston Transcript p1 Jl 26 '24 380w

"The book is highly readable, but it is neither authoritative nor essentially important." C. W.

+ — Lit R p971 Ag 16 '24 100w

"It is full of keen-sighted observations about the interior of politics. He does not reveal any great secrets, but he makes the politician game so clear that even a man entirely ignorant of it can be edified and instructed and get a better idea of the way these things are done than from a hundred high-brow expositions. The author drives home every point with some thoroughly apposite anecdote, and his style is swifter and livelier than that of any ten novelists you might name." C: W. Thompson

+ N Y Times p5 Jl 6 '24 1200w

Outlook 138:215 O 8 '24 50w

"These confessions of a political manager make no very sensational revelations, but they do offer some suggestive explanations of things that have happened in American political life within the past twenty years. The author makes some clear and penetrating comment on the methods pursued in the typical election campaign."

+ — R of Rs 70:223 Ag '24 60w

St Louis p370 N '24

BEITH, JOHN HAY (IAN HAY, JUNIOR SUB, pseuds.). "The liberry." 78p il $1 Houghton
24-19413

This story has been published in a previous collection of short stories by the author, entitled "The lucky number." It is the story of an old man who has established a reputation for scholarship and every night entertains his neighbors with "readings" and discourses from his library—when in reality he can neither read nor write. A remarkable memory enables him to repeat long extracts which had been read aloud to him.

"It is the kind of story no one can speak of harshly. It is so defenseless a fragment of life, that after reading to the final page you wonder if that dashing Major Beith really did write it after all. Second thoughts are best. No one else could have done it, with a flavor that was Dickens, and an atmosphere that was purely Ian Hay."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 13 '24 160w

"A capital gift book—and it carries a story that is charming and pungent with character. Charm and pungency may seem incongruous, but they express the whimsy of this book and the rich, emphatic flavor of its personalities."

+ Lit R p970 Ag 16 '24 100w

"A quaint, wistful, half comic, half pathetic idea whose essential improbability the author cleverly disguises."

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 17 '24 350w

Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 25 '24 160w

BEITH, JOHN HAY (IAN HAY, JUNIOR SUB, 2 pseuds.). Shallow end. 276p il $3 Houghton [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

914.21 London—Social life and customs

Believing that "authors are all for getting well below the surface nowadays" Mr. Hay in this volume sticks to the shallow end which he says "is often much deeper than we think." In these twenty amusing essays he depicts the gay and frivolous side of London life—the midnight revels at a cabaret show, the cinema, the law courts, Piccadilly Circus in the evening, auction parties and children's parties. He also speaks, with a sly wink, of America and its prohibition law, its shows and electric signs. The book is illustrated in color by Lewis Baumer.

"Major Beith goes far to correct the impression that the British are a solemn race. Perhaps it is because of his own inimitable style, or perhaps it is because he, too, enjoys the things of which he writes. But certainly the net result is a conception of a people who do have a good time in their off hours."

+ Lit R p10 D 27 '24 380w

"In its way, work like this is a tour de force; it looks easy enough, but the degree of skill required is prodigious. Essentially its attractiveness lies in the presentation of the well-known and obvious; this, with just the right admixture of laughter not without a dash of wisdom, gives exactly the average substitute for life that the average dreamer in each of us craves." J. F.

+ New Statesman 24:supviii D 6 '24 270w

N Y World p8e D 21 '24 180w

Outlook 138:654 D 17 '24 50w

"Mr. Ian Hay frankly warns his readers that his present book deals in jocular mood with light subjects, for this surely cannot be called an unfair definition of his descriptive title. Many of his little studies are very funny but it must be owned that 'shallow' was an unfortunate word for him to use in connexion with this collection."

Spec 133:750 N 15 '24 80w

BELL, PEARL (DOLES) (MRS. GEORGE H. BELL). Sandra. 328p $2 Watt
24-4011

"Sandra Waring has been, when the story opens, for sixteen years the deeply beloved wife of an architect whose rather slow-moving, wholesome, dependable mind does not always keep up with the facile gymnastics of hers or understand its desire to explore all manner of corners in life and emotion. She wants to know all that life can tell her. But there is another being within her that protests against all this urge toward freedom, a self that tells her that real happiness is to be found only in the love of her husband and the content of her home. But the Sandra side wins and she leaves, burning her bridges behind her, and plunges into the life of the woman who has freed herself from all restraints. For three years she rushes from one excitement to another, spending most of the time in Europe. Finally she begins to realize that the years are taking her allurements and that nothing but a downward path lies before her. Nor does her other self, the home-loving being within her, ever give her peace from its reproaches. And so presently she finds herself facing a blank wall."—N Y Times

"The author has lacked something in psychological insight, something more in imaginative vision, and still more in that innate power which enables the novelist to compel his characters to make their story. Sandra Waring's story is made for her by the author and she merely walks through its predestined ways. Nevertheless, the book shows not a little cleverness and engaging quality."

— + N Y Times p9 My 11 '24 450w

"The author is seemingly trying to be honest, but the book does not ring true. Feminine readers will resent the implication that in Sandra their soul secrets are revealed. Souls cannot be labeled and docketed in that way." Elizabeth Wyman

— N Y Tribune p24 Jl 13 '24 900w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p7e Mr 16 '24 300w

BELL, RALCY HUSTED. Mystery of words. 215p $1.75 Hinds

401 Language and languages. Words
24-2503

Part one of this study of linguistics treats of the origin of words, of the laws that govern them, of their characteristics and relationships, of the faculty of speech and, in general, of the life of language and the tendencies of words. Part two considers words in their simpler aspects, as instruments of daily use, and their power and fitness.

"Compresses much valuable information within a few pages."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 5 '24 320w

"Mr. Bell writes, most of the time, with a good deal of imagination. But unfortunately it is rather apt to lead him into vagueness of meaning."

— + N Y Times p20 F 10 '24 380w

BELL, VIOLET COLQUHOUN. Blindness of heart. 344p $2 Harcourt [7s 6d J. Cape]
24-3790

"'And now we come to Ann.' Those six words on Page 27 keep us from throwing the book into the refuse pile. Heretofore the story has dealt mainly with Camille and Madeleine, the hopelessly immoral daughters of a hopelessly immoral mother. But coming to Ann—there, if you please, is a difference. Ann is Irish and twenty and unsophisticated and loyal to the very soul of her. . . Ann is induced to speak to Flower Montgomery, the middle-aged brother of those worthless sisters, and the consequences run all the way through our book. . . Camille and Madeleine continue in our pages, but after the wedding the story becomes essentially that of Ann and Flower and, eventually, of Michael. Ann and the newcomer know quickly of their love [but] . . . for a long time their love is joined to a perfect loyalty to Flower Montgomery. Is it a matter of truth, or only a concession to the promptings of modern fiction, that so amazing a loyalty must have its breaking point under an overwhelming temptation?"—N Y World

---

"It is a story of some faults, but of many and appealing virtues. The author possesses both power and wisdom. She criticises her generation scathingly but into her criticism she has the insight to insert a gleam of brightness in the figures of Ann and Michael." D. L. M.
+ — Boston Transcript p4 Ja 26 '24 1000w
Cleveland p24 Mr '24

"There are some good things in Violet Colquhoun Bell's new novel, a few bits of clever comment, several well-drawn characters, but they are all more or less submerged under a flood of words."
— + Int Bk R p349 Ap '24 290w

"The intimate and charming manner of the author lulls the reader into complete forgetfulness of technique. For all its seeming informality and spontaneity there is not the slightest doubt in one's mind that 'Blindness of Heart' is a product of considerable care and cunning. It is the very best that the highest order of conventional light novel can show; and by the word 'light' one does not mean to suggest that the book ever aproaches the fatuousness of magazine fiction in treating a subject that is the favorite one of the 'fictioneers.' One means that it is wise and perceptive without being in the least pretentious to wisdom or extraordinary perspicacity." E. T. Booth
+ — Lit R p503 F 9 '24 320w

Reviewed by A. B. Parsons
Nation 118:402 Ap 4 '24 460w

"The book is unequal, and reads as if at least three persons had collaborated to produce it—a moralist, a sentimentalist, and one of those remarkable old ladies, whose acidity, 'plain-speaking,' and general cynicism make them the terror and admiration of all their acquaintance. The last is far the most competent and interesting of the trio. The difficulty with Miss Colquhoun Bell, as with most satirists is that she describes evildoers with such interest and gusto that one cannot take very seriously her moral indignation." Raymond Mortimer
+ — New Statesman 22:sup18 O 13 '23 500w

"A very human romance, cast in a style distinguished by a happy choice of words, lighted by Irish wit, warmed by true humor; it is played out by very human characters; it is drawn with a nice observation of life and an impartial, if lively, sense of moral values; and above all it is freighted with a bitter wisdom as cleansing and invigorating as 'the salt sea itself.'"
+ N Y Times p17 Ja 20 '24 660w

"The story is rather slight to fill three hundred and fifty pages, but the upholstery is sufficiently luxurious to cover up any structural deficiency." Isabel Paterson
+ — N Y Tribune p23 Ja 20 '24 950w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e Ja 20 '24 520w

"The characterization is distinctly good, and the picture of Society is drawn with considerable power. The minds of the young people of the story are analyzed with great discrimination. The book suffers a little from looseness of construction; yet in spite of its many faults the reader, when he turns the last page, will feel that in many ways it is a notable performance."
+ — Spec 131:760 N 17 '23 220w

"The characters are uninteresting; the writing dull and affected. So for about half the book. Then it suddenly changes. The story begins to move and carry one with it. The characters live. Even those who were unpleasant shadows at the beginning wake to life; and Miss Bell, forgetting her affectation of being a Lucretian god looking on at a world in which she takes no concern, writes as a human being interested to find herself in a world of men and women."
The Times [London] Lit Sup p688 O 18 '23 320w

BELL, W. D. M. Wanderings of an elephant hunter. (Country life lib.) 196p il $7.50 Scribner [21s Country life]

799 Hunting—Africa. Elephants

"Mr. Bell ranged Africa from Liberia and the Belgian protectorate to the Abyssinian border, up uncharted rivers, across the domain of slave-trading to undiscovered mountains, through swamp and forest and jungle, where few if any white men had preceded him. His is the sheer sportsman's pleasure, unhampered by scientific interests or exploring mania or colonization projects. . . The first four chapters [give] the fine points of the method of slaughter, technical discussion of range and elevation, clinical analysis of symptoms resulting from shots and signs of heart, artery, and lung hits. Pictures and diagrams explain in detail to the aspiring amateur how several tons of rampaging beast may be done in with the least difficulty."—Lit R

Boston Transcript p4 F 16 '24 1200w

"For sheer interest of thrilling adventure, for insight into the lives of primitive people and wild animals, for unusual information as to things African, for the chronicle of an almost vanished era, and last, but not least, for humor and unalloyed entertainment, 'The Wanderings of an Elephant Hunter' is recommended without qualification."
+ Lit R p663 Ap 12 '24 550w

"This is a most notable book on elephant hunting. He writes extremely well, and his book is beautifully produced and illustrated by a large number of his own sketches and photographs."
+ New Statesman 22:488 F 2 '24 600w

BELLOC, HILAIRE. The contrast. 267p $2.50 McBride [12s 6d Arrowsmith]

917.3 National characteristics, American. United States—Civilization 24-11765

In his study of the United States and its people Mr Belloc's thesis is that in spite of superficial likenesses "the New World is wholly alien to the Old," that the American people should be regarded like any other foreign people, and that failure to grasp this truth, particularly in respect to the political relations between the United States and England, will lead to disaster. In working out his thesis Mr Belloc examines the physical contrast—the difference of soil and climate and landscape; the social contrast, which shows itself in daily human relations; the political contrast, which is apparent in the different conceptions of government; the religious contrast; the contrast in the attitude toward the Jewish problem; the contrast in letters and language. The last chapter is concerned with foreign relations, especially our relations with England.

Am Pol Sci R 18:655 Ag '24 30w
Booklist 21:20 O '24

"If it is a light book, it is not a bad one. Mr. Belloc is too accomplished a craftsman for that."
+ — Bookm 59:608 Jl '24 100w

"A fine, courageous book is the inevitable impression which Belloc's study of the contrasting cultures of England and America leaves behind it. . . Mr Belloc from boyhood onward has been several times to the United States and he has spent considerable periods of time here. He has, moreover, had years to reflect upon the differences between the two countries. These years, together with the extraordinarily keen cleverness of his mind, have made his book a thing of the utmost importance. This importance is most of all due to the fact that he does not make snap judgments nor unconsidered statements." D. L. Mann
+ Boston Transcript p3 My 24 '24 1750w
Ind 112:314 Je 7 '24 1600w

"Through ten chapters of vigorous, closely reasoned, well-ordered arguments Mr. Belloc devotes all his powers of fine prose writing to prove his thesis. . . No matter how much or how little a reader who respects real thinking and lucid presentation of important opinions may accept or reject Mr. Belloc's thesis, and the arguments supporting it, here is a most honest book, a book giving the results of a lifetime of observation and thought, dealing with a subject of the most vital importance." Michael Williams

BELLOC, HILAIRE—Continued

+ Lit R p822 Je 14 '24 1050w

Reviewed by Woodbridge Riley

Nation 119:264 S 10 '24 900w

Nation and Ath 34:706 F 16 '24 750w

Reviewed by C: de Kay

N Y Times p3 My 11 '24 2200w

Outlook 137:578 Ag 13 '24 30w

R of Rs 69:669 Je '24 120w

St Louis p384 N '24

Reviewed by Joseph Brewer

Spec 132:332 Mr 1 '24 500w

"Mr. Belloc is always lucid, and he does not shrink from displaying his remarkable gift for discernment of the obvious; nor does the obvious become less so by the pontifical way in which it is enunciated. And indeed there are so many omissions and so persistent an ignoring of necessary qualifications in his sweeping assertions that while the book provides a curious revelation of the mind of Mr. Belloc it cannot be regarded as a very serious study of America."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p883 D 1 '23 650w

BELLOC, HILAIRE. Economics for Helen. 225p $2 Putnam [5s Arrowsmith]

330 Economics 24-29415

"Mr. Belloc's book is divided into two halves. The first half is devoted to pure economic theory, the second to practical applications. There are, he tells Helen, four possible forms of economic organization: (1) The Servile State, (2) the Capitalist State, (3) The Distributive State and (4) The Socialist or Communist State. The last, he points out, is imaginary; it has never been tried; and he gives reasons for his belief that it never can or will be seriously tried. Of the other three he examines the advantages and disadvantages."—New Statesman

Booklist 21:135 Ja '25

"Combines some exposition of elementary principles with a good deal of Mr. Belloc's own views on current economic questions. . . On the whole this very readable book is interesting as affording some insight into an original mind rather than useful as an introduction to Economics." H. Reynard

+ — Econ J 34:620 D '24 520w

"Whatever Belloc writes is interesting, though not always sound. And this little volume is no exception. The volume is, it is hardly necessary to say, well written. Done, as it is, in a simple conversational style, his virulent attacks on his bogies come unexpectedly but not without force. Whatever other virtues this little book has—and it has many—impartiality is certainly not one of them." I. H: Warshaw

— + Lit R p7 S 20 '24 350w

"It is a quite first-rate elementary text-book which may safely be recommended to every beginner. 'Helen' is assumed to be aged sixteen, and there is certainly no reason, if she be fairly intelligent for her age, why she should not understand, at a second reading if not at the first, almost every word that Mr. Belloc has written. What is more, when she has understood it all—and it is quite a short book—she will possess a very fair grasp of the fundamentals of most of the main economic problems of our day." C. D. S.

+ New Statesman 23:352 Je 28 '24 1700w

"Helen may possibly profit by Mr. Belloc's book, and so may Mr. Belloc's publishers, but it is doubtful whether any one else will. The style reminds one of Miss Martineau; the substance is the pure milk of the word as handed down by 'the original masters of the science (Ricardo, Mill and the rest),' more or less incompletely understood and inaccurately stated, and wholly unpolluted by any admixture of modern knowledge." H: R. Mussey

— N Y Tribune p8 D 14 '24 200w

Reviewed by Frank Sullivan

N Y World p9e N 30 '24 580w

Outlook 138:607 D 10 '24 40w

Reviewed by J. W. Scott

Spec 131:1002 Je 21 '24 320w

"As is to be expected from Mr. Belloc, the outline of the science here given is marked by lucidity of thought and exposition. He has purposely used the simplest possible language so that his child audience, aged sixteen, or anybody else will be able to understand what is meant."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p193 Mr 27 '24 500w

BELLOC, HILAIRE. Sonnets and verse. 166p $2.75 McBride [25s Duckworth]

821 [24-8519]

In this volume Mr Belloc has collected all his poems which he wishes to preserve, except the humorous rhymes which appear in "A Bad Child's Book of Beasts" and similar works.

Bookm 59:615 Jl '24 210w

"Great charm is in many of the sonnets. Some of them conceal, as well, a sly and elfish humor. There is laughter in three. One of the more obvious facets of Mr. Belloc's art involves an appropriate and pointed repetition of a word or phrase." D. T. W. McC.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 12 '24 950w

Cath World 119:714 Ag '24 500w

"Too many cults, like too many cooks, spoil the poetic broth. A treble dose of tradition has proved too much for Mr Belloc. It has gone to his head, instead of remaining quietly in his blood."

— Dial 77:172 Ag '24 130w

Reviewed by W: R. Benet

Lit R p918 Jl 26 '24 180w

"Mr. Belloc's collected poems, as enthusiastic as they ever were, and quite as shallow."

— Nation 118:592 My 21 '24 20w

"Any fear that he might have overworked his 'Sussex song' manner is groundless; considering the popularity of his chief anthology-item, one admires in this the restraint which directs others of his poetical matters so skilfully."

+ Nation and Ath 34:348 D 1 '23 250w

"Of Mr. Belloc's lyrics three are supreme—that 'Tarantella' which is like nothing else in English poetry, the 'Stanzas written on Battersea Bridge' and 'Ha'nacker Mill.' Indeed, the whole volume is worth stealing for the sake of the last of these." F. L. Lucas

+ — New Statesman 22:340 D 22 '23 600w

"People who love good writing and good poetry, and like to find them in the works of their contemporaries, should make a point of getting and reading this volume of verse." Filson Young

+ N Y Times p8 D 2 '23 180w

Reviewed by Milton Raison

N Y Tribune p26 Je 8 '24 200w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Outlook 137:479 Jl 23 '24 550w

"He has in this volume some exquisite devotional lyrics, some admirable epigrams (and some pointless ones), some passionate polemical satire, some superb parody, some jolly drinking songs. His 'Newdigate' is a masterpiece. But it is in rare gleams of an essential and peculiar loveliness, where the poet's strength and tenderness meet, that his bid for immortality is made."

+ Sat R 136:523 N 10 '23 600w

"The great advantage of this collection of Mr. Belloc's poetical works is that there is scarcely any poetry in it at all. And, to be sure, what an excellent thing that is. After all, bad poetry is the dullest thing in the world, and good poetry is unpleasantly disturbing. But, except perhaps in his sonnets, which are medium poetry, and, therefore, neither intolerably dull nor intolerably disturbing, Mr. Belloc steers clear of all these insuperable difficulties, and writes some of the most enjoyable verses that one can well imagine."

+ Spec 132:208 F 9 '24 360w

"In 'Tarantella' the intricacy and rightness of the versification are extraordinary; the effect they produce is undeniable. There are, as we have said, not many of these pieces of the first rank in the volume. It is therefore a pity that Mr. Belloc should have omitted not only the songs for shouting which stud the pages of 'The Four Men,' but also the lovely poem 'He does not die that can bequeath,' which comes towards the end of that book."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p744 N 8 '23 1800w

BENAVENTE Y MARTINEZ, JACINTO. Plays; fourth series; tr. from the Spanish with an introd. by John Garrett Underhill. 224p $2.50 (10s 6d) Scribner

862 24-20635

This volume contains, besides four plays, an introduction on "theatre and antitheatre" in which the plays are discussed. In the little comedy, "The magic of an hour" the parable of life is condensed into a play introducing two porcelain figures which, as the clock chimes twelve, come to life for one hour and taste the joy and pain of love. The other plays are: The school of princesses; A lady; Field of ermine.

Booklist 21:102 D '24

Reviewed by A. W. Porterfield

Bookm 60:524 D '24 720w

"Benavente may not be a metaphysician, but he handles abstract problems in terms of action to a certain extent by the employment of his subjective development. It would be unfair to Mr. Underhill not to notice the excellence of his translations."

+ N Y Times p7 S 7 '24 2000w

Outlook 138:260 O 15 '24 100w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p572 S 18 '24 2400w

BENEDICT, MILO ELLSWORTH. What music does to us. 125p $1.50 Small

780 Music, Influence of 24-19762

"Mr. Benedict, who was one of the last pupils of Liszt, has written about the place of music in the lives of musicians and of music-lovers. He wrote it out of a conviction that there is a danger for both groups in the tendency to permit music to usurp too much of their lives, keeping them from a symmetrical and well-rounded development. The author believes that 'the acquirement of a more independent habit of judging the effects of music upon the mind is becoming generally recognized as necessary to both progress and intelligent self-direction.' For, as he points out, if music is a source of great pleasure and stimulation, overindulgence in it produces effects which can hardly be considered desirable."—N Y Times

Bookm 60:354 N '24 120w

"In spite of slight idiosyncrasies, the book holds its own excellently well. It carries a message which should be taken to heart by all those interested in music and it ought to set people to thinking along correct lines." N. H. D.

+ — Boston Transcript p3 O 4 '24 1050w

"A provocative and very readable little book."

+ N Y Times p17 Ag 31 '24 660w

BENIANS, SYLVIA MARY (DODD) (MRS ERNEST ALFRED BENIANS). From renaissance to revolution. 203p $3 Dutton [7s 6d Methuen]

940.2 Renaissance. Political science. Europe —History

The author studies the influence of the renaissance on the politics and culture of Europe during the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. She shows the gradual emergence of the two conflicting ideals of the supremacy of the state and the freedom of the individual, the attempts of eighteenth century reformers to fuse the two by humanizing the state and the defeat of their efforts by the French revolution. The book is a study of political philosophy and not a record of historical events.

"The book is perhaps more useful for the student who wishes a rapid review than the more difficult Lectures on Modern History of Acton, which have much the same scope."

Am Pol Sci R 18:645 Ag '24 230w

"Mrs. Benians writes well, and has a talent for apt quotation and example. She has compressed a great deal into two hundred pages, and the compression sometimes results in undue allusiveness or takes for granted too much knowledge on the reader's part. But this is not often: on the whole the book is very well balanced. It has hardly a dull page, and makes an invaluable companion to the histories written along more orthodox lines."

+ — New Statesman 23:448 Jl 19 '24 280w

BENJAMIN, HELEN MINA (PURVIS) (HELEN MELVILLE, pseud.), and BENJAMIN, LEWIS S. (LEWIS MELVILLE, pseud.), comps. Anthology of humorous verse. 255p $2 Dodd

821.08 English poetry—Collections

According to the compilers' note this anthology is not put forward as a collection of masterpieces of humorous verse. Many masterpieces are included, from Robert Herrick to Owen Seaman, but also representative examples of the work of these writers which were acclaimed as successful by their contemporaries.

"Too little of the more modern group appears. Within the limits the authors set, however, the volume succeeds; it is a good example of what once made mighty England rock with laughter—and the old guns can fire a few volleys yet." J. T. Shipley

+ — Lit R p11 S 6 '24 380w

N Y Times p4 S 7 '24 460w

"The book is respectable, worthy, dignified. Yes, that is the worst of it, it is dignified. Nobody will cram it into his pocket and carry it about, chuckling over pages here and there, until the cover is broken and the leaves crumpled." Arthur Warner

+ — N Y Tribune p10 D 14 '24 720w

"The verses may be on varied subjects but they charm equally. You will not slap your thighs and chortle. These rhymes will elicit from you only the delighted smile of a civilized person, but a smile none the less gratifying because you are not thrown into convulsions. Helen and Lewis Melville have compiled a treasure, for which we cannot be too grateful." Harry Salpeter

+ N Y World p8e O 12 '24 800w

Outlook 138:381 N 5 '24 30w

BENJAMIN, LEWIS S. (LEWIS MELVILLE, pseud.). Lady Suffolk and her circle. 292p il $5 Houghton [21s Hutchinson]

B or 92 Suffolk, Henrietta (Hobart) Howard, countess of

"Lady Suffolk, for many years the mistress of George II, was sufficiently intelligent and mentally attractive to draw within the bounds of friendship many of those who brought light into a century which, so far as England was concerned, was sadly dull. Her own letters had interest enough to draw replies of note from people as diverse as Pope and Bolingbroke, Swift and Chesterfield, the elder Pitt and Mary Bellenden, Grenville and Peterborough. In the letters reproduced by Mr. Melville the picture of an age is enshrined. There is much on

BENJAMIN, L: S.—Continued
Queen Caroline and some good letters from Dean Swift are given."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"Amusing and fascinating as Mr. Melville's book is, its great lesson is that the world is really better than it was in the early years of the eighteenth century." N. H. D.
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 10 '25 1000w

Ind 113:381 N 8 '24 30w

"The only really surprising incident in the book is Queen Charlotte's conversation with Lady Suffolk on the eve of her retirement from court. That—and some wholly delightful letters from Gay, Swift, and Chesterfield—is its only claim to interest." D. B. Woolsey
— + Ind 113:522 D 13 '24 320w

Reviewed by Walter Yust
Lit R p3 D 13 '24 280w

"Careful, competent, and very interesting book." Gilbert Thomas
+ Nation and Ath 35:268 My 24 '24 800w

"Mr. Melville is to be congratulated upon the mass of new matter which he has been able to incorporate in his story of Lady Suffolk and the Court, but we could wish he had managed the chronology a little better, for he moves backwards and forwards in time so often and so swiftly that the thread of the story is continually broken. The earlier chapters, too, are overcrowded with matter, which, useful as it is, could have been relegated to an appendix with advantage to the construction of the book."
— + New Statesman 23:320 Je 21 '24 680w

"This book is a really valuable addition to the social history of eighteenth century England."
+ N Y Times p5 N 2 '24 600w

Reviewed by R. T. House
N Y Tribune p8 D 21 '24 380w

"A book which, if by no means great, is at least a very pleasant field for browsing." R. K. Root
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:321 N 29 '24 800w

"Mr. Melville's book is light reading. It is full of anecdotes and it puts a good deal of fresh material before the public, and though the author's comments and deductions are seldom remarkable, the book makes admirable light reading, and gives a good general picture of the epoch." A. Williams-Ellis
+ — Spec 132:sup802 My 17 '24 1250w

"So far as one can see no new facts are brought to light by Mr. Melville but he has compiled an interesting book which can be considered as supplementary to the more general histories of the period. It is well annotated, but might have been improved by the suppression of unnecessary parts of many of the letters and by summarizing others."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p323 My 22 '24 280w

BENJAMIN, LEWIS S. (LEWIS MELVILLE, pseud.). Nell Gwyn; the story of her life. 326p il $7.50 Doran [21s Hutchinson]

B or 92 Gwyn, Nell

Nell Gwyn, 1650-1687, English actress and popular favorite, is portrayed against the background of her times in a book which draws largely from interesting contemporary records—histories, letters, diaries, lampoons, etc. Beginning her career as an orange-girl in the Drury Lane theater she was soon advanced to the boards, and as a popular comic actress found herself in Charles II's favor, a position which her good temper, ready wit and high spirits enabled her to keep until his death. More than a biography of Nell Gwyn, the book is a picture of Restoration days and of the stage, literature, gallants and ladies of the time. The illustrations are modern, in color and black and white, by Kitty Shannon.

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p4 D 27 '24 1900w

Reviewed by Walter Yust
Lit R p3 D 13 '24 330w

N Y Times p5 N 2 '24 820w

"Melville has awakened a lively and understanding appreciation of a fascinating period of history. In this he has been ably assisted by the lovely illustrations in color and black and white by Kitty Shannon. These have the delicacy of miniatures and the voluptuousness befitting the subjects. It is a book to treasure." J. W. C.
+ N Y World p9e O 5 '24 800w

Sat R 137:87 Ja 26 '24 600w

BENNETT, ARNOLD. Elsie and the child. 344p $2.50 Doran [7s 6d Cassell]
24-26938

A novelette and twelve short stories make up this collection. The heroine of the title-story is the lovable and loyal charwoman of "Riceyman Steps" who, with her shell-shocked husband Joe, is now in service in the household of Dr Raste. With her large calm and her capacity for loving and serving she has helped Joe to steady his nerves and has become indispensable to the Rastes because of the great liking which Eva, the idolized young daughter of the house, has taken to her. The story is a realistic study of the relations of master and mistress with servant. Other stories are: During dinner; The paper cap; The box-office girl; Mr Jack Hollins against fate; Nine o'clock to-morrow; The yacht; Outside and inside; Last love; The mysterious destruction of Mr Ipple; The perfect creature; The fish; The limits of dominion.

Booklist 21:110 D '24

Boston Transcript p5 D 17 '24 1050w

"Barring the title-story, which is less a story than an epilog to his justly popular 'Riceyman Steps,' Mr. Arnold Bennett's 'Elsie and the Child' is extremely disappointing." Kenneth Fuessle
— + Int Bk R p96 Ja '25 470w

Reviewed by C: W. Stork
Lit R p3 Ja 3 '25 920w

Reviewed by Edwin Muir
Nation and Ath 36:270 N 15 '24 580w

"The stories which fill up the book are polished, inimitable, a little tired perhaps, but certainly all seconds from the best of light fiction." E. V.
— + New Repub 41:153 D 31 '24 300w

Reviewed by J: Franklin
New Statesman 24:141 N 8 '24 1700w

"A simple tale of the domestic middle-class life so common, indeed prevalent, in England. Mr. Bennett, by sheer force of acutely penetrating vision has contrived to fashion a beautiful little work of art out of it."
+ N Y Times p9 N 9 '24 650w

" 'Elsie and the Child' is hugely disappointing. As a sequel to 'Riceyman Steps' it is patently a piece of hack work done to capitalize the success of that late novel." L. S.
— N Y World p9e N 9 '24 170w

Reviewed by H: B. Fuller
Sat R of Lit 1:319 N 29 '24 1200w

"Mr. Bennett in his new book of short stories gives us one or two discomforts. He has very much experience, of course, and he never lets us down crudely and simply; but his ostentation of connoisseurship sometimes disarranges a story, and we are involved, once or twice, in some old, so-well-known situation." Philip Carducci
— + Spec 133:706 N 8 '24 200w

"In this variegated little collection of stories we cannot help seeing, besides the insistence on the value of the ordinary, a kindly smile at all life that is true to itself. The only spectacle, indeed, that seems to affect Mr. Bennett with bitterness is the life of the theatre. The fun he makes of that can be withering."
The Times [London] Lit Sup p648 O 16 '24 560w

BENNETT, ARNOLD, and KNOBLOCK, EDWARD. London life; a play in three acts and nine scenes. 171p $1.50 Doran [3s 6d Chatto & W.]

822 24-25136

The plot of this play concerns itself mainly with the achievement of selfish ambitions in high places. Two men with a thirst for power stand out in the play: Sir Howard Nathan, a Jew who begins life as a usurer and ends as a newspaper magnate, and Simon Blackshaw, an efficient Bursley lawyer, who rises to the post of colonial secretary in the British cabinet.

"There is everything here which we may expect from Mr. Bennett, who, it is to be suspected, plays the larger part in these collaborations, at least from the atmospheric point of view. The usual excellence of characterization is here, and, as so often before, it is marked by a certain brittle quality. The mechanical click as the various cogs of action deftly slip into one another are a bit too evident."

+ — N Y Times p4 N 23 '24 500w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Tribune p12 D 14 '24 250w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p487 Ag 7 '24 230w

BENNETT, CHARLES ANDREW ARMSTRONG. At a venture. 184p il $2.50 Harper

817 24-4882

The philosopher is as apparent as the humorist in these shrewd, ironic essays on such subjects as the conservative, toleration, the fairyland of finance, progress, the next war, the church militant, etc. The illustrations are line drawings by Clarence Day, jr.

Booklist 20:330 Je '24

Bookm 59:357 My '24 100w

Dial 77:438 N '24 70w

"This is a happily conceived venture. In it the author merrily examines our jazz-like, distorted ways of looking at and doing things—the profound stupidities, the hideous vulgarities, the incredible injustices of our crass 'civilization.' Not only does he hew and hack goodnaturedly at the Sorry Scheme, but he conducts the game fairly, sparing no one, not even himself, from his sly rapier-thrusts. If the result is one of uneven accomplishment, he has for the most part hit the bull's-eye with remarkable precision." Mary Siegrist

+ Int Bk R p595 Jl '24 800w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

Lit R p720 My 3 '24 840w

"Mr. Bennett has a fine sense of satire, of character, of life—and he is a master of the luminous phrase. Moreover, he carries himself with that air of detached superiority which is essential to successful satire." W. E. Woodward

+ Nation 118:sup445 Ap 16 '24 560w

"The realization of how good this book is does not come at once. It needs to be perused slowly, lingeringly, occasionally. It has nothing in it about love, which would be enough to commend it to tired minds. And it is greatly aided and abetted by Clarence Day's pictures, so full of imagination." T: L. Masson

+ N Y Times p2 Mr 23 '24 300w

Reviewed by P. N. Stone

N Y Tribune p22 Je 15 '24 90w

"One or two of his essays are somewhat trivial, but they are more than counterbalanced by the substantiality of the others. His book presents a more matured and ripened viewpoint than do the writings of some of our lighter, and perhaps younger, essayists."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 27 '24 180w

BENNETT, CHARLES ANDREW ARMSTRONG. Philosophical study of mysticism. (Amasa Stone Mather memorial publication fund) 194p $2.50 Yale univ. press

149 Mysticism 23-16560

An interpretation of mysticism and of its value as a way of life. The author writes in the belief that the experience of the mystic does not detach him from the world but rather brings him into more vital connection with it and provides a way of meeting its difficulties. The book, therefore, has the practical purpose of applying the mystical experience as a remedy for some of the ills of the moral life.

Reviewed by E. A. Burtt

Int J Ethics 35:200 Ja '25 1700w

"Professor Bennett has written a very slender volume and has been able barely to touch on many vital issues and problems. But he has demonstrated quite conclusively that one need not rhapsodize about mysticism, that it is a subject-matter about which one can be quite cold-bloodedly critical, altogether painstakingly reflective. He has presented his thesis so that it can hardly fail to win admiration as it gives abundant evidence in wisdom of understanding of the many years of study of which it is the product. It is written very strikingly; the council for brevity has been taken well to heart, helped by a somewhat laconic style and a decided gift for pithiness of expression. At no point, however, is the meaning sacrificed to the presentation, but a much fuller book would be highly desirable." Joseph Ratner

+ — J Philos 21:244 Ap 24 '24 2900w

"True to the mystic tradition, Professor Bennett has been more careful about the illuminating quality of his flashes of inspiration than about the labored purgatorial dialectic leading to them, though the latter has not been neglected. But essentially it is the work of a seer." J. S. Bixler

+ J Religion 4:431 Jl '24 2000w

Reviewed by R. M. Jones

Lit R p537 F 23 '24 380w

"There is much careful thought in this work, and it never loses touch with the duties which confront men in daily life."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p882 D 13 '23 180w

BENNETT, HENRY EASTMAN. Psychology and self-development. 296p il $1.48 Ginn

150 Psychology 23-14367

"The book makes no pretentious claim as a contribution to psychological doctrine; nor does it pose as an advanced interpretation of human experience. It attempts to present the essential facts of psychology in order to stimulate further pursuit of the subject and in order to improve the student's technique of learning by showing him the multitude of helpful applications which psychology offers in everyday experience. In fulfilling this tremendously important, but modest, purpose, this book should serve well as the basis for a course in beginning psychology in normal schools and colleges."—School R

Cath World 119:861 S '24 20w

"Such an approach will surely serve as a powerful stimulus to interest the student in his introduction to psychology and will also contribute values which are greatly needed by every college or normal-school student." M. J. Stormzand

+ El School J 24:628 Ap '24 700w

"The book, which is written in a plain, easy style, would seem to be adapted especially for elementary courses in teacher training classes. For the scientific psychologist it offers nothing new either in the choice of material or in the point of view." F. O. Smith

J Philos 21:51 Ja 17 '24 520w

"One of the most successful attempts to make psychology intelligible and useful to the beginning student." H. Y. McClusky

+ School R 32:389 My '24 650w

BENNETT, JESSE LEE. What books can do for you. 320p $2 Doran

028 Books and reading. Bibliography—Best books 23-17918

The author's purpose is to show the value of books to the individual, how they help him to understand life and himself and how they may be used as a means of self-education. Half the book consists of selected lists of books in the various fields of human knowledge, to serve as guides in the reading or purchase of books or in the building of personal or small public libraries.

Booklist 20:290 My '24

"Almost anyone can read this book with pleasure, and almost anyone from the Hairy Ape to the human thinking machine can be helped by it toward developing a 'self well adjusted to a world well understood.' "

+ Bookm 58:87 Mr '24 160w

Reviewed by R. M. Montgomery

Int Bk R p724 S '24 240w

"A book about books that is unique. It is well thought out and inspiringly written. It ought to be particularly useful to teachers of literature in high schools and colleges. For its perusal ought to bring some response, some kindling of interest, from even the soggiest freshman."

+ — N Y Times p22 D 9 '23 550w

N Y Tribune p21 Ja 27 '24 130w

"Altogether, Mr. Bennett's book about books is of quite a new sort."

R of Rs 69:223 F '24 80w

Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 23 '24 420w

Wis Lib Bul 20:64 Mr '24

BENNETT, L. E. Realm of God. 314p $2.50 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

237 Christianity. Kingdom of God

The book sets forth the conception of the kingdom of God that lies at the heart of the Christian religion and the ideal of its realization on earth. The author shows the emergence of the idea in modern Christian thought, Christ's view of the kingdom and its place in the rest of the New Testament, and the relation of the idea to the church and to Christian doctrine.

"Typical of a large group of books. Showing that what Jesus had in mind is not a visionary scene suspended in the sky, but a new social order, just, humane, joyous, in which the Law of Love is a reality and not merely a pious phrase." J. F. Newton

Int Bk R p360 Ap '24 80w

J Religion 4:332 My '24 50w

BENSON, ARTHUR CHRISTOPHER. Chris Gascoyne; an experiment in solitude; from the diaries of John Trevor. 315p $2 Dutton 24-27431

To his circle of friends the departure of Chris Gascoyne to Charters, a delightful, but isolated place, was nothing short of a catastrophe. Chris, the lovable, sympathetic one, he who with his quaint humor and wisdom was the life of every party was actually burying himself in this distant, rustic spot where he might "resolutely interrogate his own mind to see if it really contains anything, think in solitude, perhaps even think aloud." And Chris, who always gave freely of his friendship, sympathy, humor—but never gave himself—settles at Charters to delve into the secrets of life and ultimately to find himself. His various experiences bring him the real secrets of living—one of them being the love of a beautiful, noble-minded woman.

Booklist 21:151 Ja '25

Boston Transcript p4 O 4 '24 700w

"Benson's success in establishing Gascoyne's charm is a notable achievement—perhaps the most notable in a career of urbanity." G. C.

+ Ind 113:199 S 27 '24 780w

"It makes easy, pleasant reading; its gentle philosophizing is so well woven into its analysis of character that it never becomes at all obtrusive. The story has more than its share of beauty—beauty of style and of thought." Carey Jeffreys

+ Lit R p3 Ag 30 '24 380w

Nation and Ath 36:196 N 1 '24 250w

N Y Times p24 S 14 '24 900w

"There is much repetition, a good deal of special pleading and affected nobility; but a lucid and flowing style makes it all easy reading, and two or three secondary characters, etched in with a drop of malice, are astonishingly alive."

+ — N Y Tribune p10 D 7 '24 720w

N Y World p7e Ag 31 '24 290w

Reviewed by C. H. Gaines

No Am 220:381 D '24 920w

Reviewed by Gerald Gould

Sat R 138:451 N 1 '24 280w

"Mr. Benson commands our interest, but he cannot move us. The daring with which his contemporaries shocked their audiences is no longer electric. Their word-wit is out of fashion. Benson, ex senectute, speaks something of his philosophy of life, but there are few left to listen."

— + Sat R of Lit 1:130 S 20 '24 450w

Spec 133:750 N 15 '24 80w

Springf'd Republican p6 N 3 '24 670w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p666 O 23 '24 460w

BENSON, ARTHUR CHRISTOPHER. Memories and friends. 379p $4.50 Putnam [16s Murray]

920 England—Biography 24-13145

"The present volume deals with a group of which most of the members were connected with Eton as school-fellows or colleagues of the author. There is first of all the portrait of Edmond Warre, the headmaster who made modern Eton, of J. L. Joynes, Oscar Browning, and E. C. Austen Leigh, who were of his staff, of Mrs. Blanche Warre-Cornish, whose husband was Vice Provost, of Stuart A. Donaldson, afterwards Master of Magdalen college, Cambridge, of J. D. Bourchier, who became the Times correspondent in the Balkans, of Cecil Spring Rice, late ambassador to the United States, of Reginald John Smith, the publisher, and Howard Sturgis. Lady Ponsonby and Mrs. Oliphant are introduced because they lived across the Thames at Windsor, where Benson was often their guest; and a sight of Ruskin was caught on his visit to Eton to address the Literary Society of which Arthur Benson was president."—New Repub

"Mr. Benson has written many books, but none of them, on the whole, so interesting and permanent as his 'Memories and Friends.' " E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 17 '24 1400w

"Memorable portraits they are; touched in with a loving hand, and with a simple and charming intimacy of which few other living writers have the secret." A. B. de Mille

+ Ind 113:235 O 4 '24 600w

"This thick book is one of those quiet but stimulating volumes to be dipped into again and again." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p870 Jl 5 '24 250w

Nation and Ath 35:182 My 10 '24 450w

"So fairly has Mr. Benson drawn his characters that we are convinced that these judgments are true—that these Etonians did in very truth possess in eminent degree the qualities which have made their race a noble and enduring one. Only one picture is unfavorable, with a dash of malice in its strokes. Oscar Browning is presented as he appeared to his staid Eton contemporaries, and at Cambridge, in his singular combination of wit and buffoon." R. M. Lovett

+ — New Repub 38:344 My 21 '24 750w

"Making due allowance for the personal equation, 'Memories and Friends' will be found to be an important book. The old school life stands out vividly in it, and the entire atmosphere of the volume is redolent of a great tradition. It is, of course, unnecessary to say anything about Mr. Benson's prose. Its beauty and clarity have been known since his first volume of essays appeared many years ago."

+ N Y Times p13 Je 1 '24 2000w

"Grave studies of people who interested the author, so told as not to carry much of interest to any one else. In most of his memories Mr. Benson seems to sit shyly apart from his subjects and to view with timid eyes."

— N Y World p7e My 25 '24 50w

Outlook 138:178 O 1 '24 20w

St Louis p385 N '24

Sat R 137:460 My 3 '24 1500w

"He has remarkable qualifications. He writes easy, graceful, lucid English; he has a singular power of selection, a wonderful memory, a keen sense of humour; while his own personality, closely interwoven with his story, provides meanwhile the autobiographical detail which his readers have learned to expect."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p250 Ap 24 '24 1000w

BENSON, ARTHUR CHRISTOPHER. The trefoil; Wellington college, Lincoln, and Truro. 297p il $4.50 Putnam [12s Murray]

B or 92 Benson family. Benson, Edward White

The "Trefoil" follows the three stages of the career of the author's father, Edward White Benson, before he became Archbishop of Canterbury—the headmastership of Wellington college, the canonry of Lincoln and the bishopric of Truro. The book reveals the happy home life of the Benson children and softens somewhat the severity of the archbishop's portrait as painted by the author's brother, E. F. Benson, in "Our family affairs." (Book Review Digest, 1921) The family friends of the Bensons appear—Kingsley, Bishops Westcott, Wilkinson and Wordsworth, and many others, not all ecclesiastics.

Cleveland p45 Je '24

Ind 113:49 Jl 19 '24 350w

"If Shakespeare had told us how he hid inkbottles in the shrubbery as a boy, our interest would be legitimate; but then Mr. Benson is not Shakespeare. Still the fact remains; take Mr. Benson up and you cannot put him down. Begin 'The Trefoil' and you must meander happily to the end."

+ — Nation and Ath 34:356 D 1 '23 200w

"In depicting his father, A. C. Benson has fortunately resisted the temptation to allow his sentiments and his affections to overwhelm his good judgment; and, while writing always in a spirit of sympathy, and even of reverence, he has not glossed over any of the flaws or peculiar twists in the character of his parent, but has described his shortcomings along with his virtues, and, accordingly, has succeeded in portraying him as a human being whom it is not difficult to appreciate or understand."

+ N Y Times p11 F 17 '24 1000w

"Marked by suavity, scholarship, repose, candor controlled by fine breeding, unforced intimacy and a deceptive air of simplicity." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p20 Ja 27 '24 1100w

"The best part of the volume is not made up of incidents, nor altogether of the memories of his father, but of his own extraordinarily vivid and fascinating sense of the world of mystery which surrounds a small boy when he is playing in old gardens, in happy summer fields, and near brooks and streams."

Outlook 136:233 F 6 '24 300w

Sat R 136:574 N 24 '24 720w

"Once again the best wine has been kept to the last. Mr. Benson is, of all the Archbishop's sons, the one who has inherited most of his spirit, and he is able in this informal memoir to express that spirit with more freedom and subtlety than was convenient in the formal biography. He has freed himself in his style from the crabbedness that came from his father's anxiety to pack too much meaning into each of his sentences, and he has broken away from the refined theological network that limited his father's speculations."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p767 N 15 '23 1100w

BENSON, EDWARD FREDERIC. David Blaize of King's. 306p $2 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

24-22680

David Blaize of King's college, Cambridge, is a likable youth, and an outstanding figure there because of the whole-hearted and clean-minded way in which he plays the game. He is possessed of an irrepressible spirit of mischief and the story concerns itself with the behavior of David during his college career. At one time he saves the "Chit-Chat" from dire calamity. Then he plays a very important part in the "Great rag," and the gallant way in which he assists his friend "Bags" in one of the greatest moments of that boy's life marks a high point in David's mischief making progress. But notwithstanding his nonsense, he does some arduous studying and the book closes with the announcement that he has won a first prize in the history tripos.

Booklist 21:66 N '24

Cleveland p91 D '24

"An amusing, lighthearted, cheerful book, with just enough of underlying seriousness in its purpose and in the character of David to keep it balanced."

+ Int Bk R p821 O '24 500w

"Besides holding a rich abundance of entertainment the book shows Mr. Benson at the top notch of his artistic achievement thus far." H. L. Pangborn

+ Lit R p3 D 6 '24 450w

"There is a blitheness, a delight in living, in Mr. E. F. Benson's chronicle of the Cambridge experiences of his hero, David Blaize, which makes one feel more than a little envious of that most likable youth. David not only had the best sort of good time put before him; he had, what is far more valuable, the ability thoroughly to relish it."

+ N Y Times p14 O 5 '24 680w

N Y Tribune p3 O 19 '24 220w

Outlook 138:299 O 22 '24 40w

Sat R of Lit 1:365 D 6 '24 260w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p320 My 22 '24 650w

BENSON, EDWARD FREDERIC. Visible and invisible. 298p $2 Doran [7s 6d Hutchinson]

24-7112

A dozen tales of horror, in which the dead speak, graves open and ghosts walk. A merciful lack of reality prevents the stories from being as gruesome as they were evidently intended to be. Contents: "And the dead spake —"; The outcast; The Horror-horn; Machaon; Negotium perambulans; At the farmhouse; Inscrutable decrees; The gardener; Mr. Tilly's séance; Mrs. Amworth; In the tube; Roderick's story.

Boston Transcript p4 My 10 '24 350w

Cleveland p43 Je '24

"Not a hair of our head stood on end during our reading. Horrors defined lose their terror and Mr. Benson makes the mistake of becoming definitive about his ghouls. Suggestion alone creates the good story in this field as the few admitted masterpieces bear witness."

— Lit R p795 My 31 '24 180w

"There is more horror than mystery in these tales of the psychic; in fact there is more mystery in working out the syntax of some of the author's explanatory sentences than in foretell-

BENSON, E: F:—Continued
ing the solution of his problems. However, Mr. Benson has found a simple and effective formula with which, given a corpse or a medium or a strange footprint, he can concoct a story of required length and necessary number of thrills."
— + Nation 118:617 My 28 '24 80w

"To be honest, though all kinds of spooks and lubber fiends attend us here, they do not succeed in producing in us that agreeable disturbance known as 'the creeps.' The best story is that of Mr. Tilly's séance, where some canny humour mingles with the uncanny theme." F. W. Stokoe
— + Nation and Ath 34:350 D 1 '23 60w

"For all their preoccupation with the occult the Benson brothers seem to lack the allusive faculty necessary to secure conviction when dealing with manifestations of the unseen world."
+ — N Y Times p24 My 11 '24 800w

Reviewed by Edith Leighton
N Y Tribune p24 My 18 '24 450w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p6e Ap 20 '24 50w

Outlook 136:650 Ap 16 '24 50w

Spec 131:806 N 24 '23 100w

"The subjects are varied and the treatment always capable, sometimes powerful. Mr Benson is very clever in scene-setting and conveying a subtle sense of the mysterious in the surroundings of his incidents."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p773 N 15 '23 220w

BENSON, LOUIS FITZGERALD. Studies of familiar hymns; second series. 314p il $2 Westminster press
245 Hymns

In a second series of studies following an earlier one published twenty years ago, the author takes up twenty-four hymns which have become great popular favorites, tells the story of each and the occasion of its writing, providing also a brief biography of the author.

"Dr. Benson is regarded as the foremost American hymnologist. His book is therefore an authoritative volume of reference." E. E. F.
+ Bookm 59:adv Mr '24 50w

"As pleasant to read as valuable for reference is Dr. Benson's study, whose readers will hereafter see many a meaning undreamed of before, historical, romantic, in the pages of whatever hymnbook is familiar to him."
+ Boston Transcript p6 F 9 '24 820w

"The story of the way in which these hymns came to be written and their history is surprisingly romantic and readable. The value of the book is much increased by facsimiles and portraits."
+ Outlook 136:117 Ja 16 '24 70w

BENSON, STELLA. Pipers and a dancer. 178p $2 (6s) Macmillan
24-22264

Ipsie Wilson always danced to the piper. "All her life she had been exhibited by a showman before a ghostly and ideal public." She is the center of the show and she sees everything subjectively, thru the veil of her imagination. When the book opens she is on her way to China to marry Jacob Heming, whom she does not love. Before she reaches him he is captured by brigands. She is not really concerned. Jacob dies. His death only increases her own glamor. There is another man whom she meets on the way. She is flattered by his interest but he does not really matter. The story itself, which ends abruptly, amounts to little. It depends for its effect on the minute dissection of the character of the girl.

Booklist 21:151 Ja '25

"The fact that the workmanship of the book is excellent adds to the reader's irritation when he finds its content non-existent."
— + Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p23 N 23 '24 240w

"The effect is often startlingly vivid. Indeed, the magic of it savors of something that one can only call genius—but it remains an uncanny genius. And if, after all, the total result gives an impression of something not quite so solidly real as it seems at its first flash, one might call it a genius for literary prestidigitation, except that that might imply trickery, of which there is really nothing. It is honest work and always hugely interesting. . . A brilliant performance, rich with originally turned phrases, happy flashes of wit, and passages of wonderfully pictorial description." H. L. Pangborn
+ — Lit R p12 O 11 '24 300w

"I wish there had been no reference in 'Pipers and a Dancer' to Miss Stella Benson's novels, for this, it seems to me, is the only flaw in a little masterpiece, exquisite in its subtlety, in its economy, and in its beauty of phrase." Forrest Reid
+ — Nation and Ath 36:116 O 18 '24 700w

Reviewed by J: Franklin
New Statesman 24:81 O 25 '24 570w

"There are wonderful passages of description —incisive landscape—in Miss Benson's novel. But primarily, it is soul-dissection. We shall enjoy it the more if we come to it in scientific and detached spirit and do not carry any infections of prejudice or sentimentality into the dry warm air of asepsis in which it is conducted."
+ N Y Times p8 O 19 '24 620w

N Y Tribune p10 D 21 '24 250w

N Y World p8m Ja 4 '25 140w

"Miss Benson is a writer of great ability. She has wit and facility. One feels that with her equipment she could do almost anything. She does not, however, give the reader a chance. She is always standing in front of the mirror." Raymond Holden
— + Sat R of Lit 1:223 O 25 '24 1000w

"If we read the book in discomfort, is it worth reading at all? It is, I suppose, the most brilliant novel published this year; it contains more wit, more unruly intelligence than any English novel since the 'nineties. We could hardly call it a tour de force—the scheme of the book is not large enough; but a quarter of it is epigram, and most of the rest is acute and sensitive analysis of character and situation." Alan Porter
+ — Spec 133:514 O 11 '24 2000w

"Miss Stella Benson does not stay to contemplate her characters, to give them time and to draw them out; she jumps on them and riddles them with a phrase. . . Her lightning touches may serve for the pipers, the objective figures surrounding the girl through whose eyes they are seen; but for the girl herself, explored from within, the strokes are far too summary—the girl never gets her chance. . . There is not room enough, nor time enough allowed for the girl to bring her scattered selves together and be seen for what she is, one young woman. Miss Benson is far too short and abrupt with her; the girl is dismissed before she has taken shape."
— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p610 O 2 '24 450w

BENTLEY, ISAAC MADISON. Field of psychology; a survey of experience, individual, social, and genetic. 545p il $3.50 Appleton
150 Psychology. Social psychology. Experience
24-24155

Dr Bentley in this volume attempts the incorporation of the old with the new science of psychology, by saving what is worth keeping in both.

"Rough as is most of the road, the author makes his trip in masterly fashion, and no one will be more indebted to him than the psychologists themselves. The whole book, vivid and entertaining as to style, wide in its range of examples, and thorough in its grasp of the technique as well as the literature of the subject, promises the advent of a more rational and therefore a more useful psychology than we have yet had."

+ Boston Transcript p7 D 13 '24 400w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p830 D 4 '24 50w

BERCOVICI, KONRAD. Around the world in New York. 416p il $5 Century

917.471 New York (city)—Description. New York (city)—Foreign population 24-26898

New York, as Mr Bercovici says, affords the best opportunity to study the nations of the world, samples of each being centered in different sections within easy reach of each other. His book is a study of these many foreign cities in New York where the people live their own life, with their own gathering centers, restaurants, theaters and newspapers. He describes fourteen distinct foreign quarters, with a chapter devoted to the scattered nations. Illustrations from pen-and-ink drawings by Norman Borchardt.

Booklist 21:64 N '24

"Surely here is a book without which no out of town person can in the future care to come to New York, and from which native New Yorkers will glean much startling information." J. F.

+ Bookm 60:341 N '24 1000w

"Such a story could only have been written by a man who has wandered slowly through the streets, talking with many people, listening to their joys and their sorrows, eating with them and dancing with them and caring for them. There is much richness of color here and much to thrill the reader with the sense of the strange things which exist at our very doors."

+ Boston Transcript p5 O 4 '24 160w

"For those who yearn to become globe-trotters and yet glean their travel from printed descriptions that they read on journeys to and fro in the unglamourous subways or suburban trains, here is a book that has no dusty dryness in its marrow; here is the story of nearly all contemporary mankind under one roof, so to speak." F. F. Whitfield

+ N Y Times p10 O 5 '24 900w

"The manner of Mr. Bercovici in presenting the materials of this book gives it value beyond its first purpose—to entertain as a book of travel—and raises it to the level of a work of social interpretation." C. H. Grattan

+ N Y Tribune p11 S 28 '24 1200w

"'Around the World in New York' comes nearer to capturing the city than any book I have read on the subject and I doubt whether any of significance has missed my eye." H. S.

+ N Y World p7e S 14 '24 210w

"For fifteen years the author has traveled and observed his New York. He has set down nothing without knowledge, and his eyes are clear."

+ N Y World p8e O 12 '24 340w

Outlook 138:463 N 19 '24 450w

"If 'Around the World in Manhattan' were the title of Mr. Bercovici's volume, precious little fault could be found with it. His geography is sound, his observations exact, his infrequent conclusions convincing. He is at his best, perhaps, in depicting the small group, and somewhat less successful in dealing with broad effects." Arthur Pound

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:181 O 11 '24 1150w

BERCOVICI, KONRAD. Costa's daughter. 127p $2 Covici-McGee

812 24-7238

"The central character of the play, Marga, is the daughter of the bear-trainer. The love affair of this young Amazon is no commonplace matter. At her first meeting with her lover she strikes him soundly in the face with her whip, and he in turn cuts off her long hair; and (bobbed hair apparently not being popular with the gypsies) she straightway sets off in quest of vengeance. A week later, not having found the vengeance, she finds her lover instead; and, after another physical encounter that resembles nothing so much as a wrestling match, the young couple adjust their difficulties and decide in favor of immediate marriage."—Lit R

"A melodramatic romance vigorously portrayed as suits the action, and placed in a setting which lends to it additional life and color."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 9 '24 400w

"Melodramatic as the story may appear Mr Bercovici in reality succeeds in developing his play without a trace of melodrama. One feels at all times that the author knows his characters and is faithful to them; that he is making them behave precisely as people of their type would behave under the circumstances."

+ Lit R p709 Ap 26 '24 370w

"'Costa's Daughter' is most excellent melodrama; but as melodrama is now mostly confined to the screen that is the reason it is recommended for consideration by the movie magnate. On the other hand, the play is not without merit as an apprenticed piece."

+ — N Y Times p5 Mr 23 '24 300w

BERCOVICI, KONRAD. Iliana; stories of a wandering race. 324p $2 Boni & Liveright 24-21818

The book contains eleven short stories of gypsy life. They are tales of life and love and hatred in many lands—the Dobrudja, Arabia, Cuba and South America. Contents: Muzio; Seed; The master; Revenge; The woman; Wisdom of youth; Happiness; Jancu Gian; Iliana; The stranger; Rutka.

Booklist 21:110 D '24

"As folk lore they are valuable, as contributions to world literature they may be lasting. Mr. Bercovici can write in a finished manner and he understands the passions of men and women. 'Iliana' is a book long to be remembered by those who read it, but in a confused way. The stories fundamentally differ but a very little one from another, and because of this there is a hazy color about the whole work of the author. But each is a delightful gem to be read separately." K. S.

+ — Boston Transcript p1 O 4 '24 400w

"The characters are all racial types instead of individuals, and are painted in with a few bold, sweeping, masterful strokes. The philosophy is the exclusive one of a particular race. As such the book is extremely interesting. The forceful, direct, sometimes almost crude style is admirably suited to the dramatic action and the vigorous characters of the tales."

+ Int Bk R p826 O '24 180w

"I cannot say how true to life they are. But I can say that I wasn't bored by one of them and that, in my opinion, they are all beautifully written." R. W. Lardner

+ Lit R p3 O 18 '24 340w

"He knows how to tell a story and, what is more, his story is almost always entertaining. He does not rely upon his style to put over the story—his style is not polished and is perhaps a trifle obscure—but upon the story itself. And though the stories all are of a similar mold they somehow are each one fresh and satisfying."

+ N Y Times p9 S 7 '24 600w

"Konrad Bercovici is capable of weaving gorgeous and eloquent tapestries, but he must give less thought to the decorations and more to the meaning of his pattern." J. J. Smertenko

+ — N Y Tribune p9 D 21 '24 1050w

BERCOVICI, KONRAD—Continued

"The eleven stories comprised in this volume deal with such simple but virile emotions, and concern such plain, unpretentious people that their plots will interest every grown man and woman." G. H. S.

+ N Y World p7e Ag 31 '24 150w

"The book is not one for cringingly sensitive souls or the over-civilized; the reader who would enjoy to the full must be willing to forget temporarily his ordered and comfortable world and digress for a little into one of splendid savagery."

Outlook 138:558 D 3 '24 200w

Springf'd Republican p7a O 26 '24 280w

BERESFORD, JOHN. Gossip of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. 208p $2.75 Knopf [8s 6d C. Sanderson]

914.2 England—Social life and customs. Analyticals 24-17265

"Mr. Beresford in six chapters gives us what he calls the human side of history in a series of glimpses at the lives of a few men and women from the grim, cold January 30th, 1649, through the last half of the seventeenth century to the reign of Queen Anne. The lives selected by him are those of Charles I, the younger John Donne, Anne Hyde, the Coke family in the reign of Queen Anne, and 'holy Mr. Herbert.' "—Nation and Ath

---

"John Beresford catches the flavor of antiquity in a group of essays, which are rambling, but which are not for a moment dull. He has industriously gathered the cream of antique hearsay and served its variety with pleasant enthusiasm." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p870 Jl 5 '24 90w

"Extraordinarily entertaining." Leonard Woolf

+ Nation and Ath 34:431 D 15 '23 380w

"Gossip in its favourable sense it certainly is; that is to say, the easy, unrestrained writing about characters and past events of a scholar who knows much more than other people, but takes in his subject the kind of interest which is shared by us all. Each essay is delightful and entertaining."

+ New Statesman 24:43 Ap 19 '24 250w

"Altogether the point about this highly interesting and informing book is not that it must be read by all those who have leisure for historical gossip, but that it should be read by others who should create the leisure for such things. After all, the large and showy events have turned on just these whispers and stirrings of neglected personalities behind the scenes, such as Mr. Beresford has so patiently captured and so well presented." Burton Kline

+ N Y Times p14 Jl 6 '24 900w

"Out of many a learned history of the period, which Mr. Beresford so charmingly peoples, we have learnt far less than from these 200 companionable pages."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p6 Ja 3 '24 1600w

BERESFORD, JOHN DAVYS. Unity. 334p $2 Bobbs [7s 6d Collins]

24-22677

"Mr. Willoughby was a small solicitor who [had] a wife, two ordinary children, and one extraordinary child, the younger daughter, who was both beautiful and psychic. As a typist in a city office she crosses the path of a harum-scarum young engineer, and marries him in spite of the certainty, conveyed to her by a momentary glance from an unknown man in a third-class railway carriage, that she can never love him absolutely. He takes her to the colonies and is duly drowned in Sydney Harbour. Thus Unity (not her baptismal name, but instinctively chosen) starts again as a young widow to find herself. The quest leads her through success as an actress to marriage with an adoring aristocrat. But she is still selling her birthright; wholeness is not yet, and there, telling her so through the back of her head, are the ever-remembered eyes of the man in the railway carriage, who turns up as the aristocrat's best man. The solution is tragically mysterious."—New Statesman

---

"This new novel will not enhance Mr. Beresford's reputation. It has, however, one excellently drawn character, Brian Jessup, and some good bits of description."

— + Int Bk R p902 N '24 320w

"Other writers in this time have gone deeper in the human heart than Mr. Beresford and have looked with less protective sentiment upon the human and social scene, have given us a greater and richer sense of time and space. In the character of Unity, perhaps, we have something of Mr. Beresford's own aspiration and partial frustration. For the essential modesty and the quiet seriousness of his presentation we are to be duly grateful." H. J. Seligmann

— + Lit R p4 O 18 '24 480w

"When Mr. Beresford is telling a magazine story he tells it infinitely better than anybody else. His commonplace characters are alive and engaging. This is particularly true of 'Unity,' which would be a perfect book of its kind, had he attempted nothing further. But the main idea of the book, the mystical relation between two souls is in Mr. Beresford's hands inartistic and unconvincing. It is with him neither good poetry nor good psychology, and it destroys, rather than creates, the harmony of the novel." G: Rylands

— + Nation and Ath 35:540 Jl 26 '24 350w

"Unity is a story fitted out with all the attractions required by the market, even more completely than is usual with this writer. . . As a story this has Mr. Beresford's usual defects—a curious flatness of tone and a creaking of machinery where invention seems to flag." J: Franklin

+ — New Statesman 23:548 Ag 16 '24 650w

"This new novel is very far from ranking with its author's best work. The dual theme is fumbled and blurred, and one never realizes Unity's different 'selves' as existing at all. . . Far better done is the portrait of her first husband, Brian Jessup, a real flesh and blood human being, the best drawn personality in the book."

— + N Y Times p9 S 21 '24 950w

Reviewed by Floyd Dell

N Y Tribune p3 N 16 '24 750w

"Mr. Beresford's defect, perhaps, is excess. He has both the argumentative and the creative powers so highly developed that they quarrel. He always writes finely; but here is argument and no conclusion." Gerald Gould

+ — Sat R 138:47 Jl 12 '24 500w

Reviewed by Clare Howard

Sat R of Lit 1:343 D 6 '24 800w

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley

Spec 132:134 Jl 26 '24 470w

"In all the technical side of imaginative writing Mr. Beresford is so admirable that we cannot help regretting his present love for dealing in abstractions. He has entire command over truth in detail, but the vital battery wants recharging."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p434 Jl 10 '24 400w

BERG, BENGT MAGNUS KRISTOFFER. The motherless; tr from the Swedish by Charles Wharton Stork. 234p $2 Doubleday

24-21357

A nature story translated from the Swedish which tells of two equally lonely beings—a boy and a bear cub, both motherless. The scene is set in the lonely north of Lapland. Told with the eloquence of utter simplicity the story brings a realization of the tie that binds the human being and the animal and of their common emotions.

Booklist 21:110 D '24

Reviewed by A. W. Porterfield

Bookm 60:526 D '24 650w

Cleveland p84 N '24

"The translation is a model of excellent English. From every standpoint, the book is an admirable story." Clement Wood

+ Lit R p2 S 13 '24 480w

N Y Tribune p7 D 21 '24 50w

"The tale is told, in the fluent translation of Charles Wharton Stork, in a casual tone that makes it little more than a recital of everyday activity, yet renders the details significant and colorful."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:232 O 25 '24 340w

BERGMAN, HJALMAR FREDERIK ELGERUS. God's orchid; tr. from the Swedish by E. Classen. 316p $2.50 Knopf

24-4263

The story is the narrative of a single memorable day in the annals of the little Swedish town of Wadköping. On that day the son of the local magnate, Harold Hilding Markurell, came up for his matriculation. To his ambitious father's fears for the uncertain result of the examination, which was most momentous to him and which he clumsily tried to influence, was added the shock of discovery on the same day that this idolized son was not his own. In the course of the brief drama of this important day, the chief people of the town appear, a rich gallery of types, whom a long digression in the narrative places in their proper relation to the plot and to each other.

Booklist 20:299 My '24

"The story should, and probably will, find grateful readers wherever a seemingly worthy but in reality frayed and insubstantial culture is being routed from its accustomed grooves by the onward march of industry." A. W. Porterfield

+ Lit R p591 Mr 15 '24 780w

"It is a full book, a rich book, and in its presentation of ordinary enough people has that quality of perpetual strangeness which is absorbing. . . The story becomes violent, poetic, fantastic, tragic, farcical, but never for a moment does it cease to ring true, and never is the unity of atmosphere broken." Forrest Reid

+ Nation and Ath 35:210 My 17 '24 250w

"The author writes well, and even translation does not wholly disguise the rapid, clever prose which prods so relentlessly into these personages. A high sensitivity toward delicate nuances of mind and a psychological perception of the vagaries of personality are, perhaps, the high points of Mr. Bergman's mind."

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 20 '24 780w

Reviewed by F. V. Roman

N Y World p7e Ja 27 '24 650w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p386 Je 19 '24 500w

BERL, EMMANUEL. Nature of love; auth. tr. by Fred Rothwell. 278p $2 Macmillan [12s 6d Chapman & H.]

157 Love 24-14498

The book is an inquiry into the psychology of love—its origin and nature. To the author love signifies religious feeling, friendship, patriotism, as well as the relation between a man and a woman, and his conception borders upon mysticism.

Reviewed by Woodbridge Riley

Bookm 60:223 O '24 1300w

"A French pedant discusses the most evasive and powerful force that the world has ever known, and discusses it with the usual French thoroughness, clarity, insight and vigor. For all that, his research into the nature of romantic love is encumbered with habitual slips into the dreadful lingo of his trade." J. Carter

+ — N Y Times p12 Ag 24 '24 880w

Outlook 138:138 S 24 '24 80w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 8 '24 700w

BERMAN, EDWARD. Labor disputes and the president of the United States. (Columbia univ. studies in history, economics and public law) 284p pa $3 Longmans

331.89 Strikes and lockouts. Presidents—United States 24-8649

"Beginning with President Cleveland's action in relation to the Pullman Strike of 1894, our Presidents have been more or less active in connection with labor disputes, and have more than once been called upon to avert or put an end to strikes. In this monograph Dr. Berman describes these activities of the Presidents in detail, estimates their effectiveness, and finally suggests the program which he deems best suited to bring about a prompt and just dealing with the problems arising in nation-wide strikes."—R of Rs

---

"It was not to be expected that much new light could be thrown upon a subject already fairly well treated in magazine articles and secondary works. Rather this study is noteworthy as the first scholarly account of the part which the President has played in labor disputes. Excellent source materials have been used, especially official government documents. The narrative is coherent, well-written and displays painstaking investigation. It would prove very helpful as collateral reading in history and economics courses." A. T. Mason

+ Am Pol Sci R 18:822 N '24 1050w

Bookm 59:adv Je '24 240w

R of Rs 70:110 Jl '24 70w

BERNAYS, EDWARD L. Crystallizing public opinion. 218p $2.50 Boni & Liveright

301 Public opinion. Publicity. Public relations counsel

The increasing attention given to direct efforts toward influencing public opinion by individuals, groups and movements that are dependent on public support for their success has given rise to a new profession, known as public relations counsel. Men and movements are taking pains to have themselves represented in the court of public opinion by the most skilful counselors obtainable. The book describes the conditions that have produced the need for this profession, its scope and functions, the character and origins of public opinion, the technique and methods employed by the public relations counsel, and his obligations to the public.

Am Pol Sci R 18:650 Ag '24 150w

Booklist 20:322 Je '24

"A short but remarkably clear study. A book that every business man as indeed every artist, should read." J. F.

+ Bookm 59:210 Ap '24 320w

Dial 76:468 My '24 150w

Lit R p907 Jl 19 '24 160w

"To the manufacturer desirous of a broader distribution for his product, or to one who wonders why the public does not demand his wares, this book will present some new ideas."

+ Management and Adm Je '24 140w

Reviewed by Ernest Gruening

Nation 118:sup450 Ap 16 '24 600w

"A careful study of the contents of his book is certain to give all his colleagues a better technical equipment for their work (which is a matter of minor moment) and a clear comprehension of the social character of their occupation, which is a most desirable result." H. J. Mankiewicz

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 6 '24 750w

"Mr. Bernays has made a definite contribution to the literature of the press. He has made a still more definite contribution to his own profession in seeking, and in committing himself to a higher plane for it. But Mr. Bernays might fare farther and faster if he did not seek so

BERNAYS, E: L.—Continued
palpably to avoid or avert the ancient odium of 'press agent.' " W. P. Beazell
+ — N Y World p7e Mr 16 '24 950w
Outlook 136:444 Mr 12 '24 50w
Springf'd Republican p8 F 22 '24 600w
Survey 51:714 Mr 15 '24 60w

BERNHEIMER, CHARLES LEOPOLD. 2 Rainbow Bridge. 182p il $6 Doubleday

917.92 Navajo mountain, Utah. Utah—Description and travel. Arizona—Description and travel 24-30499

The account of the Bernheimer expeditions in southern Utah and northern Arizona is based on a diary kept daily while in camp, and covers the journeys made in 1921, 1922, and 1923. Altho the 1921 expedition did not succeed in circling Navajo mountain, Mr Bernheimer's party visited the wonderful Rainbow Bridge recently discovered in an unexplored part of southern Utah and visited, since then, by only a few of the most hardy explorers. The 1922 expedition successfully circled Navajo mountain by packtrain. The book contains numerous illustrations from photographs, and three maps.

"One's only regret is that Mr. Bernheimer's book is likely to send hordes of tourists to Rainbow Bridge, spoiling its present solitary majesty. There will be a few among them, however, who will appreciate it as Mr. Bernheimer himself does." H. B.
+ Lit R p13 Ja 24 '25 250w

"Is the fascinating account by a well known New Yorker of his explorations during various recent expeditions to Southern Utah."
+ N Y World p9e N 30 '24 70w

"To those who know the magic of our southwestern country this region is a challenge not to be overlooked, and all these will dream dreams over this attractive book."
+ Outlook 139:70 Ja 14 '25 230w

"He is an acute observer and while not an artist in the use of language his description is often vivid, and always impresses one with a feeling of its accuracy. It is full of incident, not without humor."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:422 D 27 '24 320w

BERNSTEIN, HERMAN. Celebrities of our time. 347p $3 Joseph Lawren, 220 W. 42nd st., N.Y.

920 Biography

The author during the past fifteen years has met many celebrities in various lands and the interviews contained in this book are perhaps the most characteristic among the hundreds of talks he has had with famous men. Some of the interviews in this collection are those he had with Leo Tolstoy, Leonid Andreyev, Maximilian Harden, Bernard Shaw, August Rodin, Pope Benedict XV, Prince Peter Kropotkin, Leo Trotzky, Albert Einstein, Arthur Schnitzler, and Woodrow Wilson.

Boston Transcript p2 N 29 '24 1000w
Outlook 138:513 N 26 '24 10w

BERRY, EDWARD WILBER. Tree ancestors; a glimpse into the past. 270p il $3 Williams & Wilkins

561 Trees, Fossil 23-14589

"Popular, entertaining scientific work on the distribution of various important species of North American trees during geological ages, as determined from their fossil remains. An interesting feature is the series of maps which indicate present and past geographical distribution of the trees."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:357 Jl '24

BERRY, JAMES BERTHOLD. 2 Northern woodlot trees; a guide to the identification of trees and woods to accompany Farm woodlands; a handbook for students, teachers, farmers and woodsmen. (New-world agric. ser.) 214p il $1.20 World bk. [3s 6d Harrap]

582 Trees 24-6968

"Enables one to recognize the important trees of northern United States. Includes properties and uses."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:593 D '24

BERTHOUD, ALFRED. 2 New theories of matter and the atom; tr. from the French by Eden and Cedar Paul. 259p $3.50 Macmillan [10s 6d Allen & U.]

541.2 Matter. Atoms 24-25440

"The subject is presented under the following headings: introductory; the electromagnetic and electronic theory; the theory of relativity and mass; X-rays and atomic number; radioactivity and isotopism; Rutherford's atom and the transmutation of the elements; Bohr's atom and the theory of quanta; the constitution of complex atoms in relation to the emission of X-rays; atomic structure and chemical affinity."—J Phys Chem

"The volume brings our knowledge of the constitution of matter up to date, and suggests innumerable problems."
Boston Transcript p3 O 18 '24 650w

Reviewed by W. D. Bancroft
J Phys Chem 28:1227 N '24 2450w

"M. Berthoud's book is excellent, and gives just the information which an intelligent reader ought to desire." Bertrand Russell
+ Nation and Ath 35:782 S 27 '24 350w

"For those who are sufficiently interested in the subject to read about it with close attention we cannot recommend a better book than this by Professor Berthoud."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p414 Jl 3 '24 1000w

BERTHOUD, FERDINAND. Legs Parsons; a story of up-country Africa. 310p $2 Minton, Balch & co.
24-9271

A story of Africa in the days of ox-wagon trekking, when trips into the interior were rare and dangerous. Two rival expeditions set out in quest of some mysterious diamond fields in darkest Africa. During the long months on the veldt, weird adventures befall them and in their dealings with the tribes in the heart of Africa they glimpse a few of the strange beliefs and superstitions of the natives and encounter some quite inexplicable mysteries.

"The story is fairly well written, with a cautious eye to suspense and setting. To those who regret the passing of the wild, game-filled plains of our West, this tale will prove an antidote, for the author knows his wild life."
+ — Boston Transcript p4 My 7 '24 300w

"It could never be regarded as literature. Its plot is as unreal and sensational as any moving picture scenario. One gets from the book little enough idea of Africa as that continent really is." Llewelyn Powys
— Lit R p803 Je 7 '24 460w

"Mr. Berthoud knows his Africa with its vastness, hugeness, vacantness and mystery. And the value of his novel lies chiefly in that fact. Greater than the interest of his narrative—greater than his skill in depicting characters of unusual appeal is his ability to bring to the printed page something of the thrill of pioneer days and experiences. He has drawn in vivid strokes a life that is no longer vivid, that even to the older inhabitants is becoming blurred and faded."
+ N Y Times p16 Ap 27 '24 700w

"Mr. Berthoud is scarcely an adept in narration. But he carries us into a fresh environment made lively with a variety of unaccustomed details and incidents. His story is not all melodrama and the least that can be said of the melodramatic passages is that they are sincere melodrama and utterly clean. Some of the life and human nature he tells of may be raw, but his outdoor viewpoint makes him stop at that."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Je 1 '24 340w

BEST moving pictures of 1922-1923; ed. by R. E. Sherwood. 346p il $2.50 Small

778 Moving pictures (23-17906)

"The motion picture editor of 'Life' and of 'The New York Herald' offers the first number of what should prove to be a hardy and welcome annual. Out of the four hundred miles of film he saw during the period under consideration he has chosen as the feature pictures he liked best the following sixteen: 'Nanook of the North,' 'Grandma's Boy,' 'Blood and Sand,' 'The Prisoner of Zenda,' 'The Eternal Flame,' 'Shadows,' 'Oliver Twist,' 'Robin Hood,' 'Peg 'o My Heart,' 'When Knighthood was in Flower,' 'Driven,' 'The Pilgrim,' 'Down to the Sea in Ships,' 'The Covered Wagon,' 'Hollywood' and 'Merry-Go-Round.' The publication includes a year-book of the American screen and a motion picture 'Who's Who.' "—N Y Tribune

Booklist 20:256 Ap '24

+ Bookm 58:678 F '24 80w

"He approaches his subject with fairness and courage, blended with discrimination of a high order." C: Chaplin

+ Int Bk R p346 Ap '24 1200w

"Those who do not agree with him at least cannot accuse him of having no definite reason for his contentions, for every picture named is exhaustively discussed in his own admirable manner."

+ Lit R p619 Mr 22 '24 140w

"An informative and really necessary volume for all students, critics and fans in general."

+ N Y Tribune p25 Ja 20 '24 150w

Springf'd Republican p8 Jl 23 '24 60w

Wis Lib Bul 20:66 Mr '24

BETHEA, JACK. Bed rock. 355p $2 Houghton
2

24-24689

"It takes the kick of a mule to bring Warren Blackford to rights with his wife, his boss, and the world in general. The story begins in the city offices of a big coal corporation, and in the very first chapter Blackford is face to face with a mistake of his own making which puts him into hot water for long chapters to follow. After a way all his own, our young hero has won the daughter of the big boss as a way to promotion. His boss sends the young man to Coventry, which in this case is a most undesirable mine post in Alabama, thinking thus to set his daughter free. The young wife, however, elects to go with her husband. So Mrs. Blackford comes in for the rough life which falls of plotted purpose to her husband's share. The mule's kick caps the climax to a series of assaults and violent disorders, including one attack by dynamite."—N Y World

"The author knows his subject—coal mining in Alabama—at first hand and the struggles of the camp superintendent against boot-legging, sabotage and crooked employees is told in a lively and convincing manner."

+ Booklist 21:151 Ja '25

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 7 '25 300w

"After reading the first dozen pages of Mr. Jack Bethea's novel entitled 'Bed Rock,' any experienced novel reader will easily be able to outline the entire course of the narrative. For the tale departs in no smallest degree from the stereotyped form of such narratives, even to the strike and the convenient injury which serve to bring the hero and heroine together at the end. However, the author does manage to give a fairly interesting account of the workings of an Alabama coal mine and camp, with an amount of detail which indicates that he thoroughly knows the region whereof he writes."

— + N Y Times p21 D 28 '24 450w

N Y World p8e D 7 '24 220w

BETT, HENRY. Nursery rhymes and tales. 130p $2 Holt [5s Methuen]

398 Nursery rhymes. Folklore [24-12399]

The book traces the origin of the nursery rhymes and tales which are found in so many variations all over the world. Some of these are of surprising antiquity and have their origin in the nature myths that were a part of man's early traditions. Some of the rhymes to which children have persistently clung are the "counting out rhymes" common to every language. The author devotes a chapter to these and another to some of the constant elements in children's tales—fairies, dwarfs and giants. The last chapter is given to the group of stories which involve a long series of animals, like The house that Jack built.

"Erudition is there, but it is not particularly impressive either in quality or quantity, and as for the fancy, it is of the bedside manner variety that appeals only to the very young or the very old."

— New Statesman 23:328 Je 21 '24 340w

"The cover of 'Nursery Rhymes and Tales, their Origin and History,' by Henry Bett, claims that it 'is the first book to give an account of these odd and romantic origins.' It is rather unfair to a good and quite unpretentious little book to send it out with such a label. The subject is a good one, and a great deal has been written about it, not always of much value."

Sat R 137:418 Ap 19 '24 250w

"A most fascinating book, which the reader will want to keep, and to which he will often refer."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p226 Ap 10 '24 280w

BEVERIDGE, ALBERT JEREMIAH. Art of public speaking. 67p $1 Houghton

808.5 Public speaking 24-19338

"Considering first the matter and then the manner of public speaking, the author gives definite, brief, but, on the whole, comprehensive advice and counsel to the would-be orator. And he stresses constantly the necessity of working hard if one wishes to attain proficiency in the art. That oratory is an art, and an important one, he insists, and it is on that conception of it that he bases his treatment of the subject. And he thinks any young man of average intelligence can make an acceptable public speaker of himself if he will work hard and determinedly toward that purpose."—N Y Times

Booklist 21:102 D '24

"A thoughtful reading of this little book will be of great help to those aspiring to become effective public speakers."

+ Boston Transcript p5 N 22 '24 220w

"A concise and practical volume."

+ Management and Adm 8:430 O '24 30w

"He has written this very practical little book to give the advice that so eminent a practitioner of the art of oratory is well equipped to offer to those who are ambitious to become skilled and masterful in public speaking."

+ N Y Times p23 S 14 '24 480w

Springf'd Republican p8 S 6 '24 800w

BEVERIDGE, ALBERT JEREMIAH. State of the nation. 276p $3 Bobbs

353 United States—Politics and Government 24-11022

"The book deals with five aspects of our national life, each one basic, namely: Our foreign relations, the Constitution and the Supreme Court, the railroads, Government red tape (bureau rule), and the status of the President. Mr. Beveridge shows up, in the first place, that vein of poisonous hypocrisy which, by means of propaganda seeks to impose upon us foreign obligations wholly inspired by selfishness. He makes it plain that if we should yield to these 'claims' we would be merely catering to this selfishness without really accomplishing anything permanent for the peace of the world. He exposes with fine temper and unerring insight the efforts now being made to weaken the Constitution and the Supreme Court. His survey of the railroads is admirable. His authoritative and quite painful description of our bureau rule, with its gargantuan and hideous incompetence and extravagance, and, finally, his analysis of the Presidential office—all these problems are dealt with in a direct and thoroughly comprehensive manner."—Lit R

BEVERIDGE, A. J.—Continued

Booklist 21:7 O '24

"Profound, able and courageous. Above all, as he advises the lawyers of the United States to do, he carries his message to the people in the language of the people. Let us hope that many will read it." S. L. C.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 11 '24 1300w

"Senator Beveridge has produced a book notable for clarity, common sense, and that sort of serviceable condensation which concentrates itself on a few fundamentals, rather than to wander all over the map. He knows instinctively what to omit, which is one of the rare rules of real literature. He is fair. Above all, he is honest. It is natural and colloquial, almost too much so. The author is free from Freudian complexes, refreshing in his native simplicity. But we are bound in honor to declare, on the other hand, that the book has defects." T: L. Masson
+ — Lit R p818 Je 14 '24 800w

"It can only be said that public interest in it would be greatly enhanced if the Presidential lightning should happen to strike the subject. It is the fate of all campaign literature to gain or lose in value according to the rise or fall of the candidate's political fortunes." N: Roosevelt
N Y Times p27 My 11 '24 220w

"On the whole this book presents a brilliant, virile, illuminating and courageous discussion of subjects of which no conscientious citizen should remain in ignorance." C. G. Bowers
+ N Y World p7e My 18 '24 850w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:355 Jl '24
R of Rs 69:669 Je '24 230w

BEZARD, JULIEN. My class in composition; a teacher's diary, tr. and adapted from the French by Phyllis Robbins, with an introd. by Rollo Walter Brown. 268p il $2.50 Harvard univ. press
407 Language and languages—Study and teaching. English language—Rhetoric
23-14822

"A few years ago Rollo Walter Brown put American teachers in his debt by his account of French methods of teaching composition ('How the French Boy Learns to Write'). M. Bezard's book is a sort of sequel and illustration of Mr. Brown's. It takes us into the classroom of an enthusiastic and skilful teacher and shows what he expects of his boys, how he cooperates with them, and something of what they accomplish. The volume is a series of extracts from a teacher's day-book, or record of assignments, suggestions, and criticisms, with many specimen themes. The course consists of a series of theme assignments, beginning with subjects based on observation, such as anecdotes of town and village life, or memories of school, and proceeding through longer and more carefully planned papers on topics familiar to boys, such as stamp-collecting and the making of an herbarium, to subjects drawn from the history and literature which the pupils are studying in other courses."—Nation

---

Booklist 20:285 My '24

Reviewed by Clarence Stratton
Educ R 68:110 S '24 400w

"The uniqueness of the process described in Mr. Bezard's diary is at first dazzling, and, though it would be valuable in any school one feels certain that, used by a teacher of less vivid and less facile mind, it would fall far short of the result he gains. His charming personal quality stands out from his pages, and one may feel sure that the persuasion of his personality has done as much to develop excellent writers among his boys as his ingenious method may have done." Stanley Alden
+ Lit R p426 Ja 5 '24 700w

"There are obvious objections to some features of this method. To require of a class themes so uniformly planned that parts shall be interchangeable involves a serious sacrifice of individual initiative and spontaneity, even when the plan is the result of the collaboration of the class with the teacher. In America, I am pretty certain, the best students would not do their best work within such limits; French pupils are probably more docile. In spite of such objections, however, M. Bezard's methods can give us invaluable help." H. E. Woodbridge
+ — Nation 117:742 D 26 '23 700w

"It shows the French method at its best, and thereby our defects. It is valuable, too, for its simple revelation of M. Bezard at work. It shows a teacher with an alert and vivacious mind and immense faith in his students."
+ Springf'd Republican p12 My 16 '24 650w

BIBESCO, ELIZABETH (ASQUITH) (PRINCESS ANTOINE BIBESCO). The fir and the palm. 284p $2 Putnam [7s 6d Hutchinson]
24-4584

Very subtle and sophisticated and brilliant in dialog is this story of the exquisite Lady Horsham, who was loved by all who knew her except the one man whom she loved herself. Lord Horsham had rescued her at eighteen from poverty and a gambling father and put her in a setting of luxury and loveliness and devotion He was forty and fastidious and adored his wife, but he kept from her the knowledge of his passion out of regard for her youth and inexperience. Her own passion was awakened by Toby, a charming cad who had no thought for anyone but himself. It was thru her revealing experience with Toby that Helen became conscious of her husband's love and that she could not respond to it.

"For all the abounding poesy and moonbeams, 'The Fir and the Palm' proves spritely recreation after such heavy doses of ash-cans and arm-pits as we have had from our own young realists recently." Irene Ellis
+ — Detroit News p14 Mr 30 '24 480w

"The plan of the story is simply not consistent with the laws of human nature as we know them. For the rest the book is well done. The Princess's style is reasonably pleasing, her character drawing for the most part good."
+ — Lit R p693 Ap 19 '24 300w

"That Princess Bibesco's brilliant novel should be only a little marred by its brilliance will seem to those who know the author's short stories a tribute to its qualities. The essence of the novel transcends its trappings, and yet one cannot help wishing that the décor were less obtrusive—the perfumes fainter, the objets d'art fewer—and the talk less uniformly epigrammatic." Grace Frank
+ — Nation 118:655 Je 4 '24 380w
Nation and Ath 34:704 F 16 '24 500w

Reviewed by Alvin Johnson
New Repub 38:48 Mr 5 '24 1000w

"A very game piece of work. I hope that the author's next book will be equally ambitious." Raymond Mortimer
+ New Statesman 22:454 Ja 26 '24 520w

"There are some clever bits scattered here and there through the novel, and occasionally a little rather graceful writing. But there is a brittle quality to it all, a self-conscious 'smartness' which is not particularly appealing, while Helen is one of those numerous heroines whose remarkable intelligence, brilliancy and charm the reader is obliged to accept on the say-so of the other people in the book, and especially of the author, who seems to admire her extremely."

— + N Y Times p9 F 10 '24 330w

"The story is hardly more than a novelette at best and the plot is spun on so amazingly slender a thread, and one already so worn, that the one really remarkable thing about the book is that the thread holds. The characters are like some pretty puppets one might see at a marionette show, taking one's mind off more important matters by their trivial but none the less diverting nonsense, and which one forgets as soon as the curtain is rung down." Dorothea Castles

— + N Y Tribune p25 Je 22 '24 600w

"In 'The Fir and the Palm,' the Princess-author's style and narrative detail are far better than the carrying of her story scheme. The book shines in its small talk and sparkles in its epigrams." E. W. Osborn

+ — N Y World p7e Mr 2 '24 400w

"Princess Bibesco in this book has produced something even better than was forecast in her two earlier and slighter works. Those were at once brilliant and profound, but this is on a grander scale. There is plenty of brilliance still, but there is less glitter to it and more illumination." Gerald Gould

+ Sat R 137:89 Ja 26 '24 850w

Spec 132:252 F 16 '24 100w

"If the sparks fly with some of the noise of a forge and hammer, still they are dazzling at times. The flotilla of bright balloons launched not so long ago by this writer led one to suppose that next time she would fly a kite with considerable tug to it. But this is only a dipping thing."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p39 Ja 17 '24 650w

BIBESCO, MARTHE LUCIE (LAHOVARY) (PRINCESS G. V. BIBESCO). Isvor, the country of willows; tr. by Hamish Miles. 244p $3 Stokes

914.98 Rumania

"Isvor" is a description of Rumania and the lives of Rumanian peasants. Writing from her ancestral estate of Brancoran castle, Princess Bibesco pictures with sympathy and understanding her country and people, their customs, religion and folklore.

Lit R p13 D 27 '24 350w

"This is a book of exceeding beauty; remote yet not unreal, seen through a glass neither dark nor rose-coloured."

+ Nation and Ath 36:338 N 29 '24 750w

New Repub 41:126 D 24 '24 500w

"I have read the original, and I can see she has been most fortunate in her translator. He has caught her style very well; its smoothness and lightness and luxurious simplicity. It is saturated in sentiment, but it is not sentimental. It is a mine for folk-lorists, and a scrap-book for people who love pen-pictures."

+ New Statesman 24:204 N 22 '24 300w

"Because she can set these things down with a certain poetical approach and sympathy her book takes on a unity that the scattered scenes and leaps from reality to folklore would seem to make impossible. But as it is, a spirit runs through the book, and one understands that the old pagan world is not quite dead and that it runs in the blood of living people just as it exists in the calm atmosphere about the scattered stones of Stonehenge."

+ N Y Times p16 N 30 '24 750w

"With no basis in experience by which to judge the truthfulness of the stories in which Princess Bibesco has bridged the gap between great lady and peasant to set down the life flowering in her lands, I am convinced by their beauty and humanity. And surely such smooth and simple English must mark a good translation." Mary Ross

+ N Y Tribune p5 D 21 '24 500w

"Unpretentious and charming, 'Isvor' is a book of books." Muna Lee

+ N Y World p8e N 30 '24 340w

"Seldom is a book of such accomplishment afforded us. The matter and its manner of rhythmic prose are in entire harmony. Here is the fine flower and quintessence of delicacy."

+ Sat R 138:574 D 6 '24 460w

BIBLE. WHOLE—SELECTIONS. Century readings in the Bible; ed. with introductions and notes by John W. Cunliffe and Henry M. Battenhouse. 2v in 1 384;277p $2.85 Century

220

The aim of this volume is to present, from those portions of the Bible which are of living interest to the present day, such selections as have literary excellence in a form suitable for use in class or for private study.

"One can hardly imagine a more valuable aid than this volume for a rudimentary understanding of the Scriptures. The scholastic reputation of the editors is a guarantee that the work has been well done."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 25 '24 280w

J Religion 4:442 Jl '24 50w

"This selection by Profs Cunliffe and Battenhouse is unquestionably one of the best."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Je 9 '24 300w

BIBLE. WHOLE—SELECTIONS. Living Word; the Bible abridged for public and private reading; ed. and arranged with notes, by Henry Hallam Saunderson. 709p $3 Century

220

This book of selections from the Old and New Testament is made up of the most loved and read passages in the Bible. These are woven together in chapters under appropriate headings. The language is that of the standard versions.

Bookm 59:adv Ap '24 70w

"Mr. Saunderson has gathered nearly three hundred Scripture lessons arranged and grouped so as to emphasize their beauty. Any prejudice that may be conjured up in objection to such an abridgment is idle, inasmuch as earnest students of the Bible are accustomed to underline and otherwise mark the passages which have an especial appeal and errand. That is an individual abridgment, not to be criticised or scorned."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 15 '24 190w

Ind 112:157 Mr 15 '24 30w

"One dares to prophesy that this book will do more to increase the knowledge of the Bible to-day than any new translation or retelling could possibly do."

+ N Y World p7e Je 1 '24 280w

BIBLE. OLD TESTAMENT. Old Testament; a
2 new translation by James Moffatt. v 1 560p $2.50 Doran

221

Dr Moffatt's translation, a really new translation and not an adaptation from any previous version, is a rendering of the Old Testament into modern English. The first volume carries the translation thru the book of Esther.

"After eight years of labor he has given a translation which, while preserving the 'Oriental flavor of the original texts,' is written boldly and fearlessly in intelligible English of today. All the obscurity and obsolete phraseology of the King James version is gone. Gone also it must be admitted is much of the beauty and imagery of the old version, but the language is nearer the exact truth." T. C. R.

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 24 '25 450w

BIBLE. OLD TESTAMENT—Continued

"The interpretation before us is certainly novel and we are filled with alarm lest it should prove to be welcome to those modern minds which find no sanction in antiquity, and which are unable to perceive that in his efforts to produce a 'popular version,' as he himself calls it, or a 'brighter' Bible, Dr. Moffat cannot escape the charge of stark vulgarity." Bohun Lynch

— Lit R p1 Ja 24 '25 2750w

R of Rs 71:111 Ja '25 100w

"There is no doubt that Prof Moffat's translation is an exceedingly competent work. It has a critical apparatus—the use of italics, parenthesis, etc.—which helps the reader to distinguish sources. There are passages where the directness and clarity of the modern phrasing bring out new meaning. It is, of course, a more literal translation, and like all literal translations it may gain as well as lose."

+ — Springf'd Republican p8 D 13 '24 1200w

BIBLE. NEW TESTAMENT—APOCRYPHA. Apocryphal new testament; tr. by M. R. James. 584p $3.50 Oxford [10s Milford]

229

"This is the first book to supply the English reader with a comprehensive view of the apocryphal literature connected with the New Testament. It contains fresh translations of all the important texts, and makes available the results of recent researches into their origin, history and value."—Springf'd Republican

"This is a contribution of value to the history of Christian thought and a useful compilation for the student of Christian history in the subapostolic times."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 24 '24 150w

"An invaluable compilation."

+ New Statesman 23:259 Je 7 '24 950w

"His translations are notably well turned and at times worthy of comparison with the Authorized Version. He has made a book universally valuable. Devout Christian, comparative mythologist and sceptic will each find in it what he seeks; and each, if he seeks diligently, will come away enriched." Alan Porter

+ Spec 132:675 Ap 26 '24 1200w

Springf'd Republican p7a My 25 '24 110w

"No one could have been found better equipped for the work than Dr. James. A competent New Testament scholar, an exceptionally learned student of early Christian literature, an eminent medievalist, himself the discoverer and editor of unknown Apocrypha, he was pre-eminently fitted to handle this vast and often chaotic mass of material. The translation is, as we should anticipate, entirely new, not a revision of an older rendering."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p262 My 1 '24 2000w

BICKLEY, FRANCIS LAURANCE. Adventures of Harlequin. 120p il $2.50 Dutton

The old story of Harlequin and Columbine and their joyous adventures, told in a new way. After one of his pranks Harlequin runs away and meets Scaramouche. Harlequin dances beautifully and Scaramouche plays the mandolin, so they decide to join forces and go to Venice. Here they meet pretty Violetta, the innkeeper's daughter; the cowardly Captain Spavente; mournful Lady Isabella; poor Pierrot; cross old Doctor Pantaloon and his beautiful daughter, Columbine. Between Harlequin and Columbine a charming love affair develops and "all's well that ends well." This love affair ends most ideally.

"'It is all as delicately iridescent, and as intangible, as foam o' the sea."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 13 '24 200w

"Old friends of the ages come back to us again in this charming little fantasy, made into an attractive book with many illustrations both in black and white and in color."

+ Lit R p986 Ag 23 '24 120w

"Author and artist have collaborated equally to make this such a gay and charming little book that only a very dour soul will not be lured into at least a peep. And it is so much blither and gayer inside than it is out, that whoever takes a peep at the beginning is not likely to stop until he finds 'finis.' "

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 17 '24 1000w

BIDWELL, ALICE TOWNSEND, and ROSENSTIEL, ISABELLE DENISON. Places of English literature. 288p $2 Stratford

820.3 English literature. Literary landmarks 24-14148

A literary guide to the places in the British Isles in any way connected with English writers and their works. The names of the writers are arranged chronologically, the places connected with important events in their lives are given, and those of their books about which geographical information is offered are listed after the author's names. There are three alphabetical indexes, of places, of authors and of books.

"The biographical sketches are brief and comprehensive, the index is equally brief, but neither always complete nor comprehensive. The scheme of the book is so original and valuable that it is unfortunate that it was not prepared more skillfully."

+ — Boston Transcript p6 Jl 16 '24 160w

"The volume is unique among handbooks of travel and will be very useful to teachers and students of English literature."

+ N Y Times p20 Jl 13 '24 220w

"In spite of the fact that the book makes no claim as a guide, the reader will regret that it includes no literary map. This omission does not prove it a careless publication, however; on the contrary it possesses three excellent indexes. The book may aid the student of English literature who wishes to tour England intelligently."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 14 '24 180w

BIERSTADT, EDWARD HALE. Great betrayal; a survey of the Near East problem; with the editorial assistance of Helen Davidson Creighton; foreword by Edward Capps. 345p il $2.50 McBride

949.6 Near East 24-16026

The book is an attempt to explain as far as possible, without reference to some important documents to which the government at Washington forbids access, the facts about those events which have since the war so tragically changed the political and racial conditions of southeastern Europe. Among the subjects Mr Bierstadt treats are the betrayal of Christian minorities in Turkey, the sacrifice of American religious and educational work, the foreign policies of the great powers, including the United States, which represent private commercial, not public, interests, and the desertion of Greece by the allied governments. 140 appendix pages provide documents and reports. Index.

Am Pol Sci R 18:831 N '24 120w

"This book cannot bring to life the thousands who died miserably in Smyrna, nor restore to their homes those who were driven into the interior. But it can and will shed a light on American imperialism that serves to illuminate certain powerful hands working for economic control in the Near East."

+ Bookm 60:232 O '24 270w

"A book like The Great Betrayal, which is a scholarly, honest, and clear attempt to set before the public the real truth about the greatest tragedy of modern times is worthy of attention and consideration. The Great Betrayal should be read by everyone who loves distributive justice, above all it should be read, and carefully read, by every American." R. B.-D.

+ Cath World 120:273 N '24 1600w

Cleveland p87 N '24

Reviewed by Silas Bent

N Y Times p3 S 14 '24 2300w

BINDLOSS, HAROLD. Carson of Red river (Eng title The lute player). 340p $1.90 Stokes 24-21916

It was Kit Carson's habit to trust his luck and follow joyous adventure, so when his shipbuilding company in England discharges him for apparent dishonesty, he sails for the Canadian wilds, determining to start life anew. With the aid of his violin he finds employment as a cook in a bridge-builder's camp, and this event marks the beginning of a new career for Kit. The subsequent hardships he undergoes and the grave dangers he faces finally bring him a man's job and the love of a brave, beautiful girl. But his love for Alison Forsyth involves the question of honor, for in England is a girl whom Kit promised to marry. The problem is happily solved for Kit and Alison in a most unexpected way.

Boston Transcript p4 D 17 '24 160w

"It is too realistic for the movies, and yet it does present an elaborate scene of the new places of the Northwest." A. D. Douglas

Int Bk R p858 N '24 140w

"Mr. Bindloss is master of a crisp, facile technique. His plots have plausibility, his dialogue animation. To the host of pent-in city dwellers who largely make up his following this newest yarn should prove no disappointment. It is Bindloss at his best." H. A. Jaggard, jr.

+ Lit R p9 O 25 '24 270w

BINDLOSS, HAROLD. Green timber (Eng title Andrew's folly). 335p $1.90 Stokes 24-5500

Andrew Grier, laird of the Rowans, is a youth in whom the call of the sea and adventure is strong. There are two girls in his life: Margaret, a person of exemplary habits, and Minnie, less exemplary but more charming. Margaret renounces Andrew because of his friendship for Minnie, and Andrew goes off to Canada where he tries to build up his inherited business, against the opposition of the unscrupulous grandson of his partner. Here he meets Lucille who falls in love with him, but unfortunately for interest's sake, Andrew remains true to Margaret, and the story ends hopefully with a promise of their happiness. There are many passages of description of the sea and the Canadian wilds.

Boston Transcript p6 Ap 19 '24 520w

"The descriptive passages dealing with ships are among the author's best, but for the most part his characters are lifeless puppets that rarely achieve the semblance of flesh and blood."

— + N Y Times p27 Ap 20 '24 400w

N Y Tribune p25 Je 22 '24 300w

"Followers of the Harold Bindloss school of fiction with its inevitable Canadian forest wilds, its evil men, its struggle of man to man and its triumph in the winning of the only girl, will welcome the appearance of 'Green Timber.'" E. W. Osborn

N Y World p7e Mr 16 '24 80w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 27 '24 130w

BINYON, LAURENCE. Ayuli; a play in three acts. (British drama league ser.) 152p $1.50 Appleton [3s 6d Blackwell]

822 24-12309

The scene of the play is set in a kingdom of eastern Asia and its theme is the love of the king for a beautiful woman. Increased by her growing power over the king and in the affairs of the realm, the people plot vengeance against her. One or the other of the lovers must be sacrificed, and Ayuli's love proves equal to the test.

"'Ayuli' is in the tradition of Stephen Phillips; it is made up of blank verse and perfumes, minstrelsy, an 'æsthetic' king, loyal and traitorous chamberlains, moonlight, lotuses, a ruined palace, and the Ideal Beauty personified in a voluptuous queen." Bonamy Dobrée

— Nation and Ath 34:896 Mr 22 '24 150w

"Of the lyric powers of Laurence Binyon there has never been any doubt in the minds of those who read his drama of King Arthur. And that there has been no diminution of these powers is evident in the present play." P. A. Hutchison

+ N Y Times p6 Je 15 '24 300w

"The lack of 'body' in Mr Binyon's poetic play, Ayuli, comes from what looks like a fundamental misconception of the central character. There are lovely lines and passages in the play; but the whole cannot be read without some impatience."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p205 Ap 3 '24 130w

BINYON, LAURENCE, comp. Golden treasury ² of modern lyrics. 370p $1.75 (7s 6d) Macmillan

821.08 English poetry—Collections 24-28477

The original Golden Treasury, first published in 1861, barred out the work of writers still living at that time, and thus the chief Victorian poets were excluded. Mr Binyon's sequel is designed to continue the original anthology thru the Victorian age to the present day, and in effect covers nearly a century.

"About Mr. Binyon's choices from the works of his poets lively discussion may be expected, especially in regard to Tennyson, but none the less this cultivated and sensitive anthologist has given us another golden volume to rejoice the life of thousands." K. L. Bates

+ Lit R p4 D 27 '24 360w

Nation and Ath 36:340 N 29 '24 40w

"It cannot be expected to equal the first 'Golden Treasury' in lyrical purity. The selections, granting some difficulty in the scheme, are made with judicious taste. They show that the tradition of English poetry is being carried on and that the more individualistic modern emphasis has not resulted in vital departures from either classical English diction or verse forms. The mere eccentricities Mr Binyon has sanely ignored."

Springf'd Republican p10 D 17 '24 250w

"Mr. Binyon is himself distinguished both as a poet and as a lover of poetry; and his verdict on the workmanship of others will carry great weight."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p759 N 20 '24 800w

BIRKENHEAD, FREDERICK EDWIN SMITH, earl. America revisited. 213p $2.50 Little [7s 6d Cassell]

341 International law and relations. Reconstruction (European war) 24-14606

The Earl of Birkenhead was Lord high chancellor of England during the premiership of Lloyd George. All the addresses reprinted in this volume were delivered in the United States or Canada, except the last which was his rectorial address before the University of Glasgow. The first speech is a discussion of the position of the United States in relation to European affairs; the second is concerned with prohibition in the United States; the subject of the third is the position of Canada in the British Empire; the fourth, Problems left by the war, is his much criticised address before the Institute of politics at Williamstown in 1923; the fifth and sixth, delivered before the American and the Canadian bar association respectively, are concerned with political and legal philosophy and international law.

BIRKENHEAD, F:—Continued
Reviewed by I. W. Lawrence
Boston Transcript p4 Je 21 '24 1500w
Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
Lit R p902 Jl 19 '24 350w
Outlook 137:614 Ag 20 '24 40w

"It may be that a man of great intellectual powers who is engaged in active politics is inclined to overestimate the ignorance of the average audience; but Lord Birkenhead should at least have realized that the essay on the United States to-day with which the book opens is so trivial in its substance and so flimsy in its treatment as not to be worth reprinting."
— The Times [London] Lit Sup p379 Je 19 '24 650w

BIRRELL, AUGUSTINE. More obiter dicta. 220p $2.25 Scribner [7s 6d Heinemann]
824

"The essays in this volume cover a wide range of time and subject. Newman—a personality which has always fascinated Mr. Birrell—Byron, Nollekens, Chateaubriand, Francis Place, Fielding, Susan Ferrier, Law Reform, Reading—on all of these Mr. Birrell has something new, and something exciting to say in papers which were written between 1890 and 1922."—New Statesman

Booklist 21:102 D '24

"All are provocative. Therein lies their charm, but the collection is not for hasty skimming—is any book of essays, for that matter? The thin volume whets the appetite, leads to marginal notes, adds to one's lists of books which must be read, sends one to bookshelves to read the volumes reviewed instead of continuing to follow slavishly the reviewer." E. B. T.
+ Boston Transcript p4 O 18 '24 600w
Nation 119:527 N 12 '24 100w

"Age has not wearied Mr. Birrell's humour; nor have the years condemned his whimsicality. He remains as delightful a companion as ever, and he need have no fear that the reader, laying down his new volume, will cry, 'Hold! Enough!' "
+ Nation and Ath 35:450 Jl 5 '24 380w
Reviewed by R. M. Lovett
New Repub 40:76 S 17 '24 1000w

"Old as some of the essays are, and slight as are others, it is surprising how little they date, and how rare it is to find a page which does not provoke thought or provide entertainment." R. E. R.
+ New Statesman 23:500 Ag 2 '24 1100w
Reviewed by P. A. Hutchison
N Y Times p11 S 7 '24 1000w

"Mr. Birrell formulates no philosophy, and that is often a virtue. The attitude which prevails implicitly in his criticism is that one can safely order his life upon the basis of good taste in thought and feeling and good form in conduct. He is, in short, the patron essayist of the 'saving remnant' who make of literature a graceful garment, and who remain now, as always, a constant if not very energetic influence upon the writing and publication of literary criticism." G. H. Carson
+ N Y Tribune p5 S 21 '24 600w

"The merit of such a book as this is that, open it where you will, you will never fail of pleasant entertainment, an entertainment always enriched by the substance which is supplied only by a humane and cultured mind." Martin Armstrong
+ Spec 132:199 Ag 9 '24 310w

"The attraction of the book lies in the multitude of bird-like thoughts that pop into and out of Mr. Birrell's mind, some of them to find expression so happy that they more than counteract occasional clumsiness in the intervals between their visits. . . More and more, as we read in the book, do we look out for the savour of that delicate malice which is the spicing of the whole."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p432 Jl 10 '24 750w

BISHOP, JOSEPH BUCKLIN. A. Barton Hepburn; his life and service to his time. 421p il $3 Scribner
B or 92 Hepburn, Alonzo Barton 23-18394

The subject of this biography was an influential figure in American financial affairs for forty years, from 1880 to the end of the World war. Educated as a lawyer, financial matters more and more claimed his attention and he became successively superintendent of banks, United States bank examiner and comptroller of the treasury. Thereafter he was engaged in banking in New York city, being president of the Chase national bank for twelve years.

"It is the story of many of our foremost Americans, often told, yet always attractive and fascinating. And in this instance it is told in such attractive, altogether delightful phrase, that the reader quite overlooks the commonplace nature of the story of the early years. With vast diligence, Dr. Bishop has sought out not a few of the companions of Mr. Hepburn's early years, and from them succeeded in obtaining many anecdotes of these by-gone days, which, together, form a narrative of the most charming sort." E. J. Carpenter
+ Boston Transcript p4 D 22 '23 1100w
Cleveland p21 Mr '24

"The biography of the late A. Barton Hepburn is of the sort that peculiarly 'comes home to men's business and bosoms,' and hence is in its way even more instructive and encouraging to the average man than are the life-histories of the topmost men of genius. We cannot have too many of such worthwhile biographies."
+ No Am 219:426 Mr '24 1000w
R of Rs 69:334 Mr '24 120w

"The record of Mr Hepburn's life is given clearly, informingly, and engagingly, though without attempt at critical estimate or psychological portraiture."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 F 15 '24 900w

BIZZELL, WILLIAM BENNETT. Rural Texas. (Rural state and province ser.) 477p il $2.50 Macmillan
630 Texas. Agriculture—Texas 24-2445

A study of the agricultural resources and conditions of rural life in Texas. The study includes an analysis of its surface features and soils and an account of its forestry and mineral resources.

Reviewed by I. Lippincott
Am Econ R 14:736 D '24 120w

"The book is dignified and reliable throughout. It is free from bombastic propaganda and vainglorious boasting." E. W. Z.
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 S 28 '24 700w

"The total impression is that of a man who sees wholes as well as parts, of a sympathetic student who is incapable of cynicism." E. C. Lindeman
+ Nation 119:53 Jl 9 '24 400w
Reviewed by E. C. Lindeman
New Repub 40:sup11 O 1 '24 230w

"It would seem that a study of rural life might have probed more deeply into social factors and might have visualized the human problem more clearly than President Bizzell has done in his concluding chapters." G. S.
— Survey 52:120 Ap 5 '24 90w

BLACK, WILLIAM HARMAN. Real 'round South America. 254p il $3.50 Real book co., 2148 Woolworth bldg., 233 Broadway, N. Y. [10s 6d Simpkin Marshall]
918 South America—Description and travel [24-6117]

"The journey which Mr. Black describes filled a few days more than six weeks. He went by steamer from New York through the Panama Canal, to Callao, in Peru, visited Arequipa, Cuzco, Lake Titicaca and La Paz. Then he crossed by automobile a gap of 125 miles in the Andes between the terminus of the Argentine Railroad and a point on the Bolivian road from which an American construction company is building a line to connect the two. Mr. Black considers this region, although the least visited, the most superb part of the Andes. Thence by train he went to Buenos Aires, and afterward by steamer to Montevideo and to Santos, the world's great coffee market. After a side trip to Sao Paulo he boarded a steamer for Rio de Janeiro, and then took ship again to New York."—N Y Times

---

"Happily for the general reader and lover of travel, Mr. Black does not discuss the present-day political problems in South America. Hence we can absorb the beauty, marvel and novelty of his unique journey, unvexed by nothing more disturbing to our ease of mind than the contretemps incident to all travel. Those who have read Mr. Black's earlier travel-books will find in this latest volume, the same enthusiasm and keenness of vision, the same shrewd—and often humorous—comment."

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 10 '24 520w

"It contains interesting descriptions of cities and valuable information for the traveler." S. F. Reavis

+ Int Bk R p529 Je '24 30w

"Mr. Black manages to do a great many highly interesting things, some of them quite outside the ordinary lines of tourist adventures. He is always alert and interested in the surroundings, and wherever he goes sees something that arouses curiosity and affords entertainment or information. He does, it is true, constantly encumber his narrative with trivial detail concerning his own intimate affairs, to the unnecessary increase of his pages and the annoyance of the reader. But, except for this tendency to gabble, his book is written with a freshness of interest that makes it enjoyable."

+ N Y Times p23 Ap 20 '24 480w

"The book is very generously illustrated with photographs, and contains far fewer quotations from encyclopedias than one is accustomed to find in travel books. There is a valuable bibliography at the end, listing more than 150 volumes of travel, description, business, etc."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 2 '24 200w

"The illustrations are a pleasant addition to an interesting record."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p327 My 22 '24 240w

BLACKFORD, MRS KATHERINE M., and NEWCOMB, ARTHUR. Right job. 2v 309; 311-603p il $4 Doubleday; R of Rs

374.1 Occupation, Choice of. Characters and characteristics. Vocational guidance. Physiognomy

The authors, thru character analysis, endeavor to show you and me how to select a job, make ready for that job, and having obtained it, to succeed. Volume one deals with the selection of a vocation. This is developed by means of portraits of various types of individuals and accompanying analytical explanations. Volume two goes on with the expansion to a perfect state of successful achievement. Illustrations of people who have directed their lives in a favorable and profitable course illuminate the text of this ambitious study of the subject.

"A conscientious work for 'fits' and misfits, which will hold attention by its subject, that soluble-insoluble You and Me."

+ — Boston Transcript p6 Ap 16 '24 350w

"These books are helpful, though they deal largely with extreme cases and, as we have already noted, are rather general in their treatment."

+ — Lit R p812 Je 7 '24 400w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:347 Jl '24

Pratt p15 summer '24

Survey 52:639 S 15 '24 300w

BLACKMAN, AYLWARD MANLEY. Luxor and its temples. 200p il $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Black]

913.32 Egypt—Antiquities. Thebes, Egypt

An account of the life led by the ancient inhabitants of Luxor—or Thebes as it was called by the Greek and Roman writers. It describes the houses they lived in, tells how Thebes became the capital of Egypt and recounts the days of its greatness. There is a chapter on some of the great kings, one on the famous queen Hatshepsut and another on Egyptian literature of the imperial age. The last chapter is given to a description of the funerary temples of the great Pharaohs. Bibliography. Index.

+ Boston Transcript p5 F 9 '24 850w

Reviewed by Robert Hillyer

Lit R p720 My 3 '24 100w

"The sketches by Major Fletcher are delightful, and add considerably to the charm of a most attractive book."

+ Nature 113:600 Ap 26 '24 250w

"The book is light reading, but it is good reading, and we hope with Dr. Blackman that it may succeed in increasing the interest of the general public in Ancient Egypt."

+ New Statesman 22:432 Ja 19 '24 170w

Outlook 136:196 Ja 30 '24 20w

Springf'd Republican p12 Ap 9 '24 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p878 D 13 '23 80w

BLACKWOOD, ALGERNON. Episodes before thirty. 348p $3 Dutton [15s Cassell]

B or 92 24-2314

This autobiography is concerned with ten years only in the life of the English novelist and short-story writer. Tho his stories usually lead him into the realms of the mystical and intangible, there is nothing but stark realism in the narrative of these ten years of struggle and privation in Canada and New York, cut off entirely from the world in which his relatives lived. After two disastrous business ventures in Canada in which he exhausted his small capital, he and his equally bankrupt partner came to New York, where they shared a wretched room in an East side lodging house and their small earnings with another derelict who turned out to be a thief and confidence man. Mr Blackwood led a hand-to-mouth existence as a newspaper reporter, rising to a fairly well paid position on the New York Times and finally, to a private secretaryship. There is no woman in these pages except the mere mention of his mother and sister and his kindly Jewish landlady and no prophecy of the novels he was one day to write.

Booklist 20:297 My '24

"There is a defenseless naïveté about 'Episodes Before Thirty' which, in these days of sophisticated autobiography, shields its refreshing simplicity as the frank chatter of a child is guarded. The entertaining anecdotes are told in the graceful undisturbing swing of complacent reflective maturity."

+ Bookm 59:222 Ap '24 160w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p3 F 2 '24 1550w

"Those who are induced to read the book in the expectation of finding in its episodes that strangeness which Blackwood knows how to handle in so masterly a fashion in his fiction, will not find it, but they will find the greater strangeness of unvarnished truth." B. M. K.

+ Cath World 119:135 Ap '24 550w

Cleveland p45 Je '24

"A vivid adventure in autobiography; Mr. Blackwood has never written a better novel. The book is packed with impressions and with people—all fascinatingly alive."

+ Dial 77:85 Jl '24 100w

BLACKWOOD, A.—Continued

"'Episodes Before Thirty' constitutes one of those rare books that make the reader feel deeply, personally grateful." L. M. Field
+ Int Bk R p304 Mr '24 1950w

"Here is plain statement presented with inherent dramatic art. The material dealt with is material that lies all around us in the lives of all those with a gusto for living. But a long experience in creative writing is behind this apparently simple retailing of memories; and in that experience as well as in the experience of life itself lies the power of this book." W: R. Benet
+ Lit R p576 Mr 8 '24 1550w

Reviewed by H: B. Fuller
New Repub 38:104 Mr 19 '24 1050w
New Statesman 22:610 Mr 1 '24 550w

"'Episodes Before Thirty' is in many respects a strange book. It is an absorbing narrative; it is absorbing also as a study in psychology. It reads largely like fiction—and is stranger because truth. Few writers of autobiography have succeeded in so unobtrusive a manner as Blackwood to draw so full-limned a portrait of themselves and at the same time a portrait so intimate." P. A. Hutchison
+ N Y Times p6 Ja 27 '24 2550w

"The author has a fascinating story to tell and he relates it in his best manner." L. L. Cline
+ N Y World p7e F 3 '24 1200w

"It is more readable than the adventures of many of his dreamy heroes struggling with airy and malign influences. The grimy life of a New York lodging-house made a lasting impression upon his mind; the unpleasant adventure of being 'dead broke' in a great city has made the author write a better book than he has sometimes been able to derive from imaginative battles with good and evil fairies."
+ Outlook 136:320 F 20 '24 330w
Pratt p36 summer '24

"The very carelessness of the writing—and it is often careless—gives the whole performance an informality and friendliness that add to its charm. It is a book to read in the spring when the call of the woodland, sky and sea is strong, for in it one experiences vicariously a release from the routine and commonplace activity of life that is in itself eloquent testimony to Mr. Blackwood's magic."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 16 '24 950w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p761 N 15 '23 520w

BLAKE, ELIZABETH JESSUP. Up and down. 50p pa $1.25 Yale univ. press
811 24-15429

A slender volume of verse, the nineteenth in the Yale series of younger poets.

"Exhibits a not unusual skill at verse making, an over effusive tendency to describe the moods of nature, a way of writing with a sort of heavy grandeur; yet she has likewise the faculty of catching undeniably poetic significances in her nebulous lines. She lacks focus, but her vision is trained on the right sort of thing." B. L. Kenyon
+ — Bookm 60:345 N '24 260w

"Miss Blake might be more cautious in personification and apostrophe; such old acquaintances as 'Spring,' 'Old Age,' 'Billows,' and 'Loneliness,' all receive her approving hail. However, the poems evince a sincere acceptance of life and an exuberance that will learn restraint more readily than youthful reserve would find fire. Technically, Miss Blake displays a deftness that at times seeks the flower in the crannied cliff." J. T. Shipley
— + Lit R p11 Ag 30 '24 220w

BLAKE, GEORGE. Mince Collop Close. 305p $2 McBride [7s 6d G. Richards]
[23-18375]

Mince Collop Close is a squalid alley in the slum district of Glasgow, used as a base for the raids of a gang of toughs and cutthroats who infest the quarter. Of this band, known as the Fan-Tans, Bella Macfadyen is acknowledged queen, having won her title by personality and sheer dominance of will, helped by her flaming beauty. The book consists of a series of disconnected episodes in her life of brigandage in which she is always the easy and confident victor. Not till the appearance of one stronger than herself does she step down from her leadership and yield to the woman in her which the termagant had not been able to conquer.

Boston Transcript p6 Mr 12 '24 1300w

"Bella Macfadyen is a creature of prey, a killer when killing is convenient. But, she is a remarkable figure, and, whatever relation she may have to 'life,' a fresh and interesting person of fiction." H. W. Boynton
+ Ind 112:156 Mr 15 '24 330w
Int Bk R p742 S '24 280w

"The virtue of the book lies in the skill with which the author has presented this uncompromising heroine in her squalid environment, not asking us either to pity or to love her, but making us accept and respect her for her dauntless courage, her scorn of cant, and her fierce chastity."
+ Lit R p666 Ap 12 '24 560w
Nation 118:486 Ap 23 '24 70w

"Such as it is the book holds the interest. As a novel it is very bad, for the author appears to have no sense of construction. Indeed, there are times when the book seems to be fashioned out of several short stories merged into one another in a rather blundering manner. Extraneous incidents are introduced apparently for their own sake and not to forward the scheme of the tale."
— + N Y Times p22 Mr 9 '24 700w
Outlook 136:613 Ap 9 '24 120w

"'Mince Collop Close' strikes a new note in crime fiction."
+ Springf'd Republican p14 My 23 '24 210w

"Mr. Blake's ingenuity is equal to the task of throwing a romantic glamour over the ugliest of exploits, and even of contriving a modified happy ending for his ferocious heroine."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p638 S 27 '23 60w

BLAKEBOROUGH, R., comp. Legends of highwaymen and others; ed. by J. Fairfax-Blakeborough. 269p il $3 Stokes
398.2 Brigands and robbers. Legends, English

J. Fairfax-Blakeborough presents this volume of legends and folk-tales all of which were painstakingly collected by his father, the late Richard Blakeborough. The legends recorded in this book were handed down orally from one generation to another, and have been preserved with as many details as it was possible to collect half a century ago. They abound with mystery and adventure of stagecoach days. Partial contents: The hand of glory: a thrilling legend of stagecoach days; The wraith of Little Smeaton Hall; Abbas; the cross-roads spectre; The highwayman of Leeming lane; The maid of the Golden shoon; The giant's lapstone; The coach ghost; "Swift Nick" the highwayman; The story of Dick Turpin.

"Fascinating book." Walter Yust
+ Lit R p6 S 20 '24 420w

"We are contented as we read, and vastly pleased with the style that has the charm of exactitude, although the author's knights of the road are not the glorious swashbuckling fellows that the healthy and imaginative boy and the man with the boy's heart like them to be." C: J. Finger
+ — N Y Tribune p5 O 5 '24 950w

"These legends have no literary or artistic value at all and indeed claim none. Their chief value is a historical one for, as the editor suggests, they not only preserve certain details of local history but are also an index to the mentality and the gradual mental development of the succeeding generations who believed them and repeated them." E. McD. J.

+ N Y World p6e S 21 '24 120w
Sat R of Lit 1:132 S 20 '24 230w

BLAKER, RICHARD. Geoffery Castleton, passenger; a romance of the little things. 384p $2.50 Doran [7s 6d J. Cape]
24-9358

A novel in the autobiographical style, developed by devolution rather than evolution. Geoffery Castleton, a rather obscure clerk in a tourists' agency is selected to escort the beautiful Mrs Tagney to Russia. The journey is a particularly dreary one since they have every reason to believe that Mrs Tagney's sister has been murdered in that distant country. Thruout the journey Katherine Tagney, a neurotic drug fiend, subject to melancholia, arouses in the young clerk a wild love. Geoffery has never seen a woman like this one, fascinating in her morbidness. A domestic intrigue results. Katherine divorces her husband to marry Geoffery and then in turn deserts him. Then a flashback to India to Geoffery's old home and childhood sweetheart and finally England again—with the little sweetheart Mrs Geoffery Castleton.

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 19 '24 1100w
Lit R p777 My 24 '24 500w

"Mr. Blaker's story is rounded out according to the dictates of such an even-handed and colorless justice that it forfeits all the flavor that another conclusion might have given it. Every character finds a comfortable place."
— N Y Times p22 Ap 20 '24 720w

"It is a fine piece of irony, carefully rounded out. Perhaps the inverted method of construction is a handicap, and there are superfluous passages, but the substance is sound and the manner extremely agreeable." Isabel Paterson
+ — N Y Tribune p25 My 11 '24 750w

"A swiftly moving tale, rather above the average in literary quality." E. W. Osborn
+ N Y World p6e Ap 20 '24 150w

"This novel of Mr. Blaker's is so unequal in its parts, so disappointing as a whole, that it might almost have been written by two persons: the one gifted in the perception and presentation of the emotional nuances of a situation, the other decidedly his inferior both in vision and technique." Gerald Bullett
— + Spec 131:999 D 22 '23 320w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p788 N 22 '23 360w

BLANC, ELSIE TERRY. Co-operative movement in Russia. 324p $2.50 Macmillan
334 Cooperation. Europe—Economic conditions
24-5466

Nowhere else in the world is the cooperative movement so powerful as in Russia or so interwoven with the government and economic policy. It is doing much for the education of the masses and is influencing even international relations. Mrs Blanc gives a history of the movement from its beginnings down to 1923, especially its activities during the World war and the Bolshevist régime.

"It is perhaps too much to ask that a writer who has succeeded in accomplishing the task as Mrs. Blanc has, should be required to interpret the movement as well. The few paragraphs of economic analysis are, however, so thoughtfully and yet so simply developed that they create a demand for more." Amy Hewes
+ — Am Econ R 14:787 D '24 400w

"This is a serious and thoroughly impartial study of a most important phase of modern Russian life. It is unfortunate that the author's style seems so ponderous and the book such difficult reading, for it contains much interesting and enlightening material." K. D. Miller.
+ — Ann Am Acad 116:287 N '24 180w
Cleveland p57 Jl '24

"The book is evidently written with a cooperative bias, but it contains material of great interest to students of economics, and in view of the world-wide concern on Russian affairs, is particularly welcome just now." H: Vivian
+ Econ J 34:463 S '24 700w

"To say that Mrs. Blanc has uncovered a large section of Russian history that is as good as unknown to the Western World, and which for political purposes has been persistently misrepresented to Russia's hurt, is only to say that the book is of first-rate importance for a proper understanding of the place of the new Russia in the world." W: MacDonald
N Y Times p44 Ap 13 '24 580w

"The job was eminently worth doing, but this does not mean that it has been well done. The author's literary style is so bad as at times to approach downright illiteracy, and this defect combines with a baffling fogginess of thought to make it quite impossible, now and again, to attribute to a particular sentence any specific meaning whatever. Further than this, the text not infrequently exhibits errors in fact, and fallacies in reasoning." G. T. Robinson
— Pol Sci Q 39:704 D '24 450w
Pratt p13 summer '24

"An important feature of her book is the attention that it gives to the social and educational significance of coöperation."
+ R of Rs 69:559 My '24 70w

Reviewed by Cedric Long
Survey 53:107 O 15 '24 180w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p357 Je 5 '24 70w
Wis Lib Bul 20:145 Je '24

BLAND, JOHN OTWAY PERCY. Something lighter. 266p il $2.50 Houghton [7s 6d Heineman]
2
China—Social life and customs

"The basis of this book is the author's memories of China, a country in which he has passed many years; and, as the title indicates, he has cast them in a shape to appeal to readers who can't follow the ins and outs of Chinese politics. Mr. Bland just chats, but in each of his chapters there will be found some incident befalling Chinese or the Europeans brought in contact with them by the exigencies of diplomacy or business. The persons and setting are no doubt fictitious, but the incident is probably true—true, at any rate, to China."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"There is a Kiplingesque quality to the stories, coupled with a sensitive appreciation of the Chinese mode of thought, which make them well worth while."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 7 '25 340w

"Few of the many volumes of short stories—and I say again that Mr. Bland's tales are not patterned, but easily and fascinatingly informal—of the year have held the keen interest for me of 'Something Lighter.' It is thoroughly well done, first-rate reading, with ample humor, beauty and pathos." Herschel Brickell
+ Lit R p3 D 27 '24 700w

"Charming collection of studies."
+ Spec 133:750 N 15 '24 50w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p641 O 16 '24 680w

BLANKENHORN, HEBER. Strike for union. 259p $2.25 Wilson, H. W.
331.89 Coal miners. Strikes and lockouts
24-13825

A study of the non-union question in coal and of a democratic movement in the coal-fields, based on the record of the Somerset (Pa.) strike, 1922-1923. The book follows the history of the strike from every angle during its nearly two years' duration and explains the problems confronting both the miners' unions and the public. It is concerned with the human facts rather than with passing a verdict on the dispute or offering theoretical solutions. The appendix contains statements by the president of one of the local unions and by a district organizer of the United mine workers on why the miners went out.

BLANKENHORN, H.—Continued

"The critical reader will probably query whether an outsider like Mr. Blankenhorn can, in all fairness, pass authoritative judgment upon the acts of national union leaders, who, in the very nature of their position, must take into account many more factors than are visible to a local investigator, however well trained and penetrating." S. Perlman
Ann Am Acad 116:280 N '24 280w

Booklist 21:50 N '24

"He has succeeded in mixing the oil of emotion with the water of facts, and has given us an account of a strike in the coal-fields which is at once profoundly stirring and meticulously documented." Stuart Chase
+ Nation 119:99 Jl 23 '24 500w

Reviewed by George Soule
Survey 53:361 D 15 '24 950w

Wis Lib Bul 20:171 Jl '24

BLANSHARD, PAUL. Outline of the British labor movement; with an introd. by Arthur Henderson. 174p $1.50 Doran

331.8 Labor and laboring classes—Great Britain. Labor party (Great Britain)
23-18421

The little book, which is a compilation of the things which an American trade unionist found of most interest in the British labor movement, shows how it has "risen out of the traditions of a century of struggle to express the aspirations of the workers," and traces the steps by which it has reached the ultimate triumph of a labor government.

"The book offers very scant lodgment for adverse criticisms." W. B. Catlin
+ Am Econ R 14:338 Je '24 700w

Booklist 20:282 My '24

"The subject matter is clearly discussed, and it constitutes an excellently written introduction to the study of this important economic and political phenomenon." S. L. R.
+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 15 '24 1100w

Ind 112:157 Mr 15 '24 50w

Ind 112:268 My 10 '24 20w

"He has achieved a compendium of the labor movement in England which should prove almost invaluable to the general American reader in acquainting him with the framework of this most thoughtful forward-looking tendency toward social, industrial, and international reform." Howard Devree
+ Lit R p798 My 31 '24 800w

"For the layman interested in the labor situation today who has not the time to wade through copious volumes Mr Blanshard's outline will give a comprehensive, if brief, view."
N Y Times p2 My 18 '24 900w

Outlook 136:443 Mr 12 '24 80w

"While this little book is not otherwise unique, it should effectively serve its purpose as a concise and compact text book for students of an important phase of economics and sociology."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 Je 10 '24 550w

Reviewed by P. U. Kellogg
Survey 52:242 My 15 '24 180w

Wis Lib Bul 20:171 Jl '24

BLASCO IBANEZ, VICENTE. Alfonso XIII
2 unmasked; the military terror in Spain. 121p $1 Dutton

B or 92 Alfonso XIII, King of Spain. Spain —Politics and government

The assault led by the novelist on the reactionary forces of the Spanish monarchy is a severe arraignment of King Alfonso XIII and the military dictatorship of Gen. Primo de Rivera. Stroke on stroke he builds up his case against Alfonso, reaching his climax in the last chapter under the caption "The King must go!"

"For all its extravagance and irony, this appears to be the book of a sincere man chafing at the spectacle of his country under a dictatorship for which he sees no justification." R. H. A.
Boston Transcript p5 Ja 17 '25 1300w

"All that a critic can say is that the articles are certainly one of the most vivid and probably one of the most authentic pictures of political life in Spain that has come, in recent years, from Spanish political writing." Arthur Livingston
N Y Times p5 Ja 4 '25 1500w

N Y World p9e Ja 11 '25 150w

BLASCO IBANEZ, VICENTE. In the land of art (En el pais del arte); auth. tr. by Frances Douglas. 339p $3 Dutton

914.5 Italy—Description and travel 24-5221

"Señor Ibañez fled Spain for political reasons during the Spanish war with Cuba, and found solace in Italy, where, almost penniless, he nevertheless traveled up and down the country drinking in the beauties of its art treasures. Most of the chapters of the present book were sketched out during that trip to Italy and carry with them the exuberance and enthusiasm of the noted Spaniard's early years. There is an exhaustive index."—Int Bk R

Booklist 20:335 Je '24

"All intelligent Americans who plan to see Italy this spring or summer cannot do better than to read, before going, this charming book."
+ Boston Transcript p14 Mr 29 '24 300w

Reviewed by S. F. Reavis
Int Bk R p530 Je '24 160w

Reviewed by S. A. Coblentz
+ N Y Times p6 Ap 20 '24 780w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p445 Jl 17 '24 700w

BLASCO IBANEZ, VICENTE. Queen Calafia. 332p $2 Dutton
24-28342

The latest novel of Blasco Ibáñez has for its setting the historic background of California. Mrs Douglas, the heroine of the tale, is likened to that beautiful Amazonian queen, Calafia, in the California legend, who falls in love with the young son of her enemy. Mrs Douglas, a wealthy widow, was before her marriage Concha Ceballos, daughter of a noble California family. The reader first meets her in Madrid where she pays a visit to Ricardo Balboa, whom in her youth she loved. There she encounters Florestan, Ricardo's handsome young son, and altho Florestan is already betrothed to a childhood sweetheart, he falls in love with this magnificent woman who is ten years his senior. Thus begins the romance of Concha and Florestan which is beautiful but short lived. In an hour of great temptation the honor of Concha defeats all ignoble impulses, and she relinquishes Florestan thru the agency of a lie, so sacrificing the greatest love of her life.

Cleveland p85 N '24

"Blasco Ibáñez's account of Concha's youth is as glaring an error as a reputable novelist was ever guilty of. The method by which the author introduces the story of Queen Calafia and then the historic account of California is crude and ineffective, altho the story itself is sometimes flashing, graphic, impressive." F. F. Kelly
— + Int Bk R p779 O '24 1050w

Reviewed by C. M. Morrison
Lit R p18 N 15 '24 450w

N Y Times p8 S 21 '24 650w

Reviewed by Francis Loretz
N Y Tribune p11 Ja 11 '25 1050w
N Y World p9e D 14 '24 520w
Outlook 138:462 N 19 '24 300w

BLOCK, ETTA, tr. One-act plays from the Yiddish. 165p $2 Stewart Kidd

892.42 Yiddish drama—Collections 24-3103

Six one-act plays, each an excellent example of the one-act form and presenting a different picture of Yiddish life. Good for amateur production, as they require few characters and only the simplest staging. Contents: Champagne, by I. L. Perez; Mother and son, by J. Halpern; The stranger, The snow-storm, When the dew falleth, by P. Hirshbein; The eternal song, by Marc Arnstein.

Booklist 20:257 Ap '24

"Miss Block is judicious in her selection and able in her translation."
+ Boston Transcript p4 F 23 '24 400w
Cleveland p20 Mr '24

"The strong sense of reality and the extreme ease with which dramatic climaxes are scored lift these Yiddish one-act plays to a high plane."
+ N Y Times p5 F 17 '24 400w

"The translation is good. One can believe that little has been lost in the process of transplantation, so satisfying and sympathetic is the result."
+ Theatre Arts Mo 8:350 My '24 180w

BLOOMFIELD, DANIEL, comp. and ed. Modern executive. (Modern executives' library) 266p $2.25 Wilson H. W.

331:124 Executives 24-16945

"A review of the literature of management reveals the fact that there are but few books devoted to the executive, his place in management, and how executive ability may be recognized and developed. The present volume brings together the best available material on the subject from a variety of sources, many of them not easily accessible otherwise. The articles are grouped under the headings: Leadership and the modern executive; The place of the executive in management; What is executive ability? Developing executive ability; The foreman as an executive; The work of the executive. There is also a bibliography, and an introduction by Meyer Bloomfield. The volume shows how much self-making goes into the composition of the manager of men and affairs. We are shown in concrete terms what is daily demanded of such men in the way of judgment, insight, foresight, information, and ability to win the interest, enthusiasm and loyalties of men."—Publisher's note

Booklist 21:54 N '24

"The very interesting departure from the usual method of presentation of technical subjects which this book discloses is that the work is not the product of one man. The development of the subject matter has been drawn from a variety of sources and authors." L. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p4 O 4 '24 500w
N Y Tribune p12 O 5 '24 90w

"For a short and simple introductory course in factory management, the book will be a useful one." O. T.
+ Pol Sci Q 39:729 D '24 400w
St Louis p378 N '24

BLUM, WILLIAM, and HOGABOOM, GEORGE BYRON. Principles of electroplating and electroforming (electrotyping). 356p il $4 McGraw

537.85 Electroplating. Electrotyping 24-6488

"Presents the principles underlying electrodeposition, to assist those in the industry to understand and apply the results of research work. The practical plater will find many sound suggestions on his everyday problems and on the many details leading up to successful electrodeposition."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

"This book contains a great many valuable hints and can be recommended to those technically interested in the subject."
+ Nature 114:272 Ag 23 '24 220w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:359 Jl '24

BLUNDELL, PETER. On the fringe of eastern seas; the city of many waters. 223p il $3 McBride

919.11 Brunei 24-19996

The "city of many waters" is Brunei, capital of a small state of the same name in northwest Borneo, once a powerful sultanate but now much diminished by successive cessions of its territory to Sarawak and British North Borneo. The author lived in Brunei for a while as engineer of a British factory. The city is built almost entirely over the water and he spent much of his spare time paddling about in the surrounding creeks and waters, learning to know the Brunei Malays, their homes and their ways of living. The book is a personal narrative, well supplied with photographs.

Cleveland p48 Je '24

"One of those travel books that roots you to your chair as surely as a novel with the murder still unsolved is this of Peter Blundell's."
+ N Y Tribune p27 My 18 '24 170w

"A sprightly narrative. . . Brunei is no more the unique principality it was during the rule of Rajah Brooke and his nephew, who succeeded him. Britain has taken it over. Yet it remains one of the dream spots of the world, and, as our author observes, did not deserve to be bored by bureaucrats."
+ N Y World p6e Ap 27 '24 150w

"We get a series of intimate pictures of the life of the Malay inhabitants of that far-off place quite unlike anything that has come out of it before."
+ Outlook 138:242 Je 11 '24 200w

BOBBITT, JOHN FRANKLIN. How to make a curriculum. 292p $1.80 Houghton

375 Education—Curricula 24-5813

This book explains the plan of curriculum improvement that was employed recently by the author in Los Angeles. It provides no detailed courses of study but makes, rather, a broad analysis in outline of the entire field of man's experiences and activities, laying out the general routes to follow and the objectives to be obtained by an education which shall prepare for a well-rounded life.

Booklist 21:93 D '24

"Set forth with clarity and fulness. The volume is a hand-book for the guidance of practical workers."
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 2 '24 100w

"It is really a marvelous piece of work. It is remarkably readable and as definite as a manual. It will be studied by superintendents for many a day." W. M.
+ Educ R 68:111 S '24 560w

"Professor Bobbitt's latest book represents thinking and work in education so advanced and sound that, if the phrase were not hackneyed, it would deserve to be called 'epoch-making.' It is hardly a book, however, for teachers or administrators waiting for settled formulas and finished prescriptions ready for immediate application. It is a very important book for teachers and other educators interested in the reconstruction of curriculums and willing to co-operate in discovering means and methods in the formulation of objectives more realistic and functional than those now provided by custom and empirical insight." D: Snedden
+ School R 32:468 Je '24 700w

BODENHEIM, MAXWELL. Against this age. 75p $1.75 Boni & Liveright
811 24-386

There are about fifty pages of free verse and thirteen of prose in Mr Bodenheim's volume. In his defiance at things as they are his verse bears out the implications of the title.

"One has a picture of Bodenheim as ring master, crackling his savage whip over the heads of cowering adjectives and recalcitrant nouns, compelling them to leap in grotesque and unwilling pairs over the fantastically piled barriers of his imagination. It is a good show—particularly for those who have not seen it too often." L: Untermeyer
Bookm 59:220 Ap '24 470w

"The most interesting part of the book is the prose sketch, 'Surprise.' It is supposed to be a description of consciousness after death. But Mr Bodenheim himself seems imprisoned in flesh like one of his dreams. Will he ever come out of his hazy stupor into the hard light of day?"
Boston Transcript p4 Ja 16 '24 230w

"I am not sure how much of a poet Mr. Bodenheim is. What I am sure of is that his work is honest—honest to the point of mocking at its own honesty—and that it never mistakes a state of sentiment for one of intense feeling. It does not, like Mr. Cummings, deck out a meretricious attitude in complex phrases, nor like Miss Millay strip the same attitude to pseudo-simplicity. Mr. Bodenheim is, as the stinging acidity of his style betrays, less concerned anyway with feeling than with thought." J: G. Fletcher
Freeman 8:502 Ja 30 '24 220w

Reviewed by C. H. Grant
Lit R p592 Mr 15 '24 360w

"The charm of Mr. Bodenheim's difficult, sardonic poetry used to depend partly upon the fact that there was not much of it. If he keeps on at the present rate, there is danger that it will cease to be precious."
— Nation 118:238 F 27 '24 60w

"He writes a kind of stiff-jointed jargon that one recognizes is made up of English words, mostly twisted into some tortured figure of speech, of which, taken word by word, one knows the meaning: their significance, taken together, will remain forever a mystery to most persons who read them."
— Springf'd Republican p10 F 20 '24 330w

BODENHEIM, MAXWELL. Crazy man. 238p $2 Harcourt
24-3791

"Crazyman is a 'New York sinner who works out for himself an altruistic formula of life.'" (N Y World) "The 'crazy' hero of the present book is very close kin to the 'Blackguard' who gave the title to Mr. Bodenheim's former novel. Both are absolute idealists and both are by ordinary standards criminals. Both, rejecting utterly the ordinary definitions of success, happiness, and virtue, test all things by purely internal criteria, and both gain their livelihood by thievery—going on the theory that such a process is not morally wrong in a society where the distinction between legitimate commercial operations and stealing is merely legal, and that the periods which they are compelled to spend in jail are less irksome and less destructive of their integrity than the hypocrisy and compliance necessary to gain 'an honest living.'" (Lit R)

"The story is a vivid analysis of abnormal character. Its author has a certain 'snaky' ease in his use of words and epigram. Words, are, indeed the tools of the writing craft, and Mr. Bodenheim's are the bright, keen knives of the dissecting room, rather than the chisels of the sculptor." S. L. R.
+ Boston Transcript p3 F 16 '24 700w

Reviewed by Marianne Moore
Dial 77:252 S '24 550w

"There is an immense amount of unconvincing analysis of character and motive in the book, but there are also one or two flashes of insight, and an occasional well-done bit of description."
— + Int Bk R p557 Je '24 200w

"Mr. Bodenheim's scheme is a highly interesting one and as significant as any completely systematized scheme can be. It is limited and inflexible, capable of infinitely fewer variations than Shaw's, and hence not likely to produce any large body of continuously interesting work. He can say all that he has to say in a rather short space, and after that he can only repeat himself, but he believes in his religion with an admirable passion, and he has invented a style which, though terribly tortuous, gives it perfect and individual expression." J. W. Krutch
+ — Lit R p535 F 23 '24 1300w

"'Crazy Man,' by Maxwell Bodenheim, is a novel of breadth and distinction that makes the reviewer pause before he begins to wave aloft the usual adjectives that serve as traffic signals on the literary highroad. It is the author's seventh book, and with its publication he seems to rise like one of the peaks that dominate the plain in the American scene." Harry Hansen
+ Nation 118:sup441 Ap 16 '24 1200w

"Such a theme could have been fumbled badly, for there is a strong temptation here for the author to run off down enticing by-paths to enlarge and so disintegrate his thesis. Mr. Bodenheim has found here, perhaps for the first time, a theme that entirely accorded with his own individual ideas in literature."
+ N Y Times p8 F 10 '24 1200w

"It is one of the notable books of the season." Burton Rascoe
+ N Y Tribune p17 Mr 2 '24 1800w

"'Crazyman' is well done. As to whether you will find its content acceptable to your own prejudices about the fitness of certain aspects of life as material for literature, that is another matter." Laurence Stallings
N Y World p7e F 24 '24 900w

BODLEY, HOMER S. The fourth R, the forgotten factor in education. 271p $1.75 Revell
377 Moral education 23-18003

"The fourth (R), as employed by Mr. Bodley, stands for Righteousness. Without infringing upon any religious creed, Mr. Bodley believes that there is a place in our public-school curriculum for the teaching of the higher ideals of life. His book treats of the material universe, the physical and mental life, sociological life, the arts of music, literature and color, and other topics which contribute to an understanding of altruism."—R of Rs

Bookm 59:adv My '24 120w

"To the scholar the book may appear superficial, but it is well adapted to the purpose for which it is written. In fact it is on the whole an unusually timely and excellent contribution to the needs of the age."
+ — Boston Transcript p4 Ja 16 '24 300w
R of Rs 69:336 Mr '24 80w

BOEX, J. H. H. See Rosny, J. H., pseud.

BOGARDUS, EMORY STEPHEN. Fundamentals of social psychology. 479p $3.75 Century
301 Social psychology 24-11663

This textbook in social psychology lays its chief stress on the theory of intersocial stimulation. "Human interstimulation plays continually upon original human nature, modifying it beyond recognition and organizing it into social patterns and institutions." Each of the forty chapters of the book has a list of review questions, problems and readings.

Booklist 21:93 D '24

"The work as a whole makes a strong appeal to the general reader and should be carefully studied by all who care to look into the sources by which their opinions are formed and out of which their social attitudes emerge.

From these pages can be learned, in substance at least, well-nigh everything that has been contributed to the advance of sociological science since Tarde in 1890 formulated what he called the 'laws of imitation.'" E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Je 14 '24 650w

Educ R 68:223 N '24 100w

"The exercises are undeniably stimulating, but the value of these lies in the teacher rather than in the text. Altogether, one gets the impression that books called social 'psychology' are best written by psychologists." F. L. Wells

— + Ind 113:49 Jl 19 '24 500w

"The classifications strike one as unduly academic and far too minute. But the book possesses excellent illustrative content."

+ — Nation 119:527 N 12 '24 130w

Reviewed by C: H. Judd

School R 32:707 N '24 350w

BOGUE, ROBERT HERMAN, ed. Theory and ^{2} application of colloidal behavior. (International chemical ser.) 2v il $8 McGraw

541.345 Colloids 24-17686

Contributed by the foremost authorities in each division of the subject. Volume one is given to the theory of colloidal behavior, volume two to its applications.

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:506 N '24

BOJER, JOHAN. Pilgrimage, tr. from the Norwegian by Jessie Muir. 246p $1.75 Century

24-20565

Maternal love is the mainspring of this novel. Regina Aas, an outcast, while still in the maternity hospital, sells her illegitimate son for a good sum of money to a wealthy couple whose identity is kept secret. Thru the kindness of a doctor Regina secures a position as housekeeper for a rich Norwegian widower, who is entirely ignorant of the girl's story. In time the longing to see her son becomes the passion of Regina's life. She marries the widower, Herr Flaten, for the sole purpose of securing sufficient money to enable her to travel the world over, if need be, to find her son. To crush her husband's love for her she tells him infamous lies which virtually kill him. After his death she starts her pilgrimage in quest of her son. All her clues lead to despair and discouragement and the novel closes with Regina starting off on another heartbreaking journey to find her child.

Booklist 21:110 D '24

"In a style as simple as that of Knut Hamsen's 'Growth of the Soil,' he attempts to treat a theme demanding the psychological insight of Dostoievsky's 'Crime and Punishment'; with the terseness of method adapted to a romance by Pierre Loti, he undertakes to illumine the labyrinthine intricacies of a struggling, morbid soul. The result, of course, is that he is unconvincing; that the actions he describes are insufficiently motivated, and that the book as a whole is more offensively melodramatic than the most garish 'blood and thunder' adventure tale, for the reason that ostensibly it aims at verisimilitude." S. A. Coblentz

— Int Bk R p900 N '24 500w

"An intensely moving story, 'A Pilgrimage' has the quality of those noble classic tragedies which inspire, never depress. It is an honest, rich book." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p3 S 6 '24 300w

New Repub 40:151 O 8 '24 130w

"It deals with the realities rather than the trappings of life, with human nature rather than with popular phenomena, and deals with them in a simple, direct, unsentimental manner. Character and action go hand in hand to mate in the exquisite nuptial flight known as literary unity."

+ N Y Times p8 S 7 '24 500w

"Obviously, Bojer has worked his theme for all it is worth, even to the extent of dogmatism. Undoubtedly he knew that the success of the novel, artistic as well as popular, depended almost entirely upon a naively dogmatic treatment, and set about it in such a manner." Karsten Roedder

— + N Y Tribune p13 O 26 '24 380w

Reviewed by Bruce Gould

N Y World p8e S 7 '24 400w

"Bojer is deeply in earnest; he is in his way a prophet of righteousness. But is his morality here really moral? He says in effect that a wrong once committed, even if bitterly repented, goes on corroding the moral fibre and at last disintegrating the whole character. It is this assumption that rouses a certain inner resistance and prevents complete surrender to the story. Still no one can help admiring the strength and unity of treatment." H. A. Larsen

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:179 O 11 '24 560w

Springf'd Republican p7a O 12 '24 170w

BOJER, JOHAN. Prisoner who sang. 295p $2 Century

24-26380

"Johan Bojer's latest has been hailed as a prose Peer Gynt, and there is no doubt that he has taken Ibsen's eternal playboy for a model." (New Repub) "Andreas is only a small boy when the novel begins. A hunchbacked woman's illegitimate child, he lived with his mother and his uncle in a little hut in the forest. As he grew older and began to go more often into the village, Andreas's pranks made him the talk of the place. He was a fluent liar, with an unbounded imagination, and one day he had a new experience, when for the first time he assumed another personality, and discovered that he was able completely to deceive the village parson. A voracious reader, he really became the characters he read about. He committed crimes: he stole money, he forged the name of a man who had greatly befriended him; he puzzled the police. But after a while long immunity made him careless, and he became 'The Prisoner Who Sang.' During one of these avatars he met lovely, generous-hearted, idealistic Sylvia, and for the first time fell really in love. Through all that happened afterward, this love persisted." (N Y Times)

"Bojer has written an allegory and set it charmingly on his native soil." I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 26 '24 600w

"The grotesque humor, beauty of fancy and description and underlying meaning combine to make a tale very different from the ordinary run of fiction."

+ Cleveland p43 Je '24

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

Dial 77:80 Jl '24 750w

"Bojer portrays the complexities of man's nature with rare acumen and craftsmanship. He gives us an intimate view of Berget in his successive characters and of the changes which his moral being undergoes, a most important study of its kind. . . 'The Prisoner Who Sang' should engage the attention of a wide audience and the eager study of the thoughtful few." A. B. Epstein

+ Int Bk R p607 Jl '24 550w

"There is a certain sentimentality which makes us feel that, while Mr. Bojer is a pretty good story teller and one who can write not only for amusement, he is nevertheless, not one of those artists and poets by the grace of God who, mysteriously, supernaturally, seem capable of satisfying every part of our conscious beings—our senses, our emotions, our intellects." Edwin Bjorkman

— + Lit R p755 My 17 '24 900w

Reviewed by Forrest Reid

Nation and Ath 35:448 Jl 5 '24 500w

"This book stamps Bojer once more as a competent writer, not a high and original talent." Rose Lee

+ — New Repub 38:210 Ap 16 '24 850w

"Its fine poetic quality gives unity to the book. There is poetry too in the style. This is a novel which goes below circumstance and environment to those basic desires and instincts and temptations which are a part of the general inheritance of civilized humanity."

BOJER, JOHAN—Continued

+ N Y Times p8 Mr 23 '24 880w

N Y Tribune p7 D 21 '24 50w

"This story expresses the Norwegian novelist at his best. For its swiftness and simplicity, its perfect economy of method and its deep and melancholy tenderness the book belongs with that unforgetable study of the human heart, 'The Great Hunger.' "

+ Outlook 136:746 Ap 30 '24 440w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:344 Jl '24

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley
Spec 132:168 Ag 2 '24 450w

Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 13 '24 600w

"The poetry on Bojer's fairy tales impregnates 'The Prisoner Who Sang.' But it lacks the strength and spiritual realism of his great novels. Allegory is among the most difficult of literary forms, and Bojer's genius is not altogether adapted to it."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p402 Je 26 '24 500w

Wis Lib Bul 20:127 My '24

BOLITHO, WILLIAM, pseud. Leviathan (England—France). 172p $2 Harper

824 24-21169

William Bolitho's name is familiar to readers of the New York World from the columns of which some of these sketches are reprinted. The subjects are various—an English election, a Pilgrims' dinner, the Paris mob at the Carpentier-Siki fight, Sarah Bernhardt's last scene, the European steel trust—but the writer is always interpreter rather than reporter and the scene, whether it is London or Paris or Essen, is sharply realized. Contents: England's state ballet; England in a crystal; Election fog; The pilgrims and the sea; Epinard loses; The wheel in the lane; The gypsies' Sea Mary; The frieze of the monument; An empire's funeral in the Strand; Dies iræ, dies illa; Profiteering in the dead; Shaking the German ant-heap; Mah Jongg and the millionaires; The sound of the Zeitgeist; First impressions of England; Sunday night; Cruelty; The mob crowns the ape; Old man Bender's orchard; The flight of the Emperor Khai Dinh; The mysterious grenadier; Nicodemus and a false prophet; The anarchy of sister Claudia; The centre of England; The dance of the young old maids; Bernhardt's last scene.

"Mr. Bolitho is an essayist of skill and substance, a man of sinewy mind who writes upon current topics with depth of insight and vigor of intellect that combine to make his articles literature instead of merely ephemeral pieces of journalism." H. B.

+ Lit R p10 O 11 '24 170w

Nation 118:351 Mr 26 '24 80w

"In these curiously vivid essays the outward and inner history of the past two or three years takes on a quick, glamorous life. Mr. Bolitho's peculiar gifts are shared by few writers in present-day journalism. He can see, and he can write. And with his acute sensibility to colour and shape and the flavour of words, these commentaries on recorded history make good, melodramatic reading."

+ New Statesman 22:490 F 2 '24 100w

"Bolitho has style—not the self-conscious, smirking manner of handling words that passes for it in much of our contemporary cleverness, but a sinewy strength, a rhythm that is not merely pretty, a swift capturing of color and line and movement, and at times a dramatic intensity that reminds one of Carlyle at his best in 'The French Revolution.' "

+ N Y Times p11 S 14 '24 1550w

"Bolitho's style is leviathanesque, rolling in the ocean of discontent of our time. As a book of sketches on modern Europe it holds a permanent interest. And he can write beautifully." L. S.

+ N Y World p7e Ag 31 '24 120w

Reviewed by Walter Lippmann
Sat R of Lit 1:163 O 4 '24 780w

Springf'd Republican p10 N 28 '24 1000w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p838 N 29 '23 200w

BOLTON, FREDERICK ELMER. Everyday psychology for teachers. 443p $2.50 (10s 6d) Scribner

150 Psychology, Educational. Mental tests 23-18115

A textbook in educational psychology intended primarily for teacher-training classes and omitting those topics in general psychology which have little bearing on education. The greater part of the book is given to individual differences and endowments, modes of learning and behavior and the measurement of mental ability.

Booklist 20:322 Je '24

"To those familiar with Dean Bolton's earlier book, The Principles of Education, the publication of a new volume will be very welcome. This book is, in a way, a revision of the former volume. It has, however, numerous omissions and additions. It preserves the interesting, readable quality of the earlier book and, though less voluminous, has an abundance of illustrative material." H. C. Henderson

+ El School J 24:788 Je '24 320w

BONE, WOUTRINA AGATHA. Children's stories and how to tell them; with an introd. by May Massee. 200p $1.50 Harcourt [4s 6d Christophers]

372.6 Story telling. Children's literature 24-20748

There is more to this book than is to be found in the ordinary manual of story-telling, for it seeks to base the art on wider knowledge of the stories told and of their origins. The author studies the sources of the folk and fairy tales, shows them as reflections of the thought of the race and their place in the life of the child. Then follow chapters on the technique of story-telling and the making of pictures in words and a few illustrative stories. There is a full annotated bibliography.

Booklist 21:7 O '24

Boston Transcript p6 Jl 23 '24 90w

"Miss Bone sets a high and exacting standard for story tellers, but at the same time she inspires them with the zeal to attain it. A valuable feature of the volume is the classified bibliography, filling almost fifty pages, which Miss Massee has revised for American use."

+ N Y Times p14 Jl 6 '24 300w

Wis Lib Bul 20:209 O '24

BONSELS, WALDEMAR. Heaven folk. 257p $2 Seltzer

24-6893

This is a companion volume to "The Adventures of Maya the Bee." The main character is the Sprite who was Maya's companion. The Sprite has been banished from his own home and comes to live in the meadow among the plants and animals that inhabit it. Each chapter in the book recounts some incident in the animal world as witnessed by the Sprite, and the whole constitutes the quest of this Galahad of the fairy world for his ideal.

" 'Heaven Folk' is without doubt another classic." M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p468 My '24 270w

"He shows us ourselves and our neighbors in terms of earwigs, or wagtails, or cats and mice; and because he is witty and wise we laugh at ourselves at the very moment when we are laughing the loudest at our neighbors. It is a genial and charming talent." Robert Nathan

+ Lit R p687 Ap 19 '24 800w

"It cannot be expected that every one will acclaim the book; this sort of thing belongs more to the Continent, with its rich background of folklore, than it does to America, which has had to import its population of sprites and elves. But even the critic who does not find himself irresistibly attracted to 'Heaven Folk' must admit, if candid, that the book is undeniably literature." P. A. Hutchison

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 13 '24 1800w

"To the writing of fairy tales, perhaps the most ancient form of narrative, Bonsels brings a fancy as dewy fresh as dawn. While gaining a complete mastery of his medium he has somehow retained a sublime naïveté. . . Bonsels' quality is fineness, delicacy; he seems to look at the world, at such common things as a blade of grass or a bright-winged beetle, with the eyes of innocence and wonder. He discovers them and thereby makes them marvelous and strange." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p27 Ap 20 '24 380w

N Y Tribune p7 D 21 '24 80w

"It is a green-and-gold place of charming and delightful birds, insects, animals and flowers, with a most engaging sprite to keep them company and rejoice in them. It is a very rapture of being that Bonsels, thanks to the sensitive translation of Adele Szold Seltzer, conveys to the reader." J: W. Crawford

+ N Y World p6e Ap 6 '24 700w

"The translation by Mrs. Seltzer is good, and Arthur Guiterman's renderings of the lyrics form a particularly attractive feature."

+ Outlook 137:34 My 7 '24 280w

BOOTH, EDWARD CHARLES. Miss Parkworth, and three short stories. 300p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Fisher & U.]

24-18760

"The four stories in this volume are essays of various lengths in ironic comedy. In the first we have a detailed picture of a lonely old spinster whom ignorance and timidity have transformed into a domestic dragon. She leads her unhappy maid an intolerable life of petty tyranny, and at last drives her away only to realize that she has robbed herself of her last chance of sympathy and affection. The figures in this story are three: Miss Parkworth, the maid, whose patience and humility are almost saintly, and her mother, whom Miss Parkworth arouses at last to anger in defence of her daughter; and each of the three is a figure so human, so strangely compounded of absurdity and pathos, that our sympathies are aroused for them all in equal measure. The other tales, on a smaller scale, are in somewhat similar vein."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"Each of these four stories is in its own way unique. They are at the very least exceptional, if unique be thought too strong and too comprehensive a word. We doubt, however, if even the most assiduous reader of modern fiction has come across anything exactly like any one of them. Here is not merely a chronicle of events, a group of human portraits, an analysis of character. Here is a visualization of certain types and states of mind, of souls laid so bare that they seem almost disembodied." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 9 '24 1250w

"The first story in Mr. Booth's latest book should hold special interest for sorely tried housewives, for here is a record of trials endured by a Yorkshire spinster at the hands of maids in general and one, Mary, in particular. . . The story, for a time amusing, suffers from over-elaboration. It might have been told as effectively in one hundred pages. Of the three succeeding tales 'The Caretaker' is the best." Katherine Wright

+ — Lit R p956 Ag 9 '24 380w

New Statesman 23:744 O 4 '24 280w

"Mr. Booth is one of those writers predestined to high favor among a rather small circle of admirers. That surmise carries with it no reflection upon the quality of Mr. Booth's work. He is an excellent craftsman, but the things that interest him, in so far as they are revealed in these stories, are not the things that make best sellers. Nor is his method of approach better calculated to secure him a big following."

+ — N Y Times p9 Ag 10 '24 650w

"The final story is no more than a threadbare anecdote expanded without being enlarged. But the first three are intense and powerful studies of dominant psychological traits."

+ — N Y Tribune p24 Ag 10 '24 600w

"'Miss Parkworth,' both in portraiture and style, is of enduring worth. The three short stories included in the volume are in harmony with the novel." F. V. Roman

+ N Y World p8e Jl 27 '24 200w

Reviewed by Gerald Gould

Sat R 138:147 Ag 9 '24 320w

Sat R of Lit 1:51 Ag 16 '24 480w

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley

Spec 132:102 Jl 19 '24 500w

"Mr. Booth's power of stamping his dialogue with the impress of individual character, and at the same time of giving it a style and polish of his own, is very notable."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p437 Jl 10 '24 230w

BOOTH, EDWARD CHARLES. Treble clef. 454p $2.50 Dodd

24-25642

"The treble clef" is not a musician's tale but rather a story of the music of life. The action of the story takes place during the early Victorian period in the small English town of Daneborough where Mrs Holmroyd, after the death of her impractical husband, lives with her two children, Oswald and Beryl. She manages to maintain a living by baking pork pies and by conducting a small private school. Quite by accident there comes into the life of this sensitive woman the person of Councillor Burford, a grocer, crude and practical, whose pity for Mrs Holmroyd's plight develops into high esteem. The story of his courtship is one of gentle perseverance in the face of the opposition on the part of his spinster daughter, and the hesitancy of a woman who, he knows, is intellectually his superior. But Mrs Holmroyd bravely sacrifices all other ideals subordinate to that of duty as she sees it.

Reviewed by J. F. Smith

Boston Transcript p5 D 13 '24 1650w

"Without odious comparison there are sentimental sureness with Dickensian materials; maintained tempo of reactions implicit to life; media of DeMorgan, as charming and with less indirection. There is a splendid lack of the maudlin and meretricious." Robert Crane

+ Lit R p7 D 13 '24 750w

"This story is full of graves and gravity. It possesses the mustiness of some of the grand old stylists without the grace of their wit. With elaborate asides and ponderous preachments it wends its way with aristocratic austerity; and what really makes it worth while is its intriguing atmosphere and fine nobility."

— + N Y Times p17 D 21 '24 560w

"Clearly, a novel for quiet, sober readers, but not destined to find favor with impatient consumers of fiction whose sole command to the novelist is that he 'get on.' "

N Y Tribune p3 Ja 11 '25 150w

"Despite its unbroken tedium and lack of narrative interest, Edward C. Booth has given us an extremely lifelike picture of late Victorian days."

— + N Y World p8e N 16 '24 130w

Sat R of Lit 1:435 Ja 3 '25 480w

"An imaginative, poignant and socially significant story."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 N 15 '24 1450w

"A vibrant and intense work of art, powerful if somber."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 10 '25 100w

BOOTH, E: C:—Continued

"It is the simplest of stories, but written with an unerring sense of character and with much truth of observation."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p760 N 20 '24 480w

BORAH, WILLIAM EDGAR. American problems; ed. by Horace Green. 329p $2 Duffield

308 United States—Politics and government 24-6462

A selection of Senator Borah's speeches in the Senate and on several special occasions outside the Senate during the period from 1911 to 1923. The subjects of some of the longer speeches are Americanism, the League of nations, the Versailles treaty, recognition of Russia, and the release of political prisoners.

Am Pol Sci R 18:654 Ag '24 50w

Booklist 20:322 Je '24

Boston Transcript p5 Mr 8 '24 400w

Cleveland p53 Jl '24

"One could well dispense with some of the purely oratorical devices of the book, but much of it has a more than transient interest."

+ — Dial 77:85 Jl '24 100w

"While the selection does not do full justice to the intellectual breadth and courage which have vigorously identified Senator Borah with a greater variety of causes than any other man in Congress, the evidence of his eloquence and sincerity, of his almost unique combination of firm-principled old-fashioned Americanism and intelligent progressiveness is conspicuous on nearly every page." Ernest Gruening

+ Nation 119:314 S 24 '24 850w

"Senator Borah's speeches as given in this book are addressed to the reason rather than to the prejudices of his audiences. One may argue with him or against him, but the basis of a rational process of reaching a conclusion is not obscured by what he says." A. S. Will

+ — N Y Times p3 Mr 2 '24 2250w

"In Borah, the special occasion orator, who spoke on Hamilton and on Lincoln, we have the polished rhetorician, who, like Wilson, is able to make striking phrases without weakening the strength of his message." C. G. Bowers

+ N Y World p6e Mr 30 '24 460w

"One would rather hear the Senator speak than read his speeches, but the book is undoubtedly a storehouse of material for those debaters who happen to agree with Mr. Borah."

Outlook 136:402 Mr 5 '24 60w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:300 Je '24

R of Rs 69:447 Ap '24 60w

BORCHARDT, GEORG HERMANN (GEORG HERMANN, pseud.). Hetty Geybert; tr. by Anna Barwell. 383p $2.50 Doran [7s 6d Allen & U.] 24-25749

Berlin of nearly a century ago is the scene of this story of a year in the life of the orphaned Hetty Geybert. She was a beautiful, tender and lovable creature whose life was not her own, but captive to the powerful Geybert clan, a family of wealthy Jewish silk mercers. She was a lovely fluttering bird in a cage whose every move was observed by her watchful uncles and aunts. The love that came to her was not acceptable to the family, for young Kossling was poor and a Christian. The powerful pressure of the Geyberts kept the lovers apart and threw persistently into her path her stodgy cousin Julius whose creed and commercial standing were altogether satisfactory to the family. The story leaves her on her marriage night, fleeing out into the dark from the chains that had just been riveted about her—but whether it was to refuge or a worse captivity the present tale does not reveal.

"Novelty and a certain very real beauty are to be found in this story of Germany of eighty years ago. . . The Geyberts of Berlin are as fully and faithfully pictured with a similar mingling of truth and understanding to that which Mr. Galsworthy bestowed on the Forsytes or as Arthur Train gave to old Peter Kayne and his descendants." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 28 '24 650w

"More vivid and alive than any of the characters is a suburban garden on which the author expends loving pages of description. Here his words have a vitality that transcends mere fidelity. They are most happily colored; but, unfortunately, their glow does not spread over the whole long book. The translation is careful and creditable." Eva Goldbeck

+ — Lit R p931 Ag 2 '24 500w

New Repub 40:53 S 10 '24 180w

"It is a bulky book for such a brief tale; at times in its leisurely progress it surrenders placidly to tedium. The conversation especially is tiresomely iterative. The details have charm, the material and mental background of the period is beautifully precise, as in the Flemish painting. But the characters sink into the background." Isabel Paterson

+ — N Y Tribune p25 Jl 13 '24 560w

N Y Tribune p7 D 21 '24 180w

"The interplay of character is cleverly managed. The translation by Anna Barwell is pleasant to read; and if an over-sweetness of tone cloys in certain passages, that is no doubt characteristic of the original."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p94 F 14 '24 320w

BORDEAUX, HENRY. Gardens of Omar (Yamilé sous les cèdres); auth. tr. from the French by Henry Longan Stuart. 257p $2 Dutton 24-8792

For the setting of his latest novel the author has chosen a spot whose very name breathes romance, the cedars of Lebanon, and for plot the tragic love of a Christian maid, Yamilé, and a young Mohammedan, Omar. A story of little more than half a century ago, it has all the flavor of the days when religious hatreds were violent as were the political feuds of Montagu and Capulet. Breaking faith with Khalil, the friend of her childhood, on the eve of her marriage to him, Yamilé leaves home and kindred with her new lover—but only for a little while does she taste happiness with him, for her brother, during a day's absence of her husband, captures her and brings her home, where she is judged mercilessly as a traitor to her faith and to her people and condemned to death. Fifty years later, Khalil returns to the scene of the tragedy and it is from his lips that the author hears the tale of his love for Yamilé.

"Henry Bordeaux is a member of the French Academy and he is a man who stands distinctly apart from the work of most of the French writers of the present day. He reveals a different side of their national life and he embues it with a seriousness which is important to recognize. In this novel we have a rather long introductory section for he would have us understand that this is a true story which he tells and that we must come slowly as he came into the atmosphere of Omar and Yamilé. . . It is romance, not tragedy, that survives from the tale, brief but unquenched romance." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p1 Je 7 '24 1150w

"A true tale told with poetic simplicity."

+ Cleveland p43 Je '24

"The prose of M. Bordeaux follows every beat and rhythm of the haunting tale. He is much too sentimental about his hero and heroine and thereby weakens the fearful impetus of the legend. He is, however, a sorcerer who can conjure up a dream, melancholy and terrible, both in its poetry and in its living truth. Yamilé and Omar live not in the common light of day, but in the intensity of an eternal vision."

+ — Int Bk R p609 Jl '24 750w

"Henry Longan Stuart has given an accurate rendering of the novel from the original French, carrying over with poetic insight shades so subtle as to have been almost untranslatable." F. V. Roman

+ N Y World p7e My 25 '24 500w

"The translation preserves the matured style of the original. But the romance is gentle and meditative and the story is too much one of modulated imagination."

+ — Outlook 137:547 Ag 6 '24 150w

BORDEN-TURNER, MARY (BRIDGET MACLAGEN, pseud.). Three pilgrims and a tinker. 303p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Heinemann]

The scene of the story is the English fox-hunting country where men and women live in the saddle and the M.F.H. is the most important person in the countryside. To a village of the Midlands come Jim and Marion Dawnay with the "three pilgrims," Marion's daughters by two former marriages, and Tim the Tinker whose father is Jim. Marion is a cosmopolitan who has lived a gay life in European capitals and Jim, her third husband, is the disinherited son of Lord Woodthorpe. Marion hates her new home and lives with a recklessness which threatens disaster to her whole family. The four delightful children and their faithful nurse, Cricket, are the important characters of the story for it is they who help Marion to steady herself and accept the rôle of middle age.

Booklist 21:151 Ja '25

Boston Transcript p7 N 22 '24 950w

"The plot is a triangle with three obtuse angles—an impossibility in geometry and a commonplace in fiction." G. C.

— Ind 113:492 D 6 '24 160w

"The story is the more moving because it is told with restraint and with a fine sincerity." Forrest Reid

+ Nation and Ath 36:306 N 22 '24 150w

"This novel suffers from having too many different themes. Characterization, where it concerns women and children, is excellent; but men are rarely characterized. . . 'Three pilgrims and a Tinker' is an enjoyable book, written with much spirit and some humor."

+ — N Y Times p8 O 26 '24 900w

"It is chaotic but exactly in the way that life itself is chaotic. That is why the book leaves you with the intimate, arresting sense of being transported to this quarter of English life which the author knows so well and has reproduced so vividly." Alison Smith

+ N Y World p9e N 23 '24 550w

"There is a dangerous charm about Miss Borden's book which, on the whole, leads one to estimate it far more highly than its merits justify. It has a certain novelty of manner and a certain oblique type of portraiture which give the impression that it is different and distinctive. Written in a style perhaps intentionally verbose and flowing and adjectival, it commands at times, as in the description of a hunt, splendid breathlessness and vigor."

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:364 D 6 '24 350w

"Miss Borden still writes with an ease and quickness of expression that holds our attention, and we almost forgive her. Even in that she sometimes overreaches herself and comes out with a common poeticism." Philip Carducci

+ — Spec 133:706 N 8 '24 200w

BORLAND, HAROLD G. Rocky Mountain tipi tales. 247p $1.75 Doubleday

24-11023

"As a small boy Mr Borland had the rare good fortune of having the stories told to him by the Indians themselves. They interested him so much that they sank deep into his memory, and now, having become a writer, he has put them into print for the benefit of children who cannot have the experience of his childhood. The tales come from the myth stores of half a dozen tribes of the Rocky Mountain region, Omaha, Ute, Piute, Blackfeet, Hopi and Teton, and they are much concerned with the beginnings of things—how the world was made, the first peace pipe, how the first strawberries were made, why pine trees keep their leaves."—N Y Times

Booklist 21:30 O '24

Reviewed by M. G. Bonner

Int Bk R p746 S '24 90w

"Mr. Borland has preserved the poetic charm of his originals with a fine skill. The volume is of value as folk lore as well as an altogether delightful collection of fairy stories for imaginative children."

+ Lit R p828 Je 14 '24 130w

"It is a really notable collection of Indian tales, myths and legends that Hal G. Borland has brought together in 'Rocky Mountain Tipi Tales.' In their simplicity and straightforwardness, they sound much as if they were being told by some old Indian chief to whom they had come by word of mouth through a long line of ancestors."

+ N Y Times p12 Je 22 '24 230w

N Y World p8e Ag 24 '24 30w

BOSWORTH, EDWARD INCREASE. Life and teaching of Jesus; according to the first three Gospels. 424p $2.50 Macmillan

232 Jesus Christ—Biography. Jesus Christ—Teaching 24-8663

Dean Bosworth of Oberlin presents the life of Jesus in terms of his own religious experience, convinced that it furnishes ground for the kind of authority that modern men most readily recognize, the authority "of the man who knows" because he has had experience.

"The book was written primarily for a textbook for college students, but will prove of great value and help in guiding all thoughtful men into finding what Jesus was, what he felt and thought and taught." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 17 '24 210w

J Religion 4:444 Jl '24 50w

"A carefully composed life of Jesus the purpose of which is primarily devotional in the light of modern needs."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 My 13 '24 180w

BOTSFORD, JAY BARRETT. English society in the eighteenth century, as influenced from oversea. 388p $2.50 Macmillan

914.2 England—Social life and customs 24-12923

By the opening of the eighteenth century England possessed the promise of a well-rounded colonial and commercial empire. It is the purpose of Dr. Botsford's book to follow the effect of this development overseas on certain phases of life and character at home—the introduction of new commodities and ideas, the vast influx and wider distribution of wealth, the development of metropolitan centers and standards, the refinement of taste and manners and the awakening of a philanthropic spirit. References at the end of each chapter show the many sources from which the author has drawn his material. Bibliography. Index.

Am Pol Sci R 18:832 N '24 130w

"Mr. Botsford's method of study is admirable. The narrative moves swiftly from phase to phase, each chapter a model of scholarly condensation." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Jl 23 '24 800w

Canadian Hist R 5:268 S '24 250w

"The profuse documentation for each chapter of Mr. Botsford's book gives the impression that it was prepared as a doctoral thesis. Whether or not that is so, the book is interestingly written, and deserves to find readers among others than special students of the period. It contains an excellent bibliography."

+ N Y Times p11 Jl 20 '24 1150w

Reviewed by J. St L. Strachey

N Y Times p2 N 16 '24 2350w (Reprinted from Spec)

Reviewed by J. St L. Strachey

Spec 133:699 N 8 '24 2350w

BOTTOME, PHYLLIS (MRS FORBES DENNIS). Perfect wife. 206p $2 Doran
24-13019

Phyllis Bottome tells the story of a wife's rather quixotic love for her husband. So great was her love for him that like a mother who sacrifices all for her child so she offered herself upon the altar of his happiness. They had been married ten years when Norman Elliot told Anne that he loved someone else. Now that someone else was a rather crude child, but if she was necessary to his happiness, he must have her. Accordingly Anne arranged for the divorce, trained the girl to keep house and act as Norman would wish and finally dressed her for her wedding day! Blind in her love for her husband, Anne essayed to keep him happy thru the medium of another woman.

"It is a satisfying book." D. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 14 '24 1100w
Cleveland p50 Jl '24

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett
New Repub 39:307 Ag 6 '24 130w

"Phyllis Bottome has added one more compact and well-rounded novel to her growing list of meritorious fiction. A subtle story of the sacrifice of an exquisite wife is told with the greatest economy of material."
+ N Y Times p8 My 25 '24 700w

"It's not a very pretty story, and no amount of clever handling can make it so. Neither is it quite credible. A novel may be built on a hypothesis, but it must conclude as a convincing demonstration. By remaining unreal this one becomes unnecessary."
— N Y Tribune p24 My 25 '24 570w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e My 18 '24 50w

BOURGET, PAUL CHARLES JOSEPH. Gaol; tr. from the French by F. Mabel Robinson. 314p $2 Brentano's [7s 6d Unwin]

"A psychological novel questioning whether man is helpless in the grip of inherited tendencies or whether he can wrench himself free from the strangle grip of his heritage. The story covers from 1877 to 1914 and deals with three generations: a devoted young husband and father who commits suicide over a betrayal of confidence which he believes to have ruined his career, his son who likewise attempts his life because his beloved wife betrays him for a close friend and a son's son whose destiny is determined by the war. The two agents working for the thwarting of evil heredity are a wise physician and a devoted mother."—Cleveland

Cleveland p43 Je '24

"M. Bourget has admirably developed the theory that heredity holds subsequent generations tightly clasped within a narrow and impenetrable prison; but he has built the whole drama of his novel out of an exception to this theory—a triumph of maternal love over the power of heredity in an individual and isolated instance. This weakens the interest of those who read the book with the scientific attitude and leaves the others uneasy as to the eventual result of heredity's influence upon the characters of the novel. 'The Gaol' will not seriously disappoint admirers of Bourget, but it falls somewhat short of his best work." L. L.
+ — Int Bk R p677 Ag '24 420w
N Y Times p8 My 4 '24 820w

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley
Spec 131:564 Ap 5 '24 200w

BOWEN, ELIZABETH. Encounters. 204p $2 Boni & Liveright

"Encounters" is a collection of fourteen psychological studies in the form of short stories interpreting the effect of the moods and emotions of one person upon another. "Breakfast," the first study in the book, is a picture of breakfast in a boarding house with the usual group of boarders—the business man, the artificial woman, a little girl and her mother. Some of the other stories are: The return; Requiescat; The lover; The evil that men do; Sunday evening.

"The power of the stories does not lie mainly in the words and sentences as they appear—and yet they appear truthfully and effectively—but in the mind pictures which one conjures up from reading them—in the suggestiveness, in the touch of genius." H. B.
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 O 12 '24 460w

"Miss Bowen sees deeply into the cisterns of man's ills. She probes his soul with a sympathetic, soothing touch and in admirably lucid style envisions his grief and joys. She knows and understands the motives that direct him and she is superbly objective." J: Ferris
+ Lit R p14 S 27 '24 410w

Reviewed by Raymond Mortimer
New Statesman 21:201 My 26 '23 460w

"Miss Bowen throughout the stories shows an extraordinary ability at etching, particularly the biting out process in so far as packed epithet can accomplish it."
+ N Y Times p14 S 21 '24 260w
N Y Tribune p13 O 5 '24 400w

"Her method is very like that of Katherine Mansfield and in her attitude toward life she also strongly recalls Paul Bourget. For her as for him the interior life is all important and she too is interested in studying unusual manifestations of it although she views human nature without his tenderness or his idealism." E. McD. J.
N Y World p7e S 21 '24 300w
Outlook 138:648 D 17 '24 60w

"It is without doubt better to do this type of story well than badly. And yet the feeling comes that it would be better to do it as badly as Stephen Crane sometimes did his work, provided that there might appear, by accident or by intention, the strength of spirit which could arouse a reverberation. As it is, one wonders what the doing well is all about, and why bother."
— Sat R of Lit 1:234 O 25 '24 200w

"Its alluring title sufficiently advertises the character of this, Miss Bowen's first volume of short stories. One hopes that it will be followed by many more, equally mature in conception and finished in workmanship. For Miss Bowen is the most notable newcomer to that company which, in the death of Katherine Mansfield, lost perhaps its most brilliant light. Her stories bear, indeed they almost challenge, comparison with Miss Mansfield's."
+ Spec 132:91 Jl 21 '23 570w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p320 My 10 '23 260w

BOWER, B. M., pseud. (MRS BERTHA [MUZZY] SINCLAIR-COWAN). Bellehelen mine. 309p $2 Little 24-19019

Helen Strong, upon the sudden death of her father, returns to Soldfield to reopen the Bellehelen mine which Jim Strong had been forced to close. Contrary to the advice of her good and philanthropic friend, Dr Dave, she assembles the crew who had worked for her father and begins operations. But she has to contend with strong opposition from a rival mining company, the Western consolidated, which is in the hands of a powerful and mysterious person. When she discovers that the Bellehelen has been maliciously robbed and several murderous attacks made on her crew, Helen assiduously goes in quest of the offender and finds him to be not only the power behind the Consolidated but also a man for whom she had had a profound respect.

Booklist 21:154 Ja '25
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 30 '24 270w

"There is no lack of action in her tales, and she is capable of using theatrical devices, as in parts of this story, but they never degenerate into absurdities and they are never merely the conventional thing. She does not caricature but she is able to use highly eccentric, picturesque 'characters,' emphasizing their oddities without making them incredible or merely burlesquely comic. It is really character drawing of a fine quality." H. W.

+ Lit R p10 Ag 30 '24 250w

N Y Times p18 Ag 24 '24 220w

BOWER, B. M., pseud. (MRS BERTHA [MUZZY] SINCLAIR-COWAN). Eagle's wing. 297p il $2 Little

24-3456

"The greater part of the action takes place in a barren and forlorn spot on the banks of the upper reaches of the Colorado River and the plot is concerned with the scheme of a big man, big both physically and in his inner nature, who has a strain of Indian blood, to dam the river in order to expose its bed for placer mining purposes. For forty years this idea has held him and the purpose has shaped and filled all his life. Then comes the United States Government with its plans for building a dam that will benefit the people of seven States, give them water power, electricity and water for irrigation. It is the national Government that is meant by the title. But long before this, away back in the '60s, romance had stepped that way and had left tangled threads of destiny which the fates are still spinning."—N Y Times

Booklist 20:301 My '24

"As a Western story, 'The Eagle's Wing' is distinguished from the usual run of such tales by the comparative absence from its pages of 'battle, murder and sudden death' and by a heroine who is neither an astonished Easterner, a cultured cow-girl, nor the daughter of a bandit chief. Yet it is sufficiently 'red-blooded' for all that." S. L. R.

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 23 '24 420w

"Once more Miss Bower shows her unusual ability in the use of fairly hackneyed material to the production of entertaining, worthwhile fiction. Indeed, she is quite in earnest this time, and, although the tale has all the strenuous qualities of the wild West yarn in its action, it is not merely a joyous extravaganza of adventure. She is concerned with the preservation of national resources—in this case water—and she also has a feeling for the real romance of big engineering."

+ Lit R p546 F 23 '24 280w

"Besides being a very entertaining and well constructed and well told story, 'The Eagle's Wing' seems to be also a sort of parable directed against those who would turn the forces and the resources of nature to the satisfaction of private greed."

+ N Y Times p27 F 17 '24 720w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p598 S 25 '24 80w

Wis Lib Bul 20:97 Ap '24

BOWRAN, JOHN GEORGE (RAMSAY GUTHRIE, pseud.). Christianity and culture. (Hartley lecture, 23d) 236p $3 Doran [5s Holborn pub. house]

261 Christianity. Culture

The belief expressed by the book is that the finest and highest culture is impossible apart from Christianity. The chapters show the influence of the Bible on English literature and the debt of science, art, music and poetry to Christianity.

Boston Transcript p4 Je 7 '24 150w

"The title of this 'Hartley Lecture' promises perhaps a good deal which readers of a philosophical turn of mind will not find in it. Mr. Bowran does not deal with principles, but collects instances. Throughout the book he relies very largely on extracts from other books. His own original contribution to the subject is not important."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p475 Jl 12 '23 140w

BOYD, ERNEST AUGUSTUS. Portraits: real and imaginary; being memories and impressions of friends and contemporaries. 265p $2.50 Doran

814

The book consists of a group of imaginary portraits, decidedly mordant in tone, of an esthete of the 1924 model, a literary lady, a mid-westerner, a critic, a liberal, a Puritan, etc.; some brief impressions of real authors, including H. L. Mencken, Theodore Dreiser, James Branch Cabell, and Sinclair Lewis; and a group of close-ups of George Jean Nathan, Thomas Beer, F. Scott Fitzgerald, George Moore, W. B. Yeats, James Stephens and George W. Russell.

Booklist 21:142 Ja '25

Boston Transcript p5 Ja 3 '25 380w

"This erudite Irishman is both discerning and witty, and so although his satire is no less well-directed than Swift's, his shafts are so gayly feathered that we watch them flutter unmindful of the fact that we, perhaps, are the target that is hit. It is a book rich in shrewd observation, in sly humor and in clear and beautiful writing." Al Weeks

+ Detroit News p20 N 16 '24 360w

"A volume of portraits in which imagination most certainly walks hand in hand with observation. The texture is essentially light, but this was manifestly Mr. Boyd's purpose and except in a few sporadic instances it is a good-humored book, at least from Mr. Boyd's attitude." H. S. Gorman

+ Lit R p4 D 13 '24 1150w

"Mr. Boyd's style in the long run is bad, being monotonous in the very quality which for a few pages gives it power. His explosions are too evenly spaced: eventually the impression is of a machine which rather ponderously grinds granite into uniform pieces and coughs them at a uniform rate into the face of the enemy. And he practices a trick which I consider abominable—the trick of misquotation for humorous effect. Something is rotten in the state of Greenwich Village, or the lewd forefathers of the hamlet sleep; we hear of Miltons never mute, and of a style that launched a thousand tiffs." Mark Van Doren

— Nation 119:574 N 26 '24 600w

"With no small amount of wit, insight and maliciously good-natured satire Mr. Boyd has assembled all those ridiculous, pompous and pretentious traits that mark the 'professional' of each species and woven them into straw figures that start into astonishing life for those readers who have observed the meretricious world about them. If Mr. Boyd is unfair at times, that is to be expected, for his trenchancy is dependent on rather stark outlines."

+ — N Y Times p6 N 16 '24 600w

"In each of these essays Mr. Boyd gives life to a type and every line and tint of the portrait awakes in us so vivid a sense of recognition that names of real persons come to our lips and their three-dimensional bodies before our view. These portraits may be imaginary, but they are not in the air; they are bitingly veracious." H. S.

+ N Y World p8e N 9 '24 180w

Outlook 138:653 D 17 '24 60w

BOYD, NANCY, pseud. See Millay, E. St V.

BOYD, THOMAS A. Dark cloud. 267p $2 Scribner

24-20723

Here are the adventures of a lovable lad whose keen imagination and introspective mind make him miserable and happy by turns. In the early fifties when the smuggling of negroes from the States to Canada was a capital crime, Hugh Turner flees from the cruel treatment of the captain of an English ship on which he had been cabin boy. He stumbles into the protecting arms of Mr Durham, a gentleman and an outlaw. Together they become refugees from the Federal officers until one day Hugh's benefactor is killed in a gambling brawl. Hugh, alone and heartbroken, joins the crew of "The Bald Eagle" a steamer plying the Mississippi. The strange sights and experiences thru which he passes interest the boy and one day he finds himself the hero of the hour.

BOYD, THOMAS A.—Continued

"An excellent job. The story of Hugh Turner, in the days of 'the underground railroad,' has been told with competence and intelligence. This is a tale of a boy's adventures that enriches our literature; it represents a type of which there are few examples." J. F.
+ Bookm 60:342 N '24 130w

Cleveland p91 D '24

"Mr. Boyd is not always perfectly felicitous in his choice of words; his style has grating, rough spots, but these minor matters will be overlooked by readers who wish to enjoy a picture of one of the most fascinating periods in American history." Herschel Brickell
+ — Lit R p4 S 13 '24 450w

"Mr. Boyd intended a wistful tragedy of egoism, he has been deflected from his purpose by the incompletely visualized task of selecting and assembling the component parts of his present—the period just before the Civil War. It remains merely a grandiose bit of cleverness."
— + N Y Times p8 S 7 '24 650w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
N Y Tribune p5 S 21 '24 900w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e S 21 '24 170w

"Thomas Boyd's second book will be a surprise and a disappointment to the enthusiastic readers of 'Through the Wheat' because the author of one of the most individual chronicles of the war has here written as commonplace a narrative of early America as anything produced by the rococo romancers of the last generation." J. J. Smertenko
— Sat R of Lit 1:140 S 27 '24 580w

"By no means so commanding a book as is 'Through the Wheat,' but it is much nearer to being a true literary beginning."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7a O 12 '24 500w

BOYLE, CONSTANCE ANTONINA. Nor all thy tears. ltd ed 316p $2 Seltzer [7s 6d Allen & U.]
24-31914

"Though most of the scenes are laid in Brittany, the novel opens in an old Tudor manor house on a night of wind and rain. The heroine of the tale, Leen Haye, is a woman of 44 when the novel begins, the mother of four sons and a daughter and the wife of a man she has never loved, Eldred Haye of Hiltern Hayes, an Englishman of an ultra-conventional type. Leen had been brought up on the farm called Le Bas-Bout de Plourguier, among Breton peasants and fisher-folk. She had fallen in love with a young fisherman, who was drowned and whom she never forgot. However, she presently met and married Eldred Haye and went with him to his English home. But she was not at all happy in the new life. She longed for her old home, her old way of life and the companions of her youth, and immediately after the death of her husband she set off for Brittany, taking her daughter with her and was later joined there by her sons. It is with what happened to her and to her children, especially to her daughter Isoline and her eldest son Alured, after their arrival at Plourguier, that the tale is principally concerned."—N Y Times

"It is a story quite modern in its frankness and its stress upon the rights of the individual; but thoughtfully cognizant of the powers—circumstance, inheritance, fate—which so often reduce those rights to a status mainly titular or theoretical. For the rest, the chief merit of this novel is a quality—a mood or an atmosphere—which it is easier to enjoy than to define."
+ Lit R p591 Mr 15 '24 800w

"Poor romance! And it fares hardly at Miss Boyle's hands, although her book has about it a refreshing genuineness of emotion, and not a little perception of the complexities and beauty of life." A. B. Parsons
+ — Nation 118:402 Ap 4 '24 250w

"An entertaining romance and, for the most part, a well-written one. The descriptions of the Breton folk, their manners and customs, the visits and dances and constant love-making are all interesting."
+ N Y Times p16 Ja 20 '24 600w

Outlook 137:283 Je 18 '24 180w

"Miss Boyle's characters stand out clear-cut in a well-constructed tale that possesses something of tragic irony, and she draws a convincing, if not altogether edifying, picture of Breton life and manners."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p753 N 8 '23 150w

BOYNTON, PERCY HOLMES. Some contemporary Americans; the personal equation in literature. 289p $2 Univ. of Chicago press
810.4 American literature 24-13711

Essays on some contemporary American writers by the professor of English in the University of Chicago. Contents: American neglect of American literature; Edwin Arlington Robinson; Robert Frost; The voice of Chicago; Edgar Lee Masters and Carl Sandburg; Amy Lowell; Edith Wharton; Booth Tarkington; Theodore Dreiser; Mr Cabell expounds himself; Willa Cather; The short story; The drift of the drama; Bostonia and Bohemia; The younger set and the Puritan bogey; Biography and the personal equation; Pessimism and the critical code. Index.

Booklist 21:14 O '24

"It covers a wide field ably and sanely, and with amazing brevity." J. F.
+ Bookm 59:730 Ag '24 120w

Cleveland p68 S '24

Reviewed by Walter Yust
Lit R p924 Jl 26 '24 300w

"Mr. Boynton now and then shows a disposition to be too hasty, not to examine his material carefully, else how could he in a discussion of 'The Short Story' say 'Konrad Bercovici, who presumably has been to the home of his memory in his Russian stories. . . ' Mr. Boynton ought to know that Mr. Bercovici's stories are quite Roumanian. His choice of Wilbur Daniel Steele, as the most interesting of the orthodox short story writers, is excellent. Mr. Boynton's volume is worth the reader's attention." L: Kantor
— + N Y Times p7 Je 29 '24 1350w

Outlook 138:64 S 10 '24 90w

St Louis p380 N '24

Reviewed by R: Church
Spec 132:165 Ag 2 '24 250w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p450 Jl 17 '24 20w

Wis Lib Bul 20:210 O '24

BRACE, ERNEST. Commencement. 366p $2 Harper
24-19530

Gregory Thrumm, good-looking and an idealist, graduates from college with scholastic honors, a fianceé, a prospective job and a thousand dollar check. With these assets he starts his business career as a copy-writer for the Blooker Advertising Agency. His first ad is so successful that his employer increases his salary. Then comes a slump in his work which results in his being discharged. Leonora Prail, his fiancée, an attractive and extravagant girl, calmly breaks her engagement with this man of no prospects. Gregory finally opens a bookshop, and marries Georgia Rossby, a former stenographer in the Blooker concern. The bookshop is a miserable failure, and Gregory, desperate lest he lose the love and respect of Georgia, tries again to write the ad upon which he was working when he left the agency. Upon presenting it to Mr Blooker he is given his position again—and the future for Gregory and Georgia looks bright.

Booklist 21:66 N '24

"'Commencement' is an average novel. It is well written, and the story of Gregory's attempts to adjust himself to conditions is interestingly told."

+ — Lit R p9 S 6 '24 300w

"The story as a whole is told with a seriousness that occasionally finds vent in long didactic speeches, the scenes and the situations, even though dealt wth a little imperfectly, have the touch of reality. What one particularly enjoys is a pervasive vein of irony, emanating principally from the tongue of one Mr. Prail, a delightfully portrayed, amusing and yet pathetic character."

+ — N Y Times p13 Ag 31 '24 650w

N Y World p8e S 7 '24 150w

BRACQ, JEAN CHARLEMAGNE. Evolution of French Canada. 467p $2.50 Macmillan

971 French-Canadians. French in Canada. Canada—History 24-20263

"This is a study of the French in Canada by a Frenchman. The author treats of the theocratic formation of French Canada, of early British rule, the uprising of 1837, of Cartier and Laurier and the Quebec Government. He gives an interesting account of the achievements of French Canada and describes present conditions in agriculture, education, literature and art."—R of Rs

"The description of development, whether political or economic, is so disconnected that it affords little insight into the actual course of history. A wide range of material has been used, though not at all times with sound judgment." A. P. U.

— + Am Econ R 14:728 D '24 60w

Booklist 21:104 D '24

Ind 113:325 O 25 '24 10w

"Those who have read Fiske and Parkman will want also to read Professor Bracq's book, since it brings the province down to the present and contains much information that is not found in the writings of those named above. An exhaustive and complete bibliography is printed as an appendix for the guidance of readers who desire to pursue the subject further."

+ Lit R p10 S 20 '24 200w

"A careful and very interesting survey of the historical background and development of French Canada."

+ N Y Times p20 S 21 '24 350w

R of Rs 70:448 O '24 60w

"There is an innocent frankness about M. Bracq's presentation of Quebec's colonization policy that will probably arouse more wrath than anything else in his book. If he had consulted some of the eminent French Canadians whose hospitality and friendship he has enjoyed he might have avoided some irritating indiscretions." P: McArthur

— + Sat R of Lit 1:245 N 1 '24 650w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 13 '25 280w

BRADFORD, SIR EDWARD EDEN. Life of Admiral of the fleet Sir Arthur Knyvet Wilson. 257p il $5 Dutton [12s Murray]

B or 92 Wilson, Sir Arthur Knyvet. Great Britain—History, Naval [24-2931]

Sir Arthur Wilson's long naval career "began in a sailing ship of the line and ended as First Sea Lord of the Admiralty, after the Dreadnought had become the accepted type of capital ship." On the outbreak of the Great war he was in retirement but resumed work as an unofficial staff officer and consultant. For years he took a very active part in the development of the torpedo.

"It is the merit and the defect of Admiral Bradford's work that he has written just such a biography as Wilson himself would have approved. There is something rather tantalizing in his occasional brief glimpses behind the scenes. Yet it is possible that Admiral Bradford's sympathetic reticence adds to the effectiveness with which he has drawn the picture of a high-minded gentleman and an officer of exceptional ability and unsurpassed devotion to duty." C. E. Fayle

+ — Nation and Ath 34:350 D 1 '23 480w

N Y Tribune p25 Jl 27 '24 130w

"The one respect in which this otherwise admirable biography is open to criticism is that it does not clearly bring out the serious consequences of Sir A. K. Wilson's hostility to the modern method of directing war."

+ — Sat R 136:468 O 27 '23 1050w

"A concise record of 250 pages which is clear, readable, and well arranged, bringing out the character of the man without a word that oversteps the simplicity of statement which above all things the subject of the biography himself would have enjoined."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p683 O 18 '23 1150w

BRADFORD, GAMALIEL. Bare souls. 340p il $3.50 Harper

928 Authors 24-23738

In these studies Mr Bradford tries to penetrate the inner lives of some writers, English and French, in whose self-revealing letters he finds the best clues to their souls. Contents: A clue to the labyrinth of souls; Voltaire; Thomas Gray; Horace Walpole; William Cowper; Charles Lamb; John Keats; Gustave Flaubert; Edward Fitzgerald; Notes; Index.

Booklist 21:108 D '24

Bookm 60:490 D '24 460w

"Because of the superb nature of the material at his disposal, because he has never before had such a fascinating group to deal with, 'Bare Souls' is beyond question Mr. Bradford's best book. He takes a group of men of whom we have all heard since our school days and presents pictures of their inner lives which will make them human beings, not books on the shelf or names in the history of literature, to us forevermore." E: Wagenknecht

+ Boston Transcript p3 O 4 '24 2950w

Ind 113:381 N 8 '24 60w

+ — Ind 113:522 D 13 '24 350w

"Truly, the pictures which Mr. Bradford gives us of eight notable souls remind one of flashes from the sun when all else is obscure and darkened. They are nothing more than flashes, indeed; they illuminate only fitfully, and in scattered spots and patches and yet their light is vivid and revealing, and their shades and gradations are many and varied." S. A. Coblentz

+ Int Bk R p11 D '24 1600w

Reviewed by Garland Greever

Lit R p4 O 25 '24 1350w

Reviewed by R. F. Dibble

Nation 119:500 N 5 '24 300w

"Mr. Bradford has built up an interesting and highly instructive book. Behind his studies of souls there is an immense amount of reading, and had he been guided by less singleness of purpose that reading would have intruded itself to the blurring of the portraits." P. A. Hutchison

+ N Y Times p1 O 12 '24 2100w

"An English commentator might have composed these portraits, certainly no better and perhaps not so well, still quite competently and agreeably. But as yet there is no one equipped to take up the work Mr. Bradford has been doing in the field of American biography. He must pay the penalty for having made himself indispensable by continuing at his post." Isabel Paterson

— N Y Tribune p4 O 19 '24 950w

BRADFORD, G.—Continued
N Y World p9e O 19 '24 300w
Outlook 138:340 O 29 '24 30w
R of Rs 70:669 D '24 120w
St Louis p416 D '24

"This, I think, is Mr. Bradford's finest book." A. W. Vernon
+ Sat R of Lit 1:345 D 6 '24 620w

"Mr Bradford's reading has been enormous but he is too excellent an artist to permit it to become obtrusive and blur his portraits. Erudition, in sight and sympathy have carried him a long way and the result is a volume which points hopefully toward a type of literary criticism akin to that of Sainte-Beuve." J. J. R.
+ Springf'd Republican p7a D 28 '24 750w

BRADFORD, GAMALIEL. Soul of Samuel Pepys. 261p il $3.50 Houghton
B or 92 Pepys, Samuel 24-8167

The psychographer who for the last ten years has been painting "portraits of the soul" here attempts to portray the "soul of one who has painted his own portrait with such ample and intimate fidelity," letting the subject speak as far as may be for himself, thru the Diary. Mr Bradford studies the Diary first as literature, then as a revelation of the character of Pepys—in his official, intellectual and spiritual life, as money-getter and spender, in his human relations and as Mrs Pepys's husband.

"There is nobody else so well qualified to perform this task as Mr. Bradford. Over and above his complete familiarity with the Diary itself, he possesses the advantages of a unique familiarity with biographical literature in general, especially in the form of diaries and letters as revelations of the soul of man. This very familiarity enables him to study Pepys not merely as a single phenomenon but also as a typical human being, varying from the norm, or conforming to it, in this or that particular. The book is therefore Pepys himself plus Bradford, the most highly qualified of interpreters." M. A. DeW. Howe
+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Jl '24 500w

"An easy, entertaining book, and shallow by the very nature of its purposes." R. M. Weaver
+ Bookm 60:93 S '24 700w

"Many other books about Samuel Pepys will doubtless be written, for he is a perpetual inspiration, but it is no exaggeration to say that none will ever displace Mr. Bradford's." E. F. Edgett
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 12 '24 2500w
Cleveland p79 S '24
Dial 78:78 Ja '25 60w

"Mr. Bradford's method is the most interesting thing about 'The Soul of Samuel Pepys.' He has not set out to find new facts about Pepys, but to give order to the host of facts that Pepys has himself recorded, to make Pepys' portrayal of himself tangible, intelligible and illuminating." R. A.
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 My 25 '24 680w
Ind 112:241 Ap 26 '24 20w

"For the running reader, by his judicious condensations and omissions, by his orderly, meticulous arrangement, he has created a book which presents a great figure that is not inhuman. For the fanatic, by his interpretation of events and people, by his historical perspective, he has explained and illuminated many dark matters in the Diary." D. R.
+ Ind 112:261 My 10 '24 800w

"It is because Mr. Bradford has concentrated his attention on the soul of Pepys that he has made a valuable contribution to Pepysian literature, and to the study of human nature. His method is not that of eulogy, nor is it the method of irony, where the biographer selects his victim and scores off him as frequently and as sensationally as his talents will permit. No, the reason for Mr. Bradford's really profound analysis lies primarily in his intense sympathy for everything human. His judgments are based on inflexible moral standards, but even when he says Guilty! there is always a recommendation for mercy." W: L. Phelps
+ Int Bk R p522 Je '24 1300w

"Mr. Gamaliel Bradford, who has been so successful in capturing the elusive humanity of so many of our American heroes, heroines, and villains has caught the soul of Samuel Pepys and pinned it to paper, where all who read may see the rise and fall of its elation and depression. Mr. Bradford's book is not a substitute for the few thousand pages of the diary, for nothing can be a substitute for the diary, but Mr. Bradford offers a definite interpretation of the many sides of Samuel Pepys which is a worthy supplement to the diarist's own interpretation of himself . . . Mr Bradford's method was never more successful than it is in the portrayal of Samuel Pepys." M. R. Werner
+ Lit R p740 My 10 '24 900w

"A study which, like all of Mr. Bradford's studies, is both weak and strong. Its value lies in its separate essays on Pepys as a business man, as a spender of money, as a man of mind, as a husband and lover, and as a church-goer. The quotations grouped under these heads furnish a short-cut to Pepys for those who have no time for the voluminous diary. The generalizations, however, and the remarks of interpretation are shallow. And Mr. Bradford's tone of rather fatuous familiarity with Pepys and the reader grows steadily more offensive." Mark Van Doren
— + Nation 118:655 Je 4 '24 150w
Nation and Ath 36:62 O 11 '24 450w

"The value of Mr. Bradford's book is in its detail rather than in its structure; its copious quotations from Pepys himself. Mr. Bradford's adroitness in quotation as usual surpasses his skill as commentator." R. M. Lovett
+ — New Repub 39:189 Jl 9 '24 320w

"A book of the highest value to Pepys lovers, one which must inevitably find a permanent place as its companionable commentary. No one who knows his Pepys can afford to miss it, and those who have yet to make his acquaintance will find nowhere else so thoroughly understanding and sympathetic an introduction." R: Le Gallienne
+ N Y Times p5 Ap 27 '24 1400w

"An intensely readable book, with concentration and clarification carried to a high degree. Nobody has the right—nobody should feel the inclination—to skip a single page. As Pepys's commentator reminds us more than once—in his presentation of an average man to average men—we may here see ourselves." H: B. Fuller
+ N Y Tribune p23 My 11 '24 1100w

"It is the fashion of the day to call such a work as Mr. Bradford's psychoanalysis. It might be simpler, and as accurate, to call it an admirable example of critical interpretation." J. L. H.
+ N Y World p6e Ap 27 '24 360w

"It is all good, from first page to the last." E. L. Pearson
+ Outlook 137:364 Jl 2 '24 100w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:377 Jl '24
Pratt p38 summer '24
R of Rs 70:222 Ag '24 180w
St Louis p354 O '24
Springf'd Republican p12 Ap 17 '24 430w
Springf'd Republican p7a Je 1 '24 900w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p592 S 25 '24 1050w
Wis Lib Bul 20:147 Je '24

BRAHDY, JOSEPH. Blueprint reading for the machine-shop and related trades. 114p il $2.50 Van Nostrand
744 Mechanical drawing. Blue prints 23-17960

"Aim . . . is to enable a student of elementary school training, with little or no knowledge of mechanical drawing, to read the drawings on commercial blue-prints."—Preface

Booklist 20:289 My '24

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:198 Ap '24

"Will be found very useful by teachers in apprentice, trade and vocational schools."

+ School Arts M 23:320 Ja '24 90w

BRAITHWAITE, WILLIAM STANLEY BEAUMONT, ed. Anthology of magazine verse for 1923; and Yearbook of American poetry. 564p $3 Brimmer

811.08 American poetry—Collections

"The anthology occupies two-thirds of the space in this eleventh issue, while in the remaining third, devoted to the 'Year Book of American Poetry,' are to be found half a dozen or more sections, including an index of poems published in American magazines and newspapers during the year from the first of August, 1922, to the end of July, 1923, wherein almost any aspiring young versifier can find his name, listed alphabetically, the title of his effusion, the name of the periodical in which it appeared and the date of its publication. This list fills over a hundred pages. Another section of twenty-five pages lists articles about and reviews of poets and poetry. Eleven pages are necessary to contain the list of volumes of poems, with author, title and publisher, which saw the light during the anthology year. These total over two hundred and fifty volumes."—N Y Times

"Mr. Braithwaite has recorded the poetic year with scholarly completeness." R. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 19 '24 1550w

"Famous and invaluable series. The introduction this time is pessimistic, for although the editor has seen many good poets born during the past year he has seen no great ones."

+ Nation 118:147 F 6 '24 70w

"The labor, the pains, the patience, that went into the making of this Anthology and Year Book must have been so unlimited and so dauntless that the mere thought of them arouses the wonder and the admiration of any penman."

+ N Y Times p22 Ja 20 '24 580w

BRAMAH, ERNEST. Eyes of Max Carrados. 354p $2 Doran [7s 6d G. Richards]

24-5830

A collection of mystery stories strung together by the thread of Max Carrados's part in the solution of them. Max Carrados is a blind man, yet with unerring skill he finds the answer just as he did in the stories published in 1914 under the title of "Max Carrados." In this collection, the first story is the Virginiola fraud, and is concerned with the redemption of that valuable book. Others are: The disappearance of Marie Severe; The secret of —Dunstan's tower; The mystery of the poisoned dish of mushrooms; The ghost at Massingham mansions; The missing actress sensation; The ingenious Mr Spinola; The Kingsmouth spy case; The Eastern mystery.

Boston Transcript p4 My 21 '24 270w

Cleveland p51 Jl '24

"Readers of the Kai-Lung books will not need to be told of Mr Bramah's gift for phrasing, nor of the fine craftsmanship of his highly polished style. He has applied them to these mystery tales, and with them no small amount of ingenuity of invention and cleverness of characterization." L. M. Field

+ Int Bk R p464 My '24 1200w

"Mr Bramah recounts the achievements of the blind Max Carrados with a deftness and restraint that render them at once sufficiently plausible and highly diverting."

+ Nation 118:688 Je 11 '24 50w

N Y Times p22 Ap 27 '24 500w

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas

N Y Tribune p23 Je 1 '24 300w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p7e My 18 '24 90w

"The stories make good light reading."

+ Spec 131:563 O 20 '23 200w

"The chapters keep the reader's interest closely, for each plot is clever and is well described."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a My 25 '24 160w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p634 S 27 '23 450w

BRAND, MAX. Dan Barry's daughter. 353p $1.90 Putnam

24-1971

The heroine is Joan, daughter of Dan Barry, that mysterious night horseman who has figured in the author's other western stories. Both Dan Barry and his wife were dead and Joan was brought up by Buck Daniels, in ignorance of her parentage, according to the dying wish of her mother who feared that Joan would follow in her father's footsteps. One night when she was eighteen and the wild geese were flying Joan heard the call of the wild and slipped away from her guardian. At the schoolhouse a dance was in full swing and altho she did not venture in, she peeped in at the window and realized for the first time what love might be. Leaving the schoolhouse she met Harry Gloster and the rest of the story follows their romance. It was a long trail and a rough one, but Gloster succeeded in winning Joan away from the call of the wild geese, her heritage from her father.

Booklist 20:299 My '24

"When Max Brand began his daredevil romances they were fresh and invigorating. He now grinds them out, to order, and the ready-made quality is apparent from the first page to the last. It contains healthy, outdoor life; and it may provide mild entertainment for all ages, in certain families that are not particular about local color or characterization so long as the book can be well recommended by the Y.M.C.A."

— + Boston Transcript p4 F 9 '24 210w

"Mr. Brand does it all very pleasantly, and there is even a touch of something truly poetic in his narrative, a vein of true romance that shows through even the meshes of a Wild West plot."

+ Lit R p810 Je 7 '24 130w

"Mr. Brand tells [the story] with not a little charm. Those who enjoy, even by proxy, following the call of the out-trails will enjoy this book."

+ N Y Times p24 Ja 27 '24 720w

"It requires an extraordinary special talent to write trash, especially good trash. 'Dan Barry's Daughter' is good trash." Roy Chanslor

+ N Y Tribune p21 F 3 '24 420w

N Y World p7e F 24 '24 360w

"A reasonably exciting but complicated Western romance. . . The story, despite its terrifying familiarity, is well told, and the details provide a large number of thrills."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p306 My 15 '24 120w

BRANDES, GEORG NORRIS COHEN. Wolfgang Goethe; auth. tr. from the Danish by Allen W. Porterfield. 2v 503;499p $10 Brown, N. L.

B or 92 Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von

"George Brandes the Danish critic began reading Goethe about the time Abraham Lincoln was elected President of the United States, and about the time the World War broke out in Europe, he published 'Wolfgang Goethe' which has just been issued here in two weighty volumes. It constitutes the nearest approach to a definite biography and exposition (rather than critique) of an unencompassable creator that has yet been published."—N Y World

"The literature on Goethe is so boundlessly rich that, at first sight, a new book on him may seem superfluous. And let, Dr. Brandes has found an angle from which Goethe has never been approached before." A. I. Nazaroff

Int Bk R p20 D '24 1450w

BRANDES, G. N. C.—Continued
Reviewed by Camillo von Klenze
Nation 119:647 D 10 '24 1000w

"A monumental, literary, critical and biographical digest. The work is a triumph of construction as well as a distinguished and mature study of the individual." H. S. Gorman
+ N Y Times p7 Je 22 '24 1700w

"Its scrupulous and unpretentious scholarship should find it readers not only among the 'Goethe mature' but also among those who seek an introduction to that master." H. S.
+ N Y World p8e Ag 3 '24 600w

"The translation of 'Wolfgang Goethe,' into English is an event,—an event which in no slight degree accentuates the advent of that great dream of Weltliteratur, which both Goethe and Carlyle so fondly cherished. This edition will continue to be sought by those who love good biography as long as Goethe's life and works have a message to tell."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:33 Ag 9 '24 450w

BRANGWYN, FRANK, and PRESTON, HAYTER. Windmills. 126p il $6.50 Dodd [21s Lane]

758 Windmills 24-8996

Text and illustrations combine to bring out the beauty and romance of windmills, to catch the spirit which lingers about them, in spite of their solid bodies and purposes. Mr. Preston's text gives, by way of introduction, a history of windmills and an account of the different types of construction. This is followed by descriptions of some old windmills in England, Spain, Holland, Belgium, France and Germany. Brangwyn's illustrations are in color.

"The reproductions of Mr. Brangwyn's watercolor sketches of these man-fashioned philosophers give vivid 'face and form' to that of which Mr. Preston has entertainingly written: the combination is an enjoyable book as well as a beautiful one; within, that is, for the cover is, unfortunately, abominable." S. L. R.
+ — Boston Transcript p1 Mr 1 '24 600w

"Mr. Preston gives us a wholly delightful treatise upon the history of windmills, their past, present, and possible—or impossible—future. As for Brangwyn's work, for that alone the book is worth buying."
+ Lit R p875 Jl 5 '24 250w

"In such a book as 'Windmills' it is, of course, obvious that the text was primarily a secondary matter. Yet in this case, the writer seems to have outdone himself. As charming, as masterful as in the display of a technique that balances its shadows and lines so beautifully, as sensitive to the pictorial aspects of these ruined towers that once provided bread for man as Mr. Brangwyn indubitably is, yet the prose of Mr. Preston does not materially suffer by comparison. He has caught the spirit that the artist intended to convey and set it down with a rare delicacy, and at the same time added something peculiarly his own."
+ N Y Times p6 F 10 '24 1900w

"A stimulating gift book for any young person interested in design."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p41 Ja 17 '24 20w

BRAUN, OTTO. Diaries and letters. 394p $3.50 Knopf [10s 6d Heinemann]

B or 92

"Otto Braun was the son of Dr. Heinrich Braun, a publicist and economist, and Lily Braun, the writer and socialist, author of Memoiren einer Sozialistin. He was seventeen years old when the war broke out and had not yet performed his military service. He enlisted at once, however, and served for two years on the eastern front until severely wounded, and after his recovery, a few months on the western front, where he was killed at Marcelcave, April 18, 1918." (New Repub) Besides the diary there are selections from his letters and poems, edited by Julie Vogelstein. There is an introduction by Havelock Ellis.

"Unique among the literary memorials of gifted youths fallen in the war. His was a mind comparable in type, scope, and intent to Leonardo's and Goethe's. Critical acumen, amounting to genius, made his receptivity constructive, and gives to this book, not the sensationalism of premature learning, but the impressiveness of wisdom that is innate and transcends finite years."
+ Dial 77:84 Jl '24 130w

"This diary is singularly interesting though it is apt to be misleading while its real value is much to be doubted. There is no question that Otto Braun was prematurely mature. That is, he was more broad and mercurially minded than the majority of boys. But much of this book is merely the talk, even the prattle, of any youngster under twenty. It all sounds much bigger than it really is." Allen Porterfield
— + Lit R p940 Ag 2 '24 380w

"Of Otto Braun's poetry it is difficult from the translations to say whether it has real distinction or only exuberance and ardor. But for his diaries and letters we can be entirely grateful. It is easy to overrate the substance. In the thought of a boy who died at twenty-one there can be little that is new or creative. But the soul of this gentle, high-minded German is a gift to the world sick with lust and hate. That he escaped that world, and remains preserved by death in all his beauty of boyish purity and promise is a fulfillment of the classical ideal in which he lived." R. M. Lovett
+ New Repub 38:238 Ap 23 '24 1050w
New Statesman 22:635 Mr 8 '24 1300w

"What would be the most valuable part of the volume, Otto's letters and his diary during the years of the war, is the most unsatisfactory; not through any fault on the part of the youthful soldier, but because of the censorship. . . Havelock Ellis, in his introduction, finds in the letters, diary and poetry of Otto Braun the intimation that this was a youth who, had he lived, might have become a guiding spirit of the twentieth century."
N Y Times p15 F 24 '24 2250w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p166 Mr 20 '24 1200w

BRAYBROOKE, PATRICK. Some thoughts on Hilaire Belloc; with a foreword by Charles F. Higham. 125p $2.50 Lippincott

B or 92 Belloc, Hilaire

"Mr. Braybrooke studies some aspects of Mr. Belloc and his writings, beginning with his attitude to the Press, and considering him also as politician, theologian, anti-Semite, historian of the French Revolution, essayist, and lover of Sussex."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"'Some Thoughts on Hilaire Belloc' is drivel."
— Bookm 59:478 Je '24 200w
Dial 77:438 N '24 100w

"A commentary remarkable for its total lack of decent English prose and its conscientious pedantry of presentation." A. D. D.
— Lit R p873 Jl 5 '24 300w

"As an interpreter of the writer whom he honors, he never gets anywhere near an orderly exposition of orderly thoughts, and even in the projection of his own notions he is about as illuminating as a roman candle of rhetoric. Mr. Braybrooke may read Belloc as much as he likes, but why should he write about him—in summer or winter?"
— Nation 118:sup454 Ap 16 '24 180w

"It is a fragmentary bit of tenth-rate journalism by one who, having already written Oddments and Suggestive Fragments, must have a queer liking for that sort of thing. The book sets out to evaluate Belloc as politician, theologian, anti-Semite, historian, poet, essayist, and traveller—all in 125 pages. It tries hard to be judicially appraising, and succeeds only in being either sophomorically severe or else gushingly fulsome." L: Browne
— New Repub 39:51 Je 4 '24 350w

"In spite of rather careless English and a singularly loose system of punctuation, Mr. Braybrooke has written an interesting book about that brilliant but rather erratic writer, Mr. Hilaire Belloc."
+ — Outlook 137:69 My 14 '24 250w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p54 Ja 24 '24 60w

BREMER, FREDRIKA. America of the fifties: letters of Fredrika Bremer; selected and ed. by Adolph Burnett Benson. (Scandinavian classics) 340p $2 Am. Scandinavian foundation

917.3 United States—Social life and customs

When Fredrika Bremer came to America in 1849, her reputation as a novelist had preceded her. She came here to study the position of women, hoping to use the information gained for the betterment of woman's lot in Sweden. She travelled all over America and met all kinds of people. Her letters, written to her sister in Sweden, describe the life and social conditions she found here and are full of her personal impressions of the men and women of the time—Emerson, Lowell, Longfellow, Webster, Lydia Maria Child, Charlotte Cushman, and others.

"Fredrika Bremer's letters from America are both literary and historical documents of unique value. Cool of judgment, conscientious of purpose, above all sympathetic, she combined a splendid equipment with splendid opportunities." C: W. Stork
+ N Y Times p6 N 23 '24 1800w
N Y World p8e D 21 '24 600w

BREWSTER, ARTHUR JUDSON, and PALMER, HERBERT HALL. Introduction to advertising. 373p il $2.50 Shaw, A. W.

659 Advertising 24-10028

A practical study of the principles of advertising and their applications. Its successive parts deal with the development and aims of advertising, writing of copy, selection of effective illustrations and layout, advertising mediums, advertising agencies and the ethics of advertising. Fully illustrated with examples of current advertising.

Booklist 21:54 N '24
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:366 Jl '24
Springf'd Republican p14 S 14 '24 140w

BREWSTER, DOROTHY, and BURRELL, ANGUS. Dead reckonings in fiction. 262p $2.25 Longmans

808.3 Fiction. Psychological novels 24-28243

Essays on some modern fiction writers notable as interpreters and analysts of life. The object of the authors is to help to a greater appreciation and understanding of the books we like and the reasons why we like them. The essays throw light not only on the human beings these novelists portray, and their elusive relations to each other, but also on the personality of the author behind the book as affecting his interpretation of life. Among the authors studied are Anton Chekhov, Katherine Mansfield, Joseph Conrad, Dostoevsky and May Sinclair.

"To those interested in this new exploration into the human spirit, 'Dead Reckonings in Fiction' will be found to be a thrilling departure among books of literary criticism." Raymond Weaver
Bookm 60:498 D '24 1200w

"There is one thing about the authors mentioned in 'Dead Reckonings'; they are the sort one either likes immensely or not at all. For those readers to whom the work of Chekhov, Dostoevsky, Mansfield, May Sinclair and D. H. Lawrence appeal, this book of interpretations should prove worth reading as throwing upon the writers' efforts the additional illumination of two intelligent admirers."
+ Boston Transcript p7 N 19 '24 350w
Reviewed by J. T. Shipley
Lit R p4 D 6 '24 450w
Reviewed by R. M. Lovett
New Repub 41:97 D 17 '24 500w
N Y World p9e N 30 '24 120w

BRIDGE, SIR FREDERICK. Shakespearian music in the plays and early operas. 93p il $5 Dutton [10s 6d Dent]

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Music 24-9898

In nearly all of Shakespeare's plays provision is made for music—both instrumental and vocal. In some cases he took lyrics with popular settings and inserted them, with some alteration of the words, in the plays. It is with the music which formed part of the earliest representation of the plays and with the music written for Shakespeare's works later on in the seventeenth century that these studies are concerned. Some musical scores are given in the text and there is a musical appendix. Illustrations include portraits.

"Sir Frederick Bridge's book is written in a friendly, informal style." E: B. Reed
+ Lit R p508 F 9 '24 780w

"Under this title Sir Frederick Bridge collects the stories and quaint bits of history he loves and imparts them to the curious. The author's love for these things is, in fact, a great part of their charm."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p632 S 27 '23 1500w

BRIDGE, FREDERICK MAYNARD. Princes of Wales. 355p il $3 Dutton [8s 6d Deane]

923.2 Princes of Wales [22-20742]

The careers of the nineteen Princes of Wales from the birth of Edward of Carnarvon to the twenty-eighth year of the present Prince Edward are here sketched. Most of these have succeeded to the British throne. A portrait of each is included.

"The book is full of entertaining and sometimes amusing information."
+ Boston Transcript p3 D 1 '23 280w
N Y Tribune p16 S 21 '24 250w
N Y World p6e F 10 '24 350w

"The book is written in an easy, entertaining style. The material is well selected and carefully organized. The collected portraits of the princes add to the charm of an agreeable book. Mr. Bridge is evidently a thorough monarchist in his sympathies; he has written scarcely a derogatory word in his account of 19 young men. The introduction of many anecdotes enlivens his story."
+ Springf'd Republican p6 O 8 '23 300w

BRIDGE, JOHN SEARGEANT CYPRIAN. History of France from the death of Louis XI. v 2 356p $5.35 Oxford [16s Milford]

944 France—History—House of Valois, 1328-1589 [22-10717]

"The hopes for a literary history of France aroused by the first volume of this work [Book Review Digest, 1922] are fully sustained by this present book." (Am Hist R) "The first volume was concerned with the Regency of Anne de Beaujeu; this is the record of the invasion of Italy by Charles VIII. In brief, a period of high statesmanship and warfare is followed by one of petty political intrigue, while the warfare of the Italian campaign is limited to one battle of interest to the student of military history." (The Times [London] Lit Sup)

"A narrative which is at times brilliant and is always entertaining." R: A. Newhall
+ Am Hist R 30:130 O '24 750w

BRIDGE, J: S. C.—Continued

"Mr. Bridge's account of these events is worthy of their importance, and marks him as one of the best historical scholars now writing. He possesses not only sound scholarship, but that rarest gift of modern historians, a style. His writing is not highly coloured, like Froude's, nor epigrammatic, like Lytton Strachey's, but the balanced sentence, the sense of phrase kept in check by economy of words, the chiselled and classic elegance are rather of the school of Gibbon." Eileen Power

+ Nation and Ath 35:597 Ag 9 '24 1000w

"The second volume of Mr. Bridge's History of France will be warmly welcomed by the readers of its predecessor. In an age of learned monographs and bloated text-books he has had the courage to embark on a task which recalls the spacious days of Motley and Prescott, when historians still admitted that the first and greatest art of an author is to please."

+ New Statesman 24:175 N 15 '24 600w

"Mr. Bridge's second volume fulfils the expectations aroused by his first, but its subject is less interesting. All interested in French history will watch the progress of this fine work, and Mr. Bridge's only ill-wishers will be those who think it unbecoming in a serious historian to possess a lively and attractive style."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p363 Je 12 '24 2300w

BRIDGES, ROBERT SEYMOUR, comp. Chilswell book of English poetry. 272p $1.25 (6s 6d) Longmans

821.08 English poetry—Collections 24-5775

In making this selection of English poetry for the use of schools the poet laureate has chosen the best only, on the principle that young people can appreciate and be charmed by poems which they do not fully understand. The collection contains no distinctively children's poetry and may be enjoyed by all ages.

Cleveland p70 S '24

"I personally like the Chilswell Book very much, and I don't care who differs with me." Robert Graves

+ Nation and Ath 35:20 Ap 5 '24 1160w

Reviewed by F. L. Lucas

New Statesman 23:194 My 24 '24 250w

"Another anthology, but a distinguished one. Better still, it would make an admirable gift for any girl or boy of the high school or college age."

+ Outlook 136:748 Ap 30 '24 100w

"The selection of poems in the Chilswell Book is middling; some of them, the lyrics more especially, are excellent, but many are too stodgy for a child and too commonplace for an adult. In his anxiety for justice and nobility in poetry Dr. Bridges has often included empty moralizings or spiritless counsels."

— + Spec 132:508 Mr 29 '24 500w

"No one else would have chosen for schools as Dr. Bridges has, but no one else, putting together 219 pieces, would have given us so few that we could wish away."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p172 Mr 20 '24 900w

Wis Lib Bul 20:124 My '24

BRIDGES, ROY. Rats' castle. 284p $1.75 Appleton [7s 6d Hutchinson]

24-20567

The lure of pirate gold is the theme of this story. Rats' castle is a decadent old home where the aged and eccentric widow of Robert Lanscombe dwells. It is believed that she guards the hiding-place of the gold which her pirate husband amassed. The heirs who claim the treasure are many, but she is determined to give it to Martin, heir of the elder son. Martin, a likeable lad, is rescued from the hands of a water-front tavern keeper by Will Langdon, tavern-boy, who bears a close resemblance to Martin. The boys are sent to Rats' castle where they have thrilling experiences. Wild scenes take place; there is an attempted kidnapping, and black magic is performed which keeps Will and Martin on the alert. But eventually everything is straightened out and the heir of Lanscombe comes into his own.

Cleveland p92 D '24

"The pages of Mr. Bridges glow with a fiery passion. His melodrama rises to a genuine distinction." A. D. Douglas

+ Int Bk R p857 N '24 120w

Lit R p17 O 18 '24 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p269 My 1 '24 160w

BRIDGES, VICTOR. Red lodge. 293p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Mills & B.]

24-7946

Dr Colin Gray is engaged as assistant to an aged scientist, Professor Carter, but it turns out that the Professor, who lives in a lonely spot, really wants someone around who is not afraid of burglars. Dr Gray, who is something of a pugilist, is afraid of nothing on earth, and gladly accepts the position, as it gives him a chance to carry on his scientific experiments. Early in the story he meets Nancy Seymour who becomes secretary to Dr Archer, his best friend. Nancy is a thoroughly nice girl and an efficient secretary, but there is a mystery about her and her "guardian," Major Fenton, which Colin cannot fathom. One night Professor Carter is murdered and in tracing the murderer, strangely enough the mystery about Nancy is also straightened out.

N Y Times p16 Ap 6 '24 300w

"The plot is ingenuous, but doesn't matter. The telling of the plot is a well of innocent merriment." A. D. Douglas

— + N Y Tribune p23 Je 8 '24 300w

Sat R 137:306 Mr 22 '24 450w

"A typical mystery tale of the lesser sort."

— Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 27 '24 100w

" 'The Red Lodge' is that kind of book which insists on being read at a sitting. The reader can find no place at which the story can be interrupted except with regret."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p41 Ja 17 '24 220w

BRIGHOUSE, HAROLD. Captain Shapely: a comedy of London Town and the Oxford road in the days of Queen Anne. 281p $2 McBride [7s 6d Chapman & Dodd]

24-8164

A chronicle of romance and adventure in the days of Queen Anne. Captain Shapely, gentleman of fashion, alias Single-Handed-Jack-the-Highwayman, met one day, while engaged in the business of the road, the lovely Mistress Marjorie Blundell. It was a case of love at first sight. Altho there was the obstacle of several suitors for the hand of Marjorie, to say nothing of his own gentle profession, this likeable gentleman of adventure decided to win her for his own, and win her he did, conquering with complete dash all men and things that intervened.

Booklist 21:26 O '24

"This is a delicious yarn, full of the spell of London in the eighteen's, and the English countryside before the days of automobiles."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 7 '24 660w

Cleveland p35 My '24

"Mr Brighouse has written a most entertaining novel of hoop and sword and his eighteenth century 'patina' is laid on with a skillful hand that makes few mistakes."

+ N Y Times p9 Ap 20 '24 520w

Reviewed by Edith Leighton

N Y Tribune p25 My 11 '24 400w

Outlook 138:561 D 3 '24 30w

"The author wields a facile, graceful pen. His style is as enjoyable as the story itself."
+ Springf'd Republican p5a My 18 '24 150w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p773 N 15 '23 100w

BRINCKLOE, WILLIAM DRAPER. Small home; how to plan and build it. 223p il $2.50 McBride

728 Architecture, Domestic 24-16544

A practical book on home-building, from choosing the site to hints on furnishing, written for the man or woman of limited means. There are sixty plans for small homes, bungalows, apartments, garages and barns, which were drawn to meet the needs of ten thousand women who told what they wanted in "home-planning contests" conducted by the author in various popular magazines. A chapter on the farm-house is included.

Booklist 21:58 N '24

Reviewed by E. L. Shuman
Int Bk R p737 S '24 150w

Outlook 137:642 Ag 27 '24 20w

BROADUS, EDMUND KEMPER, and BROADUS, ELEANOR HAMMOND (MRS EDMUND KEMPER BROADUS), comps. and eds. Book of Canadian prose and verse. 390p $2.50 Macmillan

820.8 Canadian literature—Collections

"This collection is made up of poetry and prose, English and French, covering most of the field of Canadian life. It commences with an 'Ode on the King's Birthday (June 4th, 1776),' and ends with a speech by Sir Robert Borden, delivered in New York in 1916. Its editors had two objects in view—a 'representative selection,' and 'a picture of Canadian life, past and present.' "—Canadian Hist R

Booklist 20:330 Je '24

"Its particular significance and interest lie in the fact that it reflects Canada from the standpoint of her writers and speech makers. It would seem, however, that authors and poets could do far better by so great a country as Canada than has already been evidenced."
+ — Bookm 59:358 My '24 60w

"Particularly attractive to students and teachers of Canadian history. The literary merit varies, of course, but the panorama is unexpectedly comprehensive." J. B. Brebner
+ Canadian Hist R 4:334 D '23 300w

"This little book is packed full of meat, patriotic, historical and lyrical, for the use of Canadians." C. DeKay
+ Lit R p889 Jl 12 '24 400w

"The volume at least affords an informing survey."
Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 4 '24 420w

"The editors acknowledge that in Canadian verse there are serious deficiencies. In the poetry of landscape it attains a good level; but in patriotic verse there is 'more patriotism than poetry.' The early history has inspired but little narrative poetry of a high order and the Dominion can show little of light graceful verse in which England is so rich."
The Times [London] Lit Sup p43 Ja 17 '24 150w

BROCKWELL, DAVID. Police dog. 190p il $2.50 Watt

636.7 Police dogs 24-26934

"The object of the book is to provide owners and breeders of the police dog with a complete understanding of every phase of the breed. The opening chapters on origin and history tell us that this dog, crossed with the wolf strain, has retained its original form with small modification from the Bronze Age, when it seems to have risen from obscurity. The police dog's characteristics, breeding and training, and the diseases to which the breed is susceptible are all treated."—Springf'd Republican

Boston Transcript p3 N 15 '24 200w

"His chapter on diseases and accidents, full of common sense, would apply as well to most other breeds, and ought to save many a dog from rash experimental doctoring."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:252 N 1 '24 150w

Springf'd Republican p10 N 4 '24 400w

BROMFIELD, LOUIS. Green bay tree. 341p $2 Stokes 24-7113

The action of this story begins in one of the huge steel towns of the Middle West, where the mills had surrounded the ornate house and park known as Shane's Castle. John Shane had died ten years before the story opens but his widow still kept up a sort of feudal state, clothing her own arrogant pride with a semblance of aristocracy. The two daughters, approaching womanhood, are in complete contrast to each other: Lily, voluptuous in her beauty, pleasure-loving, generous, ardent; Irene, repressed and neurotic, her tense gaze set even in girlhood toward the only possible life for her—that of a religious recluse. Lily at twenty realizes that she is no more monogamous than her father's son would probably have been. She has money enough to choose her own way of life, and she chooses to return to France where her school-days had been spent. It is with her life there during the following twenty years—her home, her friendships, her loves, that the story is chiefly concerned.

"The narrative is rich, deep, well rounded in its conclusions." J. F.
+ Bookm 59:339 My '24 150w

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 23 '24 440w

"His personal contributions are subtle, but the author is there, keenly observant, prodigally liberal of material, creating a worthy and fascinating fiction-world." Kenneth Fuessle
+ Int Bk R p474 My '24 780w

"Mr Louis Bromfield has not a little of the story teller's gift. 'The Green Bay Tree' runs to nearly 350 very closely printed pages, but it keeps up interest to the end in spite of the fact that it does not contain anything new in situation, character, idea or point of view. There is something a little old-fashioned in a story of domestic relations told simply for the story's sake, and yet it is as something of this kind that 'The Green Bay Tree' had best be regarded."
+ Lit R p719 My 3 '24 850w

"The sense of life is in this book. The writer sees a world crowded with vivid faces." A. B. Parsons
+ Nation 119:78 Jl 16 '24 750w

"The attempt to depict woman, smiling, enigmatic, undiscoverable, is not successful, for the suggestive method employed too much resembles evasion. Lily is a multiple idea rather than an individual or transitional type. The story, otherwise, is sincere and careful."
— + Nation and Ath 36:196 N 1 '24 150w

"Mr. Bromfield paints on a large canvas, but with almost unfaltering deftness." L. B.
+ New Repub 39:107 Je 18 '24 180w

"To attempt an appraisal of 'The Green Bay Tree' is difficult. It must be said, first of all, that it is a good novel. It tells the story of interesting people. More than that, it gives to that story unity, form. In content it is rich and varied, although the style is a little abrupt and the narrative often seems needlessly interrupted by a system of division difficult to follow logically. Where he attempts the cosmic he is just a shade solemn. But his characters are real, and sex, that touchstone of character, is handled without quickened breath, prurience or ecstasy." J: Carter
+ — N Y Times p5 Mr 30 '24 1300w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e Mr 30 '24 540w

"An able but not a pleasing novel."
+ — Outlook 136:650 Ap 16 '24 250w

St Louis p399 D '24

Spec 133:748 N 15 '24 380w

BROMFIELD, LOUIS—Continued

Springf'd Republican p5a My 18 '24 100w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p574 S 18 '24 500w

BROOKE, GEOFFREY FRANCIS HEREMON. Horse-sense and horsemanship of to-day; economy and method in training hunters and polo ponies. 179p il $5 Scribner

798 Horse training. Horsemanship 24-30764

"Rather than being a general description, as its title would indicate, this book deals with the methods of riding and training hunters and polo ponies. As the author, Lieutenant Colonel of Lancers, says, a great deal that is contained in this volume's chapters appeared in a previous book of his 'Training Young Horses to Jump,' published in 1913. But the first book is long out of print, and pre-war conditions in respect to horses as well as to polo and to training are so different that the new volume was designed. It is profusely illustrated, and takes up all matters within the scope indicated, most thoroughly."—Sat R of Lit

"Mr. Brooke, by a judicious use of photographs and an admirably simple series of explanatory footnotes, makes his meaning perfectly clear even to the uninitiate. The arrangement of the book, its logical, orderly development, leaves something to be desired, but its simplicity, thoroughness, and sound doctrine are in the best tradition." D. R.

+ Ind 113:290 O 18 '24 220w

"A book of real helpfulness and value to the beginner in horsemanship as well as to the veteran who has progressed so that he realizes one can never be too old to learn." Alfred Stoddart

+ Lit R p11 N 8 '24 330w

"Colonel Brooke has produced a work that is valuable. The real charm of his book lies in its simplicity and appeal to reason." W. B. Bradford

+ N Y Tribune p10 N 2 '24 900w

Sat R of Lit 1:208 O 18 '24 300w

"This book should be owned and studied carefully by all men who hunt or play polo or take any active interest in horses. It is easily the best work on the subject published in recent years."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p483 Ag 7 '24 600w

BROOKS, ALDEN. Escape. 309p $2 Scribner 24-10844

"Fine effort, devoted effort, work done for the means and not the end" constitutes the true art of living. That is the theme of this story in which Dominique Prad, a Frenchman, with an overwhelming desire to paint a picture, escapes from the drudgery of life in a silk mill. The mill belonged to his uncle with whom Dominique joined forces in his early manhood to provide for his two younger sisters. To insure himself against the loss of his desire to paint he becomes betrothed to Isabelle, herself an artist, with whom he is but mildly in love. Upon the death of his uncle, however, the business is left in his charge. Driven to frenzy by the responsibilities thus heaped upon him, he escapes to the woods one night from a sickbed. Then begins his life of vagabondage with a young gypsy, Silda, under whose care and protection he regains his sanity. Thru her spirit of devotion he is able to accomplish his life's work.

"The thing is delightful, redolent of country lanes and French riverways. . . If you want to be a gypsy on your own this is the book to read to find out how to do it! The style goes by jerks, but somehow seems to fit the matter, and that is all that counts." I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 21 '24 520w

Lit R p937 Ag 2 '24 250w

N Y Times p8 My 11 '24 720w

"The theme may not be new but it is effectively presented." Elizabeth Wyman

+ — N Y Tribune p25 Je 8 '24 660w

"Mr. Brooks's style has a curious staccato quality which used less skillfully might easily seem affected or become irritating, but it somehow misses being either, and the reader's accustomed ear soon finds it the right and natural medium for the story. 'Escape' is true romance."

+ Outlook 138:99 S 17 '24 170w

"Mr Brooks handles it in an optimistic fashion and offers a satisfactory if unconventional solution. It is a story which should find an echo in the hearts of those who dream of the freedom of the open road."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a O 12 '24 400w

BROOKS, CHARLES FRANKLIN. Why the weather? with the collaboration of John Nelson and others. 310p il $2 Harcourt

551.5 Meteorology 24-22933

These weather notes are the outgrowth of daily explanations of the weather to classes in meteorology at Clark university which were reported and later syndicated for various newspapers. Their purpose is to encourage the habit of noticing sky and clouds, temperature and humidity, rising and falling barometer, etc., and reading the meaning of the signs. The notes follow a year's weather, from spring to spring, and include brief discussions of topics of general interest illustrating many phases of weather science.

Booklist 21:96 D '24

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 3 '25 160w

"The weather is always with us, and his clear and simple book helps us do the only thing possible—make the most of it." Philip Coan

+ Lit R p10 O 11 '24 240w

Nation 119:501 N 5 '24 10w

"It is intended for the general reader and is written in untechnical language, is simple and lucid in style and has about it none of the air of the textbook or of the scientific treatise."

+ N Y Times p21 O 5 '24 330w

"There have been many books about the subject of meteorology, all discussing the same general range of topics, but this book is a little different. In a general way, it is somewhat less technical and more readable than most."

+ Outlook 138:260 O 15 '24 120w

BROOKS, CHARLES STEPHEN. Luca Sarto. 187p $2 Harcourt

812 24-21170

"On a March night of the year 1471 the play begins. Mr. Brooks shows us the Italian goldsmith and adventurer, Luca Sarto, fighting with wit and sword for all-important papers, carrying letters for his lady love, swashbuckling, sonneting and creating artistic oaths. He learns how Lady Diane Motier found shelter in the Paris workshop of the poet-artist Sarto; how her blue eyes stirred his heart to love; how for her sake he carried messages and fought with Oliver de Bourges; how he dared the wrath of the sick and venomous Louis XI and bravely went into and out of a dreadful dungeon because for one thing he was in love, and for another because he was that kind of a man."—N Y Tribune

"The dialogue is brisk and effective, there are exciting climaxes, the characters are alive. The prologue and stage directions are Shavian in their diffuseness, their justificatory details and their flashes of wit. Mr. Brooks cannot help being amusing and he has made an admirable drama."

+ Boston Transcript p5 N 1 '24 320w

Reviewed by H. J. Mankiewicz

N Y Times p14 O 12 '24 210w

"Here is a book by a man who writes the English language. The few poems scattered through the play show mastery of rhyme and meter and convey high emotions with fine sincerity, and much of the prose is what is generally called prose poetry. Few authors, indeed, in America have achieved that style."

+ N Y Tribune p19 S 21 '24 480w

"Mr. Brooks writes with evident enjoyment. He is so caught with his romantic turns of speech that he makes all the characters talk alike and appear not so much men and women as lines from a play. It is all conscientious and admirable romance. The wit is a little slow-footed and grandiose and mannered, and the metaphors rather than the play is here the thing."

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:168 O 4 '24 280w

"Mr. Brooks has style, he has wit, he has imagination. His plays should find an eager welcome."

+ Theatre Arts Mo 8:869 D '24 160w

BROOKS, CHARLES STEPHEN. Thread of English road. 303p il $3 Harcourt

914.2 England—Description and travel 24-10832

"Mr. Brooks's book is devoted for the most part to a description of a bicycle trip through England and whatever it contains of the essay is only incidental and casual. He writes of his experiences in English villages and hamlets, among the hills and by the ruins of old castles. He describes all sorts of odd nooks and crannies of the English countryside, his meetings with strange and eccentric characters and he comments whimsically and amusingly on all that he observes."—N Y Times

Booklist 21:20 O '24

"As a bouquet of word and thought, perfumed with a dash of history and of local gossip, it is fragrant and filled with charm."

+ Bookm 60:102 S '24 120w

"A tranquil land it is of rest and refreshment, whither Mr. Brooks leads, making the winding trail even more alluring by the wit of the comment and description he so generously—and spontaneously—gives." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 14 '24 1350w

"By nature and habit Mr. Brooks is an intimate essayist, and as such is a particularly beguiling guide and companion of the road."

+ Cleveland p47 Je '24

"Charles S. Brooks, in his delightful record of a simple journey, gives us glimpses of English hedgerows and highways, and pours into his pages the very sunlight of that rich countryside. . . The thing is perfect in its way." C: H. Towne

+ Int Bk R p517 Je '24 1000w

"The author writes in an easy, discursive style. Occasionally, in the course of his comments, he forgets his narrative entirely and launches forth into what for all practical purposes is an essay and when in this vein he is particularly engaging." S. A. Coblentz

+ N Y Times p15 My 11 '24 340w

St Louis p352 O '24

"Perhaps the particular talent of the gracious author consists in reproducing spontaneously the trivialities of English travel so that he gives the reader either a tingle of anticipation or a stab of pleasant-painful memory: an ache to be in England again."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 My 30 '24 600w

Wis Lib Bul 20:211 O '24

BROOKS, PHILLIPS. Tolerance; with an introd. by Nicholas Murray Butler. 2nd ed 111p $1 Dutton

270 Toleration 24-15089

"These two lectures were addressed to the students of several of the Divinity schools of the Episcopal Church, and were first published thirty-seven years ago. It speaks volumes for the continued popularity and power of the great preacher that there is the demand for this little book especially at a time when tolerance and toleration are sadly lacking. Dr. Brooks calls his subject Tolerance, and not Toleration. 'Tolerance is a disposition; toleration is the behaviour in which that disposition finds expression.' His further definition of tolerance is, 'The willing consent that other men should hold and express opinions with which we disagree until they are convinced by reason that those opinions are untrue.' "—Boston Transcript

Boston Transcript p6 My 17 '24 250w

J Religion 4:557 S '24 40w

N Y Tribune p26 Ag 10 '24 180w

"There is in them a confidence, firm and almost bland, which we rarely find in the episcopal utterances of today. The great preacher speaks easily, ex cathedra, without note of defiance or apology." H. W. Boynton

+ Outlook 137:611 Ag 20 '24 300w

St Louis p366 N '24

Springf'd Republican p7a My 11 '24 150w

BROOKS, ROBERT CLARKSON. Political parties and electoral problems. 638p il $3.50 Harper

329 Political parties—United States. United States—Politics and government. Elections—United States 24-649

"Each of the four or five standard books which give an account of political parties in the United States has its own viewpoint. Professor Brooks, who has written the most extended survey of all, has had in mind primarily the needs of American voters and those who are soon to become voters. With that purpose in mind, he has discussed the nature and activities of parties generally, their development, present condition, and the principal problems of reform which they present."—R of Rs

"At once interesting, instructive, and valuable. It measures up to what we had reason to expect from the author's long and successful teaching experience, active participation in political campaigns, first-hand acquaintance with the arcana of election laws, and thorough familiarity with the best literature on American politics." P. O. Ray

+ Am Pol Sci R 18:400 My '24 800w

Booklist 20:282 My '24

Ind 112:80 F 2 '24 40w

"A comprehensive study of American political parties."

+ Outlook 136:196 Ja 30 '24 30w

"His interpretation of the parties should be especially helpful to the large body of women voters in this country who have only recently been enfranchised."

+ R of Rs 69:222 F '24 150w

"As a general descriptive analytical study of our party problems this book, like the recent study of Prof Merriam's entitled 'The American Party System,' is excellent. One may add with pleasure that the method of presentation, the style of writing, the general philosophy expounded is far superior to the ordinary text book." J: M. Gaus

+ Springf'd Republican p9a My 4 '24 1100w

Survey 53:107 O 15 '24 120w

Wis Lib Bul 20:64 Mr '24

BROOMHALL, MARSHALL. Robert Morrison; a master builder. 238p $1.50 Doran [5s Student Christian Movement]

B or 92 Morrison, Robert. Missions—China

The fourth volume in the Modern series of missionary biographies is the life story of Robert Morrison, 1782-1834, first Protestant missionary to China. He devoted himself to the study of the Chinese language and was appointed translator to the East India Company's factory in Canton. A most important part of his work as pioneer missionary was his Chinese translation of the Scriptures and his Chinese grammar and dictionary. He also founded the Anglo-Chinese college at Malacca.

J Religion 4:559 S '24 40w

BROOMHALL, M.—Continued

"It was a remarkable career, and Mr. Marshall Broomhall has done it justice."

+ Nation and Ath 35:360 Je 14 '24 300w

"An intensely interesting account of one of the pioneers of modern missionary work."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p269 My 1 '24 100w

BROSTER, DOROTHY KATHLEEN. Mr Rowl. 356p $2 Doubleday

"The romance of a young French officer who is captured in Spain, who is sent to an English prison, and who finds good luck in love under the shadow of ill fortune in war."—N Y World

Booklist 21:67 N '24

"A good, workmanlike tale, of smooth quality."

+ Lit R p793 My 31 '24 200w

"A charming romance."

+ N Y Times p22 Ap 20 '24 200w

"The action is intrinsically exciting and set forth with almost too much versimilitude. One cannot doubt that the author took pains to document his work; and to be sure of fidelity to the period he evidently went to the stiffly sonorous phrases of 'Rasselas' for his keynote. Which is rather a pity, for the worthy Dr. Johnson was more didactic than romantic. A trifle more of vivacity and dash would not have harmed the story.

+ — N Y Tribune p23 My 25 '24 600w

"A well-told tale of the old chivalry." E. W. Osborn

+ N Y World p6e Ap 27 '24 50w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p437 Jl 10 '24 100w

BROUN, HEYWOOD CAMPBELL. Sitting on ^{2} the World. 286p $2 Putnam

814 24-29966

"The book consists largely of matter clipped from the author's daily column in the New York World. Much of it is reportorial, all of it is reportorial in the sense that it is Broun the reporter observing and setting down the reactions of Broun the spectator."—Detroit News

"Introspection is good reading when the mind described functions unconventionally. As a rule, Broun's does, although he is conventionally passionate about censorship, Ireland, Bryan and similarly controversial themes, and he is youthfully doubtful about God. A book that is consistently entertaining." Al Weeks

+ Detroit News p20 N 23 '24 220w

"Heywood Broun is always fresh, his ruminations are always genial and his aphorismic paragraphs gain Broun-ets and Broun-ettes with each succeeding day." O. D. R.

+ Lit R p13 D 20 '24 140w

"When he writes such a perfect essay as that on bullfrogs in this book—a prose-poem, a Whistler nocture, a symphony played by bassoons and oboes—we are inclined not only to forgive all his hokum, but to crown him with laurel and myrtle; our favorite essayist."

+ — Outlook 138:732 D 31 '24 200w

BROWN, ABBIE FARWELL. Boyhood of Edward MacDowell. 251p $2 Stokes

B or 92 MacDowell, Edward Alexander 24-9236

This simple narrative of Edward MacDowell's boyhood contains much hitherto unpublished material, verified by Mrs MacDowell, which sheds light on the development of an original and engaging personality and helps to an understanding of the man and his music. His Quaker home, the beginnings of his music, the tunes he made for himself, music study in Paris and in Germany—all these are described and the later events of his life after he became famous. Miss Brown draws a picture of a "boy who never grew up," who lived in his imagination and translated his dreams into music.

Booklist 21:30 D '24

"The difficulty lies in an effort to give a fairy tale quality to the book, so as to convey something of the imagination and beauty expressed in MacDowell's music. This is certainly an excellent idea, but it loses over-emphasis."

+ — Bookm 59:750 Ag '24 100w

"Miss Brown has done a delightful piece of work, intended, apparently, for children first of all, but in reality for everyone who loves MacDowell." I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 24 '24 400w

Ind 112:268 My 10 '24 20w

"MacDowell's life was singularly beautiful, and the charm of it is in Miss Brown's pages. But the legend of so big a man should be complete, and sentimentality should be kept out of it." J: Erskine

+ — Nation 119:341 O 1 '24 1000w

"Miss Brown intends the volume, seemingly, especially for the reading of young people, and very good, and interesting reading indeed does the story of Edward MacDowell's youth make for them. But it is nothing less than deplorable that she should have marred the fascinating tale with so many relapses into extreme simplicity. There is nothing that young readers resent more than evident writing down to their comprehension."

+ — N Y Times p15 My 25 '24 1050w

"Some day, I believe, a more complete life of Edward MacDowell for boys and girls will be written, illustrated with pen and ink sketches and selections from his musical compositions. Such a book would take a permanent place in our literature for children, which is at present exceedingly weak in readable biography." A. C. Moore

— N Y Tribune p6 O 5 '24 500w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:377 Jl '24

R of Rs 70:223 Ag '24 50w

St Louis p354 O '24

"Young people and older lovers of MacDowell's music will enjoy and find inspiration in this unpretentious account of a pleasing boyhood."

+ Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 13 '24 250w

Wis Lib Bul 20:174 Jl '24

BROWN, ALICE. Charles Lamb; a play. 121p ^{2} $1.75 Macmillan

812 Lamb, Charles—Drama 24-29880

In her five-act play Miss Brown has, by her own confession, allowed herself a certain breadth of artistic license but she has not departed from the salient points in Lamb's life and that of his beloved sister Mary, or from the picture of Lamb affectionately carried in the hearts of readers. His literary friends—Leigh Hunt, Coleridge, Hazlitt and others—are introduced and his hopeless love for the lost Alice.

"To any one who loves the works of Lamb there never can be too much written about that lovely character; all will be accepted. And yet it seems that this work deserves to stand out a little from the others, to be read more widely than the rest." G. E. H.

+ Lit R p10 Ja 3 '25 250w

"The dialogue is clever, light, with just a hint of lurking tragedy. It is all quite convincing, yet slight." J: W. Crawford

+ — N Y World p8e D 14 '24 200w

Outlook 139:72 Ja 14 '25 50w

BROWN, BERNICE. Men of earth. 357p $2 Putnam

24-9781

In this collection of nine short stories the author has written of two generations of immigrants carving out their existence in this country of ours. There are Johnnie Deautremont, misunderstood and blundering; Olaf Nelson, whom life has cheated only to give a few brief years of happiness; and Mrs Waldensen working, always working so that her daughter may be a lady. All have their own story of love, hate, tragedy. Contents: Miracle; In April; The cross-beam; April flood; Johnny Geraldy; Freda Waldensen; Big clumsy Swede; Making a man of him; No message.

"Miss Brown never labors her descriptions, yet her prairie stretches, her weatherbeaten farms, her timber areas and her straggling settlements stand out in her pages in authentic strokes. Not one of the gallery of women and men of earth that she presents but lives. 'Men of Earth' comes as a notable addition to the literature inspired by the emigrant."
+ N Y Times p14 Ap 27 '24 600w

"There is the breath of freshly sawed logs and bleached hay in them. There is the robustness and muscular beauty of men and wommen whose hands wring a living from the soil and the forest. A stark, naked simplicity throughout makes one whose contacts with life have been urban too long seem weak and unequal to living."
+ N Y Tribune p9 O 26 '24 400w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p6e Ap 27 '24 60w

BROWN, BRIAN. Dynamic power of the inner mind; an outline of practical psychology. 316p $3 Doubleday

131 Mental hygiene. Mind and body. Mental suggestion 24-4542

The author calls his book an outline of practical psychology. It is concerned with the power of mind over body, the unconscious mind, auto-suggestion, mysticism, mesmerism and psychoanalysis.

Wis Lib Bul 20:91 Ap '24

BROWN, CHARLES REYNOLDS. What is your name? 137p $1.50 Yale univ. press

252 Sermons 24-10327

Like his earlier "Yale talks" these are simple direct talks to college students on religion and right living. They were originally given in the chapel of Yale university and in other colleges.

"He speaks good English, but a language that grips and gets hold. The appeal is both vital and virile. The preacher wastes no time in preliminaries, but he does what the elder Bowles used to tell his young men to do; he gets right into the heart of his subject at once. His style is direct, he uses no rhetorical accessories."
+ Boston Transcript p3 My 17 '24 340w
N Y Times p21 My 18 '24 500w

"He places an exaggerated importance upon the 'fighting' instinct, but, as a whole, his generalizations are suggestive and stimulating."
+ — Springf'd Republican p10 My 13 '24 220w

BROWN, CHARLES REYNOLDS. Why I believe in religion. (Washington Gladden lectures for 1923) 175p $1.50 Macmillan

230 Christianity. Faith 24-1984

Six popular lectures in which the dean of the Yale divinity school deals simply and clearly with some of the fundamentals of our common religious faith. Contents: The belief in God; The person of Christ; The power of atonement; The value of prayer; The use of the Bible; The hope of future life.

Booklist 20:280 My '24

"It is written 'in a very plain hand and for everyday people.' No one need fear that it will carry him beyond his depth. It is a book for everyone wishing to know the truth as it appears to the profoundest scholarship and the sincerest faith."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 8 '24 240w

"The writer is evidently a moderate liberal, accepting the results of scientific criticism, but chiefly interested in salvaging as much of orthodoxy as he conveniently can. One is rather at a loss to know whom the argument will convince, probably only those who already accept the position of the author."
— Lit R p722 My 3 '24 450w

BROWN, IRVING HENRY. Gypsy fires in America. 244p il $3 Harper

397 Gipsies 24-21344

Mr Brown, a student of gipsy life and history, in this volume introduces the reader to many varied types of true Romanies found in the United States and Canada. He describes odd encounters with gipsy folk, depicts their domestic life, and the enduring folk-lore of these picturesque people. Partial contents: The Iliad of Elena Mike; Gypsy cunning; Nomads of field and slum; "When the Gypsy fiddles cry"; The never-ending trail.

Booklist 21:93 D '24

"It is a colorful story, with many high points of romance as we wander over countryside watching them trading, reading fortunes, singing world old songs and telling tales of humanity's youth. Mr. Brown has had a wonderful chance as student of Romany life, folk lore and history. He has the eye to see their color and ear to catch their rhythm, but he has enough Romany in him to tell it all in a fascinating, romantic fashion. It is a good deal better reading than most fiction." T. C. R.
+ Boston Transcript p4 S 27 '24 650w

"Those who like curious information and a glimpse at a quite unknown side of American life will find this book decidedly worth while."
+ Ind 113:234 O 4 '24 550w

"If the present volume is not a piece of great writing, it is at least a body of information not to be found elsewhere."
Nation 119:547 N 19 '24 280w

"Mr. Brown uncovers a side of America almost unknown. His material is unusual and provides first-rate entertainment."
+ N Y Times p20 N 9 '24 1150w

"It is an exceedingly well-constructed book that Mr. Brown has given us, one written in lucid and unpretentious style." C: J. Finger
+ N Y Tribune p9 O 19 '24 500w

"Mr. Brown's observation of the American gypsy is not academic nor sentimental. He has followed the Romany patteran himself. The result of his purposeful wanderings is found in this collection of closely knit sketches, told with pungency and vigor." M. M.
+ N Y World p7e S 14 '24 360w
Outlook 138:564 D 3 '24 120w

"'Gypsy Fires in America' is an epic. If Mr. Brown or anybody else can surpass it in warmth and passion and understanding, it would be a miracle." Konrad Bercovici
+ Sat R of Lit 1:122 S 20 '24 1100w
Spec 133:474 O 4 '24 50w
Springf'd Republican p7a S 21 '24 500w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p778 N 20 '24 200w

BROWN, LOUISE NORTON. Early block-printing and book-illustration in Japan. 261p il $30 Dutton [84s Routledge]

761 Art, Japanese. Color prints. Illustration of books

"The late Mrs. Norton Brown was an enthusiastic collector of illustrated Japanese books, and in this volume she aimed at placing her knowledge of the subject at the disposal of other enthusiasts and collectors. The book is full of information not obtainable, or at any rate easily obtainable, elsewhere. It contains forty-three illustrations, of which eighteen are in colours; most of them are very well produced."—Nation and Ath

BROWN, L. N.—Continued

"Fascinating book aglow with exquisite illustrations." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 28 '24 800w

Nation and Ath 35:154 My 3 '24 60w

"Mrs. Brown's scholarship in Japanese book collecting is well known, and in this magnificent volume she has raised a monument to it as well as provided an exhaustive record of the artists from Hinaya Ryuho to Hokusai, who have in a very few centuries been the glory of Japanese block printing and design."

+ Sat R 137:439 Ap 26 '24 150w

"She has produced the first comprehensive work on the subject of her choice, a book that must have cost immense research and is of solid value."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p235 Ap 17 '24 900w

BROWN, NELSON COURTLANDT. American lumber industry; embracing the principal features of the resources, production, distribution, and utilization of lumber in the United States. 279p il $3 Wiley

674 Lumber trade. Forests and forestry—United States 23-17355

"Concerned primarily with economic and merchandising problems of the lumber trade, giving little attention to methods of logging and lumbering."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:310 Je '24

BROWN, PHILIP ANTHONY. French revolution
2 in English history; with an introd. by Gilbert Murray. 232p $3 Dutton [7s 6d Allen & U.]

942.07 France—History—Revolution. Great Britain—History—1789-1820

A brilliant young Oxford historian, killed in the early part of the war, left behind him the manuscript of this book, which sketches the workings of a force that affected English life, directly or indirectly, well into the nineteenth century. The general effects of the French revolution on English thought, politics and literature are traced.

"His book shows that he might have become a historian of marked ability, for it is not unworthy of standing side by side with Mr. Gooch's 'Germany and the French Revolution.' "

+ Nation and Ath 35:62 Ap 12 '24 90w

N Y Times p15 Ja 4 '25 450w

"Mr. Brown's narrative will not make upon any reader the impression of a twice-told tale. It is freshly written, mainly from primary sources, with an insight into the thought and feeling of the time that could be gained only by wide reading in contemporary newspapers, pamphlets, memoirs, journals, poetry and official records. It shows a capacity for synthesis and generalization, critical acumen, an ability to weigh evidence, and a power of interpretation that have seldom been exhibited by an historian still in his twenties." R. L. Schuyler

+ N Y Tribune p5 Ja 11 '25 380w

BROWN, ROBERT NEAL RUDMOSE. Naturalist at the Poles; with five chapters by W. G. Burn Murdoch. 316p il $6 Lippincott

B or 92 Bruce, William Speirs. Arctic regions. Antarctic regions [24-4275]

"An account of the life, work, and voyages of Dr. W. S. Bruce, a Scottish polar explorer of considerable scientific note, who was virtually unknown to the world at large. He preferred strictly scientific investigation, and so planned and recorded his work in a scholarly rather than in a popular manner. Dr. Bruce published no general account of his many voyages, and it is left to his friend and biographer to tell of his thirty years' travel and exploration of polar regions. He did remarkable work as a field naturalist, showing keen interest in collecting and observing."—Outlook

Reviewed by S. F. Reavis

Int Bk R p530 Je '24 120w

"Such a life, analyzed with full knowledge of temperament, equipment, ambitions, and achievements, might bring enlightenment, help, and warning to others who are setting out on a scientific career. Yet the author was perhaps wiser not to make his biography a critical estimate of character. He has given an honest account of the work of a strenuous life in that spirit of sympathetic friendliness which Bruce inspired in all who knew him." H. R. Mill

+ Nature 112:821 D 8 '23 1050w

N Y World p6e Mr 9 '24 480w

Outlook 136:570 Ap 2 '24 280w

"Of all the Polar explorers of our time he is the least known; and therefore there is the more occasion for the account of his 'Life, Work, and Voyages' now published by his friend and colleague, Mr. Rudmose Brown, who sailed under him on his chief expedition as botanist and invertebrate zoologist."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p629 S 27 '23 1500w

BROWN, ROBERT WESLEY. Valuation of 2 oil and gas lands. 215p il $3 (15s) McGraw

622.33 Petroleum. Gas, Natural 24-6484

"Presents the principles underlying sound valuation, primarily from the standpoint of buying, selling, or operating oil and gas properties rather than from that of taxation."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:512 N '24

BROWN, WILLIAM ADAMS. Imperialistic religion and the religion of democracy. 223p $2.25 Scribner

261 Christianity. Religion

"The forward look of modernism and the irenic spirit of some modernists is shown in William Adams Brown's attempt to classify religions in general and the various forms of Christianity in particular as imperialistic, individualistic, and democratic. These types rarely exist in any form of religion pure and unmixed. All of them have values which Mr. Brown is careful to bring out. Roman Catholicism tends to be essentially an imperial religion. Protestantism heretofore has been a confused 'half-way house between imperalism and democracy' with at least a negative type of individualism strongly developed. The religion of the future, Mr. Brown hopes, will be the religion of democracy. Its unifying principle will be its creative power. Christianity is not yet such a religion, 'but of all existing religions it has the best chance to become so.' "—Nation

J Religion 4:221 Mr '24 40w

Reviewed by Norman Thomas

Nation 118:sup444 Ap 16 '24 200w

"Christianity is not yet the religion of democracy, and there are some who are trying with all their might to keep it from ever so becoming. But there are others who are striving with equal zeal and in what seems to be a little more Christian fashion, to hasten the day when it will be. To these Professor Brown's book will be a guide, as he himself is a leader." W: E. Brooks

+ Survey 52:106 Ap 15 '24 560w

"The argument is stated with considerable force, and if it does not offer any programme for the attainment of the Church of the future to which it looks there is much in this book which must stimulate the desire for a larger unity among religious men. It is to be welcomed as the contribution worthy of one of the most influential theologians in America."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p775 N 15 '23 150w

BROWNE, WALDO RALPH. Altgeld of Illinois. 342p $3 Huebsch

B or 92 Altgeld, John Peter 24-15681

As governor of Illinois Altgeld became the subject of violent criticism through his connection with two incidents of national importance, his pardon of three anarchists concerned in the Haymarket riot in Chicago, in 1886, and his controversy with President Cleveland over the employment of federal troops in the Chicago railway strike of 1894. Much of the book is devoted to these two incidents and to the social and economic reforms which Governor Altgeld initiated. Written in a spirit of warm admiration the book goes far toward correcting the estimate once held of Altgeld as a defender of anarchy and lawlessness.

Booklist 21:108 D '24

"Mr. Browne's work is done in a sympathetic spirit, but not with undue eulogy, and does not slop over anywhere. It is a painstaking effort to make real this mysterious figure, but it is done in the most interesting fashion and with remarkably good taste." C: W. Thompson
+ Lit R p934 Ag 2 '24 120w

"Mr. Browne makes no attempt to canonize Altgeld; and offers no 'interpretation' of his life. His book is a notable contribution to our biographical literature, and should be widely read." D: E. Lilienthal
+ Nation 119:499 N 5 '24 720w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett
New Repub 39:368 Ag 20 '24 1550w

"Mr. Browne, although too warm an admirer to be scientifically critical, has written a convincing biography. His principal handicap is one which excellently illustrates the character of Governor Altgeld." R. L. Duffus
+ — N Y Times p3 Jl 20 '24 2050w

Reviewed by C. G. Bowers
N Y World p8e Ag 10 '24 650w
Outlook 138:26 S 3 '24 200w
R of Rs 70:335 S '24 60w

"It is perhaps, a defect of Mr. Browne's book that it is written with evident admiration for Altgeld and that the hard blows which he deals out to enemies and traducers are given with right good relish. A careful reading of his pages, however, fails to disclose any instance in which his prejudices, if they are properly to be called such, appear to have influenced his judgment of the facts." W: MacDonald
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:28 Ag 9 '24 750w
Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 20 '24 60w
Wis Lib Bul 20:212 O '24

BRUCE, ANDREW ALEXANDER. American judge. (Citizen's library of economics, politics and sociology—new ser.) 218p $2 Macmillan
347 Courts—United States. Judges. Law reform 24-2891

The professor of law in Northwestern university, formerly chief justice of the Supreme court of North Dakota, discusses the power of the courts over legislation and some of the reasons why courts and the administration of the law are in popular disfavor in America today. One chapter is given to a brief statement of the more needed reforms.

"Judge Bruce is a pessimist. He strikes hard, but not always well-considered blows." S. E. Baldwin
— Am Pol Sci R 18:629 Ag '24 760w
Booklist 20:323 Je '24

"Although the need for popular discussion of this problem of the judges is obvious, little has been written for the layman on one of our most important and our least comprehended fundamental questions of political practice. If for no other reason than the surprising scarcity of such material, this book by a former chief justice of the North Dakota Supreme Court is an important one. . . His presentation is, it is true, popular and oversimplified; nevertheless, it is admirably adapted to the lay audience to which it is directed." D: E. Lilienthal
+ Nation 118:588 My 21 '24 700w

"One might go on applying the scientific scalpel to almost every page of this book. It is not a congenial task and would only add cumulative evidence to what must be abundantly clear. The book is neither scholarly nor scientific. An exposition of technical problems for laymen makes a particularly exacting demand on scholarship. Judge Bruce's pages are happily unencumbered by any heavy apparatus of legal learning; unfortunately, they show no traces that scholars have greatly labored in fields from which he brings reports to laymen." Felix Frankfurter
— + New Repub 38:236 Ap 23 '24 3850w
Outlook 136:402 Mr 5 '24 40w
R of Rs 69:446 Ap '24 90w

BRUDNO, EZRA SELIG. Sublime jester.
2 364p $2 Brown, N. L.

In Albert Zorn, the central figure of this novel, Mr Brudno has followed the life and career of Heinrich Heine. "The first of three parts, taking up half the book, details the formative period, 'a poet in the making.' In the second part of the book we find the hero completing his education as a doctor of laws. In Paris he reaches the zenith of his accomplishment. Pensioned by the crown, hated and condemned in Germany, he continues the writing of hard and glittering compositions for which he is now so far famed. He marries here, marries Marguerite, the daughter of poor peasants. For a while he is happy, successful and content. Then he is crippled by disease and the last years of his life find him bedridden, with his last hours only lightened by 'the Butterfly,' the 'jest of the gods.'" (Boston Transcript)

"Mr. Brudno, in creating 'Albert Zorn' against an accurate and romantic background has done fully as much, if not more, toward an interpretation of Heine, whose own influence was against romanticism, than any biographer could do with a statistical array of names and dates. His life is one which lends itself readily to colorful narrative, and the author of this historic-biographical novel takes full advantage of his opportunities." W. B.
+ Boston Transcript p6 D 27 '24 570w

"The fiction coating has been evenly applied and doubtless it will interest many who could not be induced to read unadulterated biography. It cannot be said that the life of the poet has been illuminated to any great extent, however."
— + N Y Tribune p13 D 7 '24 250w
N Y World p9e N 30 '24 100w

BRYAN, JOHN THOMAS INGRAM. Japan
2 from within. 288p $4.50 Stokes [15s Unwin]
915.2 Japan—Economic conditions. Japan—Civilization

Dr Bryan, who was for sixteen years professor in Japanese colleges and universities and is at present Cambridge university extension lecturer in Japanese history and civilization here makes a survey of the political, industrial, commercial, financial, agricultural and educational conditions of modern Japan.

"In his long experience as missionary, teacher and journalist, Dr. Bryan must have accumulated a wealth of knowledge about the real Japan from within. So, it is disappointing to find that his book is little more than a compilation of notes culled from official publications and from such works as the Japan Year Book, and Count Okuma's Fifty Years of New Japan. So far as he goes, he deals adequately with his subject."
— + New Statesman 24:237 N 29 '24 680w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p742 N 20 '24 560w

BRYANT, LORINDA (MUNSON) (MRS CHARLES W. BRYANT). Children's book of celebrated buildings. 160p il $2.50 Century
720 Architecture 24-22396

"This is a delightful volume embodying an excellent idea and containing 50 pictures in full-

BRYANT, LORINDA—Continued
page half tones with an accompanying page of text for each one. The buildings chosen are from all parts of the world and all periods in history, from the days of Egyptian glory to our commercial, but by no means inglorious present, which is represented by the Woolworth building in New York. All the most famous examples of great architecture, such as the Taj Mahal, Milan cathedral, Reims cathedral, the Parthenon and many others are pictured and described, with a summary of the history of each."—Springf'd Republican

---

Booklist 21:71 N '24

"As attractive a compilation as has been made. It deserves a better title."
+ — N Y World p9e O 12 '24 70w

"The book represents an interesting collection of photographs with an explanatory story attached to each."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:385 D 13 '24 30w

"Among the buildings are some rather unusual inclusions, such as the Rangoon pagoda in Burma and Trinity church in New York, but on the whole the selection has been made with good judgment. Possibly more of the better modern buildings could have been pictured to advantage. The book should be useful to teachers, parents and librarians, and of interest to the young folk."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7a N 30 '24 180w

BRYANT, MARGUERITE (MRS PHILIP W. MUNN). The heights; a story of vision. 285p $2 Duffield [7s 6d Hurst & B.]
24-1972

Pervaded by a lofty mysticism, this story scarcely touches earth. Geoffrey Hamberton is a novelist with high ideals and a troubled spirit. He is beset by a desire to grasp the secret of the universe, to catch at least a momentary vision of the unseen. He and Helena Tresham, whom he was to marry as soon as he could make up his mind to stop drifting, were staying at a Riviera resort, where one day he met a peasant woman in whose beautiful transfigured face he thought he saw the key to the unknown. Helena, reading his thought, took herself out of his life. He married the mysterious Maria and lived a remote life with her on the heights. One day she took him to the very mount of vision and then mysteriously disappeared. With the snapping of this link with the unseen, Geoffrey regained his normal surroundings, his earthly fellows and his earlier love.

"The first part of the book is much more successful than the later part though the ending is very good indeed. The novelist walks too carefully to carry entire conviction—though we grant that this very precaution seems proof to us that she is trying her utmost for sincerity. Her story is a strange one. She has we feel come a long way since she wrote 'Christopher Hibbault.' Her vision is greater but it is less easy of interpretation." D. L. M.
+ — Boston Transcript p4 F 9 '24 950w

Lit R p635 Ap 29 '24 250w

Nation 118:sup455 Ap 16 '24 110w

"Miss Bryant's prose is handled with a degree of distinction and care for cumulative effect. The thread of the action, however, leaves more to be desired. The symbolism should have been a dominating undercurrent upon which the theme rode to its inexorable finale."
+ — N Y Times p22 F 17 '24 500w

"Miss Bryant commands a careful and finished style, but her method of elimination, intended to clarify the lesson or problem, is so severe that very little substance remains. Yet I dare say there are those to whom this kind of fable is positively helpful, affording breathing space from the harassing pressure of the commonplace." Isabel Paterson
+ — N Y Tribune p20 F 3 '24 520w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:334 Jl '24

"To mystical minds the story may appeal; and Visellia, with her absolute unworldliness and her powers of healing, is an intriguing personality; while other characters, particularly Hamberton's downright sister, introduce some common sense into the proceedings."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p732 N 1 '23 200w

BRYANT, MARGUERITE (MRS PHILIP W. MUNN), and MCANNALLY, GEORGE H. Chronicles of a great prince. 349p $2.50 Duffield
24-23374

These are the tragic records of the Arenzano family and the triumphs and disasters of two once powerful Balkan states. Prince Paul lived about the beginning of the 19th century and we first meet him and his younger brothers in their remote home greeting their English tutor, Henry Carfax, who plays an important part in the life of these young boys. Upon the sudden death of his father, Paul at nineteen becomes head of the family, and the story then concerns itself with the absolute power which comes to this boy in ruling his own people, the obedience he exacted from his brothers, and later, upon the death of the king, his marriage to little Queen Tessa. The novel is full of intrigues and revolution, and there is also a love story.

"It is in every sense a thrilling and fascinating tale."
+ Boston Transcript p4 N 29 '24 350w

Boston Transcript p4 D 17 '24 500w

Ind 113:409 N 15 '24 20w

BUCHAN, ANNA. See Douglas, O., pseud.

BUCHAN, JOHN. Last secrets; the final mysteries of exploration. 303p il $2.50 Houghton [5s Nelson]

910.9 Discoveries (in geography). Explorers
[23-17172]

A book that will interest all adventure loving young people and many older ones. By "last secrets," Mr Buchan means the until recently unexplored places of the earth: Lhasa; the gorges of the Brahmaputra; the North Pole; the mountains of the moon; the South Pole; Mount McKinley; the holy cities of Islam; New Guinea; Mount Everest. The book is an account of the heroic experiences of the men who sought to discover and penetrate these wildernesses. There is much geographical information in these pages.

Cleveland p63 Jl '24

Reviewed by S. F. Reavis
Int Bk R p531 Je '24 90w

"The stories have no definite relation with one another, but romance and adventure are there and make the book decidedly worth while." Ralph Pierson
+ Lit R p886 Jl 12 '24 750w

New Statesman 22:158 N 10 '23 500w

"The material which he has chosen to treat possesses so much of the essential spirit of romance that the reader is likely to find his interest and imagination stirred to a far greater degree than by the most colorful of purely fictional heroisms and adventures."
+ N Y Times p16 My 11 '24 850w

"Good, true stories of adventure for men and boys, and all others who like to read of exploration and brave deeds."
+ Outlook 136:614 Ap 9 '24 60w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p597 S 13 '23 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 20:176 Jl '24

BUCHAN, JOHN. Three hostages. 367p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Hodder & S.]
24-18767

Once more Sir Richard Hannay of "The thirty-nine steps" and "Greenmantle" returns to action. The war is over and he is living peacefully at Fosse Manor with his wife and little Peter John. He has fully made up his mind never again to leave his quiet country home when he is suddenly jolted out of his peace and quiet by a strange happening. This is the simultaneous disappearance of Adela Victor, a charming and wealthy young American, Lord Mercot, a young Englishman, and little ten-year-old David Warcliff. With nothing but a bit of doggerel for a clue Richard starts his search which leads him to Norway and the depths of London and into the realms of hypnotism, but thanks to his ability to resist the latter he finds the three hostages.

Booklist 21:67 N '24

"Mr. Buchan can write the king's English and the writers of mystery stories, as a general thing, cannot. But one thing we miss in this, and that is his sense of humor. Buchan is not Buchan without a laugh as well as a thrill." I. W. Lawrence

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ag 30 '24 1200w

Cath World 120:426 D '24 380w

Cleveland p67 S '24

"It is a good tale to read beside an open fire when the first cool evenings come, a tale of ingenuity and courage, exceptionally well told."

+ Int Bk R p825 O '24 320w

"John Buchan has written many tales, but he never wrote a better one than this." C: M. Morrison

+ Lit R p947 Ag 9 '24 750w

"So well knitted is the substance of this story that were it not for the intrusion of hypnotism and for its super-man villain with his world-wide conspiracy against society, it might be acclaimed perfect of its kind."

+ New Statesman 24:56 O 18 '24 230w

N Y Times p13 Ag 31 '24 430w

"John Buchan's novels besides sustaining the interest throughout are seasoned with an erudition that makes them profitable as well as pleasurable." F. V. Roman

+ N Y World p8e Ag 3 '24 200w

Outlook 138:26 S 3 '24 100w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 24 '24 110w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p512 Ag 21 '24 400w

BUCHANAN, MERIEL. Recollections of imperial Russia. 277p il $5 Doran [12s 6d Hutchinson]

947 Russia—History. Russia—Politics and government [24-8581]

The writer, daughter of the last British ambassador to Russia, 1910-1918, combines with her personal recollections some historical chapters, including sketches of Peter the Great, Catherine, Paul, Ivan the Terrible, and the false Dmitri.

"One of the most entertaining books on Russia which have been written in recent years. Not always is her transliteration of Slavic words correct." E. N.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 S 10 '24 800w

"The author draws characteristics, describes events, tells legends, unrolls pictures, goes into interesting details in such a way as if she herself were a participant and eye witness of what she described. Thanks to that, one reads the book as a novel. From the point of view of pure historical truth a remark might be made that sometimes the light on which the author presents the personages and events is not based on the latest researches of historiography." A. M. Nikolaieff

+ — Lit R p6 Ag 30 '24 900w

"What Russia is we shall have to go elsewhere to discover, for Miss Buchanan's recollections are worthless. Yet it is not too much to expect the daughter of an English Ambassador to write English." H. S.

— N Y World p7e Ag 31 '24 300w

"Miss Buchanan's style is eloquent and emotional. What she lacks is humour—a quality too often lost by those who have soaked themselves in Slav literature and legend."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p31 Ja 17 '24 700w

BUCK, CHARLES EDGAR. [2] Business letter-writer's manual. 232p $3 Doran

651.7 Commercial correspondence 24-13458

The writer is lecturer in charge of technical English courses at the College of secretarial science of Boston university, and his book is as practical for students as for business men. Successive chapters deal with letter beginnings and closings, the make-up of business letters, some powerful factors in business letters, and different types of letters—inquiry, order, complaint, credit, collection, etc. The book is rich in illustrative letters taken from the files of prominent business houses.

"This book contains much valuable information about letter writing which will be useful to every business man. Not only does it discuss make-up of letters, grammar, word usage, punctuation, and similar subjects, but considerable space is devoted to subject matter suitable for particular types such as credit and collection letters. Examples are used extensively to illustrate the author's meaning."

+ Management and Adm 8:320 S '24 150w

"The book is crammed with useful hints, from advice on stationery to syllabification and the rather exasperating semicolon."

+ N Y Tribune p26 Jl 13 '24 90w

BUCK, CHARLES NEVILLE. Gentleman in pajamas. 312p $2 Century 24-4267

P. B. Pettigrew, noted philanthropist and collector of antiques was suddenly awakened one night by a gentlemanly burglar whose demand was, "All I want is all you have." Then began a carefully planned campaign of robbery. The burglar, Barrows, took up his residence in the house, and claiming Pettigrew's ill health for an excuse, proceeded to sell off, one by one, the art treasures of his friend Pettigrew! For Pettigrew, respected member of society as he was, undoubtedly knew Barrows, and there was something dating back to their former dealings, which kept Pettigrew from handing Barrows over to the police. And thereby hangs the tale.

"It is not a pleasant story. No chronicle of the working out of blackmail, no matter how little we may sympathize with the victim, could be that. But it is an exceedingly clever story."

+ — Boston Transcript p7 Mr 22 '24 900w

"Mr. Buck has been clever enough to make this wild yarn almost plausible—if one reads it fast enough."

— + N Y Times p9 Mr 9 '24 1250w

"Mr. Buck has written mysteriously and well." E. W. Osborn

+ N Y World p7e Mr 9 '24 380w

Wis Lib Bul 20:127 My '24

BUCK, PERCY CARTER. Scope of music. 136p il $2 Oxford [6s Milford]

780.4 Music

"This is a series of ten lectures which Dr. Buck gave at Glasgow last year, now printed with some expansions and contractions, and the substitution of a chapter of psychology for one on programme. The best chapter is the first, on 'Raw Material,' written out of an abundance of knowledge. The others are quite good, but such subjects as 'Beauty' and 'Criticism' are difficult to dismiss in a few pages, while those on 'Melody' and 'Form' are necessarily elementary."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Lit R p939 Ag 2 '24 90w

"Mr. Buck is almost offensive in his heavy discursiveness. With the pedantry of the hardened teacher (he is music master at Harrow) he begins his lectures with the physics of sound

BUCK, PERCY CARTER—Continued
production. To this he adds his word on the origin of music and his wisdom on the nature of beauty. He also finishes off, after a slim central section on melody and form, with the ever-serviceable science of psychology, and calls it a book." C. E. Ayres
— New Repub 39:367 Ag 20 '24 330w

"Dr. Buck has a vivid way of putting his point, and often clinches it with a telling illustration. The book as a whole gives, as it claims to give, a wide outlook on the various points of interest, and will be read with pleasure by anyone who has thought about the questions and who likes to see how they shape themselves in another mind."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p290 My 8 '24 150w

BUCKHAM, JOHN WRIGHT. Personality and
2 psychology; and analysis for practical use. 202p $1.75 Doran

150 Psychology. Personality 24-9141

A study of the new psychology in its attitude toward the self. The author defends the reality and worth of personality against what he calls the "selfless psychology" and inquires how far established conceptions of the soul have been threatened by the findings of the new psychology.

J Religion 4:557 S '24 30w
St Louis p401 D '24

BUCKROSE, J. E., pseud. (MRS ANNIE EDITH [FOSTER] JAMESON). Single heart. 336p $2 Stokes [7s 6d H. Jenkins] 24-23492

"Alice Unwin, a young girl living in an English village of curious dullness, decides that marriage has little attraction for her. It may be romantic in dreams, but in life it is an affair of barter. When she has decided definitely on a life of spinsterhood her views change swiftly and completely when she is singled out by an Indian Civil servant of appropriate charm. They become engaged, and then, when all seems simple, her mother's health prevents an immediate marriage, she refuses to remain formally engaged, and her lover returns to India, there to forget in the course of the months the oaths he had sworn a little earlier. They meet again in Italy almost by accident, but the fire is dead, and she returns in the end to the village of her birth to end her life unmarried."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"This novel is said to have been written in order to explain, in part, why there are in the world so many charming unmarried women. Its chief value is contained in the almost uncanny knowledge of the heart of woman which the author displays for our enlightenment."
Boston Transcript p7 D 20 '24 300w

"Most delightful it is to find here a consistent character. Never once does Alice Unwin slip into the words or thoughts of somebody else. She is herself throughout." H. B. Aaron
+ Lit R p10 N 1 '24 260w

"'The Single Heart' is another of those tales of Yorkshire village life with which its author has in the last few years, delighted so many American readers. Like its predecessors, it is rich in the presentation of village characters."
+ N Y World p8e O 26 '24 130w
Spec 133:570 O 18 '24 30w

"It is a depressing book, with a disproportionate number of unpleasant or feeble characters."
— The Times [London] Lit Sup p670 O 23 '24 240w

BUCKROSE, J. E., pseud. (MRS ANNIE EDITH [FOSTER] JAMESON). What I have gathered. 195p $2 Stokes [6d Chatto & W.] 824 [24-2315]

A collection of light essays on such themes as Proposals, Bed as a refuge, Gossip, Unspoken conversations, Bores, and Honeymoons.

Booklist 21:61 N '24

"In the course of her pages, she brings to light not a little which is of instructive value. On the whole, however, her gatherings seem hardly to repay one for one's time. And this is due chiefly to the author's restlessness of mind. Miss Buckrose impresses one as being so intent that nothing shall escape that she is able to seize upon and hold nothing which might be worth while."
— + N Y Times p4 Jl 6 '24 400w
N Y Tribune p12 O 26 '24 80w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p673 O 11 '23 200w
Wis Lib Bul 20:210 O '24

BULLEN, ARTHUR HENRY. Elizabethans. 226p $5 Dutton [10s 6d Chapman & H.]
820.4 English literature [24-20172]

Papers on some Elizabethan writers by a well-known authority on that period of English literature. Some of them are Oxford lectures dating back to 1889. One is about an old kinsman of the writer whose name is not mentioned in the ordinary histories of English literature, William Bullein, who wrote a treatise on the fever pestilence. A book of curious learning, Hakewill's "Apologie," is the subject of another paper. Contents: Michael Drayton; Samuel Daniel; George Chapman; Thomas Dekker; Nicholas Breton; Dr Thomas Campion; William Bullein; Hakewill's "Apologie" (Dr George Hakewill); Fulke Greville, Lord Brooke; Shakespeare, the Englishman.

Boston Transcript p6 S 27 '24 500w

"The essays all are so vital, their style is so lucid, that they convey to the reader a knowledge of the authors and their works which leave little to be desired." H. H. Furness, jr.
+ Lit R p2 O 25 '24 1350w

Reviewed by L: Horrox
Nation and Ath 35:450 Jl 5 '24 900w

"As things are, the book as a whole covers no definite field, and the papers, taken individually, are not always adequate. They are, it is true, written in that most attractive of manners, the manner of one writing (or rather speaking) out of an abundant mind from knowledge accumulated through many years, not needing to consult books for this fact or that quotation, but giving forth richly out of his own storehouse things new and old. But finished they are not, either in style or in substance." E. E. K.
— + New Statesman 23:228 My 31 '24 1350w

"Here is a book that will be warmly welcomed by all who are interested in Elizabethan literature."
+ N Y Times p14 S 14 '24 450w

"Bullen was no mere scholarly dry-as-dust; he delighted in the literature which he explored so thoroughly. But delight and the ability to analyze the qualities which impart delight do not necessarily go hand in hand. They did not in his case. He was, to speak with a frankness which must not be construed as ingratitude, not a great critic." S: Chew
— + N Y Tribune p5 O 12 '24 500w

"It is well to have [these papers], for they illustrate Bullen's broad humanity as well as his scholarship. He could deal with the difficulties of texts, but he is at his best in such estimates as these, of men like Drayton and Daniel. He gives credit where credit it due, and avoids the exaggerated raptures which editors have a way of applying to authors of no great moment."
+ Sat R 137:537 My 24 '24 800w

"These essays are very worthy of publication in the handsome form in which they now appear. The most agreeable thing about them is their spontaneousness, the evidence they bear to Bullen's unmethodized but sincere and original lucubrations in the field of Elizabethan literature."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:129 S 20 '24 500w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p319 My 22 '24 1950w

BULLETT, GERALD WILLIAM. Innocence of G. K. Chesterton. 233p $2.25 Holt [7s 6d C. Palmer]

B or 92 Chesterton, Gilbert Keith [23-1207]

"Seven sections are given by Mr. Bullett to his discussion of Chesterton. After a 'Prefatory Note on Criticism for Art's Sake,' his five numbered sections are successively entitled 'The Sword of Laughter,' 'Defender of the Faith,' 'Marriage and Divorce,' 'The Eternal Hieroglyph,' and 'Summary of Omissions,' the last being followed by a bibliographical list of Chestertonian first editions, which extend from 'Graybeards at Play' in 1900, to 'The Ballad of St. Barbara' in 1922."—Boston Transcript

---

Booklist 20:336 Je '24

"Mr. Bullett's vivacious account of Chesterton's intellectual quests is more pleasant reading than most fiction, and far more penetrating."

+ Bookm 59:482 Je '24 200w

"Something more than the Chestertonian spirit invests this series of discussions of Chesterton. They are as lively and as gay as their subject, they have more reality, a closer contact with common sense than is frequently characteristic of him, and an avoidance of that form of extravagant paradox which savors simply of smartness. If a summary of the work of Chesterton during his lifetime is necessary, then Mr. Bullett seems capable of accomplishing it." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p3 F 16 '24 1600w

"The vigorous, sinewy style of the book and the definite point of view it espouses may be expected to render it a source both of provocation and of delight."

+ Lit R p709 Ap 26 '24 260w

Nation 118:sup456 Ap 16 '24 70w

"Mr. Bullett's work is, like so much of Chesterton's own writing, too blusteringly clever and smart. He gives us almost too much of a good thing, and exhausts us." L: Browne

+ — New Repub 39:51 Je 4 '24 450w

"There are excellent passages in this book, but all of them could have been contained in an article."

+ — New Statesman 21:720 S 29 '23 270w

"No better person could have engaged in a study of Chesterton, for he is directly the reverse of G. K. C. in so many ways and yet disposed in the most friendly manner to his subject."

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 2 '24 800w

"Mr. Bullett is well equipped—surprisingly well equipped for so young a man—for his task, for not only does he possess, like Mr. Shaw and Mr. Chesterton, the briskness, agility, and high spirits of an excellent pamphleteer, but he has also a very sane and liberal outlook on life and the power of expressing it with clearness and precision. Nor does his real admiration for Mr. Chesterton prevent him from criticizing him with justice and some severity."

+ Spec 131:228 Ag 18 '23 370w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p469 Jl 12 '23 1200w

BULLETT, GERALD WILLIAM. Street of the eye. 307p $2 Boni & Liveright [7s 6d Lane] [24-25746]

Ten short stories written in the subjective manner. One of the stories, The mole, which has appeared in the London Mercury, "is perhaps the finest story of the collection. It is a tale of slowly developing antagonism between man and wife, petty, sneaking creatures, captive in a torture of mutual and self hatred." (N Y World) Contents: The street of the eye; Sleeping beauty; The enchanted moment; The mole; A sensitive man; Miss Lettice; Wedding-day; Dearth's farm; The ghost; The house at Maadi.

"The British critics make no mistake in ranking his work with that of Katherine Mansfield in some respects. These stories have not merely a good surface texture, good dramatic construction and much verbal felicity; there is also body, solid substance, to them."

+ Lit R p9 N 1 '24 150w

N Y Times p8 N 30 '24 530w

N Y Tribune p10 D 14 '24 400w

Reviewed by J: W. Crawford

N Y World p9e N 16 '24 300w

"There is great enjoyment in his book, for he has a good 'sense' of story, charming humour, a wide range of reference, and an extremely fine prose style." A. E. Coppard

+ Spec 131:1036 D 29 '23 400w

BUREAU OF VOCATIONAL INFORMATION,
² NEW YORK. Training for the professions and allied occupations. 742p $2.70 The bureau

396.5 Woman—Occupations. Profession, Choice of 24-23194

A directory of the professions and occupations open to women, for which training facilities are available. The scope and trend of each field is defined, its present status and future outlook. The lists of training schools indicate admission requirements, curriculum and tuition fees.

Booklist 21:136 Ja '25

Cleveland p94 D '24

"The plan of the book is admirable. Apart from its obvious practical utility the work is of significance as an indication of the status of women in the twentieth century. It is a sociological document of interest as well as an indispensable tool for vocational direction and a guide to the woman in search of an occupation." A. L. Rogers

+ Sat R of Lit 1:432 Ja 3 '25 340w

BURKE, KENNETH. White oxen and other stories. 297p $2.50 A. & C. Boni 25-1771

"A collection of fifteen stories, executed in many manners and shifting through diverse moods and forms, composes this first book by Kenneth Burke. The opening stories are patterned brilliantly after known and respected models. The long opening work, 'The White Oxen,' is a piece of social realism in which the mediocre, placid and yet pathetic career of the principal is illuminated through the symbolism of these domesticated beasts. And, similarly, 'Mrs. Maecenas,' a story which attracted attention when published some years ago in 'The Dial,' is a piece of delicious satire, written with much spirit and wit."—N Y Tribune

---

"A book like The White Oxen is a voyage of discovery, and its fifteen short stories mark the successive landings. . . The virtue of The White Oxen is to be unique; not even its own author could write it again." Malcolm Cowley

Dial 77:520 D '24 1150w

"Mr. Burke is not for the soft-minded. His book must, unfortunately, chiefly appeal to the public of the periodicals in which the stories first appeared: Broom, Dial, Little Review and S4N. But to those who are not annoyed by the lack of the customary landmarks in their fiction, a reading of Mr. Burke's book can not fail to offer an intriguing experience, and for the thoughtful there is infinitely much. 'White Oxen' is a brilliantly executed record of the intellectual anarchy that has fallen upon this unhappy world." C. H. G.

+ Int Bk R p60 D '24 480w

"Even in the title story—which was written five or six years ago—there are present elements which cannot be found in Dreiser or Lewis. One is a style that is clear and supple, varied and vigorous, a style that breathes superbly. Young as Mr. Burke is, he has yet disciplined his prose so well that it is an easily tenable

BURKE, KENNETH—Continued
statement to say that in his line-for-line texture he has few peers and no superiors among writing Americans." G. B. Munson
+ Lit R p3 O 11 '24 1450w

"Mr. Burke's language is a joy; it is vigorous and pithy and resilient. His prose has a rhythmic energy and imperious impatience that are a real contribution to the resources of English. Whether he pushes his further effort toward a more cohesive synthesis of imagination and intellect, or abandons the myth for the metaphysics, he is a creative intelligence to reckon with."
+ N Y Times p23 O 26 '24 780w

"Because of the skill and maturity with which Mr. Burke treats of profoundly American characters, they will have a wide appeal." Matthew Josephson
+ N Y Tribune p4 N 16 '24 1300w

Reviewed by J: P. Bishop
Sat R of Lit 1:427 Ja 3 '25 950w

BURKE, THOMAS. Wind and the rain; a book of confessions. 309p $2 Doran
24-28112

In "The wind and the rain" Mr. Burke frankly tells the story of his life beginning with his early youth and ending with his twenty-third year. The first period covers years spent at Poplar with his uncle Frank, and tells of his curious friendship with Quong Lee, a storekeeper in Limehouse Causeway. Then come four wretched years in an orphanage followed by his advent into the business world as a clerk. It was in his sixteenth year that he discovered the marvelous world of books, music and art, and it marks the beginning of his literary career. Yearning to express himself he wrote tales about the mysteries of London, and success was his, well seasoned with joys and sorrows, but eventually he attained heights greater than he had dared dream of.

"With all the pathos of this account, it has its brighter moments too. There is, moreover, the delight in the fact that the fulfillment has been brighter than any of his dreams. There is to be found in it more of the flavor of Dickens's London, of the humor and tragedy, the light and shadow and the continual contrast of Dickens, than in any recent book." D. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p7 N 19 '24 1400w

"As a novel his book would be a most entrancing study of the appearance of intellectual aspirations where they are least expected. As the authentic account of the experiences of a poor and hungry child of the London slums it has a sociological value beyond that of any work of the imagination." G: W. Douglas
+ Lit R p18 N 15 '24 500w

Nation and Ath 36:276 N 15 '24 190w

Reviewed by J: Franklin
New Statesman 24:205 N 22 '24 400w

Reviewed by Howard Devree
N Y Times p15 D 28 '24 850w

"The boy's discovery of poetry and great writers, at sixteen, is humorous and touching at the same time, yet it indicates no more than a mist-blinded romantic finding wherewith to shut his sight even more effectually. Nevertheless it gives an honest self-portrait which is not without its flashes of vivid and poignant revelation. It is undoubtedly an accurate sociological document of the life of London's very poor." J: W. Crawford
N Y World p8e N 30 '24 540w

Reviewed by R. D. Townsend
Outlook 138:602 D 10 '24 140w

"The struggles, the jobs, the aspirations, the early loves, the early adventures in the twin ardours of discovering what to read and learning how to write, make up a narrative with no dull patches in it; and the sketches of London life—especially, as was to be expected, of Limehouse—are full of colour."
+ Sat R 138:576 D 6 '24 380w

BURKITT, MILES CRAWFORD. Our forerunners. (Home univ. lib. of modern knowledge) 256p il $1 Holt [2s 6d Williams & N.]
571 Man, Prehistoric 24-15072

A brief introductory study of the life and times of paleolithic man in western Europe and North Africa—the geological conditions under which he lived, the tools which he made, the engravings and painting with which he decorated his caves, and the earliest human cultures.

N Y Tribune p26 Jl 13 '24 60w
Wis Lib Bul 20:122 My '24

BURLINGAME, ROGER. You too. 302p $2 Scribner
24-5451

The story of Gail Winbourne, possessor of literary aspirations, genuine talent and a sense of the beauty of life, who is forced thru his marriage to enter a business for immediate returns. The author takes him into the inner shrine of the advertising business, the efficient, high-pitched game of selling to the public whatever is to be sold. His creative energy is diverted from writing to clever copy-making and such is the thoroughness of this game that he is temporarily blinded to the half-truths and commercialism of it. Love as well as art suffers from neglect and not till a crisis occurs between him and Muriel does he fully realize the falseness of the standards which had held him.

Boston Transcript p4 My 7 '24 550w

"'You Too' is definitely a novel with a thesis in which the plot is subordinated, but it sheds so much light on the 'bunk' in American business that no one with a sense of humor can fail to enjoy it." Cass Canfield
+ Lit R p627 Ap 29 '24 580w

"The struggle is set forth in the best American-fiction style, with vigor, color, and humor as the keynotes. The treatment is crisp, if not profound; the characters real, though strangely immature."
+ — Nation 118:591 My 21 '24 70w

"Mr. Burlingame has a distinct talent for satire of a rather devastating kind, though at times the violence of his dislike proves too much for his sense of proportion."
+ — N Y Times p8 Mr 9 '24 820w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e Mr 9 '24 300w

"A book to be read with glee and gratitude."
+ Outlook 137:67 My 14 '24 170w
Wis Lib Bul 20:126 My '24

BURMEISTER, JOSE KING. See Crane, M., pseud.

BURNHAM, WILLIAM HENRY. Normal mind. ² 702p $3.50 Appleton
131 Mental hygiene. Psychology 24-21349

The book is concerned especially with the mental health of normal children and with applying the psychology of association in mental hygiene. Thruout the book the importance of education and health in the early habit-forming years is emphasized. The author is professor of pedagogy and school hygiene in Clark university.

"Burnham's book cannot be read at a sitting. A lifetime of study has been put into it. But if you take it up you'll lay it down with regret; you'll take it up many times and oft, you'll mark it, you'll quote from it, you'll modify your procedure as a result of your study of it."
+ Educ R 69:53 Ja '25 1250w

"In the midst of a deluge of hastily compiled textbooks on education, written in the first years of the author's teaching for the purpose of gaining recognition, it is refreshing and stimulating to read a book which represents the results of the matured observation, reflection, and scientific work of a veteran teacher." F. N. Freeman

+ El School J 25:307 D '24 640w

"The student or reader without considerable psychological training will have difficulty in following certain of the more technical discussions, such as are found in the treatment of conditioned reflexes and inhibitions. As a whole, the author makes a worth-while contribution to a field in which there has been all too little work done up to the present time." C. V. Good

+ — School R 33:67 Ja '25 720w

BURNS, CECIL DELISLE. Short history of international intercourse. 159p $1.75 Oxford [3s 6d Allen & U.]

901 Civilization. International law and relations 24-13875

"The author here indicates the lines along which he holds historical study in schools and research should develop in order that history may become less local. He points out that the main current of civilized life has never run for long through one people and in one locality; taken as a whole civilization is international. This stimulating book is concerned with the history of the interchange of ideas between the races and the growth of international intercourse, whether by means of art, commerce, printing, or science. His chapters include a survey, in these respects, of the middle ages and the Renaissance, the Industrial Age, and the periods before and after the Great War, in connection with which he emphasizes the importance of the League of Nations as a factor in peace and international intercourse."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"There is little new in the book; the facts are for the most part familiar to the student of social history; but they are presented from the international rather than the usual national standpoint. The volume is valuable not so much for the material it contains, as for the arrangement of this material to stress the author's thesis: the interdependence of nations in the development of civilization." G: H. Blakeslee

+ Am Hist R 30:169 O '24 330w

Reviewed by H. S. Quigley

Am Pol Sci R 8:818 N '24 250w

Booklist 21:63 N '24

Boston Transcript p3 Je 7 '24 200w

"The book is written for the general reader and the undergraduate rather than for scholars, but even scholars may find in it a reminder of forgotten facts as well as a valuable statement of a point of view which ought to correct some of the follies of present-day nationalism."

+ Nation 118:745 Je 25 '24 110w

New Statesman 23:328 Je 21 '24 200w

N Y Times p14 Je 22 '24 1200w

Reviewed by P. M. Brown

Pol Sci Q 39:686 D '24 770w

St Louis p388 N '24

The Times [London] Lit Sup p194 Mr 27 '24 200w

Wis Lib Bul 20:211 O '24

BURR, MRS ANNA ROBESON (BROWN). Great house in the park. 425p $2 Duffield 24-12521

"The great house itself is Shank Park, one of those miracles of Tudor architecture. The house is not only a marvel in itself, but is crammed from moat to battlements with artistic treasure, the spoil of three generations of art-loving Monktons. Charles Ventris, an art expert and virtuoso, has dedicated his life to cataloguing, enlarging by skillful purchases and generally brooding over this astounding collection. By the rough chance of a death and a succession, he sees not only the Shank treasures but its very walls threatened with dispersal and ruin. How young Richard Monkton, just invalided back from 'over there' is tempted across the sea by the desperate custodian of the Monkton collection, how a tissue of fraud, forgery and false witness is woven round his confiding mind, what friends and foes the dramatic claim to the title makes for him, is the author's secret, and it would not be fair to reveal them untimely."—N Y Times

---

Booklist 21:67 N '24

"As in the earlier novels of this anonymous author, a charm as persuasive as it is insistent pervades the story. The atmosphere of Shank, 'the Great House in the Park' is caught and transmitted rarely, while the personalities and ideals of its dwellers are analyzed with uncommon skill and uncommon insight into human nature." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 11 '24 1000w

Cleveland p92 D '24

Reviewed by G. B. Dutton

Ind 113:48 Jl 19 '24 170w

"Not the least of the author's charm is his (or her) feeling for beauty and sense of the past. The descriptive writing is sometimes a little sensuous and loaded, but never fails to convey the glamour and color of things lovely in themselves and made lovelier by the mellowing fingers of time."

+ — N Y Times p22 Je 1 '24 820w

"Thrilling and satisfactory, and quite unpredictable from the opening. And the scenery, as previously intimated, is simply perfect. In addition, the anonymous author writes with grace and ease." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p23 Je 15 '24 1100w

"This anonymous chronicler of English Houses—'The House on Charles Street,' 'The House on Smith Square,' has produced another story of uncommon quality. There is a mystery in it, but you can't classify it as a mystery story. For a mere mystery story doesn't bother with the careful setting and skillful characterization on which this writer lavishes such pains." H. W. Boynton

+ Outlook 137:442 Jl 16 '24 180w

"The story of this great house is strung along two romances, one happy, the other a tragedy. Thus the author provides thrills as well as atmosphere in a melodrama of more ingratiating quality than most of the type."

+ Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 13 '24 460w

BURROUGHS, EDGAR RICE. Land that time forgot. 422p il $2 McClurg 24-14882

"Mr. Burroughs follows several precedents in authorship in recording the fictional discovery of a hitherto hidden land in which the monsters of land and sea common to an age long past survive still in all their primal hideousness and power. Into this land pass quite by chance a party of adventurers from our world of to-day. Their perils and escapes are described with all the license possible to a writer whose premises there is none to dispute."—N Y World

---

"An imaginative tour de force that keeps the reader keyed up and expectant. For in a novel so unrestricted, anything and everything may happen In 'The Land That Time Forgot' anything and everything does."

+ N Y Times p18 Jl 20 '24 500w

N Y Tribune p25 Jl 13 '24 280w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p2e Je 29 '24 100w

"We fancy that 'The Land That Time Forgot,' with its rapid, bold, sketchy narrative, its pseudo-pseudo-science, its highly imaginative adventure, and its shrewd touch of romantic sex-appeal, will be read with just as much satisfaction whether or not 'banned' by Mr Bryan. When one wants a good yarn, what more does he want than a good yarn? He has it in Mr Burroughs' story."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 17 '24 250w

BURROUGHS, STEPHEN. Memoirs of the notorious Stephen Burroughs of New Hampshire; with a pref. by Robert Frost. 367p $4 Dial press

B or 92 24-23618

The writer of these extraordinary memoirs was an engaging rascal and his account of his escapades, which he describes with the utmost frankness, was once a very popular book, to judge by the numerous editions of it published in the first half of the last century. The son of a New Hampshire clergyman, Stephen Burroughs early gained by his pranks the reputation of being the worst boy in town. When he was nineteen he ran away from home, taking with him a pocketful of sermons stolen from his father and with this stock in trade he successfully passed himself off as a clergyman and hoaxed whole congregations. His next adventure was counterfeiting, which shortly landed him in jail. Other jail experiences followed, but he remained a philosopher thruout. The memoirs end abruptly with his return home where he is believed to have lived an exemplary life for the rest of his days.

"These pages make enthralling reading, a clear, plausible picture of our own country's Dark Ages, by a truly remarkable commentator with the vision of an intellectual rebel." E. C. Beckwith

+ Lit R p16 D 27 '24 700w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 41:202 Ja 14 '25 1250w

Reviewed by J. D. Adams

N Y Times p6 N 9 '24 1400w

"It is a fascinating book, not alone because of its human interest, but because it is a new contribution to the knowledge of the period in New England history, lying between the late seventeen hundreds and the early eighteen hundreds." C: J. Finger

+ N Y Tribune p5 N 2 '24 900w

N Y World p9e D 14 '24 150w

BURT, EMMA J. Seen and unseen in Browning. 191p $2 Appleton [6s Blackwell]

821 Browning, Robert [24-9813]

Abt Vogler, The grammarian's funeral, and The boy and the angel, and several others of Browning's poems are studied for what they tell of the poet's ideas about some of the deepest truths and problems of human life.

"This little volume contains some very apt appreciation, but it is occasionally marred by sentimentalism."

+ — Boston Transcript p3 F 9 '24 340w

Boston Transcript p2 O 4 '24 320w

"If not adding vitally to the vast body of Browning literature, the author has at least turned the light of an earnest and penetrating mind upon some of his characteristic poems, and has set forth her individual impressions vividly and understandingly and with a wealth of thought."

+ — N Y Times p14 My 25 '24 1050w

BURT, MAXWELL STRUTHERS. Diary of a dude-wrangler. 331p $3 Scribner

917.8 Ranch life 24-22261

"To wrangle," Mr Burt says, "is to herd or conduct something, hence, a dude-wrangler is a man who herds and takes care of 'dudes' or strangers of the country." The author writes about his transformation from a Philadelphian to a westerner, and the establishing of a dude-ranch in the Rockies. He touches upon numerous subjects in the course of his narrative, some of them being the beauty of America, the old "West," horses, mules and other animals.

Booklist 21:105 D '24

"It is the kind of book that, when it finds the right reader, becomes an intellectual adventure, an experience to be treasured in the memory, for it has literary quality, charm, humor, enough serious thinking to make the reader shut the book now and then do some himself, a love of nature for its own sake and a response to its beauty that comes close to a passion. There is, too, a richness and accuracy of color in its anecdote and description that put it among the true books written about our great West."

+ N Y Times p5 S 28 '24 650w

"There are some rare pieces of philosophy and of scenic description in the book, but perhaps the author is at his best when telling humorous anecdotes, of which a liberal supply are sprinkled throughout this diary and which, in many cases, are hilariously funny."

+ N Y World p8e O 26 '24 280w

Outlook 138:651 D 17 '24 220w

"The book lacks literary pretense, placing 'human interest' first, and being informal and chatty in style. A combination of interesting experiences and the ability to describe them is found here."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a O 26 '24 300w

BURT, MAXWELL STRUTHERS. Interpreter's house. 445p $2 Scribner

24-3919

Gulian Eyre has come to the point where some sort of interpretation of life has become his imperative need. The youngest son of a wealthy New York family, he had been allowed to follow his own inclinations throughout his youth and early manhood, his father alone among the family connections having the perception to see in his "wildness" the stirring of unusual energy of character. Now, at thirty-five, having served through the war, having made a serious attempt to orientate himself by writing poetry and taken a less serious dip into the diplomatic service, he comes back home, "not because he wanted to . . . but because he could think of nothing else that might quiet the vague restlessness that had overtaken him." His readjustment into the warp of family, business and social claims; his inner drive toward some satisfying answer to the eternal query—"Is there Beauty yet to find?—And certainty?"—these are the themes of The interpreter's house.

Booklist 20:299 My '24

"Here is a brilliantly written novel, and one rarely rich in reflective interest. While Mr. Burt might pick up his pace a bit by less philosophizing, he has written nothing one would gaily throw away. 'The Interpreter's House' will be much discussed." Sidney Williams

+ Bookm 59:77 Mr '24 450w

Reviewed by I. W. Lawrence

Boston Transcript p3 Mr 8 '24 1650w

"A highly readable novel, a plausible picture of the contemporary scene, deft and observant but lacking in some degree the warmth of deep experience. One shares the author's interest in his characters and participates in his examination of them; one does not, however, live with them. Neither does Mr. Burt."

+ — Dial 77:82 Jl '24 70w

English J 13:684 N '24 80w

"It is a thoughtful and carefully executed piece of work. It achieves novelty in laying special stress on the problems of the generation which is not quite the younger generation, yet is by no means resigned to being laid on the shelf." H. W. Boynton

+ Ind 112:157 Mr 15 '24 400w

"The book as a whole is admirably written, in English which it is a pleasure to read. It is Mr. Burt's first novel, but by no means his first book. Here as in his short stories and in his poems, he shows that he intimately knows his native language, respects it so much that he is willing to take pains in writing it, and loves it so truly that its resources of beauty and power give him a true joy." H: Van Dyke

+ Int Bk R p429 My '24 1600w

"A well written and an instructive book. Mr. Burt, unlike too many of his contemporaries in the popular art of fiction writing, is educated, and, what is even rarer just now in literary America, civilized." H: S. Canby

+ Lit R p555 Mr 1 '24 720w

"This is Mr. Burt's first novel and as such it is an unusual procedure. There is a maturity and a confidence in the handling of a large canvas that prophesies much for the future. And best of all, the author possesses an excellent narrative vein. His novel moves along smoothly, his characterizations are plainly the result of careful and clever study, and his situations merge into one another with a high degree of reality."
+ N Y Times p8 F 17 '24 850w

"Set forth fluently and soberly, with evident high intent. The characters converse in snatches of essays; there are many moralizing asides upon democracy, religion, politics, Puritans, biology and other weighty subjects. The fault may be in me, that I can't get the story and the message to tie up with each other." Isabel Paterson
— + N Y Tribune p20 F 17 '24 840w

"Opens excellently, and if it does not always move forward upon an even level, its fluctuations never carry it out of touch with the reader's interest."
+ — Outlook 136:440 Mr 12 '24 200w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:291 Je '24
The Times [London] Lit Sup p437 Jl 10 '24 180w
+ Wis Lib Bul 20:126 My '24

BURTON, SIR RICHARD FRANCIS. Selected papers on anthropology, travel and exploration; new ed. with an introd. and occasional notes by N. M. Penzer. 240p $4 McBride [15s Philpot]
910 Anthropology. Voyages and travels. Mecca [24-4202]

A collection of Sir Richard Burton's papers gathered from old and inaccessible periodicals and journals. Most of the papers were written while he was at the height of his career as an explorer and relate to his most important adventures, in Sind, in Mecca and Medina and Harar the Unknown. Three of the articles are on anthropological subjects, another is on spiritualism in eastern lands and the concluding chapter is an account of the great Italian Egyptologist, Giovanni Battista Belzoni.

Booklist 21:63 N '24 90w

"At this late day, the collection of his 'Selected Papers' is of no little importance and value. While they add little new to our knowledge of the man and his life, they give us a further chronicle that belongs by right on the already long shelf of Burtonana." E. F. Edgett
+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 28 '24 1250w

Reviewed by Hugo Sonnenschein
Lit R p988 Ag 23 '24 450w

Reviewed by H. H. Johnston
Nation 119:643 D 10 '24 1350w

Reviewed by C: de Kay
N Y Times p14 Ag 24 '24 1500w
Outlook 138:65 S 10 '24 60w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p5 Ja 3 '24 1050w

BURY, JOHN BAGNELL, and others. Hellenistic age. 151p $2.40 Macmillan [6s Cambridge univ. press]
938 Civilization, Greek. Greece—History 24-12227

"The Hellenistic Age consists of four essays by Prof. Bury, the sub-Rector of Exeter, Mr. E. A. Barber, Mr. Edwyn Bevan, and Mr. W. W. Tarn, on various aspects of Hellenistic civilization. Prof. Bury deals with its relations to civilization in general, Mr. Barber with Alexandrian literature, Mr. Bevan with its popular philosophy, and Mr. Tarn with 'The Social Question in the Third Century' (B.C.)." —Sat R

"It is a book which cannot be ignored by instructors in Greek philosophy or by teachers of comparative religion."
+ Boston Transcript p4 My 3 '24 100w
Int J Ethics 35:96 O '24 200w

"The reader of this book will not only find it full of interest in itself, but will be able to estimate how deeply both Roman and modern civilizations are indebted to Hellenism."
+ New Statesman 22:490 F 2 '24 150w

"Of exceptional interest to the ordinary educated reader, who has been taught the history of Greece at her prime, and almost unconsciously adopted the notion that there is nothing more of value to learn about it."
+ Sat R 136:707 D 29 '23 280w

"Mr. Barber's sketch of the literature of the Hellenistic Age is masterly in its completeness."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p106 F 21 '24 2000w

BUSHEE, FREDERICK ALEXANDER. Principles of sociology. 577p $3.50 Holt
301 Sociology 23-11399

"Meant primarily as a textbook for undergraduates, this volume aims more at an acceptable organization of material already available than at the presentation of new data. The emphasis throughout is upon genetic factors in the social process. The physical and biological bases of society are given prominence rather than the psychological, for the author believes that the latter 'may best be developed as a separate branch of the science.' "—Int J Ethics

"This is one of the most pretentious textbooks in general sociology which has yet appeared, and in many ways it may be counted as one of the best in the field." L. L. Bernard
+ — Am J Soc 29:755 My '24 1000w

"Taken as a whole, Professor Bushee's volume constitutes the best available basis of discussion for college students seeking a bird's-eye view of the meaning of human activities. The balance of its views, its accurate presentation of facts, the simplicity of organization of its materials, and many other features developed through years of careful adaptation in actual classroom use make it well suited to their needs. But the style of the book is so fluent and accurate in expression that the ordinary thinking citizen, not sure of the social bearing and significance of his daily tasks, can derive from it a balanced view of the composite of social forces." T. J. K.
+ Boston Transcript p3 My 10 '24 1300w

"The treatment is solid, the style clear, the organization of a wealth of material singularly good." T. V. Smith
+ Int J Ethics 34:301 Ap '24 140w

"It is the reviewer's opinion that this is the most satisfactory general textbook on sociology for college use which is now available." H. E. Barnes
+ New Repub 38:sup14 Ap 9 '24 500w
Survey 52:551 Ag 15 '24 80w

BUSSENIUS, LUELLEN TETERS. Honorable Miss Cherry Blossom. 245p $2 Brown, N. L.

"Interest in the story centres upon the whole-heart romance of Deering, the Mr. Young Foreigner, who comes to the East in the path of an American Grace, but finds love at the feet of the Japanese Cherry Blossom. The chapters before us contain vivid descriptions of street scenes in Tokio. A trifle of assassination on the side lends to the narrative a fleeting touch of sensation."—N Y World

Boston Transcript p6 Ag 13 '24 120w

"This book has the virtues of being not uninteresting, of having been written with some consideration for craft, of giving evidence of intimacy with the setting, which is Japan, and, more than these, of not simper-

BUSSENIUS, L. T.—Continued
ing. Within the limitations of its kind the novel is praiseworthy, although the praises must be faint because of these same limitations." H. A. P.

+ — Lit R p985 Ag 23 '24 200w

"There are some pretty pictures in the course of the book, but they do not justify serving the public a stale bowl of olla podrida." F. V. Roman

— + N Y World p8e Jl 27 '24 100w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p8e Ag 17 '24 100w

BUTLER, FRANK HEDGES. Round the world. ² 269p il $5 Stokes [21s Unwin]

910.4 Voyages around the world

Mr Butler recounts three trips around the world: the first from Southhampton to New York, across the states to Japan and home by way of the Suez canal; the second from London to Brazil, thru South America and home by way of the Panama canal; and the third to Java, Australia and the South Sea islands, returning by way of the Canadian Pacific railway. The book is illustrated with excellent photographs taken by the author.

"These are very badly written jottings from the diary of a tourist de luxe, but, for all that, pleasant reading, on the whole, for those of us who know our world and like to be reminded of the picturesque commonplaces of the well-beaten trails."

+ — New Statesman 24:supxii D 6 '24 230w

"There are many readers who will prefer Mr. Butler's simple narrative of his travels to more ornate description, because it is just the sort of thing they would like to be in a position to write themselves. The best chapters are those which describe Java. A large number of admirable and well-chosen photographs add to the value of the book."

+ Sat R 138:550 N 29 '24 100w

BUTLER, KATHLEEN T. History of French literature. 2v 496;395p $9 set Dutton [ea 10s 6d Methuen]

840.9 French literature—History

"The aim of this outline, which does not pretend to be exhaustive, is to provide for English students of French literature a textbook which should give them not only an appreciative account of the great writers of France but also in a measure indicate the influence on French literature of historical events, social conditions, and the general movement of ideas. Considerable stress too has been laid on her literary and intellectual relations with other lands. In both these connections it is hoped that the synoptic chronological tables which form an appendix to each volume may prove helpful to the student. Few histories of French literature deal adequately with the period after 1850. For this reason I have devoted a whole volume to the complex nineteenth century, and have attempted to bring the account down to 1: which, in a sense, marks the end of an epoch in the literary and intellectual life of France." —Preface

Boston Transcript p5 My 10 '24 300w
Ind 112:158 Mr 15 '24 40w

"The excellent 'History of French Literature' is an unusually welcome and refreshing addition to the dusty legion of students' manuals, and deserving of a more catholic audience. It is a modest but vigorous and quietly effective survey."

+ Nation and Ath 34:495 D 29 '23 700w

"It is sufficient praise of Miss Kathleen Butler to say that, while nothing is final, it is hard to see how her 'History of French Literature' can be superseded as a textbook within any reasonable time. Her perceptions are generally unerring." H: L. Stuart

+ N Y Times p17 My 18 '24 1100w
Sat R 136:552 N 17 '23 200w

"While the work is a text book rather than a critical study, it reveals a good grasp of men and movements. The book has considerable value for the student or general reader who desires to see literature as a whole and requires a chart in an unfamiliar sea. While not without limitations it is a thorough and useful compendium. Its concrete illustrations and businesslike intelligence give it merit as a text book."

+ — Springf'd Republican p10 F 29 '24 160w

"It is in itself an achievement to have compressed the last hundred and fifty years of French literature into one volume without giving an impression of scrappiness. The latter pages are, of course, to some extent provisional, as they contain estimates of contemporary writers. Here, as throughout both volumes, we find a good deal which might be amplified, but little which one could wish modified in tone or more briefly treated."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p869 D 13 '23 750w

BUTT, ARCHIBALD WILLINGHAM. Letters of Archie Butt; ed. with a biographical sketch of the author, by Lawrence F. Abbott. 395p il $5 Doubleday

B or 92 Roosevelt, Theodore 24-22911

Major Archie Butt was President Roosevelt's military aide during the last year of his administration and remained with President Taft in the same capacity. The letters in this volume cover the period from April, 1908, to President Taft's inauguration March 4, 1909, those belonging to the Taft administration having been kept in reserve. Major Butt wrote almost daily to his mother—letters filled with intimate details about the Roosevelt family and the life of the White House. They are entertaining and gossipy, in a kindly way, of value for their revelations of Roosevelt's character and personality and their impressions of Washington political and social life.

Booklist 21:148 Ja '25
Bookm 60:509 D '24 320w
Cath World 120:562 Ja '25 550w
Cleveland p95 D '24

"A volume of his intimate letters would be welcome if they were nothing more than a revelation of the thought and life of a gallant man. But these letters, while marvelously self-revealing are far more; they are at once a most valuable historical source in relation to official and executive life in Washington during the closing year of a most spectacular and important administration, and an equally important searchlight upon that marvelous personality, Theodore Roosevelt." J. G. de R. H.

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8b D 7 '24 1050w

"Since their engaging and charming quality disarms all criticism except the most discerning, and since the letters have the apparently unquestionable hallmark of having been written within a few minutes or hours after the events of which they treat, it becomes an ungrateful but necessary task to warn the writer of the future that he must take Archie cum grano salis." C: W. Thompson

+ — Lit R p6 N 15 '24 1900w

Reviewed by Horace Green

N Y Times p4 O 19 '24 1700w

"Sometimes Archie is dull—for that matter, so is Pepys—but then, his subject matter must be considered." R. F. Dibble

— N Y Tribune p3 O 12 '24 870w
St Louis p385 N '24
Sat R of Lit 1:225 O 25 '24

BUTTERFIELD, HERBERT. Historical novel. 113p $2 Macmillan [5s Cambridge univ. press]

808.3 Historical fiction [24-25676]

"Mr. Butterfield's essay, for which he was awarded the Le Bas Prize last year, is (to use his own words) 'an attempt to find some relation between historical novels on the one hand and history treated as a study on the other; and, further, to work out a method of critical approach. . . It seeks to estimate the novel as a work of resurrection, a form of "history," a way of treating the past.' And this he achieves in hardly more than one hundred pages of agreeable and close-knit exposition, with none of that depressing clutter of multiple footnotes and references which one is apt to associate with the academic essay, treating his subject, in fact, as a living and actual form, and not as matter for an autopsy."—New Statesman

"Mr. Butterfield has put thought into his essay, and life, and from a happy combination of the two he has produced a charming bit of writing." S. L. R.
+ Boston Transcript p5 S 17 '24 700w

"He does little more than formulate commonplaces, but he writes with a genuine passion for great literature and he does not fall into the error of disjoining the novel from its own purpose and making it a guide to history. . . Mr. Butterfield is able to estimate the peculiar distinction of writers as opposed as Dumas and Hewlett and to assign the historical novel its importance as one of the most fascinating inventions of art." A. D. Douglas
+ Nation 119:473 O 29 '24 150w

"It is refreshing to have a critical study of the historical novel so sensitive, so straightforward, and so compact as the present small volume."
+ New Statesman 23:446 Jl 19 '24 900w

BUTTERFIELD, KENYON LEECH. Christian program for the rural community. 188p $1.50 Doran

261 Sociology, Christian. Country life

The president of Massachusetts agricultural college offers an earnest plea for a program of Christian work that shall take the farmer into account. He explains the need of such a program, the principles on which a Christian democracy should rest and some of their applications to rural affairs.

Reviewed by E. C. Lindeman
New Repub 40:sup11 O 1 '24 230w
Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 15 '24 350w

BUXTON, PATRICK ALFRED. Animal life in deserts; a study of the fauna in relation to the environment. 176p il $3.50 Longmans [10s 6d Arnold]

591.9 Desert fauna [24-4971]

"For nearly a generation the old-fashioned natural history has been somewhat eclipsed by evolutionary and experimental studies by biologists. Within very recent years, however, there has been a renewed interest in natural history under the title of ecology, or, more clearly, the relations of organisms to their environment. The present volume is an example of one of these ecological studies in which a certain type of environment is studied and two peculiarities of the organic forms are correlated with it. The book is based upon observations made in the deserts of Algeria, Persia, Palestine and Mesopotamia over a period of several years, but since it was written in Jerusalem library facilities were quite inadequate and completeness of treatment is not claimed by the author."—Lit R

Reviewed by M. G. Bonner
Int Bk R p469 My '24 40w

"The book is written in a simple manner which will appeal to the layman and is illustrated by many good photographs of desert conditions."
+ Lit R p651 Ap 5 '24 220w

"The book is full of original and valuable observations, and gives the reader much food for thought." F. P.
+ Nation and Ath 34:386 D 8 '23 140w

"Mr. Buxton has written a book of general interest and high biological value."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p703 O 25 '23 800w

BUXTON, SIDNEY CHARLES BUXTON, 1st earl. General Botha. 347p il $5 Dutton [12s Murray]

B or 92 Botha, Louis. European war, 1914-1919—South Africa [24-15887]

Earl Buxton served in South Africa as governor-general during the war, while General Botha was prime minister of the Union of South Africa and commander-in-chief of the Union forces. It is to these years that the book is chiefly devoted—to Botha's suppression of the revolt within the Union on the outbreak of the war, the campaigns in German South West and German East Africa and to his career as prime minister.

"Lord Buxton's 'General Botha,' on the whole, is a dull book. Here and there the author lets himself go and gives us a mildly entertaining story, of which we are always glad." R. S. Alexander
— + Nation 119:548 N 19 '24 830w

"Ideals are not always easy to translate into practice, and part of the value of Lord Buxton's interesting memoir consists in the light which the author is able to throw upon the extraordinary difficulties which confronted the South African Government during the period of the Great War, when Botha was Prime Minister and Lord Buxton Governor-General and High Commissioner. We doubt whether the extent and range of these difficulties have ever been adequately appreciated in this country, and it is therefore well to be reminded how great they were and how fortunate was the Empire in the men who were called upon to handle them." H. A. L. Fisher
+ Nation and Ath 35:52 Ap 12 '24 1350w
New Statesman 23:17 Ap 12 '24 900w

Reviewed by James Luby
N Y Times p10 Ag 17 '24 1650w

"The book is somewhat overburdened by trivialities, but full of valuable material."
+ — Outlook 138:178 O 1 '24 60w

"Sympathetic and admirable biographical sketch."
+ Sat R 137:388 Ap 12 '24 900w

Reviewed by J: Buchan
Spec 131:561 Ap 5 '24 1350w
Springf'd Republican p7a S 14 '24 850w

"Lord Buxton is at his best in the chapters in which he describes Botha's personality, his relations with the Governor-General and his friendship with General Smuts. He writes with knowledge and evident sympathy, and he succeeds in drawing a vivid and natural portrait of his subject."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p199 Ap 3 '24 1450w

BYNE, MRS MILDRED (STAPLEY), and
² BYNE, ARTHUR. Spanish gardens and patios. 305p il $15 Lippincott

712 Gardens. Courtyards. Spain—Description and travel 24-31895

It is the gardens and patios of southern Spain, especially of Andalusia, with which this beautifully illustrated book deals. These gardens, which make a scant use of flowers and obtain their color effects from the use of glazed polychrome tiles, are unlike all other European gardens. The various garden accesories are described—fountains, flower-pots, benches, pools, walks and garden stairs, and other decoration by means of tiles. There are 175 halftone illustrations and four plates in color.

"The volume, exquisitely bound, will attract not only architects. It will delight any lover of beauty and any lover of Spain."
+ Boston Transcript p6 D 13 '24 220w

BYNE, M., and BYNE, A.—Continued
N Y Times p20 Ja 4 '25 700w

"It is altogether a sumptuous book."
+ Outlook 138:733 D 31 '24 50w

BYRNE, DONN. Blind Raftery and his wife, Hilaria. 175p il $1.25 Century 24-21810

"Blind Raftery" the singer and weaver of verse is the central figure of this Irish tale which is set in the Connaught hills. The blind poet, with his harp, received a warm welcome wherever he went. There was one enemy—the Welshman of Claregalway, Dafydd Evans, and Raftery hated him bitterly, and made up ridiculous rhymes about him. Evans, thinking to revenge himself, gave to Raftery in marriage the enchantingly beautiful Spanish girl, Hilaria. She had at one time been the Welshman's mistress. And now the folk when they spied Raftery down the road with Hilaria by his side shunned them. With the return of Raftery's cousin, Rory More O'Rourke, to the fiefs all wrongs are righted and the blind poet and his Spanish bride continue on their joyous way.

Booklist 21:67 N '24

"The book is a masterpiece and it is filled with verses, not all of them perfect but most of them exquisite." J. F.
+ Bookm 60:342 N '24 200w

"If you are yearning for a bit of poetry and adventure and love and romance, and all the other pleasant words and ideas writers have had for their readers since the days when the world was young, the chance is here for him who would leap at it." I. W. L.
+ Boston Transcript p4 S 27 '24 500w
Cleveland p91 D '24
English J 13:684 N '24 70w

"In these parlous times of realism, Donn Byrne is the blade of green, romantic grass in a long, long stretch of sand. Baptise him 'Oasis' if you will." Warner Olivier
+ Lit R p3 S 20 '24 600w

"It is a pretty tale that Mr. Byrne has to tell in 'Blind Raftery'—not a tale as rich in romantic glamour as 'Messer Marco Polo,' but essentially poetic in its treatment and theme."
+ N Y Times p19 S 21 '24 250w

"A lovely thing with magic in it, a spell cast conjointly by the scene, the story, and the telling."
+ Outlook 138:338 O 29 '24 130w
Sat R of Lit 1:363 D 6 '24 400w

"'Blind Raftery' should be read aloud, if anyone ever does read aloud these days, that the music of its rhythm may echo like the strings of the blind singer's harp."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a O 12 '24 350w

BYRON, GEORGE GORDON NOEL BYRON, 6th baron. Byron and Greece, by Harold Spender. 336p $4 Scribner [15s Murray]
821 Greece—Description and travel 24-14626

"Mr. Spender has ingeniously put together Byron's verse and prose concerning Greece, his main feature being the second canto of 'Childe Harold,' with Byron's letters on his tour printed on the opposite page. He also includes extracts from Hobhouse's Journal, and gives an account of Lord Elgin's capture of the Parthenon marbles, severely attacked by Byron in 'The Curse of Minerva.'"—Sat R

Reviewed by D. L. Mann
Boston Transcript p3 Ag 23 '24 700w

"The book is hardly one to be read consecutively, but it is one to be turned to for indispensable sidelights on the most interesting phase of Byron's public career." W: MacDonald
+ — Int Bk R p791 O '24 200w

"The chief value of Mr. Spender's compilation is that it gathers together all Byron's writings upon Greece. The plan of printing prose and verse vis-a-vis on alternate pages was not a happy one. Mr. Spender's own comments are somewhat jejune." S: C. Chew
— + Nation 119:149 Ag 6 '24 100w

"The publisher's jacket promises a 'large amount of new material,' but the present writer has not been able to find it." R: Aldington
— Nation and Ath 35:383 Je 21 '24 140w

"Mr. Spender's book is an eminently silly one. It reads as though it had been written during a séance by the shade of La Guiccioli." H. M. Jones
— New Repub 40:sup6 O 1 '24 280w
N Y Times p15 Je 1 '24 800w
St Louis p411 D '24

"Mr. Spender's own criticism is disappointing. There is, in fact, very little of it, for he writes throughout as a sentimentalist, and reduces the errant side of Byron to a minimum."
— Sat R 137:487 My 10 '24 280w

"To all those who wish chiefly to study him on the occasion of this centenary as the liberator of Hellas Mr. Harold Spender's painstaking and exhaustive compilation will be of high value."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p242 Ap 17 '24 240w

BYRON, GEORGE GORDON NOEL BYRON, 6th baron. Poems; selected and arranged in chronological order; with a preface by H. J. C. Grierson. 397p $4 Appleton [16s Chatto & W]
821 [24-13721]

Prepared to commemorate the Byron centenary, this volume makes a selection of his poems based upon carefully considered principles of choice Dr. Grierson has chosen two connected cantos of Childe Harold which in themselves are a single and complete poem, three consecutive cantos of Don Juan complete, Beppo, Cain and the Vision of judgment, and around these he has grouped, keeping the chronological order thruout, such pieces as Darkness and Prometheus, a selection of the lyrics and a few of the dramas.

Reviewed by J: Donelson
Bookm 59:741 Ag '24 120w

"Dr. Grierson's study is one for lovers as well as students of poetry and for all true poets. Especially grateful will it be to those who have always recognized and reverenced the poetic genius of that human paradox called Byron, often as misunderstood in death as in life; often as misinterpreted."
+ Boston Transcript p5 My 10 '24 500w

"We can certainly recommend Professor Grierson's selection as the best contemporary one to which all true lovers of Byron can confidently turn in this hundredth year of his fame."
+ Lit R p696 Ap 19 '24 300w

"Everything that expert critical judgment, sensitive taste, imaginative understanding and scholarly fidelity could do for a volume of this kind has been done. Yet no selection of Byron is entirely satisfactory, and for the reason which has been set forth with masterly brevity in Prof. Grierson's admirable preface: 'Byron must be read as a whole or in long stretches.' The book affords an excellently comprehensive survey of Byron."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 20 '24 800w

C

CABELL, JAMES BRANCH. High place; a comedy of disenchantment. 312p il $2.50 McBride
23-18612

"Florian de Puysange, the scion of a noble French family in the days of Louis XIV, has been vouchsafed a glimpse of 'The High Place,' where dwelt the pagan gods and goddesses, and where especially was the sleeping princess, Melior. The wonder of her beauty never fades from his vision. He grows to manhood, carrying out the creed of his fathers, 'Thou shalt not offend against the notions of thy neighbors,' a creed, which, nevertheless enables him to spend his time in amours of various kinds. Still there remains always the memory of the ideal princess, Melior. He makes a bargain with Janicot, through which he comes into possession of the coveted princess, and of perfect happiness for the space of a few weeks. Then there comes the subsequent disenchantment, the moral of which is obvious to all who desire the unattainable."—Springf'd Republican

" 'Something too much of this,' one murmurs, and the trouble with Mr Cabell is that one is forever saying that after a prolonged exhibition of one of the half-a-dozen tricks in his romantic but limited repertoire. One even says it of the High Place which is a much better achievement than the strident smartness of Jurgen." Cuthbert Wright

— + Dial 76:363 Ap '24 600w

"Less symbolical than much of Mr. Cabell's work it is even richer in the special kind of reference and innuendo with which his readers are familiar. Enjoyment of the book depends largely upon one's appetite for such highly seasoned fare; it is not a pure taste, æsthetically or morally, although Mr. Cabell's style, burdened as it is by artifice and preciosity, always has distinction." L. P. Hartley

+ — Nation and Ath 34:672 F 9 '24 150w

"Even Mr. Cabell's plays on words according to Boccaccio sound more and more as if they are done from a sober sense of duty. The High Place lies too near the tired earth of Poictesme and the hearts of the gods are hardening to stone and their tears are frozen in blind and heavy-lidded eyes." A. D. Douglas

— New Repub 38:157 Ap 2 '24 1100w

"The writing is admirable—taken simply as writing—but is so devoid of psychological sense and conformity to character that long before the close the verbal dexterity becomes a weariness to the mind, and the tale postively sags in its own lath and plaster when it is revealed finally that all this bitter experience and cynical expression are only the dream of this little child of ten." A. E. Coppard

— + Spec 131:129 Ja 26 '24 360w

"Mr Cabell is most entertaining when he deals with the supernatural, with the gods and goddesses. He is least rewarding perhaps in his continued insistence upon the extreme immoralities of the French court of the period; for after all, these French courtiers and their mistresses have already been rather fully discussed."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 6 '24 330w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p25 Ja 10 '24 220w

CABELL, JAMES BRANCH. Straws and prayer-books. 302p $2.50 McBride

814

"After twenty years of labor upon some fifteen books, which he insists are but the chapters of one long book—the Biography of Dom Manuel and his descendants—Mr. Cabell has now written his epilog. And this takes shape as an explanation of what he has been doing all these years, and why he has been doing it. . . As this author's books now stand, in the revised edition, they are all concerned with characters belonging to a spreading family tree. . . The ramifications of this family tree may be studied in detail in 'The Lineage of Lichfield,' but all that need be made clear here is that the author, by his genealogical device, has knitted together his short stories and novels to form one lengthy narrative. It is this that he calls his Biography; and he has furnished it with 'Beyond Life' for a prolog and with 'Straws and Prayer-Books' for an epilog."—Int Bk R

Reviewed by L: Bromfield
Bookm 60:493 D '24 430w
Boston Transcript p4 D 31 '24 1350w
Dial 78:79 Ja '25 150w
Ind 114:106 Ja 24 '25 80w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Int Bk R p860 N '24 2200w

Reviewed by P. H. Gilkyson
Lit R p3 N 29 '24 1000w

Reviewed by Carl Van Doren
Nation 119:470 O 29 '24 1250w

Reviewed by H: B. Fuller
New Repub 41:151 D 31 '24 1150w

"It is neither for the novelty of the argument nor the logic of its conclusion that the book is to be praised. It is, rather, to be praised for reasons which have little to do with either. First, perhaps, for the glamour and the subtlety of the general ideas expressed in the course of Mr. Cabell's incidental reflections upon life. Secondly, for the illuminating fashion with which it deals with certain problems of the craft of writing."

+ N Y Times p11 O 19 '24 1150w

"A strange and beautiful volume. For those who are venturesome to the point of preferring their literature unlabeled 'Straws and Prayer-Books' will be a perpetual delight. The book has wit and charm, intellectual audacity and that subtle magic which is the transmuted essence of personality." Ellen Glasgow

+ N Y Tribune p1 N 2 '24 1350w
Outlook 139:117 Ja 21 '25 180w
Springf'd Republican p8 N 22 '24 550w
Springf'd Republican p6 D 6 '24 180w

CABOT, PHILIP. Except ye be born again. 214p $1.50 Macmillan

248 Spiritual life. Conversion 24-24576

Mr. Cabot, tho counted as a successful business man, makes confession of the failure of his life until he found God. His book is the record of his own experience in searching for and finding God, and of the way faith became a controlling force in his life.

"It is a modern-day confession of immense value."

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 15 '24 230w

"There is novelty in the thought of a technique of belief and prayer. It is developed with sincerity and ingenuity."

+ — N Y Times p12 Ja 4 '25 520w

"The whole book is best described by the title of one of its last chapters—'Miracles and Myths.' His conversion may have appeared miraculous to the author; his rationalization of that event seems to be mythical." Woodbridge Riley

— N Y Tribune p5 D 21 '24 1100w

CADMAN, SAMUEL PARKES. Christianity and the state. 370p $2.50 Macmillan

261.7 Church and state 24-7538

In these nine lectures delivered in 1922 at the Pacific School of religion, Berkeley, California, Dr. Cadman makes an historical survey of organized religion in its relations to the political state, concluding with a plea which is at the same time a challenge, to the Christian church to build civilization upon a religious foundation.

Booklist 21:6 O '24

"Dr. S. Parkes Cadman gives a fair, just, all around discussion of this major problem of Christian manhood in our time." E. E. F.

+ Bookm 59:adv Jl '24 70w
Boston Transcript p6 Ag 6 '24 530w
J Religion 4:663 N '24 70w

"Dr. Cadman has written a provocative book which ought to be widely read. His challenge to the churches does not lose in boldness by reason of its admirable temper, nor is there any less need of meeting the challenge because his presentation of it is incomplete. If he does not make it wholly clear how the State is to be made to get on with religion,

CADMAN, S. P.—Continued

he at least leaves the clear impression that it is getting on badly without it, and that both religion and the State need help." W: MacDonald

+ — N Y Times p6 My 18 '24 1750w

"Over this whole field of action and reaction, the industrious and equitable mind of Dr. Cadman has ranged with fruitful results. He has written, as he always writes, a good book. It is not his fault, but the fault of all of us who clamor for his services, that a book, so good, should not have been a classic for all time." P. W. Wilson

+ No Am 219:903 Je '24 800w

"Dr. Cadman would have written better had he been permitted to speak less frequently. His fault is not triviality. Nor is it a diffuse flood of verbiage. To this book one may pay the rare compliment that it is not too long. The trouble is that, for its length, it is too rich in its material. . . Dr. Cadman's reading, his allusions, his array of facts, his antithesis, are at times bewildering in their very abundance." P. W. Wilson

+ Outlook 137:399 Jl 9 '24 1750w

CAIRNS, JOHN ARTHUR ROBERT. Sidelights of London. 308p $3.50 Holt [16s Hutchinson]

914.21 London—Description. Crime and criminals [24-8580]

An English judge sketches the life of London as he watches it from the bench of a metropolitan police court. He writes with pity and understanding of all sorts of offenders who pass thru the courts, of the humor and pathos that mingle there and the manifold dramas that are enacted. Most of the chapters are woven about his police court experiences, but it is not alone from the bench that he observes the life of London. It is the author's hobby to wander thru the streets of the city, to use a bus top as a watch-tower, to linger in parks and churchyards. In all these places he watches and reflects on human nature in its weakness and in its nobility.

"Whatever the faults of a newspaper 'human interest story' it is far more graphic and absorbing than these, though there is no likeness in the two styles. At times, of course, Judge Cairns has things to tell which not only engross for the moment, but which are not easily forgotten."

+ — N Y Times p26 N 2 '24 400w

"Mr. Cairns is an ambitious author, and paints a full, glowing, many-coloured picture of the life of London streets and slums. But we hasten to add that he is a true enthusiast."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p26 Ja 10 '24 460w

CALDWELL, OTIS WILLIAM, and COURTIS, STUART APPLETON. Then and now in education, 1845-1923; a message of encouragement from the past to the present. 400p il $2.20 World bk.

370.973 Education—United States. Boston—Education. Educational surveys 24-2373

"The volume presents a picture of three-quarters of a century of educational progress in the United States. Taking its inspiration from what is probably the first school survey in history, namely, that of the School Committee of the City of Boston in 1845, it tells the threefold story of the evolution of the public-school organization, the realization of the ideals of that almost uncanny prophet, Horace Mann, and the justification of the faith of the American people in their public-school system. The first 160 pages of the book are devoted to a description of the Boston survey of 1845 and a summary of the school conditions in Boston at that time, together with an account of the administering of portions of the survey tests to 40,000 eighth-grade pupils in forty-six states in 1919. An inventory of the Administrative and instructional aspects of education, then and now, reveals point by point the realization or failure of realization of the recommendations made by the Boston grammar and writing school committees and by Horace Mann. Almost without exception, the record of seventy-five years is positive accomplishment. Pages 161-392 are made up of eight appendixes."—El School J

"It is a very thoughtful and scientifically wrought-out comparison and ought to be widely read. Not only the results but the methods used, and the questions and answers reprinted, ought to be of interest and value." W. R. Smith

+ Am J Soc 30:366 N '24 340w

"To the supervisor and teacher this book is one of extreme interest, so thoroughly are the old and new systems contrasted."

+ Boston Transcript p6 F 9 '24 460w

Cleveland p94 D '24

Reviewed by I. W. Howerth

Educ R 67:292 My '24 280w

"Many volumes have been written on the rise of the American school system, but the present work is unique in at least one respect. The evidences of progress have been objectively determined by means of educational measurements, thus rising above the level of opinion. It is the reviewer's belief that every school administrator and every thoughtful school patron can read this fascinating book with profit, gaining thereby added conviction of the fundamental soundness of American educational ideals." G. M. Ruch

+ El School J 24:712 My '24 900w

Reviewed by Agnes de Lima

New Repub 40:sup24 N 12 '24 190w

+ R of Rs 69:336 Mr '24 80w

"The book furnishes inspiration of the right kind—the kind that is based on facts, the kind that gives a genuine basis for faith in the promise of the future. It should be read not only by technically trained educators but by all civic-minded persons who are interested in educational progress. If properly received, it should do much to dispel the fog of ignorance and the senseless prattle about the 'good old days.'" H. Y. McClusky

+ School R 32:471 Je '24 780w

Survey 52:468 Jl 15 '24 120w

CALKINS, EARNEST ELMO. "Louder please!" 260p il $2.50 Atlantic monthly

B or 92 Deafness 24-21591

Under this effective title a deaf man tells the story of his life. Coming at an early age his deafness kept him from fully sharing the life of other boys and determined his education, his friends, his social life and amusements, but it has not prevented him from making a success in his profession of advertising, nor has it in any way embittered him. He has accepted his handicap, developed a philosophy which has stood him in good stead, and ordered his life on the only basis on which he can live it. His autobiography is mellow and even humorous, especially his last chapter on the "technique of being deaf."

Booklist 21:65 N '24

Boston Transcript p4 O 8 '24 120w

Cleveland p95 D '24

"The charm of the book lies in the personal charm of the author, and that is, like everything we value most, something to feel and not to define." Q. H.

+ Ind 113:401 N 15 '24 250w

N Y Times p26 O 19 '24 500w

"Mr. Calkins' modesty gives his life-story an unusual and lingering charm. He writes with a limpid clarity which reminds one of Henri de Regnier or Jules Lemaître. It's curious, isn't it, that well-trained advertising men, when they turn to literature, usually write in the French manner? This is so because the prime requisites of advertisement writing are lucidity and compression." W. E. Woodward

+ N Y Tribune p3 S 21 '24 1300w

"He contrived to form a quiet sense of humor, and this is repeatedly given play in unexpected places throughout the book." Hugo Sonnenschein

+ N Y World p7e S 21 '24 320w

"This is a most unusual autobiography. The humor and occasional pathos which characterize the book are never wholly absent from the author's references to his deafness."

R of Rs 70:446 O '24 80w

St Louis p385 N '24

"He has written a very interesting addition to the too small list of really diverting biography."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:141 S 27 '24 500w

"If all men, or even the majority of those who attempt to write about their own lives could do it with the cleverness, the humor and restraint which Mr. Calkins exhibits in this narrative, many people would desert the reading of fiction."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 O 6 '24 450w

"Although Louder Please is a book of peculiar and special interest to the deafened, its appeal is by no means limited to them. Advertising men and writers will find in it wise counsel as well as entertainment." G: B. Hotchkiss

+ Survey 53:299 D 1 '24 680w

CALKINS, RAYMOND. Christian church in the modern world. 227p $1.75 Macmillan

260 Church 24-13481

This book is addressed to that large group of people, in every community, who are not attached to any church. These people are often workers in outside movements which they consider have a better claim to loyalty than the church as they see it and know it. The writer, while himself acknowledging a deep faith in the church, deals frankly with the faults which are standing in the way of other people's allegiance to it. He then goes on to show what are some of its strong points and how its social outlook may be widened, its preaching and worship improved and church unity furthered.

"States but hardly tries to solve problems. It is frank and kindly, as well as candid, and says things worth saying, but without particular force."

— + Springf'd Republican p10 Je 24 '24 300w

CAMBRIDGE ancient history; ed. by J. B.
2 Bury; S. A. Cook; and F. E. Adcock. v 2; The Egyptian and Hittite empires to C. 1000 B.C. 751p $9 Macmillan [35s Cambridge].

930 History, Ancient

In volume one the history of the Egyptian and Babylonian civilizations were brought down to the beginning of the sixteenth century, B.C. Six centuries are included in the present volume, covering the history of the Egyptian and Hittite empires to 1000 B.C.

"Fascinating volume." A. J. Toynbee

+ Nation and Ath 35:668 Ag 30 '24 1500w

"In the nature of the case there is lack of finality in evidence and interpretation, but laymen and adept alike will long find these two volumes indispensable."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p533 S 4 '24 1350w

CAMERON, MRS CHARLOTTE (WALES-
2 ALMY). Wanderings in south-eastern seas. 269p il $5 Small [15s Unwin]

919 East (Far East)—Description and travel. Polynesia—Description and travel [24-13147]

"From Singapore, 'Gateway of the East,' [the author's] wanderings radiate to Johore, Malacca, Borneo, Labuan, Java, Friendly Islands, Norfolk, Haapai, the coral islands of Tongatabu, American Samoa and Tasmania." (Boston Transcript) "She hob-nobs with every one from Sultans to market-women; she tells us about the knife-dances of Dyaks and about the mutilation of hypnotized devotees; she sums up—and lucidly—the story of Stamford Raffles and of the Brookes of Sarawak, and reports with the same zest and reference to authority the experiences of minor notabilities such as Mr. Eu Tong Sen, a rich Chinese of Singapore." (The Times [London] Lit Sup)

"A pleasant and somewhat gossipy account." F. B.

Boston Transcript p6 N 12 '24 850w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p148 Mr 6 '24 300w

CAMERON, MARGARET (MRS HARRISON CASS LEWIS). Johndover. 483p $2 Harper

24-8655

"Johndover, the silent, kindly old hermit of Santa Barbara was once Ned Proctor of Massachusetts, who unwittingly killed the father of the girl he loved. Later he escaped from prison and fled to the gold fields of California. In this mellow old philosopher the willful, daredevil Judith—beautiful of course, and a disillusioned widow—has centered her faltering faith in man. Enter the hero, Fred Barclay of New England, and the nephew of Ned Proctor's victim. He promptly falls in love with Judith and by devious ways he suspects and confirms the identity of Johndover. These complications lead young Mr. Barclay into agonies of spirit, for Puritanical justice demands that he deliver up an escaped criminal regardless of the heavy casualties among the personal affections involved. [There are further complications] but on page 479 a Massachusetts pardon arrives for Johndover which absolves Mr. Barclay's Puritan conscience and everybody is happy."—N Y Times

Booklist 21:26 O '24

"It is a delightful, absorbing story. 'Johndover' has all the charm which comes from a moving story, vividly told, as well as the grace lent by a delightful heroine." S. L. R.

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 3 '24 580w

Cleveland p51 Jl '24

"[The author] has an interesting theme artificially constructed and superficially treated."

+ — N Y Times p24 My 4 '24 450w

Reviewed by Bruce Gould

N Y Tribune p24 Je 15 '24 200w

"There are situations that make a hardened realist turn romantic."

+ N Y World p6e My 11 '24 150w

Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 27 '24 300w

Wis Lib Bul 20:148 Je '24

CAMPBELL, MRS OLWEN WARD. Shelley and the unromantics. 307p il $5 Scribner [16s Methuen]

B or 92 Shelley, Percy Bysshe

"This book, the result of exhaustive research by a woman with an analytical mind is a criticism of Shelley and of the few persons who held an intimate place in his life. Unlike former biographers of this unique genius who either worshiped or condemned him blindly, thus misleading their readers, Mrs. Campbell sets forth bare facts and permits us to draw our own conclusions as to the character of 'the most discussed poet of the past hundred years.' "—N Y Times

Reviewed by J: Donelson

Bookm 59:741 Ag '24 20w

Boston Transcript p1 My 17 '24 850w

Reviewed by O. W. Firkins

Lit R p884 Jl 12 '24 250w

"On the side of information, this book is a useful addition to Shelley literature. As an interpretation of Shelley as a thinker, a man, a poet, it continues the old confusions and darkens counsel." Ludwig Lewisohn

— + Nation 118:649 Je 4 '24 1500w

"Mrs. Campbell's book about Shelley is a very good one; neither effusive panegyric, nor shallow patronage, nor pedantic blame, but a serious and passionate essay towards com-

CAMPBELL, O. W.—Continued
prehension. But for that very reason the book is as much concerned with the authoress as with the poet. Such a book is difficult to review fairly since it raises controversies any one of which might fill volumes. And yet it is not, as it so easily might have been, superficial." G. L. Dickinson
+ — Nation and Ath 34:703 F 16 '24 1250w

"Shelley remains still more or less of a riddle, and we welcome therefore Mrs. Campbell's book, which is probably the most confident and resolute attempt at a solution ever made." E. E. K.
+ New Statesman 22:670 Mr 15 '24 1700w

"A most valuable criticism. It is a pleasure to read an unprejudiced chronicle such as this one." Ryan Walker
+ N Y Times p13 My 4 '24 1500w

"'Shelley and the Unromantics' is rich, weighty, erudite, comprehensive and slightly chaotic. . . A critical biography of the first order. It is hard to praise it adequately without seeming extravagant." Isabel Paterson
+ N Y Tribune p22 My 11 '24 850w

Reviewed by F. V. Keys
No Am 219:908 Je '24 1800w

"To write an original and entertaining book of three hundred pages about Shelley at this time of day is a difficult task, and it is very much to the credit of Mrs. Campbell's individuality of mind and incisiveness of speech that she has successfully accomplished it."
+ Sat R 137:133 F 9 '24 300w

"This is an exceedingly interesting and able book." J. St Loe Strachey
+ — Spec 132:204 F 9 '24 2150w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p51 Ja 24 '24 1650w

CAMPBELL, ROY. Flaming terrapin. 83p $2 Dial press [4s 6d J. Cape]
821 24-21609

A poem in rhymed verse symbolizing the victorious spirit which is manifested in every springtime and birth as the huge terrapin which guided Noah and his sons to safety across the flood.

"Mr. Campbell's verse has a wild unrestrained vigor and strength about it such as has not recently been seen in modern poetry . . . He is at his best when dealing with the elemental forces of nature, etc., for it is only at such times that his subject matter can match the wild splendor of his wording." J. W. K.
+ Boston Transcript p4 S 27 '24 700w

"Even if he seems now and then to be lashing himself forward with his thongs of epithets, one is left justifiably amazed. It is something, after all, to have the power to amaze." Hamish Miles
Dial 77:423 N '24 1100w

"The difficulty with 'The Flaming Terrapin' is that the synthesis is not sufficiently profound, although the vision is resplendent and the song resounding. As it is, he has done a piece of work of indubitable power. One may neglect obvious flaws: the facile allegorical passages, the unnecessarily confused mythology, the crowding metaphors, too heavy for their frame, the abuse of the meter. One dare not neglect the gift of a man who sees the waves mounting into the night." Babette Deutsch
+ — Lit R p4 S 6 '24 1000w

"'It would be easy for me to pull the poem to pieces, to quote passages inspired by extravagance of manner, and it is true that a cold and correct taste may be repelled by the poetic rhetoric, and by the naive inconsequence of the Argument. But the beauties are so many, the poet's imagination so daring, his descriptive powers so fresh and triumphant, his imagery so strong and often so delicate, that the very immaturity and wildness of his Muse will interest the discerning." E: Garnett
+ — Nation and Ath 35:323 Je 7 '24 1100w

"Mr. Campbell has not learned the proper differentiation of values and the balance of mood necessary in a long poem. Instead of varying his subject he has traveled for eighty pages through his theme, composing it all on the same monstrous motif. Terrific image after terrific image astounds the mind and the impact gradually disintegrates it." H. S. Gorman
— N Y Times p14 S 14 '24 1000w

"'The Flaming Terrapin' is not a poem to be observed with a microscope. Rhetoricians will find a lack of variety in the sentence structure—an over-use of the conjunction 'and'; sentences so long that it is sometimes hard to remember what the pronouns refer to. But step back from the poem a little distance, and its glories begin to stand out in their proper perspective." Rolfe Humphries
+ — N Y Tribune p4 S 21 '24 900w

"Without unnecessary superlatives, 'tis a fine upstanding, vigorous poem of goodly length, and in excellent rhymed verse at that." Arthur Guiterman
+ Outlook 138:730 D 31 '24 420w

Spec 132:714 My 3 '24 100w

"Unfortunately the poem, as a whole, is not quite so impressive as it is in parts. In the first place, its central notion is not sufficiently sublime or original really to tax the poet's powers of expression, as the powers of a great poet are always taxed. And in the second place, Mr. Campbell is always noisy, always expresses his meaning by exaggeration; and in the end he really does deafen one by the din. One becomes immune to his effectiveness." R. Hughes
— + Spec 132:98 Jl 19 '24 680w

"As is inevitable in an early work, there are here and there images which have served their time and slip through the poet's guard by his very familiarity with them. We find, too, that when certain rhymes recur they sometimes bring with them images only partly made over. These defects are not inherent but due to immaturity, and they are not pronounced enough to prevent this poem from being, in substance, in style, and in the vigorous gifts it reveals, as original and interesting a work as a young poet may produce."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p337 My 29 '24 1000w

CANBY, HENRY SEIDEL. Definitions; second series. 308p $2 Harcourt
814 Literature. Criticism. American literature—History and criticism 24-22299

A second series of essays in contemporary criticism by the editor of the Saturday Review of Literature. The essays reflect the literature of the last three years—its tendencies, prejudices and absurdities. Dr Canby studies books in no dogmatic or censorious spirit but with the will to understand what their authors are trying to say.

Booklist 21:102 D '24

Bookm 60:343 N '24 90w

"A book worth reading. In it is much to think about." K. S.
+ Boston Transcript p4 O 8 '24 630w

"Dr. Canby's approach to literature is as a reflection of life, and, as one would conclude, he is quite as deeply concerned with the stuff of which this literature is made as he is with the manner of the making. And as this is, undoubtedly, the approach to literature of the great body of readers, Dr. Canby's somewhat sociological studies (if he will permit the word) should awaken a ready response." P. A. Hutchison
+ N Y Times p23 O 5 '24 280w

Outlook 138:379 N 5 '24 200w

"Admirably fashioned as they are, these little essays are rather too much concerned about attitudes and too little about specific questions of art to be of high value as criticism."
— + Springf'd Republican p6 N 17 '24 200w

CANDEE, MRS HELEN CHURCHILL (HUNGERFORD). Angkor the magnificent, the wonder city of ancient Cambodia. 303p il $5 Stokes

915.96 Angkor, Cambodia 24-23819

The famous buried city of Cambodia, relic of the ancient Khmer civilization is the scene of Mrs Candee's travel book. This civilization reached its highest development in the period between 800 and 1250 A.D. during which time its great city and famous temple were built. The city within whose walls a million people once lived, was suddenly blotted out and its history must now be read chiefly from the stones and carvings of the temple of Angkor-Vat, the best preserved example of Khmer architecture. The author describes the carvings in considerable detail, illustrating with photographs. She also tells something of the people who inhabit the present Cambodia.

Reviewed by Sidney Greenbie
Bookm 60:501 D '24 240w

Ind 113:409 N 13 '24 50w

N Y World p8e N 2 '24 520w

St Louis p415 D '24

"Mrs. Candee has a fine descriptive sense, if a slightly jerky style, and she has made the first part of her journey stand out in great blotches of color and movement. You feel the East in her swift sketch of Saigon. She gives you, sharply, the inexorable quality of occidental domination." Raymond Holden
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:200 O 18 '24 1050w

"Those who seek novelties such as buried cities in their travels, will find the illustrations numerous and the narrative light and lyric."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7a O 26 '24 200w

CANNAN, GILBERT. House of prophecy. 311p $2 Seltzer [7s 6d T. Butterworth]

24-21668

"Those who are acquainted with the previous history of Melian Stokes, the philosopher, young Penrose Kennedy, his whilom secretary, Sembal the Jew, and Matty Boscawen will now find the data of the events somewhere about 1918-19: Melian Stokes out of prison and very soon successor to the title and estates of old Lord Rusholme, Sembal the protégé of a fabulously rich Mrs. Nathan, who is educating him to manage millions and marry her daughter when divorced, Penrose Kennedy once more Melian's secretary, no longer at Cambridge but at ancestral Stalbridge, and Matty, having promised to marry Melian, in love with all three and at the end a matrimonial defaulter."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Boston Transcript p6 D 27 '24 290w

Reviewed by H. J. Seligmann
Lit R p3 O 25 '24 1000

"Although unsatisfactory in its lack of emotional value, the book, by its satire, occasional bitterness, and post-war philosophy, has compensating interests."
— + Nation and Ath 35:60 Ap 12 '24 150w

N Y Times p8 O 12 '24 720w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p8e O 19 '24 130w

"This is certainly not one of Mr. Cannan's best books, though even here the uncommon quality of his thinking shows in places, and he has some of the old touches of romantic beauty." Gerald Gould
— + Sat R 137:392 Ap 12 '24 400w

Spec 132:720 My '24 200w

"Mr. Cannan, though clever, is not very original. Samuel Butler used to be his guide; now Romain Rolland and Claudel seem to be buzzing in duel about his pen."
The Times [London] Lit Sup p174 Mr 20 '24 540w

CANNAN, GILBERT. Letters from a distance. 169p $2.50 Seltzer [10s 6d Secker]

916 Africa—Description and travel. Social conditions

"These letters, addressed to an imaginary correspondent, by name Eusebius, and mailed from almost every outpost of civilization in Asia and Africa, express poignantly the nature of a man who wishes to escape every vestige of civilization, yet cannot escape his own broodings on it."—N Y World

"He is destructive in his criticism, sardonic, possessed of that biting humor which preys occasionally on its owner's sense of justice. Of course he writes cleverly and sharply. Who could fail at the task with so large a whetstone, and so adequate a blade. These letters are all clever, but they lack depth and sympathy." D. F. G.
+ — Boston Transcript p4 My 10 '24 300w

"These papers form a stimulating series of pictures, being the literary fruits of a pilgrimage of readjustment."
Dial 76:561 Je '24 60w

"Knocking about in queer corners of the earth after the war, Mr. Cannan exposed his mind like a sensitized plate, and thus made a record—not alone of his own impressions—but of the shifting panorama of world bewilderment through which he passed. These papers are graceful in form and rich in observation; they reflect the irony and the despair of the times."
+ Nation 118:539 My 7 '24 70w

"Mr. Cannan's letters, principally from Africa, are spoiled by their exacerbated egotism, which turns indignation into irritation and criticism into complaint." H. J. Massingham
— Nation and Ath 34:sup408 D 8 '23 60w

Reviewed by H: B. Fuller
New Repub 40:184 O 15 '24 1000w

"If only Mr. Cannan would harangue us properly like a prophet we might be inspired to work all the harder. We might still throw stones at him; but it would be because of our deepest convictions, and not, as now, merely from annoyance. His disagreeable nagging only makes us want to be rude to him."
— New Statesman 22:190 N 17 '23 200w

"He reports his findings with graphic clarity. It is no blind retreat; the wit of the satirist flashes. His social philosophy is accumulated, sharpened and unified. An entertaining book, with no end of ideas and provocative, probing thought." Edwin Clark
+ N Y Times p14 Ap 13 '24 600w

"His 'Letters' combine sincerity and urbanity and give, in the midst of speculations, simple pictures of an African countryside that are concrete and strangely pure." Eva Goldbeck
+ N Y Tribune p22 Je 8 '24 450w

N Y World p6e Mr 30 '24 170w

CANNAN, GILBERT. Sembal. 309p $2 Seltzer [7s 6d Hutchinson]

24-9268

Sembal is a Jew set in alien surroundings in London and his story is one of racial conflict. From an unhappy, impoverished childhood he is rescued by his rich cousin, Mrs. Nathan, who worships brains and is amused by Sembal's fierce quest for knowledge. He goes to the university, takes his degree in economics and becomes an apostle of revolt. He attaches himself to a group of the intelligentsia who oppose the war, and is sent to jail, but soon freed thru the intervention of an M. P. to whom he has made himself a necessity. Whatever he does there is always conflict and always the prejudice against his race to combat. When, at the close of the book, Mrs. Nathan proposes his marriage to her daughter Thelma, the prospect is by no means inspiring to him but he accepts it like the other inevitable accidents of his life.

Dial 77:346 O '24 120w

CANNAN, GILBERT—Continued

"'Sembal' is not for the t. b. m. It is too provocative of thought and too unsatisfying as to solution to be of value to the casual reader. In brief: 'Sembal' consists of one masterfully depicted and analyzed character, and from the standpoint of serious thought is worth while; but it is not a book for those who seek light reading." S. M.

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p7 Je 8 '24 310w

"It is a serious even a portentous business, and the seeker after mere entertainment in his fiction might as well be warned off. Mr. Cannan is no trifler; he demands the most careful attention and, despite his indubitable skill and many enlivening flashes, the thing makes hard reading." H. L. Pangborn

+ — Lit R p853 Je 28 '24 780w

"An analysis of such a character is bound to be a little repellent, but the book is one of undoubted power and importance." J. W. Krutch

+ — Nation 119:21 Jl 2 '24 880w

"His latest portrait, Francis Sembal, B. A., son of a French Jew, with a remarkably subtle intellect, bound to a näive and passionate nature, is perhaps the most adroit portrayal that Cannan has yet characterized. This is a bitter, decisive, sharply satirical story of modern conflict, a fascinating, solid achievement, a novel of architechonic structure realized with a validity that is far from common."

+ N Y Times p8 My 11 '24 920w

Outlook 137:480 Jl 23 '24 400w

CANNAN, JOANNA. Misty valley. 11-286p $2 Doran [7s 6d Unwin]

"Claire, the daughter of two artists, who has since her childhood floated in an atmosphere of rose-madder and the quaint flowers of the English countryside, wishes to retain her love of beauty and her urge to create it even after she has become the wife of a young, well-meaning, but bourgeois Captain. The inevitable clash follows. From the misty valley of romance Claire is flung into the slough of reality, with a mother-in-law anxious for her son's well-being, and a home where frumpy furniture battles with artistic baubles. She asserts her right to follow her art by running away to France to study under a prominent artist. Upon her return to England she finds a contrite and sympathetic husband, for there was love between them. It was only understanding that was lacking."—N Y World

---

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 19 '24 400w

"Here is a young British author, unknown and unheralded, who has made a most interesting contribution to the current literature of youth. She has produced a very young book which is clever, even brilliant, without being smart, which can separate rebellion from caddishness and art from pose, and this is something to be pardonably enthusiastic about, whatever its shortcomings from a technical point of view. . . The author is blessed with a fresh and brilliant touch, but she has some persistent mannerisms and occasional lapses into very botchy writing" H. H. Smith

+ — Lit R p703 Ap 26 '24 600w

"There is no doubt but what there is a degree of skill and charm in the writing of this book, although there are irritating mannerisms in the use of language, affected sentences opening with a verb such as 'Came a day—,' and a sensed unreality in the characters that weakens the gentle technique through which they assume their personalities. But the feel of the country is present."

+ — N Y Times p19 Ap 20 '24 650w

"It is a first novel of the highest promise, finely conceived, for the most part admirably executed, and with some descriptive passages written in an English approaching perfection of beauty and felicity." W. N. C. Carlton

+ N Y Tribune p24 Je 15 '24 950w

N Y World p6e My 11 '24 220w

Spec 130:372 Mr 3 '24 120w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p30 Ja 11 '23 140w

CANNON, T. G. Old Spode. p308 il $5 Stokes ² [18s Laurie]

738 Pottery. Spode family 24-30750

Finely illustrated book devoted to the beautiful English porcelain coming from the famous Staffordshire pottery founded by Josiah Spode, carried on by his son and grandson and continued under the present firm name of Copeland & Sons. Introductory chapters are given to the contributions of Josiah Spode, first, second and third, to the history of English pottery, to the potters' marks on old Spode ware and to the prices paid at auction for various articles from 1902 to 1924. The greater part of the book is occupied with plates illustrating specimens of the author's fine collection of old Spode.

"A monograph was to be expected—and welcomed. It cannot be said that Mr. Cannon has supplied the need in a very satisfactory manner. His extremely exiguous text does not seem to embody any original research. No light at all is thrown on the character of the earlier wares; no attempt is made to arrive at a chronological sequence of the wares in general; and the list of marks is equally lacking in practical utility. It is only the illustrations that justify the publication of the book."

— + Nation and Ath 36:348 N 29 '24 200w

"Mr. Cannon will set many readers on the search for the numerous pieces of good Spode which are still lurking in unconsidered corners, and his account of the various marks and prices of good specimens will help them not to be deceived."

Sat R 138:474 N 8 '24 170w

CAPART, JEAN. Tomb of Tutankhamen; tr. from the French by Warren R. Dawson. 93p il $1.50 Stokes [4s 6d Allen & U.]

913.32 Egypt—Antiquities. Tut-ankh-amen

Professor Capart, who is a well-known Egyptologist and curator of the Brussels museum was present at the opening of the tomb. He describes the historical setting of Tut-ankh-amen's time, the experience of entering the tomb and the objects that were found there.

Booklist 21:64 N '24

"Hardly worth reprinting."

— New Statesman 22:310 D 15 '23 170w

"His little book is full of information charmingly put."

+ N Y Tribune p18 F 17 '24 100w

"He has most worthily described what he saw with the pen not only of an Egyptologist but also of an artist in words. His delight in the beautiful workmanship and the exquisite designs of the precious objects discovered is so genuine, that if he is at times a little more flamboyant than a more splenetic Englishman would be, it can readily be forgiven him."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p791 N 22 '23 220w

CARLYLE, JANE BAILLIE (WELSH) (MRS THOMAS CARLYLE). Letters to her family, 1839-1863; ed. by Leonard Huxley. 390p il $5 Doubleday [21s Murray]

B or 92 Carlyle, Jane Baillie (Welsh) [24-13714]

A fortunate discovery has brought to light 220 more letters of Mrs. Carlyle, most of them addressed to her two cousins, Helen and Jeannie Welsh, and belonging chiefly to the decade between 1842 and 1852. They are intensely personal and intimate, filled with herself, her troubles, her friends and visitors and written with the charm and naturalness which characterize all her letters. Portraits. Index.

Booklist 21:22 O '24

"Taken at any point, they have a quick, dashing descriptive power, and a vividness of characterization which an eternity cannot impair. They are not 'literary'; their chief instrument of punctuation is the dash; they were not intended for posterity. But they have preserved forever in lively and effective contrast the simple Spartan material existence of the establishment at 5 Cheyne Row, and the intellectual brilliance of the circle which had its centre there." G. H. Carson

+ Bookm 59:736 Ag '24 950w

Cleveland p79 S '24

Reviewed by G. H. Carson

Int Bk R p118 Ja '25 480w

Reviewed by T. L. Masson

Lit R p854 Je 28 '24 1050w

"It is a superb windfall, for the book contains some of the best letters that Mrs. Carlyle ever wrote. Most of them were written to her cousin, Jeannie Welsh ('Babbie'), for whom she had, perhaps, a deeper and more intimate affection, half sisterly and half maternal, than for anyone else. It is this affection and intimacy which make the present collection so extraordinarily revealing, for she writes to Babbie 'at white heat' whatever comes into her mind, with scarcely a veil of reticence." Leonard Woolf

+ Nation and Ath 35:206 My 17 '24 1100w

"When we come to consider the actual contents of this last contribution to Mrs. Carlyle's correspondence, there is happily no need to say anything more than that they are as good, as witty, as wicked, as heart-rending as we well knew beforehand they were bound to be. Happily this volume ends before Mrs. Carlyle's really 'dark days' began, when ill-health, sleeplessness and the morphia habit clouded her mind, and upset the balance of her piercing intelligence. The whole book swims in Life." Augustine Birrell

+ New Statesman 23:226 My 31 '24 1750w

"There is a remarkable effect of completeness about this collection of Mrs. Carlyle's letters, considering that they are only a fragment of her voluminous correspondence. They make an excellently rounded volume, containing full length and very intimate portraits of the Carlyles." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p24 Ag 3 '24 1900w

"There is little, even in literature, to equal Jane Carlyle's fortitude in her difficult circumstances, both as the wife of a genius and the slave of ill-health. Her letters to her family are documents of poignant suffering though lighted with humor, wit and seemingly lighthearted expansiveness." F. V. Roman

+ N Y World p7e Je 15 '24 780w

St Louis p385 N '24

"Dr. Huxley has edited [these letters] with exact though unobtrusive scholarship, and with a restraint which renders his admirable volume a model of what such books should be but so rarely are. Indeed, the outstanding merit of this new collection is that the letters are for the first time allowed to speak for themselves; that one's attention is not torn and jagged by the dead brambles of the Froude controversy; and that the introduction, the notes, the illustrations and the index merely delight and enlighten, and do not, as heretofore, enrage one into opposition." Harold Nicolson

+ Spec 132:sup794 My 17 '24 1500w

Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 27 '24 1100w

"Jane Carlyle keeps nothing back. She paints herself, her husband, her servants, her house, her visitors, her friends and her enemies. The mesmeric force of her personality, of which this volume gives many evidences, seems to have saturated the ancient leaves (torn, many of them, from the tradesmen's books, to eke out the want of notepaper in the economical Chelsea household), and to radiate with undiminished force through the printed page."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p283 My 8 '24 2000w

CARMICHAEL, MONTGOMERY. Christopher
2 and Cressida. 211p $2 Macmillan [5s MacDonald & E.]

24-30447

"Mr. Carmichael's novel is in a measure a sequel to his earlier 'The Solitaries of the Sambuca,' although it is much more the Romeo and Juliet story, done in an atmosphere of religious mysticism. It tells of a love affair between Christopher Mavourez, descendant of a long line of English noblemen and mystics, and the lovely Cressida, rather a shadowy figure, but charming, nevertheless. They were ill-starred lovers; life dealt harshly with them and the union for which they hoped did not come until death. Told in the first person with Christopher as narrator, the story is curiously interesting in spite of its unworldliness and its removal from the every-dayness of contemporary life." —Lit R

"It is a book altogether different from the run of fiction, almost medieval in atmosphere. Its primary appeal will be to followers of the Catholic faith, who will understand the deeply religious spirit of its protagonist; others may find it irritating. Mr. Carmichael writes well, with a sure grasp of his story and a good building up of atmospheric effect." H. B.

+ — Lit R p10 Ja 3 '25 170w

N Y Times p16 Ja 4 '25 560w

"A plot, indeed, it has, though antique and simple, and its characters are anything but puppets designed to give voice to religious or moral ideas. They are few, and they may not be portrayed with the complexity and eagerness for detail that mark the psychological novelist; but they live, with a touch of the rudeness and innocence of heroes and heroines in epic or ballad poetry."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p728 N 13 '24 450w

CARP, AUGUSTUS, pseud. Augustus Carp, Esq.; being the autobiography of a really good man. 274p il $2 Houghton

"The really good man has just been immortalized in the biography of one of his genus, 'Augustus Carp, Esq.' It will improve erring man to read of the efforts of this really good gentleman to reform a wicked world in a dissolute age; 'when mature women, the mothers of unhappy children enter the sea in one-piece bathing costumes; and when married men, the heads of the households, prefer the flicker of the cinematograph to the Athanasian creed.' . . Augustus Carp battles like a soldier inspired with divine zeal, and how he succeeds the reader will discover by reading his candid and most upright confessions."—N Y World

---

"His story is a comic classic of the season." I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Jl 30 '24 650w

"One of the best examples of sustained satire we have ever read." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p915 Jl 26 '24 500w

"In several spots the book is undeniably entertaining. Yet it will fail to appeal to a large number of people in this country because of the fact that so many Americans feel that a proselytizing, evangelizing, professionally good person is simply not a laughable figure but rather pathetic—and very annoying. . . The illustrations by Robin, on the other hand, are uproariously superb, and all too few."

— + Nation 119:294 S 17 '24 150w

"The book reflects little wise or critical comment on contemporary British society, shows no real sense of character, its humor is elephantine, and fails as completely as a diversion as it fails as a satire."

— N Y Times p18 Jl 20 '24 450w

Reviewed by F. V. Roman

N Y World p8e Jl 13 '24 100w

CARPENTER, FRANK GEORGE. The Alps, the Danube and the Near East. (Carpenter's world travels) 310p il $4 Doubleday

914 Europe—Description and travel 24-20629

In the latest volume of the World travel series Mr Carpenter visits Switzerland, Italy, Czechoslovakia, Austria, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Greece, Bulgaria, Rumania and Turkey. As in the other volumes of the series the descriptions are written up from notes taken on the spot, and admirably illustrated with photographs.

Booklist 21:106 D '24

"There are many photographs, unusually well chosen, and the book may safely be recommended to young and old as authoritative and interesting."

+ Lit R p15 S 13 '24 180w

"All things are regarded through American eyes; and all manners, customs, local ordinances and celebrated scenes are carefully compared with American manners, customs, ordinances and scenes. But Carpenter is companionable, friendly in his long chat, and certainly is not boring after the fashion of the summer tourist. He was an expert photographer too, which adds immeasurably to the flavor of his books." M. M.

+ — N Y World p8e Ag 24 '24 350w

St Louis p415 D '24

Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 24 '24 360w

CARPENTER, FRANK GEORGE. Australia. New Zealand, and some islands of the South seas. (Carpenter's world travels) 294p il $4 Doubleday

919.4 Australia—Description and travel. New Zealand—Description and travel. South Sea islands 24-10230

In the present volume of Carpenter's World travel series he reaches the Australian continent, New Zealand, Tasmania, the Samoan, Tonga and Fiji islands, Thursday island and New Guinea. He describes scenery, peoples, industries and resources and social conditions, with 126 illustrations from photographs.

Cleveland p63 Jl '24

Reviewed by S. F. Reavis

Int Bk R p529 Je '24 80w

N Y World p6e Ap 20 '24 60w

CARPENTER, FRANK GEORGE. Lands of ² the Andes and the desert. (Carpenter's world travels) 285p il $4 Doubleday

918 South America—Description and travel. Andes 24-25530

Mr Carpenter's travels in this book cover the northwestern part of South America, in the high plateau of the Andes and the long desert of the western coast. The countries included are Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Bolivia. There are 104 illustrations from photographs.

Booklist 21:106 D '24

Lit R p11 D 27 '24 170w

"Even if the other books in the complete series should fail in all-round excellence, this volume on the lands of the Andes and the desert justifies itself as a competent piece of work. It has the lure of the land of the llamas."

+ N Y Tribune p15 D 21 '24 130w

CARPENTER, FRANK GEORGE. Mexico. (Carpenter's world travels) 287p il $4 Doubleday

917.2 Mexico—Description and travel 24-6666

Like the others of the author's World travel series the book is a readable, lavishly illustrated account of the country and its people. He does not confine himself to descriptions of sights seen in Mexico but links up history with the places described and gives some account of customs, industries, religion, etc.

"A timely and interesting account."

+ Cleveland p37 My '24

"While he seldom gets away from the beaten track, he finds much along that beaten track that the ordinary tourist misses." S. F. Reavis

+ Int Bk R p528 Je '24 140w

"Although this book is somewhat tinged with the 'Listen, my children,' style, it still conveys something of the charm and lure of the land of manana. As always, the illustrations are lavishly provided and in every way enhance the value and appeal of the book." E. W. C.

+ — Lit R p845 Je 21 '24 150w

"The volume is intelligent and interesting and makes a point Americans should consider. The country is a 'land as picturesque and as full of strange customs, strange sights and strange peoples as any in Europe.' "

+ N Y World p6e Ap 13 '24 180w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:331 Je '24

CARR, HERBERT WILDON. Scientific approach to philosophy. 278p $4 (12s) Macmillan

104 Philosophy

Philosophical essays and reviews mostly reprinted from magazines. Partial contents: Scientific approach to philosophy; Philosophy and history; The future of Bergson's philosophy; Why the mind seems to be and yet cannot be produced by the brain; Einstein's theory and philosophy; The metaphysical aspects of relativity; Descartes and the rise of modern philosophy.

"The author's effort to connect philosophy with history seems inadequate. But that Professor Carr goes a long way in this direction must be admitted." E. N.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ag 16 '24 650w

"The most important thing in modern thought is the remarriage of science and philosophy, and it is this idea that the more or less disjointed papers of Professor Wildon Carr's new book all serve in greater or less degree to illustrate." J. L. Benvenisti

— + Nation and Ath 35:518 Jl 19 '24 550w

New Statesman 24:86 O 25 '24 700w

"Professor Wildon Carr is both lucid and learned—a combination so rare as to give a special significance to such a collection of essays as this, and to invite the enthusiastic attention of the amateur as well as the respectful scrutiny of the professional philosopher."

+ Sat R 138:217 Ag 30 '24 650w

Reviewed by C. E. M. Joad

Spec 133:sup550 O 18 '24 1350w

"The particular excellence of Professor Carr's book is that it shows us the different starting points of different philosophies and leaves us to take our choice, as it were."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p548 S 11 '24 1150w

CARRICK, ALICE VAN LEER. Collector's luck in France. 207p il $2.50 Atlantic monthly

749 Collectors and collecting 24-24858

Mrs Carrick spent months riding her favorite hobby in France and this profusely illustrated book tells her adventures. Through Paris, its byways, quais and fairs, in Tours, Rouen and elsewhere she searched for antiques and she tells the reader what he may expect to find and where to go to find it. Prices are given too, not only for the articles Mrs. Carrick bought but for those she saw and thought someone else might like to buy. An appendix gives a list of antiquity shops which she recommends, with their addresses.

Booklist 21:140 Ja '25

"One does not need to be a collector to enjoy this little account of a ramble in France. The enthusiasm of the writer is contagious, the charm of her style opens to the reader beguiling possibilities of adventures awaiting him. To the tourist who does not wish to do the regular tourist things it has an eloquent appeal, and it can be recommended as a wholesome escape from the usual guide book type of literature of travel, or the hackneyed book of antiques." G. H. S.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 7 '25 1350w

"As gay and colorful in its striped nauve and cardinal jacket as it is enthusiastic and zestful in its text, Mrs. Carrick's new book is a refreshment at once to the eye and mind."

+ N Y Times p21 N 2 '24 400w

N Y World p8e N 16 '24 50w

CARTWRIGHT, CHARLES E. Tale of our ^{2} merchant ships. 275p $3 Dutton

387 Merchant marine—United States

This is a history of the American merchant marine from the earliest times to the present. Beginning with an account of the first ships of which we have any knowledge, the book traces briefly the development of the arts of shipbuilding and navigation, before turning to American maritime history. Chapters are included on the mariners of Salem, on the Atlantic ports and shipyards, packet lines, New England whalemen, clipper ships and war-time ships. The illustrations are from drawings by the author.

"Once he recovers from his archæology his book becomes readable and entertaining; the chapters on the mariners of Salem, seamanship aboard sailing vessels and the seaboard cities being first rate." H: Beston

+ — N Y Tribune p11 Ja 11 '25 190w

"Mr. Cartwright's volume is a brisk attempt to survey the history of navigation at sea, a field much gone over, but in which his excellent drawings refresh the interest."

+ N Y World p8e Ja 11 '25 150w

CASE, SHIRLEY JACKSON. Social origins of Christianity. 263p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press [12s 6d Cambridge univ. press]

270.1 Church history—Primitive and early church 23-18235

"Dr. Case aims to present the actual social experiences and religious problems of the people who become Christian and to demonstrate that Christianity made its appeal and developed its own type by satisfying these social needs better than any local cult or Oriental mystery religion. . . Following a recent tendency of social history, Dr. Case defines his method as an attempt to depict 'the history of ancient Christianity in terms of an evolving social experience in the realm of religious interests on the part of the people who constituted the new movement.' He would put himself thus in the social situation of a citizen of the old empire and discover why he found Christianity satisfying and how his appropriation of it shaped Christianity itself."—Am Hist R

"The exposition suffers somewhat from its brevity and generality but even more by using forms of expression which seem to attribute to religious leaders the attitude of self-conscious sociologists. The procedure of past men had sociological effects but a consciousness of such values did not determine their action. . . The reader will have his reservations and he may think that 'social' is an overworked word, but he will nevertheless be edified and stimulated by this interesting discussion." F. A. Christie

+ — Am Hist R 29:535 Ap '24 600w

Reviewed by L: Wallis

Am J Soc 30:228 S '24 660w

"Professor Case is always clear and interesting; he has historical imagination and a singular faculty of seizing the relevant issues in a complicated process. . . He has defended his thesis with much force and ability and with all his accustomed wealth of learning. His book, we venture to predict, will mark a new departure in the treatment of early Christian history. Instead of the dreary catalogue of heresies and controversies and councils to which we have been accustomed, we shall expect to have the Christian movement exhibited in its whole relation to the world's life." E. F. Scott

+ J Religion 4:320 My '24 950w

"'The Social Origins of Christianity' shows the admirable objectivity of modernism and its scientific interest in the origins and growth of Christianity. Mr. Case does well what Mr. Lake in his 'Landmarks of Early Christianity' did brilliantly." Norman Thomas

+ Nation 118:sup444 Ap 16 '24 100w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p43 Ja 17 '24 50w

CASKIE, JAQUELIN AMBLER. Figure in the sand. 107p $1.75 Am. library service

24-15503

"The story opens in North Africa, in the vicinity of the site of Carthage, in the first century of the Christian era. Barca, the chief of a nomadic tribe, is in love with a desert girl, Carmina. Barca leads his forces against a Roman settlement, but his plans are betrayed by Taurus, one of his followers, a giant in size and strength. Although Barca's effort fails and he is a prisoner, he is set free through the influence of Carmina. Then he begins a crusade of revenge on his traitorous follower; following him he goes into Judea, where he encounters St. John. Barca goes to Rome, to be a prisoner in the same cell which confined the Apostle Paul. He is condemned to suffer in the arena, and there while hanging on a cross, about to be attacked by pythons, the deadly serpents are restrained by the charm of Carmina's flute. Carmina pleads for her lover's life, and her prayer is granted by Titus. The happy pair return to the African deserts to enjoy the remainder of their days."—Boston Transcript

"The tale is sensational, but it is told with considerable grace and force of expression. Much occurs during its course, but the story is condensed into a few chapters of remarkable shortness. The theme, although old, is worth retelling."

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ag 9 '24 250w

"It is an excellent echo of the type of book of which 'Quo Vadis' is still the shining example."

+ N Y Times p3 Jl 20 '24 250w

"The book is slight, the chapters extremely brief. There is but little merit in the work."

— Sat R of Lit 1:33 Ag 9 '24 50w

CASSEL, GUSTAV. Theory of social economy; tr. by Joseph McCabe. 648p $5 Harcourt [42s Unwin]

330.1 Economics [24-2313]

"Professor Cassel's book is largely an expansion of works previously issued from the German and English press, and especially of a volume published in 1903 entitled 'The Nature and Necessity of Interest.' Outcome of the author's reinvestigation, it restates in accordance with a theory of his own the principles involved in the maximum of prices, interests, rent, wages, money, exchange and the business cycle. Professor Cassel always felt, he tells us, that it ought to be possible to do away with the old theory of prices and thus rid economic thought of many unnecessary discussions, mostly of a scholastic nature which had long burdened the earlier treatises in this field. His abolition of a special theory of value and setting up of economic theory on the basis of a theory of prices required a theory of money, and this he now supplies."—Boston Transcript

Boston Transcript p4 F 2 '24 460w

Ind 112:80 F 2 '24 30w

CASSEL, GUSTAV—Continued

"The Theory of Social Economy is unmistakably a pre-war book, but for that reason it is all the more to be admired as a far-seeing and masterly diagnosis of economic facts. Professor Cassel is an acknowledged pioneer in monetary reform, and his new book proves him to be a pioneer over a still wider field." E. M. H. L.

+ New Statesman 22:346 D 22 '23 900w

"Professor Cassel's volume, admirably translated, is an original and solid contribution of a large sort to economic theory." W: MacDonald

+ N Y Times p16 Mr 2 '24 1550w

"The book takes rank as one of the few unscathed survivors of the world war—an achievement which must of itself command a certain amount of respect." J. M. Clark

+ Pol Sci Q 39:688 D '24 1050w

"Dr. Cassel's book is needed to bring the scientific economists down to earth."

R of Rs 69:335 Mr '24 200w

"The confession of inability to accept the main contention of Professor Cassel is not to be taken as underrating a work which is all-embracing, able and provocative." Percy Ripley

+ — Spec 131:1033 D 29 '23 850w

"The difficulties are not due to the translator, who has done his work with remarkable skill. He has mastered the thought of his author, and left in his translation hardly a trace of the style of expression of the German original. And the book is well worth the labour he has spent on it for the benefit of English students of economics. It is a fresh and independent exposition of a distinctive economic theory, based on prolonged reflection upon modern economic conditions, and worked out with strenuous consistency, conciseness and a due regard for scientific precision of statement."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p58 Ja 31 '24 3650w

CASSIDY, JAMES. Study of Browning's "The ring and the book." 184p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Blackwell]

821 Browning, Robert

A prose paraphrase of Browning's The ring and the book. "Something of Browning's own spirit seems to have animated the author's mind. The likeness is intensified by his expedient of putting each section of narrative into Browning's mouth and making him appear to personify the individual whose story it tells. The narrative retains the sectional divisions of the poem."—N Y Times

Bookm 60:232 O '24 250w

"Lovers of poetry will find a new paraphrase of Browning's 'The Ring and the Book' to be of invaluable assistance in studying this great, exceedingly complex, narrative poem." E. S. Alexander

+ Lit R p9 Ag 30 '24 180w

"Why anybody who would care enough about 'The Ring and the Book' to want to read it should need a 'pony' to help him appreciate it is rather a mystery. However, the author has done a good piece of work, paraphrasing in prose the narrative of the poem and giving to it really beautiful expression in vivid and flashing words."

+ — N Y Times p20 Ag 10 '24 210w

Outlook 138:341 O 29 '24 10w

"The publishers believe that the book will be useful 'for examination purposes' as well as to readers of Browning for pleasure. We are content to commend it to the latter class, and do not think it will be 'exceedingly valuable' as a cram book."

+ — Sat R 138:17 Jl 5 '24 200w

CASTELLANE, BONI, marquis de. How I discovered America; confessions of the Marquis Boni de Castellane. 283p il $5 Knopf

B or 92 24-28235

The marriage of the writer of these memoirs, in 1895, to Anna Gould, daughter of Jay Gould, was a society sensation in France and America and for long a subject of international gossip. The husband tells his side of the affair, from his meeting with Anna Gould to their divorce, and describes the social life of which they were a part. His narrative is extremely frank in its criticisms of American society and of the family into which he married.

Reviewed by Desmond McCarthy

New Statesman 24:supvii D 6 '24 1550w

"This book, and its sequel, will do more to endear the Gould family to the American public than any amount of good deeds or works of public benefit on their part; doubtless, also, the Marquis Boni de Castellane will somehow derive a suitable reward for this essay in fastidious scurrility." J; Carter

— N Y Times p3 N 2 '24 1450w

"We could continue quoting until dawn and succeed only in anticipating too much of a book which should be read in its entirety by every student of that branch of psychology which includes delusions and hallucinations." Harry Salpeter

— N Y World p8e N 2 '24 1300w

"He might have spared us some of the details of his infelicity in his marriage, whilst his generalizations on the subject of American women must be accepted with reserve; but on the whole his reminiscences are lively and entertaining."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p840 D 11 '24 720w

CATHER, KATHERINE DUNLAP. Girlhood stories of famous women. 336p $1.75 Century

920.7 Woman—Biography 24-22010

Stories of episodes from the girlhood of fourteen women famous in history. Those included are: Clothilde of Burgundy; Judith of France; Dagmar of Denmark; Eleanor of Poitou; Philippa of Hainault; Jacqueline of Hainault; Yolanda of Aragon; Isabella of Portugal; Elizabeth of England; Mary of Scotland; Vittoria Colonna; Marie Antoinette; Louise Vigée; Martha Washington.

Booklist 21:71 N '24

"Her structure of fact is true enough; she is very careful, indeed, to follow closely the established historical outlines with which the lives of her heroines are concerned. And she has been at great pains to search for and get together material not usually to be found in more formal histories devoted to the affairs of the grown-up world. But in doing this she has yielded to the allure of sentiment and has dressed up her young girls in such beauty and goodness and charm and placed them in such settings as make her stories seem more like fairy tales than glimpses of real life."

+ — N Y Times p23 O 5 '24 300w

"The dramatic values of the narratives are realized in a lively and yet simple style which appeals at once to the reader."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:386 D 13 '24 250w

Springf'd Republican p6a D 14 '24 60w

CATLIN, GEORGE B. Story of Detroit. 764p il $2 Detroit news

977.434 Detroit, Michigan 24-1649

The "Story of Detroit," which was originally published as a daily serial in the Detroit News, is an outline history of Detroit's development from the time of Cadillac, written especially for the younger generation of the city and its multitude of new residents. The book "shows how the city has progressed, stage by stage, from a small and isolated frontier military post in the far interior of an unsettled country, to a city of the fourth rank in magnitude with an estimated population of 1,200,000 at the end of the summer of 1923."

"Mr. Catlin's work might well be called stories of Detroit: it contains not so much materials for history as indication of fields that might repay cultivation."

Am Hist R 29:814 Jl '24 400w

"A valorous story it is and well told. One to be read by every citizen, not only of Detroit but by every American who still honors the infinite effort and endurance cementing the foundation of that Republic under which we have the privilege to live." F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 1 '24 1150w
Canadian Hist R 5:270 S '24 80w
Cleveland p38 My '24
R of Rs 69:446 Ap '24 230w

CEARD, HENRY. A lovely day; tr. by Ernest Boyd. 198p $2 Knopf
24-21397

The love adventure of the respectable Madame Duhamain. The existence of Madame and her solemn husband was most placid and uneventful until she became acquainted with her flirtatious bachelor neighbor, Monsieur Trudant. To escape for one day the monotony of her life, she plans a rendezvous with Trudant. On a bright sunshiny morning she speeds forth to meet him in anticipation of enjoying this stolen pleasure to the full, but the evening finds Madame a disillusioned woman who returns to her home and sober husband in a terrific rainstorm with something like a sense of gratitude.

"The author is particularly skilful in painting the changing emotions of these two mistaken souls from the moment when the woman first listened, hopefully, to the man's excited platitudes of love, until that last hour when they endeavor to contain their spirits in patience, until their cab shall arrive. Many of the details with which his story is embellished are sordid, some intolerably so, and the characters in it are types rather than individuals." S. L. R
+ — Boston Transcript p4 O 4 '24 460w
Ind 113:202 S 27 '24 300w

"A striking and unusual story. Mr. Boyd's translation is completely satisfying." E. M. U.
+ Lit R p10 S 6 '24 160w

"'A Lovely Day' has amazing color at times, and always M. Céard has his subject well in hand. However, it is to be wondered if the reader can really show pity for Ernestine. We cannot pity those who fail after risking nothing; and Ernestine didn't really have the capacity to feel anything like what was suggested she tried to feel."
— + N Y Times p8 S 7 '24 700w
N Y Tribune p9 S 28 '24 200w

"'A Lovely Day' is charming, unsentimental, gay, true to life and true to artistic form. It suggests alike the penetration of a Flaubert and the worldly vision of de Maupassant in 'Bel Ami.' It is an amusing and delicious story, seasoned with the salt of common sense and made gracious by the comprehension that knows how to forgive all things." J: Carter
+ Sat R of Lit 1:139 S 27 '24 780w

CELESTINA; or, The tragi-comedy of Calisto and Melibea; tr. from the Spanish by James Mabbe, anno 1631. 345p $5 Dutton [12s 6d Routledge]

This is a Broadway translation of a well-known Spanish love tale, with an introduction on the picaresque novel and appendices by H. Warner Allen. It is the tragic love story of Calisto, a young nobleman, and Melibea, a fair maiden of no mean estate. The central figure of the drama is Celestina, the crafty bawd, who with the aid of a group of dishonest servants plays an important part in this drama.

"Mabbe's translation, in spite of the liberties he took with the text, is, in its effect, almost perfect. Professor Allen's introductory essay on the picaresque novel contains much keen criticism and historical information difficult to obtain in so succinct a manner. His arguments supporting Rojas's claim as author, however, are a mere rehashing of facts already well known." Eliseo Vivas
+ — Nation 119:148 Ag 6 '24 200w

"Scholarly and suggestive. An attractive book." H. S. M. Lewis
+ Nation and Ath 34:744 Mr 1 '24 650w
New Statesman 22:487 F 2 '24 550w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p76 F 7 '24 900w

CESCINSKY, HERBERT. Old-world house; its furniture and decoration. 2v 307;371p il $17.50 Macmillan
749 Furniture. House decoration [24-30752]

A guide to English furniture and decoration of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. The book provides a brief historical account of the various styles and the well-known craftsmen, with illustrations of numerous examples. The pieces described are such as may be acquired by the modest collector. Both volumes are indexed and the concluding chapter lists and describes the chief woods used in English furniture.

"'The Old-World House,' more than for its great mass of information (somewhat jumbled, to be sure, in presentation and clumsily repetitious) about the great English furniture styles and its wealth of illustration, is of value in this country for its whole hearted insistence upon the prime test of fine workmanship and beauty in every object of household decoration. There is no place for junk in Mr. Cescinsky's scheme of things." W. P. Eaton
+ N Y Tribune p10 Ja 18 '25 920w

"Regarded as a handbook of English furniture written for the collector in a chatty strain. The Old World House is excellent and its 700 odd illustrations are chosen with discrimination." Gerald Wellesley
+ Spec 133:609 O 25 '24 150w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p786 N 27 '24 250w

CHAMBERLAIN, GEORGE AGNEW. Lantern on the plow. 409p $2 Harper
24-19919

The romance of a southern New Jersey farm which for seven generations was owned by the Sherbornes. In 1901 Warner Sherborne owns Rattling Run Farm, a hard unyielding piece of soil which he plows by lantern light. The farm possesses him as it does also his college-bred wife, Eunice, and her two beautiful children, Io and Drake. They are all its slaves. But one day cement rock is discovered on Rattling Run. Sherborne leases the land for a good sum of money, and goes to bed to rest and to die. Thereafter the tale concerns itself with Eunice and the children. Freed from the claims of Rattling Run, Eunice takes a new interest in life. Gradually she regains her beauty and personality. She marries again. The children are sent to college, but the call of the soil is too strong for Drake and he returns to the farm. Both he and his sister, Io, have their romances. Drake's love affair at one time threatens disaster for himself and Io, but the problems are happily worked out and Rattling Run Farm is once more in the hands of a Sherborne.

Booklist 21:110 D '24

"What else George Agnew Chamberlain has written, I do not know; but if his other novels are as closely-studied, as strong in character-drawing, as sincere and genuine as 'The Lantern on the Plow' he surely deserves a place in the front rank of living American writers." W. K. Kelsey
+ Detroit News p14 O 12 '24 550w
Int Bk R p906 N '24 400w

"Mr. Chamberlain's merit as a novelist is that he keeps his story marching, and his characters with it, so that even when his machinery is almost as obvious as that of his cement mill one can hardly help keeping step with it to the end."
— + N Y Times p13 Ag 31 '24 580w

CHAMBERLAIN, G: A.—Continued
"The style of the book is generally overdrawn, at its worst hysterically lyric after the manner of Mr. A. S. M. Hutchinson." Ruth Suckow
— N Y Tribune p3 S 28 '24 620w

"There were great possibilities in the choice of the subject, but, alas! Mr. Chamberlain meandered too much in the flowery paths of sentiment and could not rise to the height of a rugged pilgrimage on the rocks of grim realism." F. V. R.
— + N Y World p8e S 7 '24 300w

CHAMBERS, EDMUND KERCHEVER. Elizabethan stage. 4v 1930p $23.50 (70s) Oxford
792 Theater—England. English drama. Shakespeare, William—Stage history
[24-4078]

"Dr. Chambers has produced his second great authoritative work for which we have been waiting, and without the aid of which each new enquirer into the mystery of the Elizabethan theatre is bound at first to falter. . . He gives us in some nineteen hundred pages, the most comprehensive account which has yet been written of the private, public and court stages, together with other forms of 'mimesis' and spectacle surviving from earlier times, from the beginning of the reign of Elizabeth until the death of Shakespeare. We have in these four volumes all, or practically all, the discoverable evidence upon the various parts of the subject, collected, weighed, sorted, classified and built up with immense care into a logical and beautiful structure."—New Statesman

"No other work exists or ever has existed that deserves comparison with this, either as a guide to information and opinion or as a presentation of the most authoritative conclusions in this field." J: M. Manly
+ Am Hist R 29:760 Jl '24 1150w

Reviewed by R. B. McKerrow
Eng Hist R 39:430 Jl '24 1900w

"The four volumes of the work before us are the result of a score of years of patient investigation, and they are indispensable to every student of Shakespeare, of the drama, of Elizabethan history and literature." W: L. Phelps
+ Int Bk R p425 My '24 1900w

"In general Mr. Chambers is accurate in the extreme. There are a few errors of omission. And there are some minor slips. I cannot pretend to subscribe to all Mr. Chambers's speculations and hypotheses; but as he is meticulously careful to note nearly all of these as 'guesswork' he will not expect unanimous agreement among his readers." S: C. Chew
+ — Nation 119:219 Ag 27 '24 580w

"Of the value of this work there can be no two opinions among persons who possess already the knowledge requisite for appreciation and the wits to use that knowledge. There is no strictly literary criticism, and it is not wanted; indeed, it is much better away, for opinion mixes very badly with fact on such occasions as this. But the supply of fact is marvellously abundant and singularly well arranged. The book is, in fact, a sort of Thesaurus for the noblest and most interesting period of the English theatre." G: Saintsbury
+ Nation and Ath 34:670 F 9 '24 1000w

"The volumes are surprisingly easy to read. The arrangement is admirably simple and clear and not even the enormous mass of fact and discussion has been able to suppress the native liveliness and quiet humor of Mr. Chambers." J: M. Manly
+ New Repub 40:24 S 3 '24 1200w

New Statesman 22:575 F 23 '24 1300w

"Mr. Chambers has placed the students of the English-speaking world in his debt, and he deserves the undying gratitude of every one who wants to know the English stage as it was under the Tudors." Brander Matthews
+ Outlook 137:198 Je 4 '24 950w

"It is only rarely that a reviewer has the privilege of drawing the attention of readers to the appearance of a great book, not of the moment, or of the year, but of a whole age. Such a book is the monumental work of Dr. E. K. Chambers on the Elizabethan stage. It is true to say that there is no appreciation of the Master, however scholarly, however acute, however discerning, that cannot and will not be sharpened and enhanced by a knowledge and assimilation of the noble monument to a great epoch which exists in Dr. Chambers's book."
+ Sat R 137:509 My 17 '24 1000w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 27 '24 300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p910 D 27 '23 150w

"His book puts a period to the study of the Elizabethan drama because it sums up the best knowledge of the subject, so that henceforth all study of it may safely take off from Chambers. And what one wants is surprisingly easy to find. The arrangement, the indices, the appendices, and all the apparatus make the four volumes a very fine piece of book-making as well as of scholarship. It is not, of course, an easy book to read. It is stiff with facts. But facts are what we want; there has been plenty of picturesque narrative and hardy theorizing. And it is never a dull book."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p133 Mr 6 '24 3100w

CHAMBERS, MRS MARY DAVOREN (MOLONY). One-piece dinners. 188p il $2 Little
641 Cookery 24-22443

A cook-book devoted to the combination dishes which furnish a whole dinner—dishes including meat, vegetables, sauce or gravy, put on at once and cooked in the same pot.

Booklist 21:54 N '24

"A well-written book." C. L. Hunt
+ J Home Econ 16:656 N '24 180w

"The one-piece affairs described in this attractive volume have every indication of being delicious. But that is not all; there is a fascinating variety about them." R. M. B.
+ Lit R p10 S 6 '24 250w

Outlook 138:381 N 5 '24 30w

St Louis p406 D '24

"The book is appetizingly illustrated. But beware! It is a sophisticated dose."
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:132 S 20 '24 170w

Springf'd Republican p7a D 21 '24 120w

CHANCELLOR, EDWIN BERESFORD. London of Charles Dickens. 317p il $6 Doran [15s G. Richards]
914.21 London—Description. Dickens, Charles
24-23139

A book for London and for Dickens lovers equally and a companion volume to the author's "London of Thackeray." (Book Review Digest, 1923) These books together form a "thorough microcosm of the metropolis," since the two novelists cover two distinct sides of London. Taking up each of Dickens's novels separately, Mr Beresford gives an account of its topographical setting and of those places to which, as haunts of his characters, Dickens has given a human interest even for those who have never seen them. Criticism of the novels is combined with definitions of the scenes and typical illustrations have been selected.

Bookm 60:356 N '24 180w

"Needless to say, his book is not to be read currently, but in the wake of 'Bleak House' or 'David Copperfield,' when, with the help of some excellent illustrations, it will be found to clear up a thousand small mystifications."
Nation and Ath 35:574 Ag 2 '24 110w

"Little as Dickens may have loved it, the actual London of his time, a time of transition, is extraordinarily interesting, and Mr. Chancellor's survey of it is very welcome, for it has been skilfully carried out and his account of it is attractively written. He has taken London novel by novel, and all lovers of Dickens will be grateful to him."
+ New Statesman 23:322 Je 21 '24 270w

N Y Times p10 S 21 '24 1650w

Reviewed by G. H. Busey
N Y Tribune p8 S 21 '24 700w

St Louis p415 D '24

"Dickens has already been traced through his London references many times, and Mr. Chancellor should have inserted in his prefatory matter a word of thanks to his numerous predecessors. He is fully qualified to write, being both an ardent Dickensian and a skilled topographer. He uses the text of the novels with good effect—no one describes waste ground and squalid buildings as well as Dickens—but we hardly want the familiar plots of the book retold. The occasional criticism of them is welcome."
— + Sat R 137:669 Je 28 '24 350w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p352 Je 5 '24 950w

CHANCELLOR, JOHN. Mystery of Norman's court. 347p $2 Small [7s 6d Hutchinson]
24-6731

"Embryo detective does that reader prove himself who guesses correctly the identity of the one who drove the dagger into the heart of Hugh Bowden, found dead in his room, whose locked window and door and lack of secret panels or stairway or fireplace exit or entrance make the mystery of how the murderer escaped as baffling as the mystery of who he was. Both mysteries are closely guarded to the very last. To the genius of that great man, that super-detective, Sir James Saddler, is owed the discovery of the apparently undiscoverable."—Boston Transcript

Booklist 20:337 Je '24

Boston Transcript p4 Mr 26 '24 650w

"It has all the merits of a good mystery tale."
+ Lit R p874 Jl 5 '24 100w

"Somehow or other no book on earth can achieve the stupendous slowness of some of these English mysteries, a slowness that would not for a moment be tolerated in any one of a dozen American magazines. Perhaps we err on the side of speed, but it saves so much energy in cases of this sort!" Kenneth Fuessle
— N Y Tribune p28 My 4 '24 300w

"The solution of the mystery brings a complete surprise and constitutes a novelty in detective fiction." E. W. Osborn
+ N Y World p6e Mr 23 '24 150w

"The story is essentially one of conflict and the feverishly overwrought events disclose an unusual twist."
Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 6 '24 180w

"Here is a good situation: the solution is hard to guess, and the author keeps the pot of excitement boiling energetically. There are obvious crudities, both in the story and the manner of telling it. But the fact remains that we want to know who did it, and go on reading till we find out. That, in a detective story, is sufficient cause for gratitude."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p590 S 6 '23 280w

Wis Lib Bul 20:127 My '24

CHANDLER, JULIAN ALVIN CARROL, ed.
² Genesis and birth of the Federal constitution. 397p $2.50 Macmillan

342.73 United States—Constitution 24-28268

Addresses and papers in the Marshall Wythe school of government and citizenship of the College of William and Mary. Among the jurists who delivered the addresses are Alton B. Parker, James Brown Scott, James M. Beck and others.

"None of the addresses offers anything new; and some of them are slight, but those which treat of the work of the Federal Convention and the ratification of the Constitution by the States (the latter by Dr. James Brown Scott) are more worth while."
— + Nation 120:99 Ja 28 '25 150w

R of Rs 71:110 Ja '25 80w

CHANNING, C. G. FAIRFAX. Siberia's untouched treasure; its future rôle in the world. 475p il $6 Putnam

915.7 Siberia. Siberia—Natural resources

The third part of the book, which is devoted to Siberia's vast natural resources and the opportunities it offers for farming, colonization and development, gives the volume its title. The middle and longest part is an account of the author's experiences as an officer of the American expeditionary force in Siberia, in 1919. The book begins with a discussion of international politics and peace between the nations. There are many illustrations and maps.

Boston Transcript p14 Mr 29 '24 480w

"Mr. Channing's book is an omnium gatherum of all that he knows about Siberia, and his own exploits and military decorations are not slighted. But this does not prevent it from being entertaining and, in some sections, important."
— + Outlook 136:235 F 6 '24 220w

"Much of what he says about the treasure is in general terms common knowledge; the value of his book lies in the details he gives about, for example, the area of coal fields and the proximity of raw material to waterways."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p259 My 1 '24 650w

CHAPMAN, JOHN JAY. Letters and religion. 132p $2.50 Atlantic monthly

814 Literature. Religion 24-8275

The book is concerned with the relation of things mental and things spiritual. It is divided into two parts: Words and the spirit and Comment and reflection. The author has a broad knowledge of literature and shows the religious feeling that permeates much of it.

"A brief rare book in which religion speaks for itself and not a tedious and interminable affair in which someone talks about religion. And all this at the hand of a master of style, whom one delights to honor. Here are delicacy and sensitiveness of spirit feeling for the inevitable expression." W. L. Sperry
+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Je '24 450w

"Sunny and wholesome; airily-gliding, which means interesting, and finely if not always evenly, written; and fiery, which means unafraid of the truth." J. W. Lane, jr.
+ Boston Transcript p4 My 3 '24 1200w

"The man who eschews theology will inevitably end by constructing a theology of his own, and this is precisely what has happened to Mr. Chapman. His is private interpretation carried to its extreme, and private interpretation is quite as dogmatic as dogma. One cannot but be refreshed by Mr. Chapman's observations on the humanities and the need of them in modern life. Many of his sentences stand out with a clear-cut grace and vividness that resemble the finely chiseled detail of a Greek statuette." J. L. S.
+ — Cath World 119:859 S '24 150w

Dial 77:268 S '24 130w

"One of the rarest books of the year." J. F. Newton
+ Int Bk R p656 Ag '24 100w

"A manly, unaffected book, this; full of independence and frank-mindedness; touched here and there with the Emersonian and gnomic; in sturdy reaction from most of the admired idols

CHAPMAN, J: J.—Continued
of the day; and charged with that articulateness which gives shape to the unexpressed thought of the many. After a weary and trying generation of days, the tide seems to be turning; and numbers of the dissatisfied should catch this book as the turn is made." H: B. Fuller
+ New Repub 39:280 Jl 30 '24 800w

"Mr. Chapman has surveyed all the intellectual kingdoms of this world, and the manner of his writing, his rarely distinguished, pregnant style, is evidence how richly saturated his mind is with all great literature. It is only such a writer, nurtured on the humanities, who is qualified to speak on these deep matters of the human spirit, and his testimony, therefore, to the renaissance of religion at the present time, in spite of all appearances, is the more valuable and inspiring." R: Le Gallienne
+ N Y Times p5 Je 15 '25 2150w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson
No Am 219:904 Je '24 350w

"The book has the literary flavor of an elder day, now too rarely met with. Mr. Chapman is a thinker, and his utterances are original, couched in the language of one who understands and can manipulate the English tongue. 'Letters and Religion' is a book for cultivated readers."
+ Outlook 137:480 Jl 23 '24 180w

"Mr Chapman writes lucidly, methodically; he has something to say and he says it in a way that is convincing because it is simple and clean cut."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 29 '24 300w

Wis Lib Bul 20:171 Jl '24

CHAPPLE, JOSEPH MITCHELL. Life and times of Warren G. Harding; our after-war president. 386p il $3.50 Chapple pub. co.
B or 92 Harding, Warren Gamaliel 24-18477

This is a record of the life of President Harding, spanning the years from boyhood to the day of his death in San Francisco. The author accompanied the President on his trip to Panama and Alaska of which he gives his own account. The book is illustrated with numerous photographs taken on that trip.

"In portraiture of personalities, the author displays no extraordinary penetration. His 'close-ups' are not especially memorable."
— Boston Transcript p6 Jl 30 '24 200w

"It cannot be said that Mr. Chapple's book adds measurably to the stature of Warren Harding's statesmanship; but he has pictured, as no one before him has attempted to do, the childhood of him who was probably our least-hated and best-liked President." Silas Bent
+ — N Y Times p5 Ag 17 '24 1050w

CHARDONNE, JACQUES. Epithalamium (L'épithalame); tr. from the French. 238p $2.50 Doran [7s 6d Heinemann]
[24-2255]

The theme of the story is in its title which, being interpreted, is nuptial song. It is a story of marriage. M. Chardonne creates a few years in the lives of Bertha Dégouy and Albert Pacaris and follows their development: their meeting, when Bertha was only fourteen; an eager courtship and marriage without real knowledge of each other; then a time of adjustment made the harder by their mutual sensitiveness and reserve and Albert's absorption in a growing law business; a period of estrangement, which on Bertha's side bordered on infidelity, and promise of a nearer understanding, at the end. "Epithalamium" won the Northcliffe prize for 1922.

Boston Transcript p5 Jl 12 '24 450w

"Whatever grace of style M. Chardonne's text may have in the original has left small trace here. The whole thing is impressionistic in conception, which doubtless added to the translator's task. The result is that the first third of the book is messy, sometimes to the point of being incoherent. It is, however, a subtly conceived study of the strains and difficulties of adjustment in marital relations."
+ — Lit R p842 Je 21 '24 340w

New Repub 39:253 Jl 23 '24 60w

"'Epithalamium' is a wholly enthralling novel. It grips the reader's interest from the first word, holds his sympathies till the last, and leaves him, at the end, in a House of Life that suffering has chastened but not ruined."
+ N Y Times p8 My 4 '24 800w

Reviewed by Lilian Gilkes
N Y Tribune p24 Je 29 '24 1000w

CHARLES, C. H. Love letters of great men and women. 302p il $4.50 Brentano's [12s 6d S. Paul]
826 Love letters [24-16235]

"Dr. Charles covers only the period from the eighteenth century to the present day. In all, he has selected one hundred and fifty letters. Many of them are already familiar, but a few are translated for the first time from the German and the Russian. First of all, the period is divided into sub-periods, each of which is characterized in a phrase. Thus, Pope, Swift, Steele, and Sterne belong to 'the age of good sense,' while Pestalozzi, Kleist, Schiller, and Goethe represent 'the age of classical romanticism in Germany.' Out of each sub-period a few typical lovers are chosen, and specimens of their amatory epistles are prefaced by brief biographical summaries."—Nation and Ath

Booklist 21:59 N '24

"The name is apt enough, for that is just what the book contains, but it sounds too much like the blatant advertisements of the instalment plan houses with their suggestive illustrations. As a collection of important literary documents, the book is worthwhile. It is questionable whether the compiler's comments add much to the work of the volume, for the letters really speak better for themselves than he does."
+ — Bookm 60:352 N '24 120w

Boston Transcript p4 O 25 '24 320w

"These sheafs of letters are cleverly bound with brief biographical notes and bright comments. Since all the world loves a lover, the reading world should love these love letters." E. R. Cheyney
+ Lit R p12 O 4 '24 800w

"His metaphors are none too steady upon their feet. As for his actual selections of letters, it is altogether too scrappy to have any serious value, as may be judged by the fact that we are given less than a page of quotation from Byron." Gilbert Thomas
— Nation and Ath 34:928 Mr 29 '24 750w

"Possibly a good many readers would find 300 pages of other people's love letters a little cloying, but Mr. Charles has managed his compilation very well."
+ — N Y Times p20 S 14 '24 350w

"Mr. Charles's own contributions in the form of preface and comment are rather too flamboyant. But so rich a series of footnotes to the history of two centuries is full of fascinating glimpses of the kaleidoscope of social thought and manners."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p239 Ap 17 '24 460w

CHARSKAYA, LIDIYA ALEKSEIEVNA. Little Princess Nina; tr. by Hana Mušková. 288p il $1.75 Holt
24-26884

"A vivid, colorful story of a little Russian girl who tells of life in her native Caucasia, of her journey to a Mohammedan village to attend her aunt's wedding and of her school days in Petrograd. Her exaggerated sense of her own importance and her desire for popularity are balanced by her warmheartedness, loyalty and bravery. For girls of twelve and over."—Booklist

Booklist 21:115 D '24

"Girls who are reluctantly leaving their fairy lore will especially like the story of Princess Nina. It has marked fairy-tale qualities—dramatic action, poetic feeling and vivid character drawing. The spell of Old-World stories is in it." H. S. Wright
+ N Y Tribune p6 O 12 '24 600w
Springf'd Republican p7a D 14 '24 80w

CHARTERS, WERRETT WALLACE, and
2 WHITLEY, ISADORE B. Analysis of secretarial duties and traits. 186p $2.50 Williams & Wilkins

651 Secretaries, Private 24-20154

"The problem to be investigated was defined in the following terms: First, to determine the duties performed by the secretary to business men and administrators; secondly, to determine the qualities which are conspicuously present in successful secretaries and conspicuously absent in unsuccessful secretaries."—Introd

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:602 D '24

CHASE, GEORGE MILLETT. George C. Chase, a biography. 153p il $2 Houghton

B or 92 Chase, George Colby. Bates college 24-12829

"The subject of this biography was the second president of Bates College, and was connected with the college almost continuously from the year in which it received its charter till his death in 1919. Like other presidents of small colleges, he had to divide his time between teaching, administration and soliciting funds. But his devotion and patience enabled him to win the friendship of Andrew Carnegie and other men of large means, and gradually new departments were organized and new buildings erected."—Publisher's note

"All in all, this biography is to be enthusiastically commended, especially for its brutal, almost boisterous, honesty. Considered that this is a biography written at the 'request' of the trustees of an Alma Mater, it is indeed surprising to see it rise into one of the best brief biographies of our day and age." L. C. Woodman
+ Lit R p942 Ag 2 '24 1250w

CHATTERTON, EDWARD KEBLE. Seamen all. 254p il $3 Little [10s 6d Heinemann]

910.4 Seafaring life. Voyages and travels

True stories of adventures at sea which range through a period of two hundred and fifty years beginning with the Barbary pirates and extending to modern times. Contents: At sea in the Restoration times; Fighting frigates; Strange tales from the sea; A real adventurer; Wind-jammer days; Clipper ship seamen; At sea in the 'sixties and 'seventies; Crews and checkered cruises; Master mariners; Seamen of the 'nineties; Twentieth-century sailor-men; The story of the Aud; The schooner that tried; Seamen of to-day.

Booklist 21:145 Ja '25

"Taking it all in all, seldom has such a wide variety of adventure and heroism found a place between the covers of one book. Mr. Chatterton has gathered an amazing collection, and a vastly interesting one." S. L. R.
+ Boston Transcript p6 O 25 '24 840w
Cleveland p88 N '24
Lit R p11 N 1 '24 300w

"We can forgive his conventionally breezy style, because he makes a real effort to convey not only the skill and daring of the old seamen, but the conditions in which they worked and lived. His illustrations include some excellent ship portraits."
+ — Nation and Ath 35:602 Ag 9 '24 40w

"On the wrapper of the book the publishers state that it is 'as exciting as a novel.' If they had said, 'far more exciting than any modern novel' they would not have exaggerated."
+ New Statesman 23:684 S 20 '24 250w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p5 N 16 '24 520

Reviewed by Morris Markey
N Y World p9m Ja 4 '25 440w

Reviewed by R: Hughes
Spec 133:sup694 N 8 '24 900w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p428 Jl 10 '24 440w

CHEKHOV, ANTON PAVLOVICH. Letters on the short story, the drama and other literary topics; selected and ed. by Louis S. Friedland. 358p $4 Minton, Balch & co.

B or 92

"Despite the constant handicap of bad health, which sapped his vitality steadily until death, Anton Chekhov maintained an amazing interest in people, literature, drama, Russia and the bewildering vagaries of human nature. All these interests appear in this new collection of his letters, which have been arranged according to their value as literary opinion."—N Y Times

"In letter-writing, Chekhov is a Slavic Robert Louis Stevenson, revealing his character, with that charming intimacy so few can seem to attain. They are fresh, unstilted and interesting and hold much sound criticism in the bargain." S. L. R.
+ Boston Transcript p4 N 8 '24 850w

"The entire volume shines with the beauty of an indomitable and radiant personality."
+ N Y Times p2 N 2 '24 1650w

"In spite of the fact that almost all the text is composed of hasty jottings, letters and notes, it is doubtful whether a more valuable handbook of the literary craft exists." F. V. Roman
+ N Y World p8e O 19 '24 1600w

CHENEY, SHELDON WARREN. Primer of modern art. 383p il $6 Boni & Liveright

709 Art. Painting 24-11452

"An excellent book from which to learn about all those queer pictures and statues which make the average man so angry. About post-impressionism, cubism, futurism, and other schools, fads, and sensations. Herein is explained what painters and sculptors are trying to do when they produce pictures which seem hopeless to the admirers of Sargent and Blashfield, sculpture which looks like insanity to the lovers of Saint-Gaudens."—Outlook

"One of the first things that strikes any reader who takes the trouble to look at this book with care and fair intelligence, is Mr. Cheney's impartial attitude toward the modern school of painters. He is blessed with a delicate sense of humor, and he writes about the Independents, the Vorticists and the Impressionists without any abatement of the breath in approaching their shrines. In fact Mr. Cheney has done a tremendous service to all lovers of true art. He has made it his business to point out to the casual reader exactly where the moderns parade virtues, and where they merely exhibit eccentricities." D. F. G.
+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 12 '24 580w
Dial 77:349 O '24 160w

Reviewed by T: Craven
Nation 119:99 Jl 23 '24 800w

Reviewed by L: Mumford
New Repub 39:188 Jl 9 '24 550w

'Its illustrations, 175 in number, are representative and Mr. Cheney's text is simple and direct. It is an effective, very much needed, work."
+ N Y Times p12 My 4 '24 2500w

Reviewed by H. J. Seligmann
N Y Tribune p21 Je 29 '24 800w

CHENEY, S. W.—Continued

"Mr. Cheney has something interesting to say, and some plausible arguments to advance."

+ Outlook 138:242 Je 11 '24 150w

CHESTER, GEORGE RANDOLPH, and CHESTER, MRS LILIAN ELEANOR (HAUSER). On the lot and off. 328p $2 Harper

24-8568

A lively story of a Jewish boy, Izzy, obsessed by one desire, namely to see himself in print in the legend above some successful picture, "Isidor Iskovitch Presents." It took him just ten years to conquer the moving picture industry and achieve success. From the first day when old David Schusshel, picture magnate, took a fancy to him to the last scene, where he gets his desire, luck is with him. Izzy is no slacker. He works early and late with an eye to the profits. He finds a star in Prudence Joy, succeeds in Napoleonizing finance, plays the rescuing hero upon several occasions, and generally makes good. In the end he marries the millionaire granddaughter of the greatest moving picture magnate of them all, Meyer Guldengeld. There is a great deal of sprightly slang in this story of Hollywood life.

"The reader follows the vicissitudes of Izzy's career with an almost breathless interest. 'On the Lot and Off' is good drama, but slightly decorated with sentiment, somewhat lurid of language, but a vital and novel tale." F. A. G.

+ — Boston Transcript p5 My 10 '24 350w

Cleveland p35 My '24

"It is incidentally full of interesting studies of character. There is a pleasing love story running through it, even if it is a bit calculating on the financial side."

+ — Lit R p730 My 3 '24 120w

N Y Times p22 Ap 6 '24 580w

"There are many bits of characterization shrewdly and humorously drawn, that prove how well Mr. Chester knew his subject." Edith Leighton

+ N Y Tribune p23 My 25 '24 600w

Springf'd Republican p7a Jl 6 '24 200w

CHESTERTON, GILBERT KEITH. St Francis of Assisi. (Doran's modern readers' bookshelf) 234p $1.25 Doran [2s 6d Hodder & S.]

B or 92 Francis of Assisi, Saint 24-4535

With the modern sympathetic, but skeptical reader in mind, Mr Chesterton approaches the great saint's life by way of its picturesque and popular aspects, trying to use what is understandable about St Francis to explain what is not understood, and to reconcile his many inconsistencies. By such means the author believes we may get at least a "glimmering of why the poet who praised his lord the sun, often hid himself in a dark cavern, of why the saint who was so gentle with his brother the wolf was so harsh to his brother the ass (as he nicknamed his own body), of why the troubadour who said that love set his heart on fire separated himself from women."

Booklist 20:336 Je '24

"Mr. Chesterton must have enjoyed the writing of this little book about St. Francis of Assisi. All his prodigious exuberance of mental energy seems to find here congenial conditions for grateful release and exercise." J. J. Daley

+ Bookm 59:215 Ap '24 950w

"The significant and interesting subject of the present volume, and Mr. Chesterton's excellent treatment, mark a notable addition to Mr. Chesterton's achievements; but its fitness in a series such as this is doubtful. It is literature—and controversial literature, at that—rather than simple appraisal; and it is Chesterton quite as much as St. Francis." W: K. Holland

+ — Boston Transcript p3 Mr 15 '24 1750w

"Mr. Chesterton's portrait is a thing of beauty. He makes St. Francis living, and ardent, and gracious, and bubbling over with joy—the joy that comes of abnegation and a perfect love. To read this fascinating little book is to see something newly appealing in St. Francis—and in Gilbert Chesterton." J. J. R.

+ Cath World 119:422 Je '24 400w

Cleveland p79 S '24

"St. Francis, of course, is treated paradoxically—as a man with a physical passion for an ascetic ideal. The book, on the whole, is thin and unimportant; it is often amusing, but more often tiresome; it is written in a bluff, slovenly manner, and has no respect for historical accuracy."

— Dial 77:83 Jl '24 100w

Reviewed by Joseph Collins

Int Bk R p799 O '24 450w

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas

Lit R p611 Mr 22 '24 900w

"Mr. Chesterton's book is not nearly so good as it ought to be, but, then, no book on St. Francis is. The perfect life is still to write. But when all is said, the humility of Mr. Chesterton's concluding words is sufficient to disarm criticism. He claims 'to have nothing to set up under the overhanging, overwhelming arches of such a temple of time and eternity but this brief candle burnt out so quickly before his shrine.'" C: H. A. Wager

+ — Nation 118:sup446 Ap 16 '24 800w

Reviewed by Gilbert Thomas

Nation and Ath 34:436 D 15 '23 600w

N Y Times p5 Mr 2 '24 1200w

Outlook 136:569 Ap 2 '24 170w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:377 Jl '24

Pratt p37 summer '24

"Interesting alike from the point of view of the author, and from the evidence it gives that the habit of making cheap plays on words has become fatally ingrained in his style. What I liked best in the book was his survey of the world into which St. Francis was born. . . Mr. Chesterton makes his point in a fresh and vigorous way, and the whole chapter is one well worth thinking over."

+ — Sat R 137:42 Ja 12 '24 320w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 20 '24 480w

"He has written only a short, popular introduction to the study of St. Francis, but, adding all the enthusiasm of his new-found Catholic belief to his old mastery of rhetoric and paradox, he has produced a burning book."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p786 N 22 '23 350w

Wis Lib Bul 20:124 My '24

CHEW, SAMUEL CLAGGETT. Byron in England: his fame and after-fame. 428p $4.50 Scribner [21s J. Murray]

B or 92 Byron, George Gordon Noël Byron, 6th baron [24-8837]

"Mr. Chew has given us an arresting picture of the continuous flux and reflux of Byron's reputation. He explains how it came that Byron in 1821 was afflicted, to the surprise of Hobhouse, with persecution mania: how it came that he could assure Medwin that he was the most unpopular writer living. He shows us why Ruskin hedged, and Meredith a (little 'sick of Tennysonian green tea') admired, and Kingsley whitewashed, and Browning sneered, and Arnold patronized, and Swinburne changed his mind. But, above all, he shows us predominantly why it is that Byron has become an abiding obsession to his countrymen."—Nation and Ath

Booklist 21:22 O '24

Reviewed by J: Donelson

Bookm 59:741 Ag '24 20w

Reviewed by D. L. Mann

Boston Transcript p3 Ag 23 '24 500w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd
Ind 112:230 Ap 26 '24 120w

Reviewed by W: MacDonald
Int Bk R p790 O '24 600w

"Mr Chew has got together a really huge mass of entertaining, significant, and otherwise inaccessible information." W: E. Leonard
+ Nation 119:50 Jl 9 '24 700w

"Mr. Chew has done for Byron what the late Professor Lounsbury intended to do for Tennyson. The book is not merely an indispensable work of future reference for all students of Byron literature, but it provides the general reader with a detailed and reliable guidebook to the highways and byways of that vast and most delectable country." Harold Nicolson
+ Nation and Ath 35:18 Ap 5 '24 700w

"A volume to which those interested in Byron will have to turn for dates and facts hardly elsewhere to be found." C: de Kay
+ N Y Times p13 My 4 '24 1900w

"His book may be taken as a professorial compilation, extraordinarily competent and complete within the limitations which are conveyed by its very title. A notable bibliography of fifty pages enlarges the bounds a little by admitting Byroniana from Continental and American sources, but the book proper concentrates on Byron in his native country; his rise, his triumphs, his fall, his retreat; his critics in matters moral, social and literary, his calumniators and plagiarists and imitators his fluctuating reputation in more recent days." H: B. Fuller
+ N Y Tribune p23 My 4 '24 1000w

Reviewed by F. V. Keys
No Am 219:905 Je '24 1200w
St Louis p354 O '24

"Mr. Chew gives us a most interesting and valuable account of Byron in England, and his fame both before and after his death. It is a book full of information, and is certain to be used by the writer upon whom shall fall the fate of compiling the complete life of Byron." J. St L. Strachey
+ Spec 132:427 Mr 15 '24 50w

"When the arrival of the centenary gives occasion to English critics to offer their estimate of Byron, Mr. Chew's work will give them aid for which they should thank him."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p141 Mr 6 '24 140w

CHILD, RICHARD WASHBURN. Fresh waters,
2 and other stories. 296p $2 Dutton
24-27994

A collection of short stories covering a wide range of subjects. The title-story is the tale of a widower who, anxious to restore his waning youth, contemplates marriage to a young woman, but then comes to a realization that in his own charming daughter are to be found the love and youth he is seeking. The other stories are: The lure; The man with the metal face; The gorilla; The screen; Keats Shadd; The playthings; A thirty thousand dollar slap; A strain of blood; A story for a certain lady; The eyes of the gazelle.

"Despite a curious sameness of atmosphere the book steadily holds interest. There are tales one thinks of as promoted to short-story anthologies, and others one thinks of as promoted to Wayside pulpits. Still waters, perhaps, even more than fresh, for there is depth in their running." D. F. H.
+ Boston Transcript p2 N 22 '24 580w

"His is a book that readers who enjoy the better-done of the current magazine stories will find interesting and entertaining." H. B.
+ Lit R p12 D 13 '24 240w

"The immediate impression one gets from these twelve stories is that they show to the best advantage Mr. Child's fine creative power. The volume proves that the author is a master of the short story. They are done in many moods and present a wide range of theme and treatment. They possess substance, action and vigor and are written with force and at times with great beauty."
+ N Y Times p22 D 14 '24 610w

"His range of subjects is wide, and Mr. Child is at home in describing many places and modes of life. But the penetration is not deep, nor is there that warmth of human understanding which makes the puppets of the printed page to live and move."
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:420 D 27 '24 50w

CHIPP, ELINOR. Many waters. 331p $2 Appleton
24-17832

Because Elaine Pritchard bears an unsavory reputation in the town of Whitridge, her daughter Marian becomes a social outcast. She has, however, two staunch friends in the happy, careless Donald Callender and the quiet, reserved Mark Wetherell. Donald for a time amuses himself with Marian who regards his love-making seriously and refuses Mark's attentions to her. She meets Connie Leveredge one day, who by a scurvy trick puts an end to Marian's love affair and marries Donald herself. Marian consoles herself with the friendship of both men, several times refusing Mark's offer of marriage. By an ironic turn of affairs Donald reads a note meant for his wife which reveals her infidelity to him. The war breaks in upon this critical situation taking both the men into its service and eventually bringing both joy and sorrow to Marian.

Boston Transcript p6 Ag 13 '24 190w
Lit R p9 S 6 '24 300w

"'Many Waters' to be acclimated needs more than an arbitrary shifting of locale. But then it needs no shifting of its inherent nationality at all. As an English story it is perfectly intelligible, and has the leisurely charm about it that many English novels have the happy good fortune to possess. Elinor Chipp writes with care, with thought, and with considerable attention to detail."
+ — N Y Times p16 Ag 3 '24 560w
N Y Tribune p24 Ag 10 '24 800w

CHIPPERFIELD, ROBERT ORR, pseud. See Ostrander I. E.

CHITTICK, VICTOR LOVITT OAKES. Thomas
2 Chandler Haliburton ("Sam Slick"); a study in provincial Toryism. (Studies in English and comparative literature) 659p $4 Columbia univ. press

B or 92 Haliburton, Thomas Chandler (Sam Slick, pseud.) 24-29336

Thomas Chandler Haliburton, 1796-1865, was a Canadian humorist, creator of the comic Yankee frontier character, Sam Slick, for a long time popular in England and America. He was also prominent in provincial politics and author of a history of Nova Scotia. Mr Chittick's biography is a detailed study of Haliburton's life and work and an impartial appraisal of his writings.

"It is a political as well as a literary biography, a study of a colonial man of letters and of an eminent lawyer and jurist. Professor Chittick is extremely workmanlike, he gives in many footnotes book and chapter for his authorities, and he completes his account of Haliburton's life with an excellent bibliography and an index." E. F. Edgett
+ Boston Transcript p4 D 6 '24 1900w

"Mr. Chittick has put into his scholarly work more effort and research than its subject deserves. His final conclusions are apt to depreciate Haliburton's literary reputation, but he has given us the man himself as he lived and it is a fascinating study." P. H. Jewett
+ Lit R p6 Ja 3 '25 900w

CHOATE, PEARSON. King who went on strike. 290p $1.75 Dodd
24-6684

He was an unwilling king; his inclinations had always been to be a sailor, not a prince, and now he was to be hedged in by the demands of royalty and his liberty curtailed by the ever-present even if invisible surveillance of guards. The coronation ceremonies were barely over when he told the wise old duke that he was going on strike. He went to the Inn of Content where lived Judith and the Imps, and Uncle Bond. There he recovered his peace of mind and enjoyed the freedom from routine and responsibility, but it was Judith who bade him return to his duties, to renounce their love, only remembering her as she had always been—his understanding friend. It is when he finds himself alone after his triumphal return to the palace, without even the duke to lean upon, that he fully realizes his position and responsibilities and willingly accepts both.

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 19 '24 750w
Cleveland p67 S '24

"Mr. Choate's theme is inherently interesting; but, unfortunately, he has handled it in the best tradition of the conventional sentimentality and didacticism of the American magazine. His situations are distorted by, his characters drowned in this flood of false sentiment and heavy moral tone."
— Lit R p778 My 24 '24 250w

"Mr. Choate is particularly fine in his characterization. The situations slide naturally into one another, steadily lifting the theme to the dramatic climax with which it concludes. There is a fine sense of pictorial values in the descriptions of great crowds, the Coronation evening, for instance, and the strike scenes. Added to these agreeable manifestations is the smoothly flowing prose which ripples along beautifully."
+ N Y Times p19 Mr 30 '24 720w

"The nature of Mr. Choate's narration is clear and straightforward. His style is lucid, extremely readable, and upon certain occasions he makes telling use of short, successive paragraphs, no longer than five words in their entirety. No mush, scant philosophy, and much sense." Hugo Sonnenschein
+ N Y Tribune p23 My 18 '24 450w
Outlook 137:68 My 14 '24 20w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p373 Je 12 '24 150w
Wis Lib Bul 20:212 O '24

CHRISTIE, AGATHA. Man in the brown suit. 275p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Lane]
24-25524

While pretty Anne Beddingfeld was seeking a position to eke out the £87 left her by her father she saw an unknown man killed in a London tube station by falling on the third rail. A man in a brown suit, tho he said he was a doctor, examined the body in an unprofessional way, pronounced the unknown man dead and hurried away. As he went he dropped a bit of paper which Anne picked up and this is what she read: 17.122 Kilmorden Castle. The police refused to regard the thing as unusual, but Anne thought otherwise. With the bit of paper as her clue and her £87 as her only capital Anne followed a mysterious trail from London to South Africa, succeeded in righting an old wrong, and in the end found her own happiness.

"It is a real pity that 'The Man in the Brown Suit' should come to such an end, for this tale of a diamond robbery is in the main ingenious, well written and exciting."
+ — Boston Transcript p1 N 8 '24 200w
Nation and Ath 36:26 O 4 '24 150w

"The Man in the Brown Suit is the best of its kind I have met for a long time; it is remarkable especially for a brand new device for concealing the villain's identity to the very end. I defy the most practised hand to discover him." J: Franklin
+ New Statesman 24:17 O 11 '24 180w

"As entertainment of the liveliest sort the book is signally successful."
+ N Y World p9e N 16 '24 60w

"Although the structure of this novel follows the beaten track of the average machine made mystery story, its action, after the first fifty pages, maintains a swiftness of pace we have never seen surpassed."
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:383 D 13 '24 200w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p598 S 25 '24 100w

CHRISTY, CUTHBERT. Big game and pygmies; with an introductory chapter by Sir Harry H. Johnston. 325p il $7.50 (21s) Macmillan

799 Africa, Central—Description and travel. Hunting—Africa. Natural history—Africa

Dr Christy, on behalf of the Belgian government, undertook to penetrate into the Ituri forest region of the Congo, remaining there for the three years before the war. He describes his difficulties in gaining the confidence of the African pigmies who, however, later helped him to track down and kill the okapi, the mysterious and elusive ancestor of the giraffe, of which his specimen was the first to be brought back to civilization. Among other forest creatures whose haunts and habits he studied are the African elephant, the white rhinoceros, the African buffalo, the forest hog, the chimpanzi, the bongo or forest eland, the aardvark, the ant-eater, and duiker or forest goat, besides the smaller denizens of that part of equatorial Africa.

"No imaginative reader of this rarely delightful book but must have, many a time thereafter, waking dreams of the African equatorial forests through whose vine-entangled mazes we follow Mr. Christy and his Pygmy trackers."
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 23 '24 950w
Lit R p15 S 13 '24 280w

"Dr. Christy's 'Big Game and Pygmies' is one of the best books, if not the best, that has been written about forest hunting, a very different thing from bush hunting. It is essentially a hunter's book. At the same time it is full of incident and vividly observant description which will fascinate the reader who has never held a gun in his hand." Edmund Candler
+ Nation and Ath 35:488 Jl 12 '24 300w

"A most interesting and valuable book." M. A. C. H.
+ Nature 114:420 S 20 '24 1100w
New Statesman 23:628 S 6 '24 350w

"The literary skill with which he describes his adventures in quest of specimens will lead the reader to follow them with breathless interest."
+ Sat R 138:145 Ag 9 '24 550w

"If there is any better book on big game shooting than this of Mr. Christy's we have never seen it."
+ Spec 133:231 Ag 16 '24 300w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p399 Je 26 '24 1250w

CHUDOBA, F. Short survey of Czech literature. 280p $2.25 Dutton [5s K. Paul]

891.8 Czechoslovak literature

A primer to a literature which tho nearly a thousand years old is hardly known in western Europe. The history is divided almost equally between the period up to the time of the national revival and the subsequent period to the new political independence. Nearly one hundred pages of extracts and a bibliography are included.

"Mr. Chudoba has succeeded in giving us a very clever and comprehensive view of the subject."
+ New Statesman 24:88 O 25 '24 660w

"Professor Chudoba's treatment of his subject is scholarly throughout, but perhaps he deserves the greatest praise for his account of the remarkable advance made by Czech literature from the revival onwards."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p566 S 18 '24 1200w

CHURCH, SAMUEL HARDEN. Flames of faith. 358p $2 Boni & Liveright
24-7313

John Partridge as one of six missionaries to the Dark continent believed in the faith of his church; its creed and interpretations of the Bible seemed unassailable. Each of the other missionaries thought likewise in regard to his own church. Before long Africa saw the strange spectacle of six little villages of savages outwardly converted to Christianity—but each one of a different denomination. The various adventures which befell John both as preacher and as the Great White Doctor gradually caused him to question the doctrines of his church and to search for the truth as spoken by Jesus. When he learned that there were sixty million outside of the churches in America he returned to give them a message of a larger faith. In his efforts to do so he was tried for heresy and found guilty by the church authorities, but he won sympathy and admiration and the assurance of great happiness with Mary Ballantyne. The book, tho in novel form, is really a plea for a more liberal Christianity.

"The reader would like to find Mr. Church's too well-rounded plan an opening for the fulfillment of the mysterious, as yet unexplained, inner impulses, and subconscious beings of individuals. He is too rational. A little touch of the Dionysian unreason would quicken his system, at least to one sympathetic participant in his travails over a current issue."
+ N Y Times p19 Mr 30 '24 820w

"Religion has become so much a matter of general interest that this book will have a wide appeal. A few years ago it would have raised a furor of excitement or, more likely, would not have found a publisher daring enough to print it. To-day it is just a good argument on the side of the liberal or modernist movement and its effectiveness is not at all impaired because it is written in the form of a novel."
+ N Y Tribune p24 Je 29 '24 650w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 13 '24 400w

CLARK, ELLERY HARDING. Daughters of Eve. 287p $2 Dorrance
24-22122

"The author, a graduate of Harvard College, pairs off several youths and maidens and proceeds to follow their course along the path that ultimately leads to marriage, except in the case of the unfortunate Stella, who is only turned from the primrose path by her love for a divinity student, who promptly spurns her as a prospective bride after she has made open confession. A philandering matron is also included in the picture."—Lit R

"He writes with little distinction but he tells his story with a practised hand."
— + Boston Transcript p4 O 1 '24 300w

"The characters are mildly interesting, but Mr. Clark does manage to reproduce the atmosphere of Boston and Cambridge with something like reality." K. W.
— Lit R p10 S 13 '24 140w

"The book is a rather crude performance."
— Sat R of Lit 1:169 O 4 '24 150w

CLARK, JACOB WENDELL. In the sight of God; with an introd. by E. C. Dudley. 369p $2 Hyman-McGee
24-11476

This is a dramatic tale woven around the laws of heredity. It has its origin in a Michigan copper town where Jane Towerover, the illegitimate child of the poverty-stricken Trevellyans is thrust out of the house by an unscrupulous father. Jane fortunately falls into the hands of a kind-hearted scientist, "Staggering Smith" whose house-keeper she becomes and under whose tutelage she comes to be an antagonist of the sacrilege of ill-assorted marriage. Upon Smith's death Jane carries on his work until she is a recognized authority on eugenics. One stormy night a stranger by name of Tom Swade seeks shelter in Jane's cottage. He falls in love with her and after a three days' stay leaves her. The balance of the story is concerned with Jane and her son, her courageous struggle in a world of conventions and her marriage to a man whose love for her overrides her scientific theories.

"As a vehicle for 'views,' 'In The Sight of God' is all that any reader could desire. As a novel it is poorly constructed, the characters puppets, and the finale unsatisfying."
— + Boston Transcript p6 Je 28 '24 260w

"Here is a stirring novel written about a thesis. As a tract, it is well written, sincere, forceful, but like most works with a pedagogic theme, the book lacks plot coherence and plausibility."
— + N Y Times p13 Je 15 '24 350w

"By his apparent inconsistency, Dr. Clark fails to arouse a burning interest in his theme; he fails to arouse great enthusiasm for his novel because he has written it without better than a mediocre narrative method and with no better than a painfully matter of fact style. His characters are plausible—all of them; but none has the individuality that connotes breathing, moving, thinking—living itself."
— Sat R of Lit 1:52 Ag 16 '24 330w

CLARK, MRS MARTHA HASKELL. Home road. 112p $1.25 Appleton
811 24-5338

Songs of home and fireside, camp and trail. Mr Page in his introduction speaks of the many-sidedness of the poet, who was sailor, fisherman, rider and tramper, as well as home-maker, hostess and comrade. All these sides of her are represented in her poems.

"In stanzas unhackneyed, yet popular and familiar, she sings of the outdoors, of the seasons, of the roads and trails and trains, and she carries her love of things into the home, to the hearth, to the family."
+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 26 '24 400w

"The utmost we can see in them is an occasional wise simplicity." L. C. Woodman
— Lit R p727 My 3 '24 50w

"They have a comfortable charm and a saccharine flavor, which may interest many readers, but passion and vigor are entirely lacking. . . Miss Clark's verses are light and musical, but they lack many essentials of authentic song." B. S. Wagstaff
— + N Y Tribune p26 Ap 27 '24 100w

"Honest, kindly songs of hearthside and camp-fire." Arthur Guiterman
+ Outlook 136:649 Ap 16 '24 40w

"It is pleasant now and then to come upon a book of poems about homely, human, comfortable subjects, so simply and spontaneously written that they sing their way straight into our affections."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 S 9 '24 460w

Wis Lib Bul 20:124 My '24

CLARKE, LAURENCE. South of the Rio Grande. 319p $1.75 Macaulay
24-5102

Escaping from the New York police Miss Edna Morris, innocent but suspected, boards the Lachine, with Martin Biddeford as the young and resourceful captain. Once in London their paths cross again and Biddeford suddenly finds himself in the midst of mystery and danger. He is to get possession, for the British government, of the papers granting a certain valuable oil concession in Mexico. Since the present owner is the wily Sebastian Alverado, his task is highly complicated. The trail leads across the seas to Tampico, Mexico, where Alverado is also occupied in stirring up a revolution. When Martin is not pursuing Alverado, he is helping Edna to escape from the American detectives. The exciting dénouement takes place on the high seas, the scene a burning ship upon a burning sea of oil. And of course the wily Sebastian is outwitted and the inevitable happens to Martin and Edna.

CLARKE, LAWRENCE—Continued

"The reader is swept along on a wave of adventure that leaves him almost breathless."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 2 '24 100w

"The thing is not too absurd, and its climax is genuinely spectacular; a fairly entertaining thriller."
+ — Lit R p779 My 24 '24 160w

CLEMENS, SAMUEL LANGHORNE (MARK TWAIN, pseud.). Mark Twain's autobiography. 2v 368;365p $10 Harper

B or 92 24-25122

It was Mark Twain's frequently expressed wish, even command, that his autobiography should not be published till long after his death. Under this semblance of "speaking from the grave" he felt that he could speak his mind more freely and frankly. He made several attempts at setting down his memories but in 1906, when Albert Bigelow Paine became associated with him as his biographer, he began a systematic dictation of notes from which Mr Paine was given liberty to draw the material for his own undertaking. His "methodless method" in these notes allowed him to wander up and down the years at will, drifting among his memories and setting down whatever was in his mind at the moment. These rambling notes, stories and opinions are like a stream of table talk. They are preceded by his earlier autobiographic fragments—recollections of his childhood in Missouri, memories centering around General Grant and chapters from his life in Florence.

Booklist 21:108 D '24

Reviewed by D. C. Seitz
Bookm 60:446 D '24 2000w

"Any book of Mark Twain's is a joy to read for its English alone. Our professors of English may find fault with his style, but they cannot find a living writer who can rival it. It affords at every moment an element of interest in this autobiography, quite apart from the entertaining matter." J. E. Chamberlin
+ Boston Transcript p1 O 18 '24 4700w

"It begins anywhere; it doesn't end at all; it has no skeleton and no adroit adjustment of members; it ranges through the Cosmos and arrives at Chaos; it is compounded of unrelated fragments, it is haphazard and helter-skelter; it is casual and fortuitous; it is not so much an autobiography as it is table-talk; it is not always worth while; it contains occasional trivialities; but it is abundantly welcome because it is the wise and vivid expression of an extraordinary creature, who was a humorist, a sage, a good hater, a man of sanity and horse-sense, a man who did his own thinking and who was a master of style, compelling the language to do his bidding and lifting a racy vernacular into literature, a man essentially honest, a man fundamentally truthful, a man who stands out as one of the great masters of narrative." Brander Matthews
+ — Int Bk R p845 N '24 3100w

"Having read the present two volumes, I am compelled to say, reluctantly, that I read them with growing disappointment. Mr. Paine hints in his introductory notes that the autobiography is in no sense complete as issued. Whether there will be additional volumes or whether this one will be revised and new material inserted I do not know. But at present the autobiography seems to me not so extraordinary a book, except in form, as I hoped for, nor a new book." Walter Yust
— Lit R p5 O 18 '24 1050w

"Will be disappointing to anyone who expected a consecutive or otherwise ordered account of Mark Twain's life. How much order anyone had a right to expect from the mind of this man is a question; but the fact remains that the book as it now appears is a jumble of things some of which are consequential and some of which are not. . . But the 'Autobiography,' shapeless and disappointing as it is, must still be called a great book." Mark Van Doren
— + Nation 119:524 N 12 '24 1100w

"There is no continuity of chronological sequence; it is a disorderly, untidy, ramshackle book; but this conception of autobiography, like most of Mark Twain's ideas, is shown to have in it a broad vein of common sense streaked by genius." Leonard Woolf
Nation and Ath 36:217 N 8 '24 1300w

Reviewed by Robert Littell
New Repub 40:230 O 29 '24 1500w

New Statesman 24:supx N 8 '24 1550w

"An enriched and ennobled essence of himself in which his virtues and his faults are equally preserved and mellowed." H. I. Brock
+ N Y Times p2 O 19 '24 3950w

"Not a dull book but a kind of superior hodge-podge—a great man's hodge-podge, full of fine things, many of which we have seen before in better order." S. P. Sherman
N Y Tribune p1 N 2 '24 3250w

Reviewed by Burton Rascoe
N Y World p9e O 19 '24 3450w

"There are a very few pages in these two volumes which are worth reading. There are a few which appear to be new, although they are not important. But here is one reader of Mark Twain, one who 'honors his memory, on this side idolatry as much as any,' who regrets that the book has been published." E. L. Pearson
— Outlook 138:256 O 15 '24 430w

"The more reflective world, which alone keeps alive the fame of a writer after his death, finds more and more in Mark Twain to remember him by, as more and more of his posthumous work sees the light. It is as if he had cannily kept his powder dry during his lifetime and had stored up far more than any one had dreamed, leaving it to be set off in magnificent memorial explosions after his death. The autobiography makes no such explosion as 'The Mysterious Stranger' or the letters, but it is far from being a damp fizzle. It crackles constantly, and now and then it stuns. The question remains: Is there more of it somewhere?" Carl Van Doren
+ Sat R of Lit 1:225 O 25 '24 1350w

Reviewed by R: Aldington
Spec 133:sup830 N 29 '24 1550w

"Considering these two volumes in the mass, the yield of valuable material is somewhat disappointing. They add little to what is known about Twain. Yet much minor matter that is fresh and characteristic deserves attention and will afford entertainment."
+ — Springf'd Republican p5a O 19 '24 2300w

CLEUGH, SOPHIA (MRS DENNIS CLEUGH). Matilda, governess of the English. 469p $2.50 Macmillan

24-25525

The gay romance of an attractive, wistful little girl, the scene of which is set in Paris and London during the early Victorian period. From the confines of the sedate Miss Nixon's boarding school, Matilda Hope Horsey, seventeen and quite alone in the world except for a mysterious godfather whom she has never seen, embarks upon life as governess to the terrible but delightful children of the Duchess of Westmainham. On her way to Tilney House, Matilda's cab meets with an accident from which she is rescued by a tall, handsome young man who from that moment is destined to play a very vital part in her life. Matilda finds Tilney House in a chaotic condition because of the approaching wedding-day of Lady Victoria, the elder daughter, to Lord Lassington. In a most amazing way the little governess becomes intricately involved in Lady Victoria's love affairs, and herself emerges as Lady Lassington. She also finds her mysterious godfather—and the hero of her dreams.

"There is a quaint, old-fashioned kind of humor about the entire book which makes it seem as though it belonged to another century than ours. It both intrigues and irritates us as humor with which we are unfamiliar always does. The whole story might have sprung from the eighteenth or early nineteenth centuries." D. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p9 D 13 '24 1050w
Lit R p9 D 27 '24 160w

"The charm of Miss Cleugh's novel cannot be questioned. It is delightfully written from beginning to end, and in spite of its length it holds up well in interest and uninterrupted flow of amusement."
+ N Y Times p16 N 16 '24 650w

"An exceptionally clever picture of London and Paris society in the early Victorian days." W. F. C.
+ N Y World p9e N 16 '24 90w

"Matilda alone is enough to make the novel entertaining, but there are thrown in two of the quaintest and liveliest children in current fiction."
+ Outlook 138:690 D 24 '24 140w
Springf'd Republican p6a D 14 '24 400w

CLIFFORD, LUCY (LANE) (MRS WILLIAM KINGDON CLIFFORD). Eve's lover; and other stories. 304p $2 Scribner
24-7681

A collection of fourteen short stories. The title story is the tale of a clever lover, a man so fascinating to women and so naïve, that all women believe in his sincerity, even his neglected little wife who, loving him herself, doesn't see how others could help loving him. Heart of the wood concerns the tragic end of a woman who gave up all for love, only to find that it was not strong enough to sustain her against the conventions of society. Other stories are: Thief; Joyce; The red parasol; Lost; The ghost on the stairs; Geraldine in Switzerland; Edward Brunson's return; A grey romance; The antidote; The key; Joan's necklace; Yeppo.

"Mrs. Clifford's book has an air of good breeding, a pleasant leisurely quality, and makes comfortable reading quite free from problems." I. W. L.
+ Boston Transcript p2 My 17 '24 650w

"The fourteen short stories which make up the book are not likely to enhance the reputation of the author of 'Miss Fingal.' Most of the characters who appear in them are fictionally inconsequential, their dramas have few elements of the unique, while the plots are too obviously pointed toward a too consciously premeditated conclusion. They do not flow smoothly and naturally to inevitable climaxes."
— + N Y Times p19 Ap 20 '24 580w
Wis Lib Bul 20:126 My '24

CLOSE, UPTON, pseud. (JOSEPH WASHINGTON HALL). 2 In the land of the laughing Buddha; the adventures of an American barbarian in China. 359p il $3.50 Putnam
915.1 China—Description and travel. China—Politics and government 24-28977

"The author spent eight years in China and describes his travels there, and especially the political upheavals of recent years."—Outlook

Boston Transcript p1 D 20 '24 650w

"Those of his pages which relate his experiences with the relief epedition that went into the wilderness of western China after the earthquake disaster of 1920 and those dealing with his part in relieving famine sufferers in the northern provinces are notable, if unpretentious, testimony of the perils, the hardships, the labors borne by the author in the course of following his work. That the work was competently and brilliantly achieved this book bears rich and ample witness." E. C. Beckwith
+ Lit R p15 N 22 '24 360w
Outlook 138:513 N 26 '24 30w

CLOUD, KATHERINE MALLET PREVOST. Practical flower gardening. 251p $2.50 Dodd
716 Gardening 24-12872

A practical book which gives complete instructions for the annual and the perennial garden, for wall gardening, outdoor bulbs and roses, shrubs and vines. It also gives directions for the general care of the garden. It includes annual and perennial tables and a calendar of bloom to help in the planning of gardens of continuous bloom. The author is a consulting horticulturist.

"Consulting horticulturist of the School of Horticulture in Ambler, Pennsylvania, Miss Cloud's advice is founded upon authority. It is, moreover, expressed so clearly that while professionals can profit by it, beginners can understand its directions."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 28 '24 300w

"The pages of Miss Cloud's book bear witness to the thoroughness of her professional training and prove her to be expert in all the matters pertaining to the making of a garden."
+ N Y Times p15 My 18 '24 450w
St Louis p345 O '24

CLOUSTON, JOSEPH STORER. Lunatic still at large. 285p $2 Dutton [3s 6d W. Blackwood]
24-14458

Mr. Francis Mandell-Essington is still being pursued by the authorities of the select private sanatorium from which he has made his escape. His wanderings lead him into many diverting adventures, and we are told how this astute and humorous fugitive manages to blunder into the middle of an impersonation swindle in England, how he passes from one perilous disguise to another and finally, how he plays Providence in an affair of two unhappy lovers—each time turning the situation to his own advantage.

Booklist 21:26 O '24
Boston Transcript p6 Jl 23 '24 500w

"It is farce comedy of good quality; just inside the boundary of too much extravagance." H. L. P.
+ Lit R p842 Je 21 '24 110w

"The story is interesting in the extreme, due chiefly perhaps to the element of suspense that the author has managed to inject into it from the beginning; and secondly, to the humorous note in the character of the ever beaming and good-natured Mandell Essington."
+ N Y Times p8 Je 22 '24 520w

"It is a light, entertaining bit of fiction, and pretends to be nothing more. Mr. Essington is an agreeable companion for a couple of hours on a summer afternoon." C. D.
+ N Y Tribune p24 Jl 20 '24 200w

"The madness of Mr. Francis Mandell-Essington, as we discover from this new book, continues to be rich in method and fruitful in consequence." E. W. Osborn
+ N Y World p7e Je 8 '24 120w

CLUTTON-BROCK, ARTHUR, and others. Necessity of art. 181p $3 Doran [7s 6d Student Christian movement]
704 Art [24-17889]

A symposium on the vital influence of art and the place which it holds in the spiritual development of the race. "The object of art," says Percy Dearmer in the preface, "is not to give pleasure, as our fathers assumed, but to express the highest spiritual realities. Art is not only delightful: it is necessary. . . Art cannot be understood unless it is realized as part of life as a whole, and especially of religion." Contents: Art and the escape from banality, by A. Clutton Brock; Christianity and art, by Percy Dearmer; The art of movement, by A. S. Duncan-Jones; The puritan objection to art, by Malcolm Spencer; The artist and the saint, by Alfred W. Pollard; Literature and religion, by J. Middleton Murry; The doctrine of values, by Percy Dearmer.

CLUTTON-BROCK, A.—Continued

"All the essays are worth reading, whether we agree with everything presented or not." N. H. D.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 2 '24 880w

Reviewed by J: Cournos
Lit R p946 Ag 9 '24 1050w

Reviewed by L: Mumford
New Repub 40:397 Ag 27 '24 60w

N Y Tribune p15 S 21 '24 200w

Reviewed by Margaret Sherwood
No Am 220:172 S '24 850w

Outlook 138:216 O 8 '24 150w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p114 F 21 '24 100w

"A series of thoughtful and constructive essays."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p229 Ap 17 '24 1800w

COALFLEET, PIERRE. Solo. 351p $2 Putnam [7s 6d Lane]
24-25415

"The hero, Paul Minas, is an orphan, living with an aunt, in a small Nova Scotia town when the record begins. He is a musician, something of a 'prodigy,' and his aunt has also been a virtuoso of European fame. At the aunt's death Paul is sent to school at Halifax, but runs away to sea. That is the beginning of an extraordinarily picturesque Odyssey, with much varied incident, that carries him first to Australia, and thence pretty much over all the seven seas, to land him finally in Egypt, where his land adventures continue. After many years he returns to Nova Scotia and is entangled in the war troubles, wherein, somewhat to the reader's surprise, he turns up as a pacifist, or, as he puts it, an idealist."—Lit R

Boston Transcript p7 D 20 '24 380w

"This is a novel which it is difficult to appraise fairly in a few words, for it does not readily 'classify,' and it is a performance of uneven quality. The earlier two-thirds are distinctly successful and quite out of the ordinary. Yet, from the point where the hero gets into trouble—it begins to wear too strained a manner and is not always convincing." H. L. P.
+ — Lit R p890 Jl 12 '24 420w

N Y Times p9 Je 8 '24 600w

"The opening part, covering the boyhood of Paul Minas, in Hale's Turning, Nova Scotia, is extraordinarily good work: excellent in detail, well proportioned and strongly individual. The rest of the story is not quite so successful."
+ — N Y Tribune p13 D 14 '24 350w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p8e O 5 '24 250w

"I do not know where Hale's Turning is, but I have lived there; I do not know Aunt Verona, but I have played in her kitchen and attic; I never saw the Baptist minister who talked of 'service' to twelve-year-old Paul, but I have heard him preach. That is the way the book affects me; it recreates reality." A. M. MacLean
+ Sat R of Lit 1:341 D 6 '24 550w

"Paul's world-wide wanderings and adventures, down to his lonely death in a Parisian lodging house, is marred by a lack of constructive skill and of some of those qualities of concentration and restraint that were so admirable in the first two parts. In spite of this, however, the reader's interest in Paul Minas is sustained to the end; and especially if, as one rather gathers, this is his first novel, the author is to be congratulated on a work of exceptional promise."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p190 Mr 27 '24 400w

COAR, JOHN FIRMAN. Old and the new Germany. 288p $2.50 Knopf

914.3 Germany—Economic conditions. Germany—Social conditions. Germany—Politics and government
24-1002

An account of German conditions before, during and since the war. Part one outlines the elements of German kultur—the conception of Pan-Germanism, the pretensions of Germany's ruling class before the war, the doctrine of state absolutism, the bureaucratic system and its close ally, militarism. Part two tells the story of the revolution that failed, describes the constitution which has been in force since 1919 and Germany's new political structure. Part three sets forth some of the worst obstacles that stand in the way of economic recovery—the impairment of Germany's two great natural resources, coal and iron; the excessive reparation demands; the depreciation of the currency.

Booklist 20:295 My '24

Cleveland p22 Mr '24

"An able and most informing account of Germany."
+ Ind 112:107 F 16 '24 10w

"In contrasting the old and the new Germany, Mr. Coar is at times inclined to overstate the contrast—to be too severe on the past and to idealize the present. But his stimulating book deserves to be read by thoughtful Americans, not only for what they will discover about Germany, but for the lessons which German experience has to teach America." S. B. Fay
+ — Lit R p14 N 15 '24 550w

"If he does not altogether succeed in reducing racial prejudices to absurdities, he renders us all the service of drawing them into the open and giving us a fair chance to look them over. His candor in so doing is not militant, and the author gains half the battle at the outset by not claiming exemption himself. On the whole, he writes logically enough, perhaps too logically." H. W. Puckett
+ — N Y Times p17 Ap 20 '24 1400w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:329 Je '24

Reviewed by N. P. Mead
Pol Sci Q 39:705 D '24 450w

"This is just the sort of book which is needed today by the thousands of Americans who would wish to see redefined their own attitude and that of their country towards Germany. It is a book full of information that is not available elsewhere in so simple and clear a form of presentation." B. L.
+ Survey 51:550 F 15 '24 400w

COATE, MARY. Social life in Stuart England. 188p il $2 Appleton [6s Methuen]

914.2 England—Social life and customs. Great Britain—History—Stuarts, 1603-1714
[24-13692]

From state papers, diaries and memoirs, legal documents, parish records and other contemporary sources the author has reconstructed the daily life and surroundings of ordinary men and women in seventeenth-century England. Contents: The land; The country squire; Stuart women; Stuart children; The country parson; The university; The court; Merchants and apprentices; The seaman; The soldier; Beggars and beadles; Roads and inns; Some Stuart letters and their writers; The newspaper; Sickness and superstition; Bibliography; Index.

"It is a delightful book, full of a most inspiring learning." I. W. L.
+ Boston Transcript p7 N 15 '24 520w

"The student will find here nothing that he does not know already: the casual reader may while away quite a pleasant hour."
+ — New Statesman 23:24 Ap 12 '24 60w

Reviewed by S: C. Chew
N Y Tribune p15 D 7 '24 650w

St Louis p415 D '24

"A number of good reproductions from contemporary prints add to the interest of this entertaining little book"
+ Sat R 137:538 My 24 '24 420w

"A book indispensable to the social or literary historian, and eminently readable in itself."
+ Spec 132:928 Je 7 '24 250w

"Miss Coate is navigating by no means unfamiliar waters and the cargo she brings back from her venture runs the risk of comparison with those of many others. But the reader can safely expect pleasure, as well as profit, from the perusal of her pages and the inspection of her pictures."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p194 Mr 27 '24 350w

COATSWORTH, ELIZABETH JANE. Atlas and beyond. 61p il $2 Harper
811 24-10241

Poems of places—impressions and interpretations of the beauty and color of the East, of Italy and Spain.

"Miss Coatsworth has ideas and a gift for piquant description, but she lacks the one thing, curiously—a singing line. . . Miss Coatsworth seems to me to be a writer of distinction, not yet a poet." J: Donelson
— + Bookm 59:604 Jl '24 220w

Cleveland p69 S '24

Dial 77:172 Ag '24 100w

"So much excellence rather awakens the regret that Miss Coatsworth does not display more selectiveness in her metric forms and subjects."
+ — N Y Times p10 My 18 '24 550w

Reviewed by B. S. Wagstaff
N Y Tribune p22 My 25 '24 70w

"Vivid picturization and intense realization of mood mark many of the poems in this book by a traveler in old lands." D: Morton
+ Outlook 137:318 Je 25 '24 100w

COBB, FRANK IRVING. Cobb of "The World"; a leader in liberalism; comp. from his editorial articles and public addresses, by John L. Heaton. 297p $3.50 ltd ed $10 Dutton
973.9 United States—Politics and government 24-15993

During Frank I. Cobb's nearly twenty years' editorship of the New York World its editorial page was, in the opinion of many, the most powerful of any newspaper in the United States. A selection of his editorials has been made by a World associate and prefaced by a brief biography. They are arranged in sixteen groups by subject, some of the highest points of interest and service being the series on the Panama canal, in controversy with Roosevelt; writings in vigorous but not uncritical championship of Woodrow Wilson; a selection of his most powerful war editorials; and a group devoted to advocacy of the League of nations.

Bookm 60:85 S '24 350w

Ind 113:77 Ag 2 '24 300w

"Both the limited and the regular editions are attractive books. They belong in the libraries of all schools of journalism as well as on the shelves of all admirers of honest journalism and liberal thought."
+ Lit R p985 Ag 23 '24 200w

Reviewed by L: S. Gannett
Nation 119:711 D 24 '24 800w

Reviewed by Bruce Bliven
New Repub 40:179 O 15 '24 1950w

"The publication of this book is a necessary service to American political history. To have allowed the bulk of Frank Irving Cobb's representative writings to remain accessible only in the files of The World would have been to permit the extinguishment of one of the brightest editorial torches that ever burned in this country. In an exceptional sense his writings were a true and vibrant expression of the man. As models of clarity and force, of militant thinking in English undefiled, they must remain as a monument to him more enduring than marble." A. S. Will
+ N Y Times p10 Jl 6 '24 1900w

Reviewed by W: L. McPherson
N Y Tribune p21 Ag 3 '24 1000w

"A strong, vivid book. One marvels at his freshness and vigor, as it continues to blow strong and gusty with a rising cadence in the very last phase, wherein the man became strongest and clearest. This too in the post-war phase, where most men were weakest and uncertain." Laurence Stallings
+ N Y World p11 Je 20 '24 650w

"Because of Mr. Cobb's knowledge, penetration and keen comment on the men, affairs and life of the day the book becomes an illuminating addition to the history of the years just before, during and after the war, which needs to be read by any one who wishes to understand the events of the last twenty years and the course and present tendency of affairs."
+ N Y World p6e Jl 6 '24 150w

Outlook 138:64 S 16 '24 300w

R of Rs 70:222 Ag '24 150w

St Louis p389 N '24

"There is a genuine need for the volume compiled by Mr. Heaton. It is not only an admirable record of the man and his point of view, but it should be a permanent text-book of the art of sound leader-writing." O. G. Villard
+ Sat R of Lit 1:5 Ag 2 '24 850w

"The vigor and clarity of his style matched the vigor and clarity of his beliefs and his demands. . . He was a great fighting editor, leading a paper which has had a record of business and social investigations and other undertakings of public benefit. He and the World knew what they wanted, and went after it hammer and tongs."
Springf'd Republican p6 Je 30 '24 850w

COBB, IRVIN SHREWSBURY. Goin' on fourteen; being cross-sections out of a year in the life of an average boy. 357p il $2.50 Doran
24-23485

That incorrigible imp John C. Calhoun Custer, Junior, familiarly known as Juney, was goin' on fourteen and always looking for something to happen. One day in a fit of despondency he cut off the whiskers of the family cat. Shortly after, the cat, deluded by the absence of the implements of caution, had her head firmly wedged into a tin can. In terror she fled, spreading disaster in the shape of runaways and upset wagons. But Juney, who had been forbidden to leave the backyard, missed all this excitement and continued to wish for something to happen. Quite frequently, however, things did happen when Juney was on the spot, much to his parents' discouragement. Then came the glorious day when Juney was promised his first long pants and from then on his thoughts turned to more grown-up pursuits.

"This new story by Mr. Cobb is an interesting example of a book which might become a classic were it cut to half its length. There is a great deal of rich and delightful humor in its pages, much sly wisdom and real appreciation of youth. Unfortunately the author holds down each note too long."
+ — Boston Transcript p6 O 29 '24 320w

"Irvin S. Cobb is one of the few who have been able to recapture the spirit of boyhood. In 'Goin' on Fourteen' he shows us a real boy—not an average boy, for boys defy the law of averages—but one who thinks and acts like a boy, and who is as much of a puzzle to his parents, and particularly to his mother, as most boys are." I: Anderson
+ Int Bk R p906 N '24 450w

COBB, I. S.—Continued

"Into the typical magazine formulas Mr. Cobb has poured autobiographical recollection and abounding humor. The book is highly readable." Clement Wood

+ Lit R p15 O 18 '24 430w

"The story abounds in humorous and ironic comment mingled often with deep feeling. Many of the telling scenes are full of real pathos, as the cross sections out of a year in the life of any average boy must be if they are honest."

+ N Y Times p22 O 26 '24 600w

N Y World p8e O 12 '24 30w

"One reads and chuckles and reads some more. If Mr. Cobb ever did anything better we don't know what it is."

+ Outlook 138:340 O 29 '24 50w

COBB, IRVIN SHREWSBURY.

Indiana. 52p il 50c Doran
917.72 Indiana 24-9449
Kansas. 61p il 50c Doran
917.81 Kansas 24-9445
Kentucky. 60p il 50c Doran
917.69 Kentucky 24-9450
Maine. 55p il 50c Doran
917.41 Maine 24-9446
New York. 59p il 50c Doran
917.47 New York 24-9447
North Carolina. 61p il 50c Doran
917.56 North Carolina 24-9448

These little volumes in the America guyed books series, while they show the laughable side of American life show as well the fine sturdy qualities which make each state as distinct as an individual. An impression of each—its people, their peculiarities and time-honored traditions—is clearly visible under a humorous surface.

Boston Transcript p1 Ap 26 '24 420w

Cleveland p38 My '24

"He is restrained throughout the entire series. He gives you a definite impression about each State, in an offhand manner, without any fuss, without saying anything particular about it. This is good writing. His humor, quite naturally has the fatal defect due to his having been born on American soil. It is understandable. You know what he means when you read it. From any other viewpoint but the American this is unpardonable." T: L. Masson

+ N Y Times p15 Ap 20 '24 1200w

"The manner ranges from the merely colloquial to the wildly hilarious, but the discrimination and differentiation are genuine, and often shrewd beneath the extravagance."

+ Outlook 137:401 Jl 9 '24 100w

COBLENTZ, STANTON A., comp. Modern American lyrics. 209p $2 Minton, Balch & co.

811.08 American poetry—Collections 24-27624

A selection of modern American lyrical poetry which adheres to the older forms and rhythms. Extremists are excluded. With a few exceptions the poets included are still living and of their work it has been the author's aim to choose the less quoted poems.

"The majority are of excellent quality, and would hold their own with any similar collection representing the best of any epoch in English literature."

+ Boston Transcript p3 N 8 '24 490w

"In such a company it is with a sense of pleased astonishment that one comes upon contributors of the rank of Edwin Arlington Robinson. It is even more surprising to encounter among these 'Americans' Professor George Santayana. The editor could scarcely avoid selecting noble eamples of the work of such poets as these, but the minor lyricists have suffered sadly from the anthologist's prejudice for the cliché in thought and expressions." Babette Deutsch

— + Lit R p5 N 1 '24 300w

"The volume obviously suffers from the omission of the work of Edna St. Vincent Millay and Robert Frost. This, Mr. Coblentz explains, was through no fault of his own, but one wonders at the taste which prefers Cale Young Rice to Edwin Arlington Robinson. A representative volume, perhaps—not a modern American lyricism, but of Stanton A. Coblentz." G. H. Busey

— + N Y Tribune p10 N 16 '24 420w

CODY, SHERWIN. Poe—man, poet, and creative thinker. 485p $2 Boni & Liveright

B or 92 Poe, Edgar Allan 24-11465

One-quarter of the book is devoted to a biographical study of Poe and a selection from his poems. The remaining three-quarters is given to quotations from Poe's critical writings so arranged as to show his ideas about poetry, novel writing and various aspects of literary aesthetics.

Booklist 21:25 O '24

Bookm 59:750 Ag '24 180w

"Mr. Cody's volume plants him again in the midst of our critical activity and nothing could be more salutary for American criticism at the moment than to study the precise utterances of the essays by Poe contained therein." G. B. Munson

Lit R p870 Jl 5 '24 700w

Nation 119:450 O 22 '24 150w

Outlook 138:178 O 1 '24 420w

"Arranged with a pedagogic purpose and one that is not only permissible but valuable. The book affords a survey of Poe's work in other fields than the short story and aids to understanding and appreciating that work."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 My 14 '24 300w

Wis Lib Bul 20:212 O '24

COE, GEORGE ALBERT. Law and freedom in the school: can and cannot, must and must not, ought and ought not, in pupils' projects. 133p $1.75 Univ. of Chicago press

370.1 Project method in teaching. Education of children 24-9002

This little book is a study of free purpose in children as developed by the project method in education. It shows how the purposeful project of the child, involving forethought, discrimination, planning and carrying through, depends upon the force of law—natural, social and economic, common, moral and ideal.

Educ R 68:108 S '24 1000w

Reviewed by T. V. Smith

Int J Ethics 34:405 Jl '24 360w

"After all, it is education not instruction that is necessary and that Professor Coe believes in. And it is for his succinct and thorough, fresh and vivid presentation of this view, and for his unhesitating application of the principle of freedom to the education of the young, that his book deserves widely to be read, and highly to be commended, not merely by all forward-looking teachers, but by all forward-looking laymen." Joseph Ratner

+ J Philos 21:381 Jl 3 '24 2450w

Survey 52:551 Ag 15 '24 130w

COFFIN, ROBERT PETER TRISTRAM. Christ-
² church. 54p $1.25 Seltzer

811 25-35

An American Rhodes scholar is the writer of these poems, inspired by medieval memories that cling to the stones of Christchurch, Oxford.

Reviewed by Joseph Auslander

N Y World p8e D 14 '24 150w

"He has succeeded remarkably well, for there is not only simplicity but also beauty in his twenty-five brief poems based on legends of saints and stories from the old Testament. Mr. Coffin's evident taste should, however, have saved him from introducing in his otherwise delightful 'Saint Brigid' an atrocity so alien to the spirit of the poem as 'tots,' a combination of letters that should be employed only in cross-word puzzles." Arthur Guiterman

+ — Outlook 138:730 D 31 '24 80w

COHEN, GEORGE. Jews in the making of America; introd. by Edward F. McSweeney. (Knights of Columbus racial contribution ser.) 274p $2 Stratford
296 Jews in the United States 24-17114

A record of the part taken by the Jew in the discovery and development of America, in its wars, in economic and religious life and in the arts and professions.

Boston Transcript p5 O 18 '24 770w

"Especially recommends itself to the reader by its temperate tone, a tone not always characteristic of books of this type. But this is, frankly, all the praise that I can give it. It is a superficial piece of work; it is not serious in the sense that such a work should be." C. P.
— + Cath World 120:276 N '24 650w

"So far as it goes Mr. Cohen's book is true and sincere. But it is not at all satisfying. It stops where a much more complete and thorough analysis of Jewish thought in America should begin. Perhaps Mr. Cohen will add a second volume. It is needed." M. L.
— + Lit R p954 Ag 9 '24 250w
R of Rs 70:334 S '24 50w

COHEN, OCTAVUS ROY. Sunclouds. 303p $2 Dodd
24-21921

A collection of short stories featuring the dusky characters who have appeared in the author's former stories: Florian Slappey, Lawyer Chew, Acey Upshaw, and others. Contents: The law and the profits; His wild notes; His children's father; The birth of a notion; The late lamented; The wild and woolly vest; Measure for pleasure; The battle of sedan; The spider and the lie.

Boston Transcript p2 N 12 '24 500w

"Mr. Cohen's stories are ingenious, they hang together, and they have trick endings that do not appear to be tricks. And over all is a brand of humor entirely irresistible." O. C.
+ Lit R p10 O 11 '24 50w
N Y Times p9 N 23 '24 170w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e S 21 '24 70w

"The author's titles and names are ingeniously comic and we never tire of his society."
+ Outlook 138:258 O 15 '24 70w

"Clever, immensely popular these stories are, and probably will continue to be."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:188 O 11 '24 350w

COLBY, ELBRIDGE. Profession of arms. 183p $1.50 (7s 6d) Appleton
355 Military art and science 24-10042

The author, captain of infantry in the United States army, writes of the army as a profession and of the qualifications and training of officers. Each branch of the service is dealt with briefly and its duties in peace and war are clearly defined.

N Y Tribune p26 Ag 10 '24 180w

"The book is short but each chapter has something of value for those who consider the question of sending their sons into the army, and many of those now holding the King's commission might read it with advantage."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p346 Je 5 '24 1000w

COLCORD, JOANNA CARVER, comp. Roll and ^{2} go; songs of American sailormen; with an introd. by Lincoln Colcord. 118p $5 Bobbs
811.08 Chanties. Sea songs 24-29424

"At last, Joanna Colcord, the daughter of an American deep water shipmaster, the late Captain Lincoln Alden Colcord, has brought together the great sea chanties, the immortal songs of sea labor; ribald, roaring tunes, hearty and whole winded."—Sat R of Lit

"When it comes to deep water music, Mrs. Colcord has a great family reputation to uphold, but she has done it ably. To the memory of Lincoln Colcord she dedicates it, and in his spirit has she written it. They are all here, all the stirring chanties which we love, in all their versions, and a delightful running commentary which is a story in itself."
+ Boston Transcript p4 D 27 '24 570w

"Some were obscene; some nonsensical, yet their texture, as Miss Colcord's collection shows them, has the beauty of naturalness and simplicity. They are the very last, perhaps, of the folk songs, for crews of steamships do not ordinarily sing chanties." R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p5 N 16 '24 370w

"If ever a job was worth doing, it is here, in 'Roll and Go,' and if ever a seamanlike piece of work has been produced it is this. One need not be a seasoned salt to get the thrill from a chanty. The music, as well as the words, are given, and the method of rendition is simple." Felix Riesenberg
+ Sat R of Lit 1:374 D 13 '24 460w

COLE, GEORGE DOUGLAS HOWARD. Brooklyn murders. 374p $2 Seltzer [7s 6d Collins]
24-7111

At his seventieth birthday party Sir Vernon Brooklyn reads his will to all his assembled relatives. The next morning his nephews, George Brooklyn and John Prinsep, who share equally in it, are found dead. The bodies are a distance apart, yet the conclusion is that each man killed the other—a physical impossibility. To complicate matters further there are certain obvious clues which seem to point to Walter Brooklyn, Sir Vernon's worthless brother. Carter Woodman, the Brooklyn lawyer, is cognizant of the will and seems to feel that Walter had a definite motive in murdering the two men. This opinion, however, does not satisfy Joan Cowper, Walter's step-daughter, and her lover. Together they come across a startling bit of evidence and unravel the mystery from an entirely unsuspected thread.

Cleveland p67 S '24

"A good situation opens The Brooklyn Murders, but Mr. Cole has taken too little care to puzzle his readers about the author of the crime. I had my suspicions from the moment the murders were described; the sixth chapter confirmed them; and the thirty-two chapters that remained did not reveal any very ingenious method or original idea." Raymond Mortimer
— + New Statesman 21:501 Ag 4 '23 120w

"'The Brooklyn Murders' will no doubt have a wide circulation. It is a workmanlike—if not particularly inspired—novel."
+ — N Y Times p9 My 4 '24 560w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p6e Ap 27 '24 100w
Outlook 138:468 N 19 '24 40w

"Mr. Cole's first excursion into fiction is a first-class detective story—a very skilful piece of work which will delight the heart of all to whom such stories appeal."
+ Spec 131:291 S 1 '23 270w
Springf'd Republican p7a My 25 '24 180w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p521 Ag 2 '23 330w

COLLINS, ARCHIE FREDERIC. Boy chemist. ^{2} 300p il $2 Lothrop
540 Chemistry 24-20843

The author presents in simple form a practical course in chemistry. He discusses the elements that make up our world and shows how they combine in nature and the arts. A boy can easily and safely make the experiments given herein with apparatus which is not expensive, and which he can readily construct himself. Contents: What you need to experiment with; Air, the miracle-worker; Experiments with oxygen, nitrogen, and carbon dioxide; The wizardry of water; Experiments with hydrogen; A pair of smelly gases; Acids, the great solvents; What bases and salts are; The mystic metals—their alloys and amalgams; Chemistry simply explained; Fire, flame, heat, and light; How to make photographs; The white magic of chemistry; Safe and sane fireworks; Useful household recipes.

COLLINS, A. F:—Continued

Booklist 21:116 D '24

"A book of high practical value. One of its admirable features is its simple exposition of the elements that make up the world and their combination in nature and the arts."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a D 7 '24 200w

COLLINS, DALE. Ordeal. 298p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Heinemann]
24-18096

Ted, the steward of the yacht Spray, had lost one of his ears in some past encounter and with it he seemed to have lost all he ever possessed of the milk of human kindness. When the yacht was becalmed he deliberately planned to subjugate the members of the party, as he had already subdued the crew. He was determined to show these idlers that altho he had waited on their class all his life, he was just as good as they were. Fate played into his hands but just when he was about to reduce his employers to the depths of degradation a very little incident freed them of Ted forever.

Booklist 21:26 O '24
Cleveland p92 D '24
Reviewed by C. M. Morrison
Lit R p14 N 1 '24 400w

"Though it lacks the grandeur of theme which one finds in the best of Conrad, there is sustained power in this harsh, straightforward narrative." Rose Lee
Nation 119:449 O 22 '24 500w

"The story is extraordinarly swift narrative marked by energy and vividness of phrase. His objectivity in handling alike the external world and the human kind who traverse it is unbroken. There is never a touch of sentiment, or partiality. His detachment is never more masterly than when he deftly labels his characters after their terrible experience by the same standard trademark of superior humanity which they originally bore." R. M. Lovett
+ New Repub 39:333 Ag 13 '24 600w

"It is a very long novel, this of Mr. Collins, a little too long, but so vivid, so interesting, and on the whole so well done that one does not feel inclined to linger on its minor defects."
+ — N Y Times p9 Ag 3 '24 950w

"'Ordeal,' despite its title, is rather tautly drawn in its horror, almost to the point of snapping into improbability. Ted, however, the demon of lust and cruelty, is hacked out of granite—a giant gargoyle, leeringly toying with the puny creatures who hate him but are powerless to attack him in their dread. He is a creation of amazing power." F. V. Roman
N Y World p8e Jl 27 '24 180w
Outlook 138:63 S 10 '24 60w

"It has great strength and a promise of yet more strength in the future. But it should be forever remembered by those who would write of primitive forces and passions, that there must shine through the texture of the tale the 'light of magic suggestiveness,' a light that illumines us, in all its weakness and folly and grandeur, 'the holy spirit of man.'" W: McFee
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:3 Ag 2 '24 650w
Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 24 '24 80w

"Here is fine matter for a sensational tale; and Mr. Collins keeps the reader anxious and on edge up to his climax."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p302 My 15 '24 500w

COLLINS, FRANCIS ARNOLD. Our harbors and inland waterways. 295p il $2 Century
387 Harbors—United States. Inland navigation—United States 24-21786

A simply written, popular account of the harbor and inland waterway facilities of the United States. The book describes the rival ambitions of the principal seaports, the planning and building of harbors, the operation of cargo handling, New York harbor traffic, the Pacific, Gulf and Great Lakes ports, and some canals and proposed waterways.

Booklist 21:93 D '24

"Authoritative scientifically as Mr. Collins's study is, it has a vigor and freshness rarely welcome to all readers who, even if they have no professional knowledge of docks and jetties dream dreams and see visions of the long processional of merchant ships along the world's sea-ways."
+ Boston Transcript p2 D 27 '24 720w
R of Rs 71:112 Ja '25 100w

"This book, while aiming to be popular, is neither interesting nor accurate, and shows small acquaintance with the subject. There are economic and interesting phases to be grasped. This book treats neither with success."
— Springf'd Republican p12 O 3 '24 500w

COLLINS, FREDERICK LEWIS. Our American kings. 257p il $2.50 Century
923.2 Governors—United States 24-23380

A book portraying the personalities of the present governors of fourteen of our states, giving impressions of their appearance, their home life, their families, their hobbies. The following governors are treated: Smith of New York; Silzer of New Jersey; Pinchot of Pennsylvania; Ritchie of Maryland; Baxter of Maine; Donahey of Ohio; Groesbeck of Michigan; Richardson of California; Preus of Minnesota; Nestos of North Dakota; Neff of Texas; Hart of Washington; Blaine of Wisconsin; Morgan of West Virginia.

Booklist 21:148 Ja '25
Boston Transcript p2 O 25 '24 220w
Ind 113:381 N 8 '24 10w
Nation 119:474 O 29 '24 200w

"Just why Mr. Collins should have chosen to mar and discredit his really excellent and worth while new book by so outlandish a title is past comprehension."
+ — N Y Times p23 N 9 '24 660w

"The book is pure journalese; entertaining, but quite superficial. It does not pretend to be critical. The notices of the wives and children of the governors are mushy. Yet, when all's said, it is an entertaining book, and certain to be popular."
+ — Outlook 138:377 N 5 '24 350w

COLLINS, GILBERT. Far Eastern jaunts. 282p il $3.50 Holt [10s 6d Methuen]
915.2 Japan—Description and travel. China—Description and travel [24-15324]

A book of travel in Japan and China. The author, formerly of Punch, writes in the light style of the tourist and tells many humorous incidents of his jaunts.

"Clear, concise, spirited."
+ Boston Transcript p6 D 13 '24 700w

"A readable book in which information and amusement are skilfully mixed."
+ Nation and Ath 35:26 Ap 5 '24 60w

"He seems to know his Far East fairly well; but, while humor is certainly an indispensable part of a traveller's equipment, it is more debatable whether it should be the main ingredient in the outlook of a stranger guest upon a foreign land."

— + New Statesman 22:674 Mr 15 '24 100w

"They are extremely well done, these anecdotes, almost always amusing and usually worth while because they graphically illustrate some phase of life."
+ N Y Times p21 D 21 '24 950w

"His humor is of the whimsical brand, which is the aroma of all wit. There are no hackneyed words in his vocabulary. And he appreciates the supreme value of the concrete. The result is a delightful volume of 'Jaunts' which carry the reader charmingly through Japan, Korea and China." Blair Niles
+ N Y Tribune p9 D 14 '24 200w

"Mr. Collins's light style suits the tourist, for a tourist is not in a position to see more than the superficial. It is as a tourist that Mr. Collins visited Japan and the part of China of which he writes. But he is a tourist of an unusual type, for he knows the East well enough to speak a little Japanese and to be intelligible in one of the languages of China. Thus he retains the fresh vision of the tourist without being dazed, as the tourist is, by the multiplicity of novel sights."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p164 Mr 13 '24 350w

COLLINS, JAMES HIRAM. Story of canned foods. 251p il $3.50 Dutton
664.8 Canning and preserving 24-15415

A popular account of the history of canning from the discovery by the Frenchman, Nicholas Appert, more than a century ago, of the art of sterilization by heat. The 'big three' of the canning industry—tomatoes, corn and peas—are treated in detail, the evolution of the tin can being described, and canning processes and machinery. Separate chapters are given to other canned foods—condensed milk, canned salmon and meats, pineapples and the ready-to-eat combination dishes. Concluding chapters have to do with the wholesomeness of canned foods and their marketing.

"Throughout his book, Mr. Collins avoids technicalities. His style is admirable. His imagination gives picturesqueness and color to his scientific skill. His illustrations—illustrate." F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p3 Jl 19 '24 550w

"He has used the ultra-popular style of the American daily newspaper, including exaggerations and loose statements intended to compel attention. While this method may be understood in this country, it is not to be commended." L. M. Browne
— + J Home Econ 16:591 O '24 450w

"There is romance, it would seem, to be found somewhere in whatever man sets his hand to. Mr. Collins has found it in a tin can. His account of the evolution of the canning industry makes a tale more interesting than are many of the current novels."
+ N Y Times p20 Jl 6 '24 450w

COLLINS, JOSEPH. Taking the literary pulse. 317p $3 Doran
804 Literature—History and criticism. Fiction. Psychological novels 24-10252

Again "the doctor looks at literature" and from his many years' experience with mental and emotional disorders studies the psychology of the fiction writers of today as it is revealed in their novels. In the process of taking the literary pulse, he analyzes many of the recent most talked-of English and American novels and some French ones. Partial contents: Purity and pornography; Sophism and Mr Sherwood Anderson; The big four of American women writers; Heredity in fictional literature; The psychology of the midget; Nature versus art in recent French novels; Unpleasant novels; Mr Frank Swinnerton and his books; Some French writers of the present day; Doctors as men of letters; Lunatics of literature.

Booklist 21:60 N '24
Reviewed by Ralph Bergengren
Boston Transcript p5 My 17 '24 1800w
Cath World 119:565 Jl '24 280w
Dial 77:439 N '24 150w
Ind 112:268 My 10 '24 10w

"The book is readable, not for its opinions on books or people, but because it is enthusiastic in spirit, and because Dr. Collins is, with all his sins, possessed of the gift of being interesting —one hardly knows why."
— + Ind 112:288 My 24 '24 750w

"An absorbing book of criticism. Dr. Collins has read like a demon. He writes with facility. You may fight over 'Taking the Literary Pulse' but it is a doughty enough opponent." Walter Yust
+ — Lit R p790 My 31 '24 1050w

Reviewed by J. J. Smertenko
Nation 119:473 O 29 '24 380w

"When Dr. Collins gets away from Lawrence, Anderson and Company, he is much pleasanter reading. The book is, unfortunately, too crowded, and, consequently, not a little annoying. One gets somehow the impression that the author jotted down and card-catalogued his reactions to a multitude of authors and books and sent the cards to the printer."
— + N Y Times p11 My 11 '24 2900w

"'Taking the Literary Pulse' seems to be composed of criticisms and reviews which have appeared in periodicals. Most of them are so sketchy and so slightly substantiated that it is hard to take issue with them. Dr. Collins never fails to give a good deal of the 'story' of any book he discusses. In the case of some writers he does little more than this! The book thus attains a utility that is all its own." Matthew Josephson
— + N Y Tribune p27 Je 29 '24 1650w
N Y World p7e Je 8 '24 300w
Outlook 137:30 S 3 '24 40w
St Louis p350 O '24

COLUM, PADRAIC. At the gateways of the day. (Tales and legends of Hawaii) 217p $2.50 Yale univ. press
398.2 Folklore—Hawaiian Islands 24-24632

Some years ago the Hawaiian legislature appointed a commission to make a survey of the stories belonging to the myth and folklore of the islands and to have them made over into stories for children. Padraic Colum was invited to make the survey and to reshape the stories. He spent four months on the islands, making a study of the material that had been collected and hearing a recital of as many of the stories as possible from the lips of native Hawaiians in whose memories the traditions still lived. This collection of legends is the result. Mr. Colum has included an introduction and notes on the stories.

Booklist 21:156 Ja '25

"There is about them the fascination of the Polynesian sweetness and majesty, but especially the charm of the Padraic Colum imagery."
+ Boston Transcript p4 O 1 '24 380w

"They are vigorous stories, filled with wonder as athletic as the wildest Martian phantasmagoria of Edgar Rice Burroughs. The telling holds that distinction that is innate in Mr. Colum's work: poet to the soul, even his prose sings." Clement Wood
+ Lit R p9 O 11 '24 300w

"Mr. Colum's volume is distinctly new treasure-trove from fairyland, and while it will be welcomed by all who prefer dream-stuff to, say, 'sex-stuff' in literature it will be a positive godsend to mothers who, hard set to find new fairy tales for their offspring, know that there is no rarer thing than a really good new fairy tale." R: Le Gallienne

COLUM, PADRAIC—Continued
+ N Y Times p5 Ja 11 '25 2300w

"I mistrusted, in spite of the well known tales from the classics, the peculiar flavor of the Gaelic mind. This book makes clear, however, that the commission had a sound instinct in choosing, first of all, an excellent storyteller, strong enough to hack his way through the thorny underbrush of the Fornander records, the encyclopedic labors of Martha Warren Beckwith, and the scattered collections of Dr. Emerson, Thomas Thrum and William D. Westervelt. For the first time, the tales are literature." Genevieve Taggard
+ N Y Tribune p2 O 12 '24 670w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p795 N 27 '24 700w

COLUMBIA ASSOCIATES IN PHILOSOPHY. Introduction to reflective thinking; by Laurence Buermeyer, and others. 351p $2 Houghton

153 Thought and thinking 23-13137

The book is written to emphasize the part which thought plays in the formation of belief, to show the process involved in thinking and to point out some of the habits of mind which the thinker must cultivate. Thru the first six chapters the stages in an act of thought are illustrated and developed by means of examples. The next chapter traces a great inquiry, the steps by which the theory of evolution culminated in an hypothesis verified from many fields. The next chapter similarly traces an historical inquiry. The last section of the book deals with values and shows how reflection serves as a guide to right opinion in personal and social problems.

"Some of the chapters are more successful than others, but the more able students will undoubtedly find the book enlightening and stimulating."
+ Int J Ethics 34:203 Ja '24 180w

"In spite of regrettable faults, the book is a distinct success, and the authors, in thus coöperating, are to be especially commended for the example they have set other writers. Instead of proceeding, each on his own account, to set down the results of thoughtful teaching and experimentation, thus flooding the market with a series of books —all on the same subject, all of about equal value, each limiting the circulation of the other —these nine have pooled their ideas and worked out their private disagreements and published the results of their combined efforts in this excellent volume." Marten ten Hoor
+ J Philos 21:235 Ap 24 '24 2100w

"The chapter on Reflective Thinking in Law, though far from exhausting the relations between law and logic, is most interesting and worth while. Other sections, notably that on Mill's 'Methods,' and some of those on mathematics, follow the beaten path too closely; still other sections waste words in saying little. But after all this is an attempt in an almost untried direction, and the group of young men whose names appear on the title page doubtless feel the imperfections of their first edition more keenly than any one else can." H. T. Costello
+ — Lit R p646 Ap 5 '24 300w

Reviewed by Joseph Jastrow
Nation 118:401 Ap 4 '24 950w

COLUMBUS, CHRISTOPHER. Journal of [his] first voyage to America; with an introd. by Van Wyck Brooks. 251p il $3.50 A. & C. Boni

973.1 America—Discovery and exploration 24-26748

"It is not generally known that Christopher Columbus kept a day-by-day journal of his first voyage to America and that an abstract of it is in existence. At least two excellent translations have been made since this abstract of the original document was found in 1790 by one Don Martin Fernandez del Navarrete in the archives of the Duke del Infantado. The abstract was by Bartoleme de Las Casas—'The Apostle of the Indies.' This Bartoleme Las Casas had access to the original journal, which was lost, just how and when it is not known. But his abstract is very illuminating and apparently quite complete, containing constant illusion to what 'the Admiral says' and frequently quotes the exact words used by Columbus. Navarrete printed this abstract in 1825, and a translation by Samuel Kettell was published in Boston in 1827; and another translation by Clements R. Markham was published by The Hakluyt Society in London in 1892. The publishers of the present volume have chosen the Kettell version."—N Y Times

Booklist 21:19 O '24

Bookm 59:749 Ag '24 200w

"The book is agreeably printed and bound, well edited with notes, and equipped with a persuasive foreword by Van Wyck Brooks. One's only regret is that in addition to the drawings ascribed to Columbus there was not included a chart showing his tortuous course in the West Indies." G. B. Munson
+ Lit R p834 Je 21 '24 450w

Reviewed by C. H. Grattan
Nation 119:193 Ag 20 '24 1000w

New Repub 40:80 S 17 '24 60w

"It is the actual record of the journey which has inspired hundreds of novels, plays and poems, and the reader may be assured that this simple, bare and direct narrative of one of the world's greatest adventures is much more interesting than most of these creative efforts." L: Kantor
+ N Y Times p5 Je 8 '24 1650w

Reviewed by Van Wyck Brooks
N Y Tribune p21 My 11 '24 1150w

"This reprint is most welcome. It is a quaint document, full of psychological as well as historic interest, fraught with unconscious humor and rendered pathetic by the anxiety for gold recorded on almost every one of its pages."
+ Outlook 138:512 N 26 '24 140w

St Louis p389 N '24

Springf'd Republican p7a Ag. 31 '24 1000w

COLVER, MRS ALICE MARY (ROSS). Dear pretender. 292p il $2 Penn

24-5100

"Nan was one of the 'born mothers.' Hence what was more natural, when she lost her position as stenographer for a certain unpleasant Mr. Dorf than that she should advertise for a position to care for children. The wording of the advertisement was unusual. But Nan herself was unusual. It read: 'Wanted—a position as mother in a family of wealth and refinement.' By chance, or fate,—what you will—Bruce Wilson was at the same time advertising for a 'lover of children, to act as pseudo-mother to a boy and girl.' Nan answered this heaven-sent call. And within a very short time she was established in Bruce Wilson's country home, 'mothering' his two children. She was very happy for a time. Then a mysterious something clouded her relationship [with her employer]. But even before that Nan had learned that the inevitable exception to every rule, even of hating men, had appeared. However, she played bravely her game of 'pretending.' And of course everything came out all right."—Boston Transcript

Boston Transcript p6 Mr 12 '24 400w

"A light, pretty little story."
+ Lit R p677 Ap 12 '24 180w

"A certain charm of narration and power of characterization marks Miss Colver's work and renders it distinctly readable." G. M. Goldman

+ N Y World p7e My 25 '24 70w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p437 Jl 10 '24 30w

COMMONS, JOHN ROGERS. Legal foundations of capitalism. 394p $3 (15s) Macmillan

330.1 Capitalism. Jurisprudence. Industry and state. Property 24-1299

"An attempt to present the economic concepts underlying present day legal decisions regarding property, contact and business relations."—Wis Lib Bul

Boston Transcript p4 F 2 '24 800w

Reviewed by J: D. Black

Lit R p4 S 20 '24 650w

"Much of the value of his book is lost because many of Mr. Commons's ideas must be dug out, by main force, from a thick mass of heavy phrases and awkward, lumbering sentences. Undoubtedly the worth of his book would be increased tenfold if Mr. Commons could have maintained that ease and simplicity of expression of which he is at times the master." D: E. Lilienthal

— Nation 119:315 S 24 '24 800w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p178 Mr 20 '24 250w

"One of the most important books in the field of theoretical economics that has appeared for many years."

+ Wis Lib Bul 20:121 My '24

CONANT, MRS ISABELLA (FISKE). Many wings. 79p $1.50 Brimmer

811

"Isabel Fiske Conant, who is well known as a pleasing and finished lyrist through the columns of many of the newspapers and through the magazines, makes her first appearance in book form."—N Y Times

"Poetry is nothing if it is not life at a vivid and trembling intensity or in deep saturation. Mrs. Conant's group of poems—slight, crisp, almost epigrammatic—have this vividness and this intensity." D: Morton

+ Bookm 59:347 My '24 120w

"Elusive little poems better read singly, if one catches the mood, than when grouped here as a whole, for sustained as they are in singleness of feeling, the strain, ever so slight indeed, must need be kept up, or they may go suddenly flat."

— + Boston Transcript p4 Ap 26 '24 180w

"Many of those who have come to look for Miss Conant's name in their favorite paper will be glad to welcome her new venture and to have so much of her excellent, even if somewhat light, verse readily at hand."

+ N Y Times p25 F 24 '24 140w

CONFESSIONS of a prima donna. 300p $2.50 Stokes

24-5900

Born an American, of Italian parentage, the artist began her career at an early age. After years of study in Italy and struggle for advancement, she became eventually a beautiful young prima donna, winning success and recognition in all the capitals of Europe, in South America, and only less so in New York, and incidentally entangling herself in an ardent love affair. The book is filled with the events of a singer's life, her acquaintances with fellow artists, encounters with "maestros," the hopes, jealousies and fears incidental to stage life, and her temporary retirement, due to a fancied impairment in her voice.

Booklist 20:297 My '24

"The more suspicious reader will boggle over the cleverness with which the whole narrative is written, for the method and the style are those of a trained and skillful writer rather than of one whose whole experience has been in the practice of a very different art. But, whatever its genesis, the book is a highly entertaining volume and apparently so accurate a tale of a real career that if it isn't true it might as well be."

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 16 '24 650w

Springf'd Republican p10 Je 18 '24 600w

Wis Lib Bul 20:122 My '24

CONKLING, HILDA. Silverhorn, the Hilda [2] Conkling book for other children. 159p il $2.50 Stokes

811 24-28481

This volume contains more than one hundred poems from "Poems by a little girl" and "Shoes of the wind" which are the favorites of children. The book is beautifully illustrated.

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Bookm 60:164 O '24 130w

"They are exquisite forms of child expression, and this book, illustrated by Dorothy P. Lathrop, will be a real addition to a child's library." M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p129 Ja '25 50w

N Y Times p7 D 7 '24 520w

"Hilda's exquisitely desirable volume is not so much poetry for or about children as it is just poetry beautiful enough to turn a boatload of waggish bards white with admiration and green with envy." Joseph Auslander

N Y World p8e D 14 '24 190w

"The collection though pleasing, is uneven."

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:420 D 27 '24 260w

CONNELL, RICHARD. Apes and angels. 312p $2 Minton, Balch & co.

24-11477

A collection of short stories about that curious blend of ape and angel—man. The first story concerns Papa Chibou, chief watchman of a waxworks museum. His favorite figure in the show was Napoleon, who had been in the museum as long as he. When the show was closed and the waxworks sold at auction as junk Papa Chibou bid his last franc for Napoleon, but he went to a dealer who had four more francs to bid than Chibou. However, a kind fate ordained that the friends of a quarter of a century should not be separated. The story has an odd little ironic twist at the end, quite unexpected. Contents: A friend of Napoleon; A reputation; Son of a sloganeer; The wronging of Edwin Dell; The unfamiliar; A house in the country; Shoes; The prince has the mumps; The battle of Washington Square; The last of the Flatfeet; The man who could imitate a bee.

"His sense of humor is wielded by Mr. Connell quite as effectively as his pen in the writing of these eleven stories. They all have vitality and originality."

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 17 '24 320w

"Connell knows how to construct short stories and has a flair for satiric fantasy. He has great inventiveness. He rings the bell with a loud jangle at least twice in a set of eleven, and that is a good average for humor, provided the other stories are not definitely below standard. Which they are not." W: R. Benet

+ Lit R p772 My 24 '24 170w

Nation 119:343 O 1 '24 180w

"He takes man off his guard, in his pretentious moments when he struts with unbecoming heroics, and lampoons his follies, until he gracefully and quite charmingly laughs him off the stage. With arresting wit, neatly turned, he gives delight that does not fail of its piquancy, but rather increases with growing familiarity."

+ N Y Times p8 Ap 27 '24 900w

N Y World p8e Jl 27 '24 200w

CONRAD, JOSEPH. Shorter tales of Joseph Conrad. 452p $5 Doubleday
24-29830

Contents: Youth; The secret sharer; The brute (an indignant tale); To-morrow; Typhoon; Because of the dollars; The partner; Talk.

"As a compact collection of the best of Joseph Conrad's work, this volume does him full justice." E. F. E.
+ Boston Transcript p7 N 5 '24 500w

Reviewed by Kenneth Fuessle
Int Bk R p98 Ja '25 440w

Reviewed by Mark Van Doren
Nation 120:45 Ja 14 '25 250w

"Here is a gallery of peculiar interest to the Conradian, an array of eight remarkable stories, now almost classic, with a truly revelatory preface."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:384 D 13 '24 350w

CONRAD, JOSEPH, and FORD, FORD MADOX (F. M. HUEFFER). Nature of a crime. 108p $2.50 Doubleday [5s Duckworth]
24-23735

"The little book consists of a series of letters written by a man who believes himself on the eve of suicide because he is just about to be detected in a great fraud. The letters are addressed to a married woman with whom he is in love; and we are to believe that he has enriched himself at the expense of his clients merely to distract his mind from his love-longings. . . On their tight-rope walk the collaborators contrive to fall into some very pleasing attitudes. For all the essential falsity, even absurdity, of the letter-writer, he is made to say, and say very well, some fine things about love and death and other great matters with which, all the time, we feel that he is unworthy to be occupied."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"'The Nature of a Crime' at least throws a bit of new light upon Joseph Conrad. But there is a little incongruity somewhere—hidden, inexplicable. Can it be, perhaps, the collaboration? Ay, there's the rub! The collaboration is not harmonious. Such collaborations seldom are." J: H. Preston
Int Bk R p137 Ja '25 560w

"This early bit of collaboration will be of interest mainly to admirers and collectors of Conrad—or of Ford. It was intended as Mr. Ford informs us, to become 'a novel treating of the eternal subject of the undetected criminal,' and, as Mr. Conrad wrote in his share of the preface, was achieved as a fragment, forgotten, and rediscovered with some astonishment at the completeness in itself of the slight piece." H. S. Seligmann
Lit R p4 S 27 '24 350w

"Indeed there is very little to say of this story, this little novel, such value as it may possess lying almost wholly in the grace of the writing, which does charm the ear. But, for all its grace, we shall not discover Conrad's secret in it, nor will even the most ingenious find it easy to fit this odd piece into 'the figure in the carpet.'" Forrest Reid
— + Nation and Ath 36:58 O 11 '24 550w

Reviewed by J: Franklin
New Statesman 24:82 O 25 '24 120w

"Despite its mediocrity as a whole, 'The Nature of a Crime' has here and there a high light of inspiration as gratifying as it is unexpected." F. V. Roman
— + N Y World p8e O 12 '24 800w

Reviewed by Gerald Gould
Sat R 138:578 D 6 '24 270w

Spec 133:472 O 4 '24 320w

"The work is so well done that we are almost persuaded to share the joy of a man of brains and parts in robbing a pompous young prig like his client. But to enjoy the letters we must forget the fundamental circumstances; and, in the end, the value of the book will lie in the prefaces and the light they throw on the collaborators' way of working together."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p610 O 2 '24 400w

CONRAD, LAWRENCE H. Temper. 305p $2 Dodd
24-3531

It is evidently in the tempering of steel that the author finds his analogy for the slow process by which an Italian worker in an automobile factory is tempered for life. Paul Rinelli is ambitious and a dreamer. All the time he is working he dreams of getting ahead, but somehow his dreams never materialize and he is always the slave of his machine. The scene of the story scarcely shifts from the factory and the book is filled with the roar of the great machines, among which move hard driven men, shunted from one department to another and oppressed always by the uncertainty of employment.

"On the descriptive side, Mr Conrad has written graphically; his successes in the more vital elements of the narrative are only approximate."
— + Dial 76:370 Ap '24 50w

"One thinks of this book as a quaint yet impressive oddity. Its curious quality consists of a style that is in every intonation penetrated with the unchanging psychology of the hero. The story is told in short ingenuous phrases that seem to proceed directly from him." Eva Goldbeck
Lit R p952 Ag 9 '24 300w

"Mr. Conrad provides a vivid background; his picture of modern industry is carefully documented and done with more than average intensity. Manifestly he has observed the scene with intelligence as well as sympathy."
+ Nation 118:617 My 28 '24 50w

N Y Times p24 F 17 '24 600w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e F 10 '24 360w

Springf'd Republican p7a S 7 '24 350w

CONSETT, MONTAGU WILLIAM WARCOP PETER, and DANIEL, OCTAVIUS HAROLD. Triumph of unarmed forces (1914-1918). 344p $4.50 Brentano's [15s Williams & N.]

940.318 European war, 1914-1919—Economic aspects [23-10893]

"This volume is an account of the transactions by which Germany during the course of the Great War was enabled to obtain supplies prior to her collapse under the pressure of economic and other forces. It is the contention of the author that Great Britain carried on a considerable trade with Germany and assisted her in a financial way through the four neutral countries of Sweden, Denmark, Holland and Norway. Somebody, presumably British financial houses, stood to benefit by these transactions, and the suggestion is put forward, in a somewhat indirect way, that there was treachery on the part of some men in positions of trust and responsibility. The author, Admiral Consett, was British naval attaché, in Scandinavia from 1912 to 1919, and in 1920 was naval adviser to the Supreme Council. Quite evidently his duties during the war were such as to give him an opportunity to study little-known movements of trade, and it is no wonder that in England 'The Triumph of Unarmed Forces' has caused a sensation. For it is a serious indictment of the conduct of the war."—Boston Transcript

"It is a great and brave book on the economic aspects of the World War." J: A. Gade
+ Am Hist R 29:333 Ja '24 800w

Booklist 20:323 Je '24

"This volume is one of the most important of the post-mortems on the war." O. McK., jr.
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 26 '24 600w

"Admiral Consett's attitude in discussing the issues of the war is delightfully frank. He is not as ruthlessly British as Lord Fisher;

neither is he adroitly plausible like Lloyd George. His argument is based upon the very broad proposition that Great Britain can do no wrong because, isolated as the nation is upon a small island, the rule of her necessity must be the guide for her, and therefore for the rest of the world as well. . . Without in any manner detracting from our natural admiration for a real Englishman, this volume discloses certain British tendencies which it may be well even for an American to keep in mind." C: Nagel

+ — Nation 118:208 F 20 '24 1100w

N Y Times p3 S 16 '23 2400w

"This is an extremely important subject, though we must also add a very complicated one, and we are grateful to Admiral Consett for having written this book. In all future discussions of the subject it will be quite indispensable for its documentary evidence."

+ Spec 130:888 My 26 '23 1300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p347 My 24 '23 1800w

CONWELL, RUSSELL HERMAN. Romantic rise of a great American. 225p $2 Harper

B or 92 Wanamaker, John 24-24578

Dr Conwell tells the story of his friend John Wanamaker and the way he worked out his ideas of a store which should really serve its customers, giving them fair play and courteous treatment.

"Of his religious and humanitarian interests, Mr. Conwell writes with a dignity of reserve which would be specially pleasing to the unaffected kindly man who never allowed his right hand to know what his left was doing, and yet who was as businesslike in his benefactions as in the management of his great department stores." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 26 '24 1200w

R of Rs 70:669 D '24 20w

COOKE, EDMUND VANCE. Companionable poems. 299p $1.50 McClurg

811 24-4651

Poems on homely themes and in homely style by a popular versifier whose poems are widely circulated in newspapers and magazines.

"To those who enjoy the manner of verse manufactured and turned out at the rate of one a day by Edgar Guest, James Montague and their like, this latest book from the typewriter of Edmund Vance Cook, who claims to have sold poetry to every magazine or paper that will pay cash, will be gladly welcomed. Mr. Cooke has been often called the 'second James Whitcomb Riley.' We doubt the aptness of this name, for to our mind Riley is far superior to Mr. Cooke, but we will admit that the latter has written an occasional poem of merit."

— + Boston Transcript p3 My 31 '24 310w

COOLIDGE, CALVIN. Price of freedom. 420p $2.50 Scribner

308 United States—Politics and government 24-6461

The speeches of President Coolidge here brought together belong chiefly to the period of his vice-presidency and have been chosen to present his conception of American principles and the character of the nation. His prize essay on the causes of the American revolution, written while he was a senior at Amherst, is added. Partial contents: The supports of civilization; Theodore Roosevelt; The banks and the people; Thought, the master of things; The power of the moral law; The title of American; Our heritage from Hamilton; The place of Lincoln; The purpose of America; The instruments of progress; Great Virginians; The limitations of the law; The price of freedom; Massachusetts and the nation; Progress toward freedom; The destiny of America; The Green mountains.

"His earnestness, far from antagonizing is persuasive; its purity and elevation, aided by a style uniquely terse and simple, banish all suggestion of the commonplace." H. G. Pearson

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Jl '24 580w

"These straightforward essays and addresses are remarkably impressive in their collected form." J. F.

+ Bookm 59:340 My '24 500w

Ind 112:241 Ap 26 '24 20w

"Originality is not to be found in these documents. The commonplace too often obtrudes. Palpably, Mr. Coolidge is a reproducer of other men's ideas. The great men of the Republican party he lauds inordinately, with little sense of perspective. . . To the critical mind it is a relief to turn to Mr. Coolidge's spoken treatises on good government and the responsibilities of citizenship. In these he is at his best and worthy of our esteem." H: E. Armstrong

— + Int Bk R p512 Je '24 400w

— Nation 118:683 Je 11 '24 1300w

Nation and Ath 35:214 My 17 '24 230w

"If Mr. Lewis Mumford were to get out a new edition of his Story of Utopias, published a year or so ago, I would suggest that he include in it in addition to Plato, Thomas More, Campanella and William Morris, that description of an imaginary commonwealth called the United States of America which Mr. Calvin Coolidge had just published under the title, The Price of Freedom. Other Utopians have set forth fantastic notions of human rights and aspirations such as could hardly be realized in the light of common day. Mr. Coolidge's Utopia is simpler and more attainable. We have only to be good —which he interprets as being obedient, frugal, industrious and devout—and we will be happy." R. L. Duffus

— New Repub 38:288 My 7 '24 1350w

"To the man or woman interested in the type of mind that stands at the head of the Government, the book will be a great satisfaction. Mature thought and deliberation mark its pages. Considering the number of speeches included, there is surprisingly little repetition. Nevertheless there is enough of the 'speech' quality in it to make the book difficult to read through at one sitting." R. C. Feld

+ — N Y Times p6 Ap 6 '24 2200w

Reviewed by C. H. Gaines

No Am 219:883 Je '24 700w

Outlook 136:749 Ap 30 '24 80w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:299 Je '24

Spec 133:600 Ap 12 '24 60w

"The book reads well. Mr Coolidge's style is clear, crisp, epigrammatic. A didactic tone is a constant reminder of his Puritan inheritance."

+ — Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 24 '24 700w

Springf'd Republican p6 Je 21 '24 1000w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p287 My 8 '24 200w

Wis Lib Bul 20:121 My '24

COOLIDGE, DANE. Scalp-lock. 253p $2 Dutton

24-2621

"From the time that his father had left the ranch to live in the East to the time that young Clayton Hawks left Boston to see the West, accompanied, to his own dismay, by his fiancée, Penny, and her mother, much had happened to the Lazy B Ranch. Hawks found Bill Bones, the manager, shiftless and sly, the cowboys a rough, sullen bunch, and the cattle were being stolen by the hundreds. It was a long and grim fight between the two factions: Clay, backed from time to time by the other ranch owners who likewise suffered from the raiders: and Lovelady, who for all his gallantry and fine clothes was a brutal and fearless leader for his gang. Even the most carefully laid schemes not only failed to catch the thieves but many times added to the disaster. How the ranchers at last called in the mysterious cattle detective whose business it was to hunt cow thieves and if necessary to kill them, and how, with his help, they finally broke up the gang, make an hour's breathless reading."—N Y Times

COOLIDGE, DANE—Continued

Boston Transcript p6 Mr 12 '24 650w

"The plot is a plot quite good enough. However, this book goes still further. It contains, besides, some exceedingly clever characterizations. The author, without marring the smooth run of the story, has sketched some characters who have real depth and feeling and who live apart from the plot."

+ N Y Times p19 F 24 '24 550w

"We have grown used to carelessly written stories of the West that were so sure of the interest in their thrills they neglected everything else. This is a noticeable exception. It is well written, and, although the plot contains every element of interest, neither characterization nor style is forgotten."

+ N Y Tribune p21 Mr 16 '24 300w

COOLIDGE, THOMAS JEFFERSON. Autobiography. 311p $6 Houghton

B or 92 23-17429

T. Jefferson Coolidge, 1831-1920, was a Boston merchant and philanthropist whose social position brought him the acquaintance of many people prominent in society and public life. For two years, during the administration of President Harrison, he was minister to France. On his return from France he served on the Joint high commission to adjust disputes between the United States and England.

Am Hist R 29:813 Jl '24 280w

"T. Jefferson Coolidge as his name indicates, was at the same time a lineal descendent of Thomas Jefferson and a Boston Brahmin. The book is an eloquent witness to the economic and political influence of New England upon our national life during the last decades of the nineteenth century." P. H. Douglas

Am Pol Sci R 18:393 My '24 260w

"A dull book but a striking justification of the popular conception of New England character. Mr. Coolidge presses hastily by Emerson, Lincoln and the other giants of his day to lay his sheep-laurel at the feet of Harrison and Blaine. He was long an overseer of Harvard University and a Republican in religion but does not mention Roosevelt. . . His book—not originally meant for the public—is Victorianism without poetry. It is Puritanism without piety. It is culture stripped of tenderness." A. W. V.

— New Repub 37:292 F 6 '24 440w

COOPER, COURTNEY RYLEY. Last frontier. 304p il $1.75 Little

23-15822

A story of the opening up of the West in the years following the Civil war. It was a time when buffalo still roamed the plains in great numbers and Indian massacres were frequent occurrences. The Kansas-Pacific was building and every mile of its advance was being fought by the Indians. Beth Halliday, coming with her father and mother from Kentucky by wagon train, was on her way to join her lover, Tom Kirby. The train was attacked by Indians and the father and mother killed. Beth blamed it all on Tom and would have nothing to do with him. Tom was too much of a frontiersman to show his despair, so he sold his real estate business and went to work for the railroad; but all the time he was quietly keeping an eye on Beth's interests. Thru hardship and dangers and illness Tom remained faithful and at last won Beth. The book has several historical characters, among them Buffalo Bill and General Custer.

Booklist 20:299 My '24

Cleveland p35 My '24

"All this is exciting material to work with—and, if Mr. Cooper is not a distinguished writer, he has at least the imagination that kindles to this era in American history. He tells a graphic tale."

+ Lit R p545 F 23 '24 550w

"The novel has plenty of faults; it is very weak in characterization and its plot seems for the most part machine-made, but it gives a vivid, interesting picture of a time, a place and an endeavor which proved tremendously significant in the history of these United States."

+ — N Y Times p8 F 17 '24 660w

"It is not Mr. Cooper's story in itself that bothers us. It is the portraiture of a gallant gentleman of the plains whom it was the wont of a generation not yet extinct to elevate into a place as a sort of national hero. We speak of the Hon. William F. Cody, alias Buffalo Bill." E. W. Osborn

— N Y World p7e Mr 2 '24 820w

Wis Lib Bul 20:97 Ap '24

COOPER, COURTNEY RYLEY. Lions 'n' tigers 'n' everything. 260p il $2 Little 791 Circus. Animals, Stories and legends of 24-21690

Mr Cooper convinces us that all of the romance of a circus is not confined to the beauty and rhythm of the performance, the life in dressing tents, and the parade. There is the menagerie with its wonder-working animals of which the author has made a close study. He tells us of their habits, moods, likes and dislikes. He dwells especially upon the whims of the elephant, that "hundred tons of prankishness" and regarded as the most lovable, sagacious and fearful of animals. The book contains numerous tragic and amusing episodes about lions, tigers 'n' everything, and is illustrated with interesting photographs.

Booklist 21:54 N '24

Boston Transcript p4 O 1 '24 230w

"Mr. Cooper knows and understands and loves the animals; he writes about them with humor and sympathy. I find it very hard to imagine a reader who would not be amused and thrilled and amazed at these stories of the circus animals." Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p963 Ag 16 '24 500w

Reviewed by Brander Matthews

Outlook 138:375 N 5 '24 880w

"More fascinating than fiction, because true and about unusual characters."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 24 '24 300w

COOPER, LANE. Poetics of Aristotle; its meaning and influence. (Our debt to Greece and Rome) 157p $1.50 Marshall Jones

888 Aristotle. Poetics 23-16317

An analysis, in brief, of the book which after twenty-two centuries still remains "the most stimulating and helpful of all analytical works dealing with poetry." An intelligible account is given of what Aristotle tried to say in his treatise and of the influence which his thought has had upon writers thru the ages.

Booklist 20:129 Ja '24

"Professor Cooper has attained clarity in the treatment of his very thorny material." H. L. Pangborn

+ Bookm 59:603 Jl '24 50w

"It is a brief but careful study." E. F. H.

+ Cath World 119:418 Je '24 120w

"The course of the 'Poetics' through the Italian Renaissance down to Milton is given with some detail, though every sentence might be the theme for a chapter. It is here that we feel the regret, expressed before, that the exigencies of the handbook did not permit the author to give a reasonably full account, say, of the influence on Milton. But it is not meet to quarrel with our host. We enjoyed the book thoroughly and hope it will find the large audience it deserves." H. M. Hubbell

+ Lit R p540 F 23 '24 510w

"Mr. Cooper has done two difficult things in small space: he has summarized and commented upon the 'Poetics,' and he has written a history of its influence on criticism in Europe. The first task was perfectly performed, but in the second portion of his essay Mr. Cooper has run too much to bibliography, crowding each page with titles and dates of treatises on Aristotle rather than illuminating it with the commentary upon them which he is capable of making."

+ — Nation 118:511 Ap 30 '24 90w

Reviewed by H: B. Fuller
N Y Times p9 Ja 20 '24 550w

COPELAND, MELVIN THOMAS. Principles of merchandising. 368p $4 Shaw, A. W.

658.8 Marketing. Retail trade 24-21095

"In order to reduce the present high cost of marketing, the author believes it will be necessary to recognize and apply sound merchandising principles. This book builds up a comprehensive body of marketing theory, substantiated by experiences of numerous concerns, and explains their applications to every-day problems. Much of the book is devoted to retail selling but there is also considerable material that will be valuable to manufacturers."—Management and Adm

Management and Adm 8:544 N '24 80w
Springf'd Republican p14 S 14 '24 110w

COPELAND, ROYAL SAMUEL. Health book. 421p $2 Harcourt

610 Medicine, Popular. First aid in illness and injury. Hygiene 24-19982

"The book reports a series of articles. The author deems it a duty for everyone to be prepared to relieve pain and states that this book contains things every doctor has learned but has not recorded. The book falls into three divisions, the first dealing with emergencies and the second with common ailments and the third presenting information everyone should have, especially parents."—Springf'd Republican

Booklist 21:54 N '24

"Clearly written and accurate instruction. Moreover the book lays down clear direct rules for right living and it emphasizes when it is needful to call a doctor and when an ailment may safely be treated at home."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Jl 23 '24 180w
Cleveland p71 S '24
N Y Tribune p26 Ag 3 '24 150w

"He is popular, even paternal, in his literary style."

Outlook 137:642 Ag 27 '24 40w
St Louis p376 N '24

"Dr Copeland warns that this book in no way takes the place of the family physician. This one can well believe, but the general information should be useful to some."

— + Springf'd Republican p7a Je 22 '24 100w
Wis Lib Bul 20:173 Jl '24

COPLEY, FRANK BARKLEY. Frederick W. Taylor, father of scientific management. 2v 467;472p il $10 Harper

B or 92 Taylor, Frederick Winslow. Efficiency, Industrial 23-17530

The subject of this biography devoted his life to the work of applying scientific method to management. He tried out the first steps of his system at the Midvale steel company, where he was successively gang boss, foreman of the machine shop and chief engineer. He left the company to begin the work of organizing scientific management. Then followed the years at the Bethlehem steel works where he further developed and applied his method, which in its working out included the determination by scientific investigation and experiment of the best or standard ways, implements and materials and the establishment of a control so exercised as to insure the maintenance of the standards laid down. He was also the discoverer of the process that led to the development of high-speed steel.

Reviewed by J. H. Willits
Am Econ R 14:546 S '24 900w

"As a collector of anecdotes Mr. Copley excels, for each point which he makes in this biography he enters upon a series of illustrative anecdotes all of which are of vast interest." E. J. C.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ja 19 '24 1000w

Reviewed by Stuart Chase
New Repub 40:149 O 8 '24 2100w

Reviewed by E: E. Hunt
Outlook 136:152 Ja 23 '24 900w

COPPLESTONE, BENNET, pseud. See Kitchin, F: H.

CORELLI, MARIE (MINNIE MACKAY). Love —and the philosopher. 287p $2 Doran [6s Methuen]

23-18071

The Sentimentalist is a young girl who lives with her ideals and pretty dreams of the world, the Philosopher an elderly Oxford professor apparently disdaining such fleeting emotions as love, and having no use for sentimentality. To her he seems cold and self-centered, albeit very clever. In his way he asks her to marry him, but she refuses, realizing her love for Jack who had gone off to the war and is reported among the missing. After the Armistice he suddenly reappears, due to the efforts of the Philosopher who had traced him and brought him back to health. This new revelation of his character, so well concealed under a crusty exterior, leaves doubt in the mind of the Sentimentalist as to the true meaning of love and the wisdom of her own choice. However, the Philosopher reassures her by declaring that he proposed to her from a sense of duty, fearing that her old father's death would leave her alone in the world. We leave the young lovers on their honeymoon and the Philosopher dreamily recalling a very sentimental episode in which he had taken part.

Boston Transcript p6 F 6 '24 700w

"The book might have been considered delightful reading for bustled ladies of the seventies, but even they were allowed a little more variety of entertainment, without unduly stimulating the imagination."

— Int Bk R p678 Ag '24 160w

"'Love—And the Philosopher' will never do. Miss Corelli must do better than this even if she has to return to her earlier methods of writing."

— N Y Times p9 Ja 27 '24 680w

"It is a pleasant, leisurely story, agreeably told, the sort of thing that is particularly welcome in warm weather. To be properly appreciated it should be read on a drowsy June day. And one more point should be noted in its flavor—despite its 100 per cent simplicity, it has no moral." Edith Leighton

+ N Y Tribune p24 Ja 27 '24 420w

"There is conversation in 'Love—and the Philosopher.' Some of it is gay and some is gallant and some of it is about the World War, to which Jack goes and out of which he is for a time reported missing. All this talk is easy to read for mostly the story is in it." E. W. Osborn

+ N Y World p7e Ja 27 '24 450w

CORNERS, GEORGE F. Rejuvenation; how Steinach makes people young; with an introd. by A. S. Blumgarten. 112p il $1.50 Seltzer

612.4 Glands, Ductless. Steinach, Eugen. Rejuvenation 23-17624

A brief, popular statement of what is known about rejuvenation by means of the Steinach method of revitalizing certain ductless glands. The book explains the theory and the steps in Dr Steinach's discovery, reports some successful cases, and discusses the possibilities of further benefits to be derived from this method of treatment.

CORNERS, G: F.—Continued

"Mr. Corners confines himself solely to recording the results of scientific experiments in biochemistry, and the experiences of Professor Steinach's patients. Even so, his book is eminently readable."
+ Boston Transcript p3 F 23 '24 220w

"The author is as honest as Steinach himself, and is always cautious in discussing how much has been accomplished in the study of glands and the highly modern process of manufacturing synthetic personality. The book should be of solid informative value to laymen who wish to learn more about Dr. Steinach's experiments with the gonads than could be gleaned from casual newspaper stories."
+ Dial 76:467 My '24 70w

"Lucid, simple and direct, and profoundly interesting to even the merely curious. Mr. Corners got all his information at first hand, and his work is enlivened with a delightful sense of humor." Gertrude Atherton
+ Int Bk R p204 F '24 1250w

COTTERILL, HENRY BERNARD. History of art; 2v v 2, Later European art. 566p il $10 Stokes [42s Harrap]

709 Art—History

"The second volume of Mr. H. B. Cotterill's 'History of Art' is entitled 'Later European Art'; it contains also supplementary chapters on Oriental Sculpture and Painting by Mr. Stewart Dick. The book is divided according to countries—Italy, Spain, France, the Netherlands, Germany, and England—and each country is sub-divided under the headings of Architecture, Sculpture, and Painting, so that the whole, with an index which is both clear and full, makes an excellent book of reference. It contains some four hundred illustrations, reproduced from photographs."—Nation and Ath

---

"The present volume with its mate is good as far as it goes; but it cannot be said to be complete. It is indeed only a sketch, though of large proportions." N. H. D.
+ — Boston Transcript p2 My 24 '24 800w

"It is as a book of reference that Mr. Cotterill's 'History of Art' is useful. He has collected facts and dates with conscientious care, and the volume is full of information. As a work of criticism, on the other hand, it is hardly so trustworthy." Angus Davidson
+ — Nation and Ath 35:514 Jl 19 '24 540w

"As a whole though Mr. Cotterill's judgments are clear and helpful, it is undoubtedly a volume that will give the reader a taste for more, and lead him with a well-rounded view to books which specialise in the periods that appeal to him. One small criticism of the illustrations seems called for—they might have been brought into more systematic relation with the text."
+ — New Statesman 23:294 Je 14 '24 300w

"On the whole, Mr. Cotterill's second volume is a noteworthy and helpful historical document and contains excellent illustrations." L: Kantor
+ N Y Times p13 Ag 3 '24 1500w

"On the whole, Mr. Cotterill's book strikes one as better history than art criticism, and—outside Italy—better on architecture than on sculpture and painting. His general remarks about architecture are extremely good."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p499 Ag 14 '24 1100w

COUCHMAN, CHARLES BENNINGTON. Balance-sheet. 288p $3 Journal of accountancy, inc., 135 Cedar st., N.Y.

657 Balance sheets. Accounting 24-3718

The book explains the theory of the balance-sheet, its use in the business world today, its preparation, content and interpretation. Not only are balance-sheet forms and arrangements discussed but it is shown exactly what facts should be included under each classification generally found in balance-sheets. The Appendix gives some illustrative balance-sheets.

"It will prove well worth a careful reading by business men in general as well as students and practitioners of accounting." J. P. Adams
+ Am Econ R 14:744 D '24 550w

"Although one may take exception to the author's use of certain terms, i.e., depreciation, the book should exert considerable influence in the direction of standardized balance-sheet practice. It is to be regretted that Mr. Couchman did not sufficiently expand his book to (1) include more illustrative material in such chapters as those dealing with the consolidated balance sheet and the comparative balance sheet, and (2) explain the managerial use of the balance sheet and its interpretation. These omissions are in part overcome, however, by the material in the Appendix, consisting entirely of illustrative statements, and by a short chapter entitled 'The Balance Sheet for Credit Purposes.' On the whole, the material is presented in so clear and non-technical a style as to recommend it not only to accountants but to business men in general." J. L. Palmer
+ — J Pol Econ 32:733 D '24 250w

COULDREY, OSWALD JENNINGS. South Indian hours. 288p il $5 Houghton [18s Hurst & B.]

915.4 India [24-21934]

"Here is an India seldom met with in the books. The describers and interpreters of India seldom pass south of the base of the triangle of peninsular India, yet it is there that the flavor of ancient India lingers most serenely, untouched by the progress that is busily belting the north with railroads and relatively untroubled by Swaraj, Nationalist politics, and other movements of the new day. Mr. Couldrey writes of this primitive India with charm and sympathy. The author is a retired official of the Indian Educational Service, some time principal of Rajahmundry College."—Ind

---

"A book of rare beauty in all respects, in style, and tone, illustration, and make-up." A. P.
+ Ind 113:161 S 13 '24 380w
Outlook 138:137 S 24 '24 100w

"It is indeed rare to find a book of this kind written in a prose style of such true grace and distinction; but the reader will find, too, that the fascination of his writing never tends to divert attention from, but rather to enhance his deep appreciation of and true enthusiasm for, the people of the country he describes."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p243 Ap 17 '24 260w

COULTER, JOHN MERLE, and COULTER, MERLE CROWE. Where evolution and religion meet. 105p $1.25 Macmillan

213 Religion and science. Evolution 24-4281

The authors explain the various theories of evolution showing how it has revolutionized human thought and how evolution and religion, so far from being contradictory, are mutually helpful and revealing.

"The information they present is trustworthy, and so stated that the reader may draw his own conclusions." E. E. F.
Bookm 59:adv My '24 80w

"The book would be valuable enough for its clear setting forth of the doctrine of evolution; it has the additional recommendation, at a time like this, of coming from authors who can combine both outlooks in a single view, without injury to either." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p5 My 3 '24 620w
J Religion 4:329 My '24 50w

Reviewed by Beverly Kunkel
Lit R p939 Ag 2 '24 300w
R of Rs 69:560 My '24 80w
St Louis p335 O '24

"The effort to link scientific evolution and religious doctrine is brief and ineffectual and might have been omitted. The rest of the book is excellent."
+ — Springf'd Republican p10 My 6 '24 250w

2 COUPERUS, LOUIS. Eastward; tr. by J. Menzies-Wilson and C. C. Crispin. 286p il $5 Doran [18s Hurst & B.]
919.2 Dutch East Indies

These letters were written by the Dutch novelist, as a special correspondent of the Haagsche Post. They contain his impressions of Java, Sumatra and the Bali and they sketch with the pen of an artist scenery, temples and people.

"The present book as a whole is an excellent supplement to Couperus's novels, a contribution to our knowledge of a writer who in his last years gained a considerable reputation outside the borders of his own little country." E. F. Edgett
+ Boston Transcript p5 Ja 24 '25 1700w

Reviewed by Norman Davey
Nation and Ath 36:448 D 20 '24 90w

"High-quality journalism as this is, it lacks the repose of literature; we are hurried on to see the next sight like provincials in a metropolis. None the less, the book can be more warmly recommended than many travel-books, because the reader who longs in vain to travel will find in it good food for his exoticism."
+ — New Statesman 24:182 N 15 '24 300w

"These letters should be read with great interest by English people to whom these great and glowing islands are little more than a name. The author's keen eye for the picturesque and his singular facility for putting his impressions into memorable words are conspicuous on every page, whether he writes about a trivial thing like the 'rice table' or a world's wonder like the famous temple of Boro-Budur."
+ Sat R 138:474 N 8 '24 180w

"There are few passers-by who could have drawn so suggestive a picture of the countries with which they were concerned. These easily written pages bring before the mind sunny lands and happy peoples; and the author's impressions of them are likely to remain with the serious reader longer than would many pages of facts and figures."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p744 N 20 '24 1150w

COUPLAND, REGINALD. Wilberforce: a narrative. 528p $5 Oxford [16s Milford]
B or 92 Wilberforce, William

"We are told by the author of this rather massive volume, in his preface, as his reason for his work that 'except for Leslie Stephen's admirable summary in the Dictionary of National Biography, there is nothing in modern literature to recall the memory of Wilberforce and his work to the present generation.' . . It would seem that there is room today for a popular biography of this man, great both in the political and in the religious world. The story of the youth of Wilberforce is told briefly, the chief point of interest being his early acquaintance with Pitt, which later in life became an intimacy. The story of his first political address will remind the reader forcibly of that first speech made by Phillips in Faneuil Hall, which was the opening gun in his great struggle for the freedom of the slave. The subsequent career of Wilberforce is a parallel to that of Phillips, in that his chief contention—in which he triumphed—was the abolition of the slave trade."—Boston Transcript

---

"The sequence of incident, scene, and episode creates an impression of lifelike activity, quickening many a phase of the later Georgian period that would be unattractive to readers if seen in a less personal guise. The work is more the outcome of insight and reflection than of laborious research." C. E. Fryer
+ Am Hist R 29:766 Jl '24 550w

Boston Transcript p6 F 13 '24 1000w

"Professor Coupland has performed a real public service in providing this well-constructed biography couched in reasonable terms." F. B.
+ Nation and Ath 34:580 Ja 19 '24 1050w

"In Professor Coupland's full-length portrait, with its delicate sympathy and its wealth of detail, there is revealed all the eagerness and sweetness, all the self-mastery and patience, all the dignity and finish that made up a character of manly purpose and feminine sensitiveness." Kenneth Bell
+ New Statesman 22:425 Ja 19 '24 1450w

"The book does not pretend to be original or to tell much that is new; but it revives old and instructive memories. It is not particularly coherent or well written, especially in the beginning, but it is absorbingly interesting and is really valuable." N. H. Dole
+ — N Y Times p10 F 24 '24 2500w

"A well-informed, well-balanced and well-written biography, scholarly and thoroughly reliable throughout."
+ Pol Sci Q 39:545 S '24 150w

Reviewed by J. St L. Strachey
Spec 132:369 Mr 8 '24 1800w

"In this admirable biography Professor Coupland surveys and describes the whole man. His easy and agreeable style makes it a pleasure to follow his account of debates and controversies that would otherwise wear out the reader's patience, and he brings to the subject not only wide historical knowledge, but a conspicuously judicial mind."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p3 Ja 3 '24 2750w

COURNOS, JOHN. In exile. 66p $1.50 Boni & Liveright
811 23-14708

Poems written during the years 1915-1920 which have appeared at various times in periodicals on both sides of the Atlantic. Most of the poems appeared in the following magazines: the Egoist, Anglo-Italian Review, New World, Coterie, Voices, New Europe, New Leader, Nation (London), Poetry, Little Review, American Hebrew and the Dial.

"The greater part of the matter is interesting as personal revelation, but the high touch of authentic poetry is rarely evident." H. S. Gorman
— Bookm 58:667 F '24 140w

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 8 '24 90w

"There are platitudes of revolt more profoundly dull than the platitudes of convention, and Mr Cournos, as poet, approaches them too often."
— Dial 76:289 Mr '24 70w

"He has an unforced directness of utterance, a sincerity of purpose that compare favourably with the tortured conceits of many of these æsthetes. His work recalls H. D. and the earlier Aldington; but he adds a note of irony, of personal experience that is his own." J: G. Fletcher
+ Freeman 8:356 D 19 '23 120w

"His songs of sorrow fail to wet the reader's eye or arouse any emotion more benevolent than impatience. Mr. Cournos displays a distinct talent for verse in certain instances. But let the nine Muses bear witness that minor poetry, if it is not musical, if it is not clever, if it is not amusing—if it is gloomy, and if it is exaggeratedly personal, to be any good at all must be indubitably and unassailably sincere."
— + Lit R p712 Ap 26 '24 280w

"These poems have the breath of life. They are keen, sharp-thrusting verses that send the pulses bounding and fire the imagination." B. S. Wagstaff
+ N Y Tribune p20 Ja 27 '24 170w

"The writer has not performed the elementary service of eliminating the irrelevant and accidental and revealing the essential at a vivid and concentrated intensity. There is a feeling of power, but of power unchastened and dissipated. The result is inadequacy of effect, even confusion as to intent. Although occasionally the author has taken the trouble to isolate an emotion and treat it intensively, as a whole the poems are unfused thought and feeling, incoherencies lacking in unity and in telling effect."

COURNOS, JOHN—Continued
— + Outlook 136:34 Ja 2 '24 140w
Springf'd Republican p7a S 21 '24 300w

COURNOS, JOHN. The new Candide. 328p $2.50 Boni & Liveright
24-10641

The story, which is quite unlike anything else the author has done, is a burlesque on modern life. Peter Pock, son of a Chicago pork-packer is sent to Europe by his father to divert his mind from the enchanting Georgina, daughter of a butcher. Rufus Gabbe, devoted follower of the Bah-bah philosophy, goes with him as guide and mentor. Life becomes a series of adventures for Peter. He tastes the glories of war, finds in Paris and loses again his beloved Georgina, throws in his lot with the Communists, is involved with the Sinn Feiners in Ireland, has a dose of Fascism in Italy, and on his return to America, a brush with the Ku Klux klan. In the course of the extravaganza almost every movement, cult and fad of the day is held up to good humored satire.

"This is an engaging novel. It is more sophisticated than most stories that find their way into print. There is no foible known to Americans on which Mr. Cournos does not alight sooner or later! He cannot be compared with writers like Van Vechten or Cabell, because he is far more amusing than either. He might suggest George Moore. Discriminating readers who appreciate brilliant satire will delight in this novel." D. F. G.
+ Boston Transcript p4 My 17 '24 700w

"This is a generally entertaining book; Cournos turns a nice phrase and wields a sharp, satiric wit—though one might wish sometimes that he would be earnest in an appendix instead of here and there throughout the story." E. A. Niles
+ — Ind 113:162 S 13 '24 180w
Lit R p899 Jl 19 '24 450w
New Statesman 24:336 D 20 '24 150w

"Mr. Cournos has written a diverting and entertaining satire on modern life; just where it shall stand with the great books, in whose manner it is written only that most competent of all critics, Time, can tell. For the present we can only say that it is an amusing, brilliant caricature of today, that today seems strikingly effective. That, in itself, seems quite enough."
+ N Y Times p8 My 18 '24 1600w

"Behind the outlandish and skimpy plot there is a moving spirit, which if not inspired is intelligent. The book amuses consistently; it helps to clear away the fog of to-day's facile philosophies; it makes a satisfactory addition to the wise man's library." Bruce Gould
+ — N Y Tribune p24 Jl 27 '24 600w

"'The New Candide' is a gorgeous pageant on a miniature and swiftly-moving scale. As a story, is stands four-square against the winds of probability on its own ridiculous legs, formed after a design furnished by one Munchausen. As a satire on a world so mad that it has passed beyond the possibility of salvation by reason the book is equally precious." Harry Salpeter
+ N Y World p8e Jl 13 '24 600w
Outlook 138:63 S 10 '24 20w

"Mr. Cournos is an able and entertaining writer, but 'The New Candide' must inevitably serve to remind us that there can never be a new 'Candide.'" Gerald Gould
— + Sat R 138:636 D 20 '24 460w

Reviewed by Andrew Carey
Spec 133:848 N 29 '24 160w

"We guess that it was written chiefly for American consumption, and it may do in America; but it is not applicable to modern Europe."
— The Times [London] Lit Sup p820 D 4 '24 470w

COUZENS, REGINALD C. Stories of the months and days. 160p $2 Stokes
291 Mythology. Calendar

The book gives the myths and legends concerning the months of the year and the days of the week. A chapter is assigned to each month, and one to each day of the week. The illustrations are reproductions of famous paintings and statues.

Booklist 20:144 Ja '24

"Good reference work for juvenile department."
Wis Lib Bul p48 F '24

COWAN, ANDREW REID. Guide to world history. 424p $5 (15s) Longmans
909 History—Philosophy. History, Universal
23-18449

"The author here expands the principles laid down in his 'Master-Clues in World-History,' reviewed in our columns in July, 1914, and applies them to a summary of world history. His method is to take a period of a hundred years (a longer term in the earlier days of history) and rapidly to summarize events and tendencies in the leading countries of the world during that time. The result is a conspectus in which contemporary events in different countries are brought into line. Mr. Cowan will not supersede the orderly study of history by countries or periods—such is not indeed his intention—but he will probably be of considerable assistance to those who wish to obtain a world view of the subject."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"Mr. Cowan's success in executing this ambitious program is far from notable. The first thirty-eight pages constitute admirable prolegomena to social and cultural history, though it may be doubted that all of the principles necessary for the interpretation of history are therein embodied, and there are several anthropological anachronisms. Nine-tenths of the book is, however, devoted to a scanty, arbitrarily conceived, and none too accurate, though often suggestive, epitome of universal history." H. E. Barnes
— Am Hist R 29:741 Jl '24 800w

"Mr. Cowan writes clearly and forcibly, but some of his words annoy us. No historian, however eminent, has liberty to say that 'the Empire was squelched by Napoleon.' Everyone has his own ideas of what a bibliography should be. Mr. Cowan has, at all events, made his conveniently brief. But it might well have included Lord Acton's charming lectures; Mr. G. P. Gooch's recent book might also find a place in a subsequent edition."
+ — Sat R 137:161 F 16 '24 650w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p81 F 7 '24 120w

COWDRICK, EDWARD S. Manpower in industry. (American business ser.) 388p $3.25 Holt
658.3 Industrial management 24-7218

Written by an industrial engineer, the book presents the underlying principles of human relationships in industry and some of the more important methods which have been used in dealing with problems of personnel administration. It has in mind the needs of the business executive and of the director of industrial relations as well as of students of the subject, in college and out. There are reading references at the end of each chapter.

"This book contains a large amount of information concerning the principles of human relationships in industry. There are few phases of the subject which are not discussed in the book."

+ Management and Adm Je '24 140w
Survey 52:638 S 15 '24 170w

COX, EUAN HILLHOUSE METHVEN. Rhododendrons for amateurs. 127p il $1.75 Scribner [5s Country life]

716 Rhododendrons 24-26930

"This is a valuable study of the native species and hybrids of both rhododendrons and azaleas, which have been found, by test, to be hardy under normal English conditions. Europe furnished to the world four species; North America, seventeen, and Central and Eastern Asia, almost a thousand. The five fold division of the plants into tropical, forest, scrub, alpine and table-top groups is explained and accounted for. This is followed by a study of the better methods of culture, and by a detailed description of more than two hundred of the more satisfactory species."—Lit R

Booklist 21:99 D '24
Boston Transcript p5 S 13 '24 100w

"With an allowance for the difference in soil and climatic conditions, the book is indispensable for the American grower of this fascinating family of flowered beauties."

+ Lit R p10 S 13 '24 90w

"A handy and unusually well-informed handbook."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p490 Ag 7 '24 130w

COX, HARDING EDWARD DE FONBLANQUE. Dogs and I. 318p il $5 Putnam [16s Hutchinson]

636.7 Dogs [24-8458]

"'Dogs and I' contains all manner of material about the breeding and showing of dogs. Being a true Englishman, Major Cox regards the fox hound as the noblest work of God in the canine world, but his heart has room for many other breeds. The book is full of good anecdotes and stories. The author's recommendations to his government during the war for the proper control and breeding of dogs, make interesting and suggestive reading."—Bookm

Reviewed by T. R. Coward
Bookm 59:596 Jl '24 80w

"It is bright and full of good stories, but it is also full of information about dogs and their various breeds, and it is illustrated with some excellent photographs."

+ Nation and Ath 34:470 D 22 '23 70w
New Statesman 22:sup8 D 8 '23 150w

COXON, MURIEL (HINE) (MRS SIDNEY COXON). Youth wins. 323p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Lane]

24-23487

The scene of the story is laid in Paris and at Bagnoles de l'Orne, a watering place in Normandy where the Honorable Mrs Verney and her daughter Joceline are taking the cure. Mrs Verney's life is largely influenced by two emotions, an unconquerable love for power and possession, and a contempt for the bourgeoisie. Her selfish mother had twice wrecked Joceline's happiness by circulating a rumor about the girl which had driven her lovers away. But Mrs Verney's third attempt to work havoc between Joceline and Oliver Trench, a clean-cut young Englishman, comes to naught through the intervention of Mrs Bickersteth, a motherly woman whose love for young people involves her in Joceline's love affair. Aware that this time her weapon has utterly failed to separate Joceline from her lover, Mrs Verney plays her last trump in the game of possession, and again loses, for Oliver and Joceline are happily married, and richly blessed by the good Mrs Bickersteth and her husband.

"The book is well written, but the title tells too much."

+ — Int Bk R p141 Ja '25 280w

"As the title of the book is positive the reader may guess that everything comes off nicely in the end, and for those who like to while away a few hours in the make-believe here is sure to be found a pleasant little novel, smoothly written and far, far away from much of the pseudo-realism that jeers at pretty romance."

+ N Y Times p16 O 19 '24 250w
N Y Tribune p10 D 14 '24 100w

"Light, very light fiction. Judged by its own standards, it is adroit and entertaining. The narrative is deftly constructed and graceful in its artificiality. Best of all, there is humor in the book—quiet, polite, kindly humor, that is embodied in the drawing of at least one character as well as in numerous incidental observations."

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:365 D 6 '24 250w

"Slight lameness and considerable improbability of conclusion do not prevent Miss Hine's latest novel from showing talent well above the average."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p800 N 27 '24 100w

COYLE, KATHLEEN. Widow's house. 242p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Cape]

24-19529

This is a psychological study portraying the inner conflict of a passionate woman whose sailor husband has been lost at sea. Annie Capgrave, now forty, with the memory of her husband, Harry, flooding her soul, rents a room to the twenty-year-old Stephen Host, a schoolteacher in Lenne. Annie unknowingly falls in love with Stephen, thus sacrificing the most vital thing in her life—the memory of Harry. The day on which Stephen and Annie are married, Isabel Beggary appears—youthful, charming—and Stephen realizes his disastrous mistake. The "unconsummated" marriage is nullified and Annie Capgrave returns to her cottage—and the abiding memory of Harry.

Booklist 21:110 D '24
Boston Transcript p2 S 20 '24 1200w

Reviewed by C: C. Baldwin
Lit R p4 O 11 '24 1050w

Reviewed by Austin Clarke
Nation and Ath 34:804 Mr 8 '24 100w

"A novel is supposed to be a slice of life, but this is rather 'emotion recollected in tranquillity.' But whatever 'The Widow's House' is called, it shows the hand of the artist."

+ N Y Times p8 S 14 '24 800w

"Kathleen Coyle has a sense of atmosphere equaling that of Pierre Loti. There are few passages in literature more sensitively written than the one in which as a child Anne listens to the reading of a ballad on the sea. Miss Coyle knows her background intimately and what is more, can set off upon it with virile mastery and exquisite form the tenseness of vital emotions." F. V. R.

+ N Y World p7e Ag 31 '24 250w

"With a wealth of delicate perception and sympathetic insight into human nature, she fills in the unknown quantities of her character-equation, stroke by stroke, until the whole tale moves in a mantle of stately beauty and dignity." J: Carter

+ Sat R of Lit 1:198 O 18 '24 750w
Spec 131:296 F 23 '24 100w

"If the narrative moves slowly it is because, finely developed, psychological drama must move slowly. 'The Widow's House' gives us a fresh and unhackneyed theme and rises to true dignity."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a S 21 '24 800w

"The author has built an emotional structure with a labour and exactitude that we cannot but admire, but a structure so extensive and elaborate that the reader soon begins to toil and pant as he pursues its close and complicated windings. There is, of course, a real poignancy in the situation, but the tragedy loses its appeal in its tireless analysis."

COYLE, KATHLEEN—Continued

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p129 F 28 '24 100w

COZZENS, JAMES GOULD. Confusion. 404p $2 Brimmer 24-15988

"Confusion" is a first novel, written by a Harvard undergraduate. It is the story of Cerise d'Atrée, born to wealth and every prospect of happiness, of a beautiful English mother and a titled French father. She is carefully trained, marvelously educated by various tutors in France and brought to America to complete her education. Cerise is shown, in fact, as the victim of a process of over-education which leads only to confusion. Her tragic and untimely death adds the ultimate note of futility.

"Mr. Cozzens's style is deep-rooted enough so that he will not lose it; his theme and story are not of the kind which leave a young writer dry; his inventive faculty seems fresh and full. Therefore, it is certain to expect more and really excellent novels from his pen." C. B. O.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 9 '24 1450w

"The chief criticism to be leveled at this narration is that it is incoherent, without form, purpose, or interest. Told in highly objective fashion, there is not even a continuity of psychological development to hold the thing together. It is an invertebrate chain of episodes that is tediously difficult to follow and in the end leads nowhere. However, this is a book of considerable promise. Mr. Cozzens is a writer who will do much better, or should." J: Carter

— + Lit R p739 My 10 '24 800w

" 'Confusion,' although it is cleverly joined, is not well written." J. T. Shipley

+ — Nation 119:100 Jl 23 '24 320w

"In occasional paragraphs his characters are forced to stand aside in order to provide a kind of right of way for the passage of a full freighted idea. . . He has an abundant sense of drama, and his climaxes rise sharply and vigorously from balanced, plausible situations. One is tempted to say that his last twenty pages could scarcely have been written better." R. B. F.

New Repub 40:105 S 24 '24 170w

"Mr. Cozzens is not yet a novelist. He has not learned from the Pater he mentions so glibly, or even Gustave Kahn, that the artist selects—even in all this confusion. Every artist of any significance has started out knowing that there is confusion—some indicating phases of it, some forgetting it, some laughing at it—but Mr. Cozzens just takes a hard grip of Roget's 'Thesaurus' and his pen writes quite truthfully on every one of his 404 pages 'confusion.' "

— N Y Times p14 Ap 27 '24 900w

CRAM, MILDRED. The tide. 321p $2.50 Knopf 24-28671

Lilah Norris is the victim of her love for soft and beautiful things. When her father dies, leaving her destitute, she chooses the only available way out of her difficulties—marriage to Robert Peabody whose money could supply all she desired. Later she is irresistibly drawn to Putnam Flagg, and runs away with him to Italy, where after a few months he dies and again Lilah is left penniless. Rather than turn back to her husband whom she does not love, she ekes out a living in New York city, but the reader is led to believe that eventually she returns to Robert and his millions.

"Miss Cram tells her story with admirable restraint when in lesser hands is would become melodramatic, and whereas it might have been hard, metallic (as it is in the mere recital of the plot), it has about it an air of wistful beauty. 'The Tide,' while not sufficiently above the ordinary to be notable, is nevertheless sufficiently above the ordinary to repay the reader."

+ — N Y Times p14 N 16 '24 1000w

"In spite of an unlikable heroine, whose troubles mean little or nothing either way, and whose vicissitudes furnish no food for sane speculation, Miss Cram has achieved the almost impossible task of making her story not only readable but interesting throughout. It is a technical triumph."

+ N Y Tribune p18 D 7 '24 140w

"The merits of 'The Tide' are negative; they represent Miss Cram's ability to escape or cover up the pitfalls of an unimportant and undesirable plot. Choosing poor basic and equally poor atmospheric material (in the light of its reduced usefulness), she has managed skilfully to turn it into a better story than it deserves to be."

— + Sat R of Lit 1:364 D 6 '24 360w

CRAMPTON, CHARLES WARD. Physical exercise for daily use. 303p il $3.50 (17s 6d) Putnam

613.7 Exercise. Physical education and training 24-7077

"Dr. Crampton, formerly director of the department of physical education and hygiene of the New York Board of Education, has studied the health-building methods of many nations and evolved a new theory and technique which he sets forth in attractive style. He advises an annual medical examination and divides his program of self-help into sections on work, rest, relaxation and fun, bathing, service, diet and exercise. The exercises bear such fascinating names as the tickle toe, the hen peck, the air push, the sky lift and pep hops."—N Y Tribune

Boston Transcript p7 My 24 '24 400w

N Y Tribune p25 Jl 27 '24 70w

"An original and lively book on physical exercise for the average citizen."

+ Outlook 136:653 Ap 16 '24 40w

CRANE, FRANK. Why I am a Christian. 344p $3 Wise

230 Christianity 24-10620

"In over fifty of his sermonettes, or essayettes, each one brief and to the point, he explains his attitude on the subject of religion and why he believes himself to be a Christian, although he has cast out of his thought feeling and life all that seems to him merely the dead wood of Christianity. In these chapters he treats briefly such subjects as what he means by religion, Christianity, conversion, prayer, the Holy Spirit; what is the real essence he finds in Christianity; the reasons which convince him that Christianity is true, practical, desirable; the delusions from which Christianity saves him, what he looks for in Christianity."—N Y Times

Boston Transcript p6 Ag 27 '24 450w

"The significance of such a book is that it popularizes the modern version of Christianity—a Christianity so different from the historic Christianity of the church in its philosophy and creeds as to be almost a new religion. In this attempt Dr. Crane's happy way of stating platitudes and his skill in steering his bark away from the swirling deeps of human experience may be useful." Norman Thomas

Nation 119:526 N 12 '24 480w

N Y Times p10 Jl 27 '24 450w

"This book sums up in the characteristically snappy and common-sensible vein of this writer the religion of a man who, unlike Dr. Crapsey, is as happy out of a pulpit as in one." H. W. Boynton

+ Outlook 137:611 Ag 20 '24 250w

"While the author's approach to the subject is breezy and 'practical,' neither his thoughts nor his style can be called distinguished."

— + Springf'd Republican p10 D 3 '24 30w

CRANE, MARY, pseud. (MRS JOSE (KING) BURMEISTER). Sara of Upper Dam. 315p $2 Doran 25-762

The story of a woman past thirty who is endowed with a forceful personality rather than beauty. Sara comes from the East to a small western town to take the position of secretary to the big man of a mining concern. She succeeds in regulating and directing the affairs of the company and also the domestic life of her employer. In a short time most of the eligible men of the town are at her feet, and she is given every opportunity to choose a husband. But Sara's philosophy of love is a cool and reasonable one which serves her well until fate upsets her carefully laid plans.

"The story is blurred by an injudicious jumbling of relationship between the people it introduces. It is further injured by a too liberal use of dialogue; the author seems to suffer from the fear that her pages will look 'heavy.' As a matter of fact, her story would have moved much more smoothly had she depended less on conversation to carry it along."
— + N Y Times p9 O 19 '24 190w

"An entertaining chronicle. The men of the story are somewhat conventional figures, but Sara is genuinely alive. She also manages to be really an attractive personality."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:210 O 18 '24 200w

CRANE, NATHALIA CLARA RUTH. Janitor's boy, and other poems. 82p $1.50 Seltzer
811 24-12775

Nathalia Crane of Brooklyn is a child poet whose book of verse, published at the age of ten, appeared almost simultaneously with that of Helen Adam, the much praised Scottish poet of twelve. Their verses, rare in their maturity and with nothing in them to indicate the age of the writers except their childish fancy, naturally invite comparison.

Booklist 21:60 N '24
Bookm 20:220 O '24 200w

"If she has been influenced by Kipling's metre she has held to her own fresh, spontaneous thought. One reads her book, not because a child has written it, but for sheer joy of her companionship. Nathalia's moods are objective for the most part and they are entirely true to her own childish experience of life in a big town." A. C. Moore
+ Bookm 60:165 O '24 130w
Cleveland p83 N '24
Dial 77:437 N '24 50w

"Of all the child poets she alone has sophistication, the caprice, the hit-it-or-miss-it temper of—shall one say, developed personality? Nathalia's poems hold an intriguing maturity. She is self-critical, with a grin." Walter Yust
+ Lit R p814 Je 7 '24 200w
N Y Times p6 Je 8 '24 550w
Reviewed by E. L. Pearson
Outlook 137:362 Jl 2 '24 150w
St Louis p381 N '24

CRANMER-BYNG, LAUNCELOT ALFRED. Salma; a play in three acts. 110p $1.50 Dutton 822

The scene of the play is the Portuguese city of Cintra in the days of the Moorish occupation, a thousand years ago. Salma was principal girl of a troupe of traveling players led by Abu'l Fath the jester, and very much in love with Shamsuddin, a Persian lute player. Salma was captured by Omar ibn Said and made his wife, but thru all the years her heart was with Shamsuddin. Years later Shamsuddin killed Omar in battle, and Salma died that day, but in her place she left a lovely young daughter.

Dial 76:371 Ap '24 80w

"Whether the play would be effective in stage representation is doubtful, not only because of the slightness and lack of human interest of the story, but because the effect of the play should be that of music, enchantment to the ear, and today we have so few actors trained to the utterance of beautiful English. As a basis for an opera, however, the play has excellent possibilities." Jane Dransfield
— + Lit R p953 Ag 9 '24 250w

"Mr. Cranmer-Byng possesses the rare power of writing in that charming style that suggests the songs of the old Persian poets. His speeches are always full of rare images and rich metaphors."
+ N Y Times p13 F 3 '24 400w

"It is picturesque and sententious, as becomes an Oriental subject. The mixture of facetious humour and tragedy in the last act is rather too audacious."
+ — Spec 130:974 Je 9 '23 40w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p289 Ap 26 '23 90w

CRAPSEY, ALGERNON SIDNEY. Last of the heretics. 297p $3.50 Knopf
B or 92 24-17714

Dr Crapsey, a former minister of the Protestant Episcopal church, was tried by an ecclesiastical court of his diocese in 1906 and condemned for the expression of heterodox views. His trial and condemnation as a heretic marked the close of twenty-seven years' rectorship of St Andrew's church, Rochester. He then renounced the ministry and exchanged the pulpit for the platform. Aside from this main issue of his career with which his name is first associated his life has been varied and his thought adventurous.

Booklist 21:65 N '24
Bookm 60:adv Ag '24 100w

"Whatever the reader's point of view even though he disagrees with the author on the doctrine, the denial of which resulted in his excommunication, the movement, clarity and discriminating judgment of this book, together with its sweetness of spirit, will make a lasting impress upon his mind." J. A. MacCullum
+ Lit R p838 Je 21 '24 900w
Reviewed by C. R. Long
Nation 119:342 O 1 '24 480w

"That he is in some respects 'a heretic' in theology cannot be denied. That his judgments are hasty and partial is abundantly manifest. But in character he is splendidly orthodox. And his book, as a stimulus to thought and even opposition, is a valuable tonic."
+ — N Y Times p10 Jl 13 '24 1750w

"Dr. Crapsey has written a sincere and valuable book which illuminates not only the history of his own mind, but also presents forcibly the major problems of the modern Church." C. H. Grattan
+ N Y Tribune p22 Je 29 '24 1150w
Reviewed by H. W. Boynton
Outlook 137:611 Ag 20 '24 400w

CRAWFORD, MORRIS DE CAMP. Heritage of
2 cotton. 244p il $7.50 Putnam
677 Cotton 24-29310

"The author takes up the story of cotton in Peru, in India, in Europe, in England, in the American Colonies and later in the United States, and in each one traces its beginnings and its development and shows how the cultivation of cotton and the weaving of cotton fabrics have been intertwined with the progress of art and industry and commerce. He studies the influence of machinery and deals with the results of its use in different countries, with especial attention in the United States to New England and the South."—N Y Times

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 3 '25 350w

CRAWFORD, M.—Continued

"Mr. Crawford's emphasis is upon the textile end of the industry, rather than upon methods of production; in its field it forms as complete and interesting a history as one could ask. It is a volume more suited for library shelves than for the individual reader, although any one with an especial interest in cotton, or in ethnology, will find it much more engaging than the ordinary reference work."

+ Lit R p10 D 27 '24 330w

"The four-page bibliography ought to be useful to students of textiles for both commercial and artistic purposes. Both the general reader and the student will appreciate the illustrations, which are mainly of primitive fabrics, early designs and articles of production in museums and collections in various parts of the world."

+ N Y Times p23 N 30 '24 570w

"Mr. Crawford has a fine appreciation of cotton as a culture factor and the selection of illustrations for this book has been made accordingly. It is a rarely beautiful volume."

+ R of Rs 70:671 D '24 90w

CRAWFORD, NELSON ANTRIM. Ethics of journalism. 264p $2.75 Knopf

070 Journalism 24-7330

The purpose of the book is not to lay down a code of ethics and rules for the guidance of the journalist, but to assist him in formulating for himself an ethical philosophy for his profession. The author discusses the various charges which the public makes against the newspaper: failure to present the facts fairly and accurately; selling its support to corporations, advertisers or politicians; sensationalism. Then he considers different methods of setting professional standards—legal measures, organizations of journalists, educational agencies, efforts on the part of the newspapers themselves. Appendices give codes of ethics and rules adopted by organizations of journalists and by individual newspapers. Bibliography. Index.

Dial 77:439 N '24 100w

"Mr. Crawford goes boldly into the commonly discussed capitalist influence in the daily press, and the influence of advertisers. He does this thoroughly and honestly, as he does nearly everything else in the book. He names names in those infrequent instances where newspapers have betrayed the confidence of their readers." Silas Bent

+ N Y Times p6 My 11 '24 700w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:295 Je '24

Wis Lib Bul 20:209 O '24

CRAWLEY, JOHN. Reveries of a father; preface by Angelo Patri. 92p $1 Appleton 2

173 Children—Management and training 24-27736

In these reveries a wise and understanding father tells something of his part in the unfolding of the lives of his motherless children—two girls and a boy.

"In the 'Reveries of a Father' John Crawley has placed much that makes profitable reading. Those interested in children and their development will be rewarded for time spent over this charming book." E. S. A.

+ Lit R p13 Ja 3 '25 270w

N Y Tribune p10 D 14 '24 200w

CREED, SIBYL. The shot. 303p $2 Doran [7s Chatto & W.]

24-22675

"It would not have seemed rash to prophesy that there was nothing fresh to be done with a plot based on the mystery of a crime; but Sibyl Creed's The Shot proves that there may be life in the most withered of plants. Her approach to the subject is through the emotions of those whose lives were affected by the violent death of Julian Demmean, and the event itself is not allowed to become distressing. . . Since the centre of interest is shifted from the crime itself to the reactions of those drawn into its vortex, the portrayal of character is necessarily most important, and at this Miss Creed shows herself an adept."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"The tenses jump from past to present and back again without apparent meaning of motive. If you can get past all this, you find quite a competent mystery murder tale, whose secret is unusually well kept until the end. But Miss Creed does not seem to know the length of a minute; she appears to confuse it with a second." Rose Macaulay

+ — Nation and Ath 35:sup247 My 24 '24 110w

N Y Tribune p8 N 2 '24 400w

"Its style is vivid and abrupt to the point of affectation; its characterization is a pleasing blend of the modern-psychological and the ancient-fantastic. These special qualities put it in a class apart: but the fact remains that one reads on mainly for the sake of discovering the mystery's solution."

+ — Sat R 137:541 My 24 '24 120w

"Of Miss Sibyl Creed's detective story, one can say little except in praise. It combines good character-drawing with incredible ingenuity of plot; and only confirmed lovers of the very horrible will be disappointed in it." L. P. Hartley

+ Spec 132:760 My 10 '24 50w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p266 My 1 '24 270w

CREEDS and loyalty. 170p $1.50 Macmillan

230 Creeds. Theology 24-12446

Seven members of the faculty of the Episcopal theological school, Cambridge, present their views on the history, interpretation and use of the creeds. Among the matters discussed are subjects about which the modernist controversy centers. The writers are liberals, but they write in no controversial spirit. Contents: The history of the Apostles' and Nicene creeds, by J. A. Muller; Liturgies and creeds, by H: B. Washburn; The Scriptures and the Apostles' creed, with special reference to the birth of Christ, by W: H: P. Hatch; The virgin birth and belief in Christ, by Angus Dun; The resurrection of the body, by S: McComb; Honesty and the creeds, by N. B. Nash; The creed as a test of church membership, by J. T. Addison.

Boston Transcript p3 Ag 9 '24 500w

"Admirably temperate in spirit."

+ J Religion 4:661 N '24 150w

"A helpful—because impartial and informing—summary of historical material."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Je 17 '24 650w

CREEVEY, THOMAS. The Creevey papers: a selection from the correspondence and diaries of the late Thomas Creevey, M.P.; ed. by Sir Herbert Maxwell. 713p il $6 Dutton

B or 92 Creevey, Thomas

First published in 1904, the Creevey papers have gone thru several editions and have recently been recalled to attention by Lytton Strachey's sketch of Mr Creevey in "Books and Characters." (Book Review Digest, 1922) Thomas Creevey was a Whig member of Parliament, a familiar figure in society, an inveterate diner-out, an intimate of the titled and the influential and a voluminous letter-writer and diarist. He died in 1838 and some of the last entries in his diary refer to the youthful Queen Victoria.

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 19 '24 900w

Lit R p809 Je 7 '24 180w

"Creevey Papers are a delight from beginning to end, for the author of them is a man of sense and intelligence, who had an inimitable gift for taking life as it came and enjoying it to the fullest extent." Burton Rascoe

+ N Y Tribune p18 D 30 '23 450w

"This piquant book is worth reading for a dozen reasons."
+ Outlook 136:195 Ja 30 '24 70w

CRESSON, WILLIAM PENN. Diplomatic portraits; Europe and the Monroe doctrine one hundred years ago. 371p il $4 Houghton
940.28 Monroe Doctrine. Diplomacy. Europe —History 23-17760
For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

"The sketches are written in a pleasant, even an attractive, style; whatever else may be said of them they certainly are not dull. As is to be expected, there is a certain unevenness of tone."
+ Am Hist R 29:599 Ap '24 440w

"The portraits are skillfully drawn and the book makes good reading."
+ Am Pol Sci R 18:427 My '24 50w

Booklist 20:247 Ap '24

"There are few dull pages in this volume and many brilliant ones. The serviceability of biography to history has been rarely illustrated to better advantage." E: S. Corwin
+ Lit R p472 Ja 26 '24 480w

"Though anecdotal and episodical, these sketches illuminate a dramatic, if futile, era, and will prove stimulating to the general reader and the beginning student of European diplomatic history." H. E. B.
+ New Repub 37:319 F 13 '24 110w

Reviewed by S. A. Korff
Pol Sci Q 39:518 S '24 500w

CRESSWELL, NICHOLAS. Journal of Nicholas ^{2} Cresswell, 1774-1777. 287p $5 Dial press
917.3 United States—Description and travel. United States—History—Revolutionary war 24-30436

This diary, brought to light after one hundred and fifty years, recounts the adventures of a young Englishman who came to America in 1774 just before the Revolutionary war. He came with the hope of settling in America and he travelled over considerable ground, thru Virginia and into the Indian country along the Ohio, and visited the scene of Braddock's defeat. Without money but with an unusual faculty for making friends, he steered his difficult way thru the first years of the war, making friends on both sides without having to enlist on either. He gives an unfavorable description of the New York of that day, his impressions of George Washington and an account by an eye-witness of some of his battles.

"This journal, written in the day to day form of a diary, and covering its author's three years' residence in 'His Majesty's late colonies,' seems to our mind an extremely valuable and illuminating commentary on Revolutionary America." E. C. Beckwith
+ Lit R p9 D 20 '24 540w

+ New Repub 41:203 Ja 14 '25 450w

Reviewed by W. P. Beazell
N Y World p8e N 2 '24 1400w

"The Journal has been published now for the first time, and in its comments upon America, upon the colonial and English leaders, and upon life in New York is a readable and valuable document." E. L. Pearson
+ Outlook 138:689 D 24 '24 270w

CRITICISM in America, its function and status; essays by Irving Babbitt, Van Wyck Brooks, W. C. Brownell, Ernest Boyd, T. S. Eliot, H. L. Mencken, Stuart P. Sherman, J. E. Spingarn and George E. Woodberry. 330p $2.50 Harcourt
814 Criticism 24-3993

"Here is a group of essays which it has been next to impossible to secure for several years—and they do illustrate the American critical attitude with rare completeness. This series, arranged chronologically, ranges in date from 1910 to 1923, and in name from J. E. Spingarn to Ernest Boyd. The clearest essays in the volume, we should say, are those by Messrs. Spingarn, Sherman, and Brooks; the dullest, those by T. S. Eliot; the noisiest, those by H. L. Mencken; and the most scholarly, those by George Edward Woodberry and W. C. Brownell."—Bookm

Booklist 21:15 O '24

"It occurs to us that much muddy thinking on the part of book reviewers, and those who choose to chatter about modern tendencies in this and that branch of literature, could be eliminated by a careful perusal of this excellent volume."
+ Bookm 59:358 My '24 180w

Reviewed by W: B. I. Blake
Boston Transcript p4 Ap 12 '24 2000w

Reviewed by W. C. Blum
Dial 76:553 Je '24 2500w

Reviewed by Lloyd Morris
N Y Times p14 F 10 '24 2000w

Reviewed by Burton Rascoe
N Y Tribune p18 F 3 '24 1300w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:322 Je '24

"A greater diversity of views and opinions, all extremely interesting, could hardly be found. They go in the aggregate to show that American criticism is not very different either in function or status from European. It is, however, a lively display."
+ Spec 132:680 Ap 26 '24 120w

GROCE, BENEDETTO. Conduct of life; auth. ^{2} tr. by Arthur Livingston. 326p $2.25 Harcourt
170 Conduct of life. Ethics 24-24481

"These essays and fragments by the Italian philosopher do not contribute formally to the system of thought expounded in his earlier works, but are rather an expression of his idealistic philosophy as applied to the ethical problems of life. Some of the subjects are 'On telling the truth,' 'The joys of evil,' 'Humility,' and 'The value of an example.' "—Booklist

Booklist 21:135 Ja '25

"There is little in this study of human conduct, except perhaps its frequent keenness, to alienate the most conservatively entrenched sweatshop owner or ammunition maker. It is perhaps this aspect of Croce's philosophy which has given it a popularity beneath its merits."
Dial 78:80 Ja '25 170w

"Croce is one of the leading philosophical writers of the present day; and his outgivings are receiving more and more attention. The pleasing feature of 'The Conduct of Life' is that it can be read with enjoyment by those not used to philosophic dialectic; for if the fundamentals of Croce's position are to them obscure, his conclusions are generally so clearly stated that they will perceive his purport though they fail to follow his reasoning."
+ N Y Times p5 O 19 '24 1900w

"Uneven in merit, and largely lacking in that humor and irony that are supposed indispensable to the brief essay as a literary form. But it would be a great pity if many readers were thus deterred. For these essays are unique in their penetration and full of new thoughts."
— + Sat R of Lit 1:329 N 29 '24 150w

CROCE, BENEDETTO. European literature in the nineteenth century; tr. from the Italian with an introd. by Douglas Ainslee. 373p $6 Knopf [16s Chapman & H.]
804 Literature [24-30064]

"This book is not, as one is led to suppose, a survey of European literature in the last century. It consists of a number of essays on various figures in the literature of that century, many of them not among the greatest. The only Englishman in a list of twenty-five is Sir Walter Scott; and Scott is chosen by the famous Neapolitan philosopher merely to be made an example of." (New Statesman) The others included are: Alfieri, Monti, Schiller, Werner,

CROCE, BENEDETTO—Continued
Kleist, Chamisso, Foscolo, Stendhal, Leopardi, Alfred de Vigny, Manzoni, Berchet, Giusti, Heine, George Sand, Fernan Caballero, de Musset, Balzac, Baudelaire, Zola, Daudet, Ibsen, de Maupassant and Carducci.

Boston Transcript p4 D 27 '24 1550w

"It becomes increasingly difficult to be patient with Signor Croce's books. To some extent this is due to an unfortunate tone, nowhere so apparent as in this latest book—a tone somewhat truculent, somewhat peevish, as of an old pride injured and angry, a tone alternately magisterial and patronizing, and not infrequently malicious. Have these things a place in criticism, or need Signor Croce so often go out of his way to throw derisive stones at other critics, his predecessors and contemporaries?" Conrad Aiken
— Nation and Ath 36:56 O 11 '24 1800w

Reviewed by Conrad Aiken
New Repub 40:301 N 19 '24 1800w (Reprinted from Nation and Ath)

"The title of this work is not too well chosen. We must not do Croce an injustice, however, for his book in the Italian was entitled Poetry and Non-Poetry, which is quite another story. Here is the clue to the selection of his authors."
New Statesman 24:83 O 25 '24 1500w

"That Signor Croce has undertaken no inconsiderable task is apparent, and although the list of authors whom he discusses runs to twenty-six, not even the most dogmatic of critics would dare to insist that so small a number is in any degree representative of European literature in the century in which, it is safe to hazard, quantity production exceeded that of all previous years since the invention of printing. And Croce makes no pretense that his list is representative, or that it either sums up a school or defines a tendency." P. A. Hutchison
N Y Times p2 N 23 '24 1950w

"No new light whatever is thrown upon these subjects, and the mere fact that they are now classified in Croce's hierachy is a matter of more satisfaction to him than of enlightenment to others." Ernest Boyd
— N Y World p9e N 16 '24 1550w

Reviewed by Garnet Smith
Sat R 138:395 O 18 '24 950w

"Though not a great book, it is full of interest for those who are alive to the problems of literature, and especially for those who are readers of the Italian and French literature of the last century."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p626 O 9 '24 1900w

CROCE, BENEDETTO. Goethe; tr. from the Italian by Emily Anderson; with an introd. by Douglas Ainslie. 208p $2.75 Knopf [7s 6d Methuen]

832 Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von 24-4931

"Croce's estimate of Goethe is too brief to be regarded as an adequate treatment of the subject; it is pervaded, moreover, with that 'esthetic' outlook on life and personality which Croce has made especially his own. Most of the chapters go to the discussion of such masterpieces as 'Werther,' 'Faust,' 'Helena,' 'Hermann and Dorothea,' the 'Elective Affinities' and the 'Wanderjahre;' there are also estimates of the historical and ethical dramas, the hymns, lyrics and 'fragments.'"—Boston Transcript

"The new book, with its lavish use of quotations, will be welcomed by all admirers of Goethe." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 12 '24 1100w
Cleveland p45 Je '24
Dial 76:372 Ap '24 150w

Reviewed by G. D. Eaton
Int Bk R p650 Ag '24 1000w

"Though the book touches in some way almost every side of Goethe's genius, it is to be regarded rather as an introduction or guide to intenser study than as a rounded portrait of a great poet. But what an illuminating guide it is!"
+ Lit R p597 Mr 15 '24 400w

"The mind that writes this review is mainly conscious of tedium, which is harder to bear than disagreement. At any rate, it seems questionable whether any of the clever young men who can see nothing in Goethe will be led to see anything in him by this book. However, it is wise to hope for the best." G. L. Dickinson
— Nation and Ath 34:347 D 1 '23 750w

"This volume by Croce should be a welcome addition to the shelf which already contains the translations of the Italian Senator's books on Dante and Shakespeare, Ariosto and Corneille. Here once again is exemplified that system of criticism which is so simplified and yet so pregnant with philosophical reasoning. Through such media the interior purposes of masterpieces are revealed, and revealed with none of the usual extraneous conjecturing, theorizing or ethical measuring."
N Y Times p15 F 3 '24 3100w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:322 Je '24

"As in his Dante criticism, his pioneer effort in the Goethe country is to attack the dense undergrowth of spurious Goethe literature, and the forests of commentary. Small wonder if in his divine rage he forgets his own principle of open-mindedness, and attacks the historical and biographical methods of criticism. This attack is particularly unfortunate in preceding an effort to estimate Goethe's literary work. Of all human giants, Goethe surely is the one whose writing is most misrepresented by a pure aesthetic and abstract consideration. Croce's critique is valuable, however, in that it separates, with some success, Goethe's actual from his ideal literary achievement." R: Church
— + Spec 132:89 Ja 19 '24 950w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p885 D 20 '23 3600w

CROCKER, BOSWORTH, pseud. (MARY ARNOLD CROCKER [CHILDS] LEWISOHN) (MRS LUDWIG LEWISOHN). Humble folk. 176p $2 Stewart Kidd

812

"Contains five one-act plays which have been produced by the Washington Square Players and other Little Theater Groups. 'The Last Straw' depicts the tragedy of a German-American janitor whose explosive temper makes him seem much worse to casual observers than he really is. 'The Baby Carriage' is a comedy-drama concerning the poverty-stricken wife of a little Jewish tailor whose stifled desire for beauty almost brings her to petty larceny 'The Dog' is a neatly-constructed bit of tragic irony showing the economic pressure which strangely intertwines man and beast. In 'The First Time' there is a genre picture of a girl of the underworld whose natural gentleness cannot free her from the vicious circle of her life. And in 'The Cost of a Hat' there is the drama of an Irish-American girl who rebels against the tyrannical coarseness of her menfolks."—N Y Times

Booklist 20:257 Ap '24
Cleveland p20 Mr '24

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Nation 118:287 Mr 12 '24 600w

"The author's dialogue is deft and redolent of the type of person she pictures. With a minimum of action she manages to suggest vast passions."
+ N Y Times p5 F 17 '24 700w
Wis Lib Bul 20:176 Jl '24

CROCKETT, VIVIAN. Messalina; with supplementary matter. 319p il $3 Boni & Liveright [7s 6d J. Cape]

Messalina, Valeria 24-30454

A novelized biography of an infamous empress, daughter of Marcus Valerius Messala and wife of the emperor Claudius, by whose order she was put to death. The life of first century Rome, its customs, its vices, and its personalities, is the background of the narrative.

"Mr. Crockett has produced a readable and pleasing story, but he has shown little or no originality."
+ — Boston Transcript p6 Ja 3 '25 200w

"Mr. Crockett has somehow revealed the very incarnation of selfishness, vice and cruelty, and still has been able to make his presentation beautiful." Walter Yust
+ Lit R p14 D 6 '24 500w

"We shall not find anything greatly illuminating in Mr. Vivian Crockett's 'Messalina.' By writing his book in the form of a story, he hoped to make the whole more vivid, sprightly and direct."
— N Y World p8e D 21 '24 960w

"A good and interesting picture; but it is not as exciting as its subject would seem to promise." Gerald Gould
+ — Sat R 138:426 O 25 '24 80w

"The notorious Messalina is a most appropriate subject for a spectacular film-play. This book, though it is almost as empty of psychology as the film, is very much more refined in conception and it is executed with an artistic reticence and decorative use of its sumptuous material which makes reading pleasant."
— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p613 O 2 '24 250w

CROFT, TERRELL WILLIAMS. Alternating-
2 current armature winding. 352p il $3 (15s) McGraw

621.313 Armatures. Electric machinery—Alternating current 24-3935

"Guide to practical winding and rewinding of alternating-current stators. Not concerned with theory."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

---

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:514 N '24

CROFT, TERRELL WILLIAMS. Conduit wir-
2 ing. 458p il $3 McGraw

621.315 Electric wiring. Electric conduits 24-13160

This book explains how to install conduit wiring for all types of buildings and all types of work.

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:514 N '24

CROFT, TERRELL WILLIAMS, Electrical ma-
2 chinery and control diagrams. 305p il $3 McGraw

621.3 Electric machinery 24-23262

"A collection of some 500 circuit diagrams covering most of the apparatus used in modern electric-power practice. Includes older apparatus, still in service, for which connection diagrams can no longer be obtained from manufacturers. Diagrams are clearly drawn and briefly explained."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:600 D '24

CROFT, TERRELL WILLIAMS. Lighting circuits and switches. 472p il $3 McGraw

621.32 Electric lighting. Electric wiring 23-10701

"Deals mainly with interior building applications, operating on 110- to 220-volt, two- or three-wire systems. Some attention is given to electric-heating circuits. Both description and diagrams are unusually clear."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

---

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:73 F '24

CROFTS, FREEMAN WILLS. The cask. 319p
3 $2 Seltzer

24-24340

A navigation company sends Tom Broughton to St Katherine's docks to check up on a consignment of wines. Due to a mishap one of the casks is slightly broken and to the amazement of Broughton, there oozes from it a stream of golden sovereigns mingled with sawdust! Further investigation reveals the body of a well-dressed and beautiful woman, brutally murdered. Scotland Yard takes the case immediately but the combined ingenuity of London and Paris detectives fails to break down the wall of circumstantial evidence which encloses Léon Felix, the man to whom the cask is addressed. The quest is finally taken up by London's most skillful detective, Georges La Touche, who discovers the real clue which leads to the discovery of the criminal.

"Were the story shorter it would gain in strength. Of the craftsmanship, however, one cannot speak too highly."
+ — Boston Transcript p4 D 24 '24 660w
Lit R p9 N 1 '24 230w

"This story with which he makes his bow to American readers is clever, interesting and well constructed."
+ N Y Times p17 D 21 '24 480w

"To all lovers of first rate detective fiction, 'The Cask' can be safely recommended."
+ N Y World p9e N 9 '24 210w

CROLY, HERBERT DAVID (WILLIAM HERBERT, pseud.). Willard Straight. 569p il $6 Macmillan

B or 92 Straight, Willard 24-12001

"Artist, banker, diplomat, adventurer, Sinologue, Major and journalist was Willard Straight. In his short career—he died on Dec. 1, 1918, at the age of 38—he had illustrated several books, had mastered the Chinese language, had served as war correspondent during the Russo-Japanese war, had been present at the death of one great Eastern Empire, Korea, and witnessed the collapse of another, China. He had dreamed of making American imperialism in Manchuria a force for fair play against the policies of Russia and Japan. . . These, in brief, were the achievements of this restless, brilliant mind which Herbert Croly has described in his volume."—N Y Times

---

Booklist 21:108 D '24
Reviewed by S. L. Cook
Boston Transcript p2 S 20 '24 1200w

"I apply the tests of friendship—possibly more severe than the tests of criticism—to Herbert Croly's work. The book meets those tests satisfactorily. It brings back to me the man I knew and lived and worked and played with. It visualizes him with unusual fidelity and it records quite accurately the many things he did and the beliefs that he held." Martin Egan
+ Lit R p2 O 4 '24 850w

"Mr. Croly has written more than an interesting story of one man's life. He has also given a scholarly and authoritative account of Far Eastern history in the eventful years after the opening of this century. As he is not a specialist in Far Eastern affairs it is a highly creditable achievement. In balance and perspective his book is superior to many which have been written by specialists." Nathaniel Peffer
+ Nation 119:471 O 29 '24 750w

"More interesting than the tangle of negotiations in this book are the glimpses of the vivid personality of Willard Straight. The artist turned diplomat and business man was still an artist and everywhere made warm friends." N: Roosevelt
+ N Y Times p3 S 7 '24 1650w
Reviewed by C. H. Gaines
No Am 220:166 S '24 950w

"This careful biography is a work of friendship; and we get the impression that Mr. Croly has been in some sense deputed to the task by the whole body of Willard Straight's friends.

CROLY, H. D:—Continued
He has done a solid piece of work. He takes matters, as always, a little heavily." H. W. Boynton

+ — Outlook 138:212 O 8 '24 500w

Reviewed by W: A. Brown

Survey 53:287 D 1 '24 1100w

CRONWRIGHT-SCHREINER, SAMUEL CRON. Life of Olive Schreiner. 414p il $5 Little [21s Unwin]

B or 92 Schreiner, Olive (Mrs S. C. Cronwright-Schreiner) [24-14054]

Olive Schreiner's husband writes the biography of this woman of genius whose "Story of an African Farm," written in her early twenties, was a literary sensation. From his account of her and from the memories or impressions of others who knew and loved her, the image is drawn of a woman of intense vitality both mental and physical, of powerful convictions and emotional eloquence—a woman of great, if unbalanced genius, so "strange and incredible in her personality" that even the person who knew her best found it extremely difficult to convey an idea of her. Her own reminiscences are a part of the narrative, her early South African journals and some of her letters. Most of her letters, however, are kept for another volume.

Booklist 21:22 O '24

Bookm 60:103 S '24 80w

"We are soon to have a collection of her letters, and amazng reading they should be. But in the meantime we get this valiant and vivid 'Life' by Mr. Samuel Cronwright-Schreiner, her husband and champion." J. P. Collins

+ Boston Transcript p3 My 3 '24 2250w

"Mr. Cronwright-Schreiner has been very laborious in his collection of data; he builds up an interesting geographical, political and family background for this picture of his wife. There is much about the Schreiners, more about Mr. Cronwright-Schreiner. He is a complete romantic figure in the foreground, while Olive Schreiner remains an unfinished sketch." Amy Wellington

— Lit R p886 Jl 12 '24 900w

"One admits that geniuses, as a rule, are hard to live with, eccentric, undependable: one admits that her husband may have found Olive Schreiner no exception to the rule. But page after page of the book is taken up with details so selected that it is impossible to remain unaware of Mr. Cronwright-Schreiner's naive dramatization of himself as the noble and willing victim." R. S. Alexander

— + Nation 118:653 Je 4 '24 1300w

Reviewed by G. L. Dickinson

Nation and Ath 35:116 Ap 26 '24 1500w

New Statesman 22:736 Mr 29 '24 1100w

"It is a satisfying book that S. C. Cronwright-Schreiner has written, a book that displays the most painstaking research and careful exploration of obscure incidents. No reading of the volume may be completed without a comprehensive understanding of Olive Schreiner and the most meticulous details of her career."

+ N Y Times p10 My 11 '24 2600w

"This record is ill-organized, sometimes verbose and filled with much irrelevant detail; and many interesting contacts—as, for instance, her friendship with Havelock Ellis—are passed over very briefly; but it justifies itself by presenting with unmistakable fidelity a very remarkable woman." Isabel Paterson

+ — N Y Tribune p22 My 18 '24 2000w

"Tenderly written, with care and restraint."

+ N Y World p7e My 18 '24 250w

Outlook 137:642 Ag 27 '24 170w

R of Rs 70:222 Ag '24 100w

"This task Mr. Cronwright has achieved with remarkable skill. His simple, direct and forcible style, combined with intimate knowledge of his subject and native tact in expression, makes this biography one of the outstanding books of its kind."

+ Sat R 137:268 Mr 15 '24 600w

Spec 133:644 N 1 '24 210w

Springf'd Republican p9a My 4 '24 200w

"It seems to give us as true and complete a picture of his wife as any human being can give of another."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Je 22 '24 1250w

"In this volume Mr. Cronwright-Schreiner has raised a memorial to his gifted wife, Olive Schreiner, in such a way as to make any other biographical account of her superfluous."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p156 Mr 13 '24 700w

Wis Lib Bul 20:147 Je '24

CROSS, RUTH. Golden cocoon. 341p $2 Harper

24-5805

Molly Shannon, of the tribe of "them shiftless Shannons," was determined to live down the family reputation. When the winning of a state scholarship gave her a chance to spend four years at the state university she departed joyously, altho her mother and numerous brothers and sisters could not well spare her. At the boarding house where she earned part of her expenses she met that charming cad, Stephen Renfro, and there followed an idyllic love affair. Stephen suddenly married a rich woman leaving Molly heart broken and determined to drown herself. From this she was rescued by Gregory Cochran, a wealthy man of fine family. Years after when Cochran was governor of the state, Molly was the governor's lady, and a clever and beautiful woman. There came a time when a certain secret of Molly's past threatened to ruin her husband's career, but Molly met this complication in a thoroughly courageous manner.

"The first 250 pages are too good of their kind to let them wander off, as Miss Cross does, into a melodramatic, incredible flight to New York. But she may be well forgiven the last third of the book for the sake of the first two-thirds." Howard Devree

+ — Lit R p661 Ap 12 '24 650w

New Repub 38:266 Ap 30 '24 150w

"In the major portion of her story the author writes entertainingly and gives the reader a sense of conviction, notwithstanding a certain saccharine quality which crops out. Had she been content to limit herself to the development of the Molly of the shiftless Shannons into the mistress of the Governor's mansion she might have sung a welcome variation on the Cinderella theme."

+ — N Y Times p17 Mr 30 '24 820w

Wis Lib Bul 20:178 Jl '24

CROWDER, WILLIAM. Dwellers of the sea and shore. 333p il $2.25 Macmillan

591.92 Marine biology 23-15737

This volume in the Young people's shelf of science series describes for the amateur naturalist the plant and animal life of the seashore, the tide pool and the open sea. Illustrated with drawings and photographs by the author.

"Illustrations are clear but many times small and the index is not very comprehensive. For girls and boys of twelve and over and for the general reader who wishes a simple book on the subject."

Booklist 20:302 My '24

Cleveland p39 My '24

"Would interest any child who had a knowledge of the plant and animal life of the shore, or one without this knowledge who cared for out-of-door things. The style of the book is interesting and simple without being written down to the child's level."

+ Educ R 67:118 F '24 80w

Lit R p354 D 8 '23 50w

"Not necessarily limited to young readers. Illustrations admirable."

Wis Lib Bul 20:99 Ap '24

CROWNFIELD, GERTRUDE. Blue Swordsman. 260p il $2 Dutton
24-4727

In the land of the Mystic Vale lived Prince Azure Flame, the Blue Swordsman. It chanced one day he heard a marvelous song about the noble Princess Glow of the Land of Fire. In his eagerness to find her he left his kingdom all unguarded and went to seek her, forgetting even his magic sword. He found the princess and won her love, but was told he must bring a certain wonderful jewel ere the Princess could become his bride. Azure Flame knew this jewel was in his own treasure house and hastened to the Mystic Vale for it. What a dread sight met his eyes! The witch Black Shadow and her husband Black Mantle had stolen the jewel, enchanted his sword and covered his kingdom with dark, sooty shadows. With the help of the enchanted scarf given him by Princess Glow he righted things in the Mystic Vale, recovered his sword and set forth on the quest of the jewel. Thru many adventures he passed, vanquishing his enemies, and arrived at last with the jewel and claimed the princess.

"It is really a very charming story."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 30 '24 480w

Reviewed by M. G. Bonner
Int Bk R p547 Je '24 70w.

"In imagery and beauty of language the work more nearly approaches that of Laurence Housman than does any similar tale I have read in a long time. So colorful a bit of flame could well afford more illustration than is given it, though the few drawings by Anne Merriman Peck are delicately lovely in themselves." G. M. Goldman
+ N Y World p7e Mr 23 '24 150w

CROWTHER, SAMUEL. John H. Patterson. 364p il $5 Doubleday

B or 92 Patterson, John Henry. National cash register company 23-18088

The story of the man who founded the National cash register company is a course in business building as well as a biography. Mr Patterson, tho neither a manufacturer or a salesman, bought out a company with a continuous record of failure and by scientific methods of advertising and salesmanship and advanced principles of management built up the great business in Dayton which is connected with his name. Mr. Crowther describes his methods and points out the reasons for his success.

"The book is a very keen analysis of a great business builder; in the discussion of Mr. Patterson's business policies, method of handling men, and views of finance, Mr. Crowther is most thorough." J. G.
+ Bookm 59:adv Mr '24 140w

"Mr. Crowther has given us a speaking portrait of the man, as well as a full enough record of his concrete achievements."
+ Lit R p448 Ja 12 '24 300w

"Mr. Crowther has told the story of John H. Patterson's great creation interestingly and in detail. His book will have permanent documentary value for the future historian of American industrial progress." W. N. C. Carlton
+ N Y Tribune p19 Ja 27 '24 850w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:326 Je '24
Wis Lib Bul 20:95 Ap '24

CROY, HOMER. R. F. D. no. 3. 349p $2 Harper
24-23172

The Deckers, R. F. D. 3, Junction City, Mo., belong to that group of farmers in the Middle West who work unceasingly and uncomplainingly. Josie, their daughter, young and unusually pretty, is the pride of her parents, for the girl had taken part in a beauty contest and so gained recognition in Junction City. But Josie dreams of even greater conquests—triumphs in Hollywood studios. With such ambitions, Orville Vert as a husband is impossible, so Josie jilts him. She also disdains the prosperous Bush Higbee. He is coarse and vulgar. Then one afternoon Floyd Krock rolls up to the Decker farm in a smart racer. He is a silo salesman, but talks about large cities, college, and Hollywood. Josie adores him, and one day impetuously elopes with him. Somehow the marriage never takes place. A few days of whirling life in a large city and Josie returns to her anxious parents. Later, to protect her honor, she marries Bush Higbee who takes her to California on her wedding trip.

— Boston Transcript p6 N 5 '24 360w
Cleveland p84 N '24
Ind 113:409 N 15 '24 40w

"With this new story Mr. Croy must be advanced to a high rank among our novelists. He has here attained a dignity, a finely artful simplicity, and an evenness of execution far beyond his previous work. He has achieved a complete mastery of his instrument of expression, which includes a restraint, a sense of proportion, and a sureness in its use, which are rare qualities." H. L. Pangborn
+ Int Bk R p136 Ja '25 750w

"If it lacks a little of the freshness and vigor of the earlier work, it is still a robust, competent piece of writing which does not suffer by comparison with any other product of what has come to be the most extensive school of novelists in the country: those who reveal and disparage life as lived in mid-continent." B. B.
+ New Repub 40:279 N 12 '24 600w

"'R. F. D. No. 3' contributes nothing new. One must admit that the actual working of the plot is admirably smooth and self-contained. But in default of an adequate underlying idea, such a book as this is justified only in so far as it presents a picture that is true to the general rather than the particular."
— N Y Times p8 O 19 '24 950w

Reviewed by Mary Ross
N Y Tribune p11 N 2 '24 1150w

"Sordid in its realism and to our mind, a complete example of fictional futility." E. W. Osborn
— N Y World p8e O 19 '24 250w

Reviewed by Elmer Davis
Sat R of Lit 1:159 O 4 '24 1200w

"'R. F. D. No 3' is written after the same formula as 'West of the Water Tower' by the same author, but is a more convincing chronicle of western rural life."
+ Springf'd Republican p5a N 2 '24 600w

CRUESS, WILLIAM VERE. Commercial fruit ^{2} and vegetable products; a textbook for student, investigator and manufacturer. (Agricultural and biological publications) 530p il $4.50 McGraw

664.8 Canning and preserving 24-10818

Thorough presentation of the technical side of the fruit and vegetable preserving industry.

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:518 N '24

CRUMP, IRVING. Boys' book of forest rangers. 253p il $1.75 Dodd

634.9 United States—Forest service. Forests and forestry 24-5366

The book is divided into five sections, each dealing with some phase of forestry. Each section begins with a story and is followed by chapters relating to the serious side of a ranger's life. Contents: Rangers in the making; The forest fire fighters; What a ranger must know; Rangers and cattlemen; In the woods with the rangers.

Booklist 20:302 My '24

CRUMP, IRVING—Continued

"This book by Mr. Crump is full of information and thrilling interest. He describes in a comprehensive and entertaining manner the varied duties of a forest ranger."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 26 '24 200w
St Louis p390 N '24
Wis Lib Bul 20:179 Jl '24

CUMBERLAND, GERALD, pseud. See Kenyon, C. F.

CUMMINGS, WILLIAM. Island chronicle. 302p $2.50 Knopf
24-10841

A chronicle of the lives of the simple, industrious people, of a little Portuguese fishing village on an island off the New England coast. They were people who knew love, jealousy, revenge and tragedy. Here Angela and Joe loved with all the depth of their youthful natures and were happy until Giorgio Vinti, the wealthiest fisherman on the island, selected Angela for his wife. Her mother, greedy for the advantages to be derived from this marriage, forced her to agree. In the scene that followed the older woman dropped dead. Angela, who felt that she had killed her, miserably married Vinti. No happiness came out of this union. Vinti was unfaithful, and Angela had sacrificed her happiness and Joe's. There is great beauty in the scene of Joe's death and the mystical influence that comforts her. In the end, thru Joe's devotion and death, Angela knew she would have the courage to go on, having the eternal hope and faith of mothers in their sons. Hers would be Joe, resurrected and moving in the flesh.

Booklist 21:26 O '24

"The style, the characterizations and the background of this novel all blend into a story of strength and intensity." D. F. G.

+ Boston Transcript p1 Je 7 '24 300w

"There are incidents in the story which might be called unbelievable if they were isolated and there are incidents which would be condemned as 'trash' in a different kind of book; but the author has managed, by the beautiful simplicity of his style and the unbroken continuity of his plot to render them plausible and genuine, even necessary." S. M

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p6 N 2 '24 350w

"William Cummings tells a story simply, beautifully. He writes in an unassuming manner in words that are carefully chosen and in a style that is faintly romantic."

+ Lit R p14 S 6 '24 300w
N Y Times p8 My 25 '24 1150w

"After choosing such promising material as the Portuguese, Mr. Cummings should have avoided the clichés of manner he is guilty of. His writing is competent and undoubtedly in the future he will exploit the social situation he has hit upon to more worthy ends." C. H. Grattan

— + N Y Tribune p24 Jl 27 '24 420w

"A most unhappy story extremely well told." E. W. Osborn

+ N Y World p7e Je 15 '24 400w

"As a first book, his novel is astonishingly well built and executed."

+ Outlook 138:214 O 8 '24 70w

CUNLIFFE, J: W., and BATTENHOUSE, T:, eds. See Bible. Whole—Selections

CUNNINGHAM, BRYSSON. Cargo handling at ^{2} ports. 180p il $3.50 Wiley [13s 6d Chapman & H.]

656 Harbors. Docks. Freight handling
[24-5316]

"Deals with cargo handling from the point of view of the engineer, making no attempt to cover the field of management and accounting in the limited space of one volume. Mr. Cunningham is editor of the Dock and Harbour Authority and has written works on docks and harbors. Types of pier facilities, cranes and cargo-handling appparatus are described. The equipment of numerous ports on both sides of the Atlantic is illustrated by numerous drawings and photographs. Burtoning, trucking, and lighterage are discussed and considerable attention is given to the methods of handling various types of special cargoes, such as ore and grain."—Eng N

Booklist 21:10 O '24

"This work will be of special value to persons more or less unfamiliar with cargo handling because considerable attention is given to defining the various terms used in and around ports, including the classification of cargo and cargo carriers, and the processes used there."

+ Eng N 92:1070 Je 19 '24 200w

"In a space of under two hundred pages the book gives a well-balanced and critical treatment of its special subject that is not to be found elsewhere in technical literature." M. V. R.

+ St Louis p376 N '24

CUNNINGHAM, EUGENE. Trail to Apacaz. 292p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Unwin]
24-20551

Steve Lawhorn, a "bad man," takes the trail to Apacaz and steps into extraordinary adventure and romance. In the small Central American republic of Flores, he becomes entangled in a political turmoil waging between the autocratic president of that republic and his crafty minister of war, due to the concession of oil lands made to the American, Mr. Mays. The minister of war uses every available means to kill Steve, but the hero with the help of his old partner, Morg Connor, defeats every murderous attack of his enemy. Furthermore, he wins the beautiful daughter of the American, and comes triumphantly out of the conflict, a general.

"It is not too extravagant for its type and will hold the addict's attention." H.W.

+ — Lit R p9 Ag 30 '24 100w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p8e Ag 24 '24 150w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p225 Ap 10 '24 100w

CUNNINGHAME GRAHAM, ROBERT GALLNIGAD BONTINE. Conquest of the River Plate. 313p il $3 Doubleday [15s Heinemann]

980 Rio de la Plata. Spanish America—History

The great viceroyalty of El Rio de la Plata which became the most important of all the possessions once held by Spain in South America, comprised the Argentine Republic, Uruguay and Paraguay, together with a portion of Bolivia. The story of the conquest of this territory by the Spanish conquistadores of the sixteenth century, as told by Mr Cunninghame Graham, is one of strange romance and adventure. The period he covers is from 1515, when Juan Diaz de Solis set out from Spain to explore the coast of South America, to 1580, when Garay founded Buenos Aires. Of the conquistadores here celebrated the most prominent are Nuñez, Pedro de Mendoza, Irala and Juan de Garay. Many bold deeds of adventure are narrated.

"It is a fine book about a fine subject, but one cannot honestly say that it is anything more." Leonard Woolf

+ — Nation and Ath 35:51 Ap 12 '24 1700w

"The subject is, really, too vast for a book of this size. Although we agree heartily with Mr. Cunninghame Graham that it is a mistake for a foreign historian, writing on so little known a theme, to elaborate minute points of fact, it is even a worse mistake for him to be as disconnected and as economical in narrative as is Mr. Graham. Many pages of the book are rather notes for a history than a history proper. Mr. Graham does not give himself or his readers space. There is almost a new fact in every paragraph and a new actor in every page, and when the book is finished the reader has not a connected story of the conquest of La Plata and the founding of the early colonies, but only a few vivid impressions against a too swiftly moving background of half-glimpsed men and events."

— + New Statesman 23:196 My 24 '24 1500w

"From an artistic point of view, 'The Conquest of the River Plate' is not all that one might expect of so accomplished a writer as Cunninghame Graham. Structurally it is firm, but insufficiently compressed and insufficiently varied, and in style, sometimes it is downright bad. But on the other hand, this is history that should long ago have been written; and as written now, by a man whose best work gives him a high place in letters, it has strength and flavor and considerable significance."
— + N Y Times p21 N 16 '24 780w

Reviewed by Muna Lee
N Y World p8e D 14 '24 200w

"No one could be better qualified than Mr. Cunninghame Graham to relate such a thrilling chapter from the history of the Spanish conquistadores as forms the subject of this fascinating book."
+ Sat R 137:489 My 10 '24 600w

"Full of fine and thrilling material." Martin Armstrong
+ Spec 132:757 My 10 '24 1100w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p201 Ap 3 '24 1700w

CURIE, MARIE SKLODOWSKA (MME PIERRE CURIE). Pierre Curie; tr. by Charlotte and Vernon Kellogg; with an introd. by Mrs. William Brown Meloney. 242p il $2.25 Macmillan

B or 92 Curie, Pierre 23-17302

For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

"This is a delightful book. It marks one of the few instances in which the proverbially humdrum life of the student of physical science, together with the austere ideals, has been made intelligible, and Madame Curie's sketch is all the more fascinating as the result is reached unconsciously." Carl Barus
+ Am Hist R 29:601 Ap '24 480w

Booklist 20:215 Mr '24

"Dr. and Mrs. Kellogg have preserved most happily the sense of two characters utterly devoid of pose or guile." K. M. Gould
+ Bookm 59:73 Mr '24 1000w

Cath World 119:281 My '24 120w

"Madame Curie writes with clarity and without effort; her account of the scientific adventures of her crowded life makes fascinating reading."
+ Dial 76:202 F '24 80w

Reviewed by Fola La Follette
New Repub 40:sup7 O 1 '24 780w

"The biography, neither very long (for Curie's life was not long), nor especially varied (for the laboratory does not offer adventures), impresses one with a singular sense of totality. Here was a life which, within its own limits, was absolutely true and reached a great height."
+ No Am 219:284 F '24 580w

CURRAN, HENRY HASTINGS. John Citizen's job. 253p $1.50 Scribner

324.2 Politics, Practical. United States—Politics and government. New York (city)—Politics and government 24-5467

John Citizen is the man with the vote and it is to him that Mr Curran addresses this little book telling in popular and conversational style what citizenship means and its responsibilities in nation, state and city. He explains the game of party politics and what John Citizen can do to improve it, drawing his illustrations chiefly from municipal government in New York city, where the author has been successively alderman, borough president, and candidate for mayor. He is now Commissioner of immigration at Ellis Island.—

Am Pol Sci R 18:652 Ag '24 90w

"It is a readable little book, filled with anecdotes and written in a humorous, colloquial style. It proves among other things that Mr. Curran is a sensible man with good ideas about city government. Which must be the reason that he was so overwhelmingly defeated when he ran for mayor."
+ Bookm 59:478 Je '24 120w

Boston Transcript p6 My 24 '24 250w

"Few could put these matters in as clear, vigorous, and entertaining form as Mr. Curran has done." E. W. C.
+ Lit R p843 Je 21 '24 220w

"Doubtless many readers will find Mr. Curran's book rather too popular in style, a little too flavored and frothy in its method of presentation, but there is no citizen who could not read it with freshened recognition of public responsibility and with renewed realization of what citizenship means. It ought to have a great many readers."
+ — N Y Times p23 Ap 6 '24 850w

N Y Tribune p16 S 21 '24 220w

Pratt p10 summer '24

"Spicy little book."
+ Springf'd Republican p12 Ap 9 '24 650w

CURRIER, ANDREW FAY. How to keep well; or, The preservation of health and the recognition of disease. 702p il $5 Century

616 Diseases. Hygiene 24-22925

For years Dr Currier has conducted a question and answer column under this title in the New York Globe and the New York Sun. His book is encyclopedic in scope and contains descriptions of most of the ordinary diseases known to man, with suggestions for self-treatment where this is safe or advice to consult a physician. The information given is thorough and specific and entirely intelligible to the general reader.

"Here is a book in which hope is the prevailing sentiment and the world should welcome it." H. C. Coe
+ Lit R p14 O 11 '24 600w

"His method of presentation is simple, direct and lucid, without any attempt at ornament and without the wastage of phrases or words."
+ N Y Times p18 N 16 '24 600w

"Concise, definite advice adequate to advise one of unhealthful conditions is afforded and this should aid in recognizing diseases."
+ Springf'd Republican p5a N 23 '24 190w

CURTISS, PHILIP EVERETT. Gay conspirators. 324p $2 Harper

24-22002

Royal Besant, detective, is called down to Damon Crewe's magnificent summer home at Legget's Harbor to keep an eye on Ruiz Serrano, Spanish violinist, upon whom young Cynthia Crewe had set her heart. Mr. Crewe had for some time been receiving anonymous letters warning him against the marriage of his daughter to Serrano, which some one was evidently determined to upset. When Besant arrives he finds the whole household enveloped in an atmosphere of distrust and apprehension. His skill and vigilance before long find a way to the solution of the mystery.

Booklist 21:151 Ja '25

Ind 113:409 N 15 '24 30w

CURTISS, P. E.—Continued

"A brisk, competent detective story, in which the detective is not too knowing, and the other actors are interestingly but superficially distinctive." G: B. Dutton

+ — Ind 113:458 N 29 '24 150w

"Mr. Curtiss brings humor, clever characterization and sophisticated gayety into his latest story. He foregoes most of the insipid romantic scenes which generally cut into the tenseness of mystery stories. And it is to his credit that he can summon plenty of excitement without even the suggestion of a murder."

+ N Y Times p24 D 14 '24 250w

N Y World p9e D 7 '24 150w

"While the story does not differ in type from the conventional mystery-detective romance, it is told with somewhat more skill and in a somewhat more competent style than the average, and so fulfils its function of providing the reader with light and innocuous entertainment."

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:211 O 18 '24 210w

"The story is light, gay, and an entertaining blend of romance and mystery."

+ Springf'd Republican p5a N 23 '24 420w

CURWOOD, JAMES OLIVER. Gentleman of courage; a novel of the wilderness. 342p il $2 Cosmopolitan bk.

24-16563

The scene is laid in Five Fingers, a French-Canadian pioneer village on Lake Superior; the time is the 1890's. Peter McRae, a lad of fourteen, was left in charge of Simon McQuarrie, for Peter's father was fleeing from the police. In Five Fingers Peter found Mona, a charming girl who had been rescued from a lake storm and adopted by the Gourdons. The two children, both fond of wild animals and the way of the woods, became firm friends and as the years went on, lovers. There came a time when Peter's father, weary and old from the long years of flight, needed Peter's help. Then Mona with her loyalty helped them both until all need of flight was past.

Booklist 21:26 O '24

"So far as the narrative goes, 'A Gentleman of Courage' is up to Mr. Curwood's average. Give it the trappings of a more commonplace writer and it would be cheap melodrama. In Mr. Curwood's hands it is melodrama still, but it is melodrama worth while." S. L. C.

+ — Boston Transcript p3 Ag 2 '24 500w

Cleveland p67 S '24

"Mr. Curwood knows his out-of-doors, he is able to present effectively their moods; he knows the beasts and the birds, and they live in his pages. His characters, perhaps, are the characters of bright illusion, and we ourselves are neither so old nor so young as to discountenance illusion. His philosophies are broad and pleasant to the taste. For the person who refuses to view literature too gravely 'A Gentleman of Courage' is a rollicking good yarn." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p900 Jl 19 24 300w

"Almost twenty-five novels, all dealing with much the same type of life, have already come from Mr. Curwood's prolific typewriter, and it would be surprising, indeed, if a Curwood story had not come to rank as rather a standardized product. 'A Gentleman of Courage' runs true to form. But, after all, Mr. Curwood sees to it that his yarns, swept by pine-laden breezes as they are, have a wholesomeness about them that would offset many more defects than can ever truly be ascribed to him."

+ — N Y Times p18 Jl 27 '24 500w

"Mr. Curwood contributes his moral share in the presence of a sentimental prose remarkable for its lush excess and redolence of sweetly solemn lack of thought." A. D. D.

— N Y Tribune p23 Jl 20 '24 260w

Reviewed by F. V. Roman

N Y World p8e Jl 13 '24 70w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p514 Ag 21 '24 50w

CUST, LIONEL HENRY. Jerusalem; an historical sketch; il. by Major Benton Fletcher. 222p $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Black]

956.9 Jerusalem [24-18773]

"Two years ago Major Benton Fletcher did a series of drawings of Jerusalem, which were afterwards exhibited in London, and attracted much attention. These black-and-white sketches have now been published in a book and Mr. Lionel Cust has supplied the text to accompany them. What he has written is simply an historical sketch of Jerusalem from the earliest times to the present day, with special attention to the fate of the various buildings."—New Statesman

---

Am Hist R 30:170 O '24 170w

"The twenty-four illustrations by Major Fletcher are the raison d'être of the book, and these drawings are worthy of the theme and the Holy City. They make very real the most noteworthy features of the city as it exists today."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Je 28 '24 250w

Reviewed by A. J. Toynbee

Nation and Ath 35:208 My 17 '24 550w

"It would probably have been a better plan to follow Major Benton Fletcher's drawings, and give the history of the buildings separately —in fact, to write a kind of guide-book. As it is, there is but little relation between the text and the illustrations. But the history is both sound and readable."

+ — New Statesman 23:200 My 24 '24 500w

Outlook 138:65 S 10 '24 30w

"It would be difficult to better the swiftness and ease of these annals unrolled."

+ Sat R 137:510 My 17 '24 180w

"The book is written sympathetically with historic and religious detachment, and is of considerable merit."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 O 1 '24 250w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p289 My 8 '24 200w

CUSTIS, VANDERVEER. Foundations of national industrial efficiency. 324p $2.25 Macmillan

330 Economics. Efficiency, Industrial

23-17875

"Mr. Custis begins his study of the fundamentals of our national efficiency by defining industrial efficiency and showing how unsatisfactory are our methods of measuring it. He tests our efficiency in different fields—labor, land, capital, and business management—and studies the effect upon it of such factors as immigration, war, and monopoly. He discusses the proper utilization and education of labor, the need and the methods of conserving our natural resources, and the necessity for encouraging thrift. He makes a comparison between different forms of business enterprise in order to test the efficiency of each, and he finally discusses government regulation of business versus free competition."—Publisher's note

---

Ann Am Acad 114:156 Jl '24 50w

Boston Transcript p5 F 2 '24 450w

Cleveland p56 Jl '24

"In this opening glimpse, Dr. Custis stands on the shoulders of his academic brethren. But like a rosy dawn which fades into a rainy day, the inspiration wanes, the definitions go by the board, and the book settles down to a dull, blameless, rather sophomoric recital of pools, trusts, government regulation, thrift, the services of stock brokers, conservation, and the uses and abuses of competition. Of the foundations of national efficiency we learn nothing. And of the greatest inefficiency of the age—the application of business-like sabotage to physical production—the worthy doctor has apparently never heard." S. C.

— + New Repub 37:265 Ja 30 '24 300w

D

DAKERS, ANDREW. Robert Burns; his life and genius. 230p $3.50 Dutton [10s 6d Chapman & H.]

B or 92 Burns, Robert

This sympathetic interpretation of Burns as man and poet, tho it suppresses none of his weaknesses, is written in the spirit of hero-worship. Burns is revealed as a man intensely human, who lived and gave abundantly and whose unusual vigor of body and mind often led him into excesses. The study of the man, which fills three-fourths of the book, divides his life into four periods, each of which is treated separately. The last part deals with Burns as poet and seeks to justify his life by the poetry that came out of it.

"A book that will bring delight to all lovers of the Scottish song writer. Mr. Dakers can hardly be accused of not doing justice to Burns; if anything, he is a trifle too just and has something of the air of the hero worshiper in his reverence for his idol. Yet he has given us a book that is not only well written but interesting and informative."

+ Bookm 59:92 Mr '24 160w

"The most noticeable characteristic of the volume is the apologetic attitude, probably unintentional, assumed by Mr Dakers. He is—unconsciously perhaps—of those to whom Burns's moral lapses are disconcerting. He wants his great poet to be at the same time as nearly as possible a perfect man. For every circumstance which might conceivably detract from the character of the great man he is ready with his excuse. The great, the eternal justification of Robert Burns lies in his work. In his criticism of Burns's poetry, Mr Dakers is happier than in his criticism of the man himself."

— + Boston Transcript p6 F 13 '24 400w

"Unfortunately, in attempting to present his idol in the best possible light, Mr. Dakers gets between Burns and the reader. A very meager biographical outline is so obscured by a wealth of comment, more impassioned than logical, that when a fact becomes visible it seems like an inconvenient intruder. The Encyclopedia Britannica is as lavish of solid information as Mr. Dakers. He is a special pleader, obviously embarrassed by the nature of the evidence." Isabel Paterson

— N Y Tribune p17 Ja 13 '24 1300w

"Tells us far more about his life than his genius, and in its biographical narration is effusive, prolix and ill-arranged, without, of course, having anything new to disclose; yet it is a popular and unprejudiced sunmary which may serve as a convenient and even revealing introduction to the wayward, impassioned, essentially humane and noble character of Scotland's favorite poet."

+ — Springf'd Republican p6 F 11 '24 480w

"In his eagerness to demand a tribute for Burns which he considers long overdue, Mr. Dakers leaves his reader without a sense of proportion. Even among the great poets there are the less great, and it is there that Burns must rest."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p665 O 11 '23 1100w

DALY, THOMAS AUGUSTINE. Herself and the houseful. 155p il $2 Harcourt

818 24-21066

The subtitle, "being the middling-mirthful story of a middle-class American family of more than middle size," gives the clue to the book. In it Mr Daly, known as the author of "Carmina," the "McAroni Ballads" and other humorous verse, tells the story of twenty-five years of happy married life with "herself." The houseful of eight children plays an important part in the household of which Mr Daly acknowledges he is only the super, meaning both superintendent and supernumerary.

Booklist 21:60 N '24

Lit R p10 S 27 '24 200w

"T. A. Daly scores very well indeed with his first book in prose form. It is told with due restraint, with good taste, with delicacy and with that fine and tender and glowing appreciation of 'Herself's' share in their common enterprise that all good husbands feel for good wives."

+ N Y Times p20 S 14 '24 300w

DAMON, SAMUEL FOSTER. William Blake; his philosophy and symbols. 479p il $10 Houghton [42s Constable]

B or 92 Blake, William

"Mr. Damon's book is divided into two parts. First comes a connected survey of Blake's life and writings, shaping a philosophy for him as it goes on; and then a set of commentaries dealing line by line (almost in both senses) with the actual texts and their decorations."—Nation and Ath

Bookm 60:87 S '24 250w

"Altogether this new Blake book reveals itself as a very important addition to our knowledge and understanding of William Blake's work. For the student such a book is an unquestioned necessity, while for the general run of poetry lovers who have known Blake only in the 'Songs of Innocence,' it offers the key to all the larger and more obscure books." D. L. Mann

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 12 '24 1250w

"It is clear that Mr Damon has written a book which must serve as a foundation to all future study of William Blake. He has discovered to us a figure as unlike the madman of popular fancy as the vague occultist of injudicious enthusiasts." Robert Hillyer

+ Dial 77:257 S '24 1050w

"Admirably complete, intensive study of Blake's life and writings." M: Josephson

+ Lit R p916 Jl 26 '24 1000w

"It is a really useful 'Companion to Blake.'" G: Saintsbury

Nation and Ath 35:295 My 31 '24 1200w

"His book has this great merit: that it is an independent judgment by one who knows something about philosophy, something about the sort of books Blake read, a great deal about symbolism, and everything about Blake's text. In the main, this book represents the real Blake. The chief lines of this argument are unshakeable: its chief conclusion irrefragible. Mr. Damon has successfully advocated Blake's claim to be considered a philosopher; he has shown that if Blake is still considered eccentric or mad by some people, it is merely because he subordinated his art to his philosophy." J: G. Fletcher

+ New Repub 39:366 Ag 20 '24 1100w

"Mr. Damon's volume, with its full and excellent commentary on each of Blake's works, is, so far as we know, the clearest, most convincing and most systematic attempt yet made to unravel the complexities of Blake's mythology, and to organise into a solid and coherent structure that smoky confusion which is all that the uninstructed eye can see."

+ New Statesmen 23:260 Je 7 '24 900w

"Mr. Damon has written a fascinating book of the highest value to Blake lovers. . . It is a book so sane and well-balanced, so marked by good sense and fine literary judgment, that one is almost compelled to feel that the benefit of the final doubt as to its philosophic conclusions should rest with Mr. Damon rather than with his non-'mystic,' and non-'alchemic' readers." R: Le Gallienne

+ N Y Times p11 Ag 3 '24 3000w

Reviewed by Harold Bruce

Sat R of Lit 1:160 O 4 '24 1200w

+ Spec 132:807 My 17 '24 100w

"Mr. S. Foster Damon's huge volume is designed admirably; he has traced Blake's ideas to their sources and has explained the poems by considering the analogies of mystical scrip-

DAMON, S: F.—Continued
tures. It is a more thorough and more sound commentary than any previous one." Alan Porter

+ Spec 132:921 Je 7 '24 1150w
Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 27 '24 50w

"Blake has already had interpreters of genius who have taken us deep into the receding convolutions of the Prophetic Books, but who have been content to leave us, in the end, with a hint of further caverns still to be explored. Mr. Damon is not one of these. Sincerely believing that the whole problem could be and deserved to be worked out to the last letter, he has laboured tirelessly and systematically on, and, with his book in our hands, we are entitled to say that the prophecies have yielded up their secret. . . It is an important, a valuable, and at the same time a curious achievement."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p393 Je 26 '24 2250w

DAMROSCH, WALTER JOHANNES. My musical life. 376p il $4 Scribner

B or 92 Music—United States 23-14574

For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

"His accounts of famous persons are trivial or saccharine; his treatment of more controversial questions is flabby; but these defects in his book may be attributed in part to the audience for whom it was intended."

— Bookm 58:671 F '24 110w
Cleveland p7 Ja '24

Reviewed by H: T. Finck
Int Bk R p284 Mr '24 1500w

"There are moments when the reader becomes positively dizzy before this unremitting procession of the mighty. But Mr. Damrosch carries it all off most gallantly at a pleasantly allegro pace." Pitts Sanborn

+ Nation 118:144 F 6 '24 800w

"'My musical life,' while not especially significant, is entertaining in its kind, including numerous amusing anecdotes about the great and the near-great in the musical life of two continents during the last half-century. It contains, besides, a good bit of musical criticism which, for the most part is sound and free from undue caprice."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 F 26 '24 1150w

"Mr. Damrosch's memoirs are extremely good."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p203 Ap 3 '24 720w
Wis Lib Bul 19:507 D '23

DANE, CLEMENCE, pseud. (WINIFRED ASHTON). Wandering stars, together with The lover. 242p $2.25 Macmillan

24-7944

"Of the two stories that go to make the book, the first is really an elaborate approach, a carved and costly stepping stone, to the second. . . . In the first we have the story of a woman who, to ease herself of the unhappiness caused by her successful husband's indifference and neglect, practices an evocation of him tender and ardent in the first years of their marriage, a vision she dwells on with such intensity that it becomes an incarnation. Rumor credits her with a lover; and jealousy of this affable, familiar ghost awakens in her husband his old passion. The main story applies this parable, tragically and ironically, to the relations of an actress and the playwright who, criminally ignorant of her love for him, used the parable in a play which made her reputation and broke her heart."—Spec

"It is marvelously well done, with not a shade too much emphasis from beginning to end, and the triangle situation is to say the least a unique one." D. L. Mann

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 26 '24 1300w
Dial 78:77 Ja '25 50w

"It is a most unusual book; one in which the mystical element, while predominating, rather increases than lessens the human value of the whole, a book for all those who care about what is fine and beautiful in fiction."

+ Int Bk R p822 O '24 600w

"Precision is, perhaps, the most distinctive of Miss Dane's attributes. In a sense it is the consummation of all her qualities, and its chief elements are four: originality, delicacy, complexity, and logic. These are evident alike in the treatment of her subject matter and in her manner of writing. Her development of a situation, superbly exemplified in the title story of this book, is masterful." Eva Goldbeck

+ Lit R p787 My 31 '24 750w

"The book is effectively and forcefully done, with a sense of the dramatic that proves Miss Dane's theatrical capabilities. Well written throughout, it stands out clear and strong in our memory." M. L.

+ Lit R p922 Jl 26 '24 220w

"Miss Dane has given a wonderful description of the Egotist's Progress." F. H.

+ Nation and Ath 35:182 My 10 '24 700w

"Miss Dane employs a highly sophisticated technique for the presentation of a highly fantastic situation. In the title-story the emotional pitch is sometimes strained to the breaking point. The incidental fantasy, The Lover, rings truer, despite its essentially mystical quality." D. B. W.

+ — New Repub 38:345 My 21 '24 80w

"Her new novel, which consists of two stories stuck together by a very unconvincing artifice, is hysterical and as far as my eyesight carries, worthless." Raymond Mortimer

— New Statesman 23:68 Ap 26 '24 240w

"States of being are skilfuly and fascinatingly depicted. Miss 'Dane' is so finished an artist, so wise and tender a human being and so exciting a narrator that she deserves something far better than that dubious word 'great.'"

+ N Y Times p8 Ap 20 '24 800w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean
N Y Tribune p23 Jl 20 '24 680w

"The workmanship of this singular story is both delicate and strong—quite out of the ordinary in literary quality and fineness of perception."

+ Outlook 137:400 Jl 9 '24 160w

"The first story is beautiful, whereas the second is artificial, unconvincing, incoherent, inconclusive, strained, affected and pretentious. How anybody who could write 'The Lover' could bring or allow herself to write 'Wandering Stars' is a mystery beyond probing. 'The Lover' deals with the loss and recapture of love in married life; it uses an entirely new and most realistic kind of ghost; and the ghost is not just apparatus but the core of the plot. This little tale of less than a hundred pages is, in its way, not far short of perfect." Gerald Gould

+ — Sat R 137:464 My 3 '24 150w

"The merits of this complicated means of presentation are tremendous and would rivet our interest to the story were it much less absorbing than it is. Oblique narration, as Conrad has often shown us, has its advantages but also its drawbacks." L. P. Hartley

+ Spec 132:808 My 17 '24 650w

DANE, CLEMENCE, pseud. (WINIFRED ASHTON). The way things happen. 93p $1.50 Macmillan

822 24-3554

The chief characters in this three-act play are Mrs Farren, her son Martin, her foster-daughter Shirley Pryde, Martin's pretty light-headed fiancée Muriel, and Bennett Lomax who loves Shirley. It is a drama of conflicting wills. Shirley loves Martin with an unselfish devotion and to the point of compromising herself to help him out of an incriminating situation. He resents her sacrifice and instead of bringing her nearer to him it creates a greater barrier between them. He takes his punishment and when he comes back from prison his mother has died and Muriel married. Even then he seems unaware of Shirley, and he has to be shocked into realizing that he had always loved her and that they were made for each other.

"Throughout the play is admirably written, without any attempt at brilliancy, but with constant significance. The greatest care has been lavished upon the characters of Shirley, Martin, and Mrs. Farren, all of which are vital. Other parts are more conventional, but true to type. Miss Dane has a high place in the list of considerable dramatists." J. R. Towse
+ Lit R p554 Mr 1 '24 700w

"Miss Dane weakens her situation by not exploiting it to its full value. She is careful to call her play 'A Story in Three Acts,' and in this way she forearms herself against possible criticism anent the dramatic development. But such an alibi is unnecessary. 'The Way Things Happen' is good drama even though the central situation is somewhat begged."
+ — N Y Times p7 Ja 27 '24 600w

"The author, one feels, had good material with which to work, but somehow her psychological interest betrayed her aim, and has given to the public puppets whose actions are often artificial and unconvincing."
— + Springf'd Republican p7a My 11 '24 330w

DANIELS, JOSEPHUS. Life of Woodrow Wilson. 381p il $2.50 Winston
B or 92 Wilson, Woodrow 24-7523

" 'The Life of Woodrow Wilson' by Josephus Daniels, formerly secretary of the navy, is the frank eulogy of a sincere and profoundly sympathetic admirer who, for eight years was a co-laborer and lieutenant in a great task. Mr. Daniels makes no claim to the perspective of the impartial historian, nor does he take up in an argumentative manner the disputed points in Mr. Wilson's career." Springf'd Republican

---

Am Pol Sci R 18:830 N '24 110w

"Mr. Daniels's volume is written with a terse fervor that is most effective. Dramatic climaxes abound. The former Secretary of the Navy has produced a comprehensive, entertaining and at times brilliant work. It should have a wide reading, especially in the schools of the land." Hamilton Holt
+ Int Bk R p509 Je '24 300w

"As a biography of Woodrow Wilson, which it pretends to be, Josephus Daniels's book is valueless, for it presents nothing which the average newspaper reader does not already know, and the style of fulsome panegyric which the author employs makes it less impressive in tone than the more important obituaries of the late President." M. R. Werner
— Lit R p788 My 31 '24 420w
Nation and Ath 36:274 N 15 '24 70w
New Statesman 24:402 Ja 10 '25 130w

Reviewed by Silas Bent
N Y Times p3 Je 22 '24 1100w

"The author reviews the career of his subject rapidly, entertainingly, sometimes chattily, always sympathetically, and the glow of affectionate admiration that suffuses it makes it a delightfully human book." C. G. Bowers
+ N Y World p7e Je 15 '24 900w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:326 Je '24

"While the writing is at times somewhat rhetorical the biography is interesting and has a degree of value as the interpretation of a close and intimate, even if wholly admiring, observer."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 29 '24 330w

DARK, SIDNEY. Book of England for young people. (Doran's modern readers' bookshelf) 220p il $2.50 Doran
942 Great Britain—History 23-18007

"The author has made his book a series of stories, beginning with the tales of the Druid priests, the origin of the mistletoe tradition and the tragic story of the heroic British queen, Boadicea. The narrative is carried to the present day, even telling the story of the World War and its aftermath as it affected the British Empire."—Boston Transcript

---

Booklist 20:342 Je '24

"Up to date in information and more readable than similar histories have been, and it comes at a moment when libraries and schools are feeling the need of new histories."
+ Bookm 59:302 My '24 50w

"Emphatically this is not a dull text-book, and it would not be a dull text-book even if the many reproductions of famous paintings of scenes in English history had been omitted. He has found a real way of making history readable without sacrificing his accuracy of fact. The Book of England is a book which all young people should be glad to possess."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 12 '24 180w
Cleveland p40 My '24

"Mr. Dark has a delightful faculty of being a history-book companion rather than a remote historian who from some secluded study has written histories with little thought of the ages of his readers." M. G. Bonner
+ Int Bk R p312 Mr '24 600w

DARK, SIDNEY. Book of France for young people. 225p $2.50 Doran
944 France—History 23-18008

"Mr. Dark has slightly altered the English edition of this work to appeal especially to American boys and girls. French history from the earliest time is outlined simply and clearly, and there are special chapters on Joan of Arc, Louis XI, the Valois kings, Henry IV, Richelieu and Mazarin, and Le Grand Monarque, with reproductions of sixteen famous paintings."—N Y Tribune

---

Booklist 20:342 Je '24
Bookm 59:302 My '24 50w
Boston Transcript p3 F 2 '24 600w
Cleveland p40 My '24

"Free of bias and prejudice, written with vigor, and an open mind unclouded by personal prejudices or hatreds." M. G. Bonner
+ Int Bk R p312 Mr '24 600w
+ N Y Tribune p24 Ja 13 '24 150w

Reviewed by G. M. Goldman
N Y World p7e Je 1 '24 80w

DARK, SIDNEY. Book of Scotland for young people. 205p il $2.50 Doran [10s 6d Chapman & H.]
941 Scotland—History 24-9684

A readable history of Scotland and the Scottish people, for boys and girls from ten to sixteen. Intended to be read as a story, not as a lesson-book.

Booklist 21:71 N '24

"His 'Book of Scotland' is a disappointment. It lacks the nicety of personal description in which the others abounded, and it is wearily gory." M. G. Bonner
— Int Bk R p894 N '24 90w

"It is unfortunate that Mr. Dark, with material of the most dramatic at his command, should lack the qualities of narration that would render it of indelible interest to the youthful reader. His chronicle of Scottish history is a painstaking but prosaic recital."
— + Sat R of Lit 1:151 S 27 '24 210w

"This history makes good reading aloud. Almost any child will enjoy it, specially, we think, a boy."
+ Spec 132:166 F 2 '24 220w

DARK, SIDNEY. London; with il. by Joseph [2] Pennell. 176p $7.50 (25s) Macmillan
914.21 London—Description

"There are libraries of London books, but this is the one London book illustrated by Mr. Pennell. That is its reason and its justification. . . . My plan has been to go, one after the other, to the scenes made vivid by Mr Pennell's genius, to conjure up visions of the men and women whose lives have been associated with each place and to recall something of their past. . . There are a dozen cities in London, but none the less London has its characteristic qualities to be discovered east and west, in slum and comfortable square. It is above all things the city of Sam Weller."—Author's preface

DARK, SIDNEY—Continued

Reviewed by J. St L. Strachey
N Y Times p4 N 30 '24 120w

"A good book on London made superlatively good by Mr. Pennell's beautiful pictures."
+ Outlook 138:608 D 10 '24 30w

DARK, SIDNEY. Story of the renaissance. (Doran's modern readers' bookshelf) 203p $1.25 Doran

940.21 Renaissance 24-4523

A summary of renaissance history which is more concerned with the political, religious, industrial and economic changes of this epoch than with the esthetic aspects. Contents: The dawn; Politics; Renaissance literature; The art of the renaissance; The reformation; Social conditions.

Boston Transcript p4 Je 18 '24 850w

"Mr Dark has put into this eminently readable book a stimulating story of a great epoch refreshingly free from prejudice and outworn and misshapen traditions." J. J. R.
+ Cath World 119:283 My '24 700w
Dial 77:174 Ag '24 80w

"The book contains good wool which has been torn apart and worked over. The excuse for this sort of treatment is that the small handbook may serve as a letter of introduction to the original authorities; and here the present series suffers in comparison with the Home University Library for the reason that no bibliography is provided." L. M.
— + New Repub 39:54 Je 4 '24 100w

"Mr. Dark does not fulfill his function as a writer supposed to give an impartial and instructive view of the achievements of the Renaissance."
— N Y Times p7 Ap 16 '24 1150w

"He does go beyond mere affirmation and will prove his case to those who have not read any other version of the same period."
+ — N Y World p6e Mr 16 '24 140w

"An informing study of the Renaissance."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p880 D 13 '23 40w
Wis Lib Bul 20:148 Je '24

DARTNELL, FRED (LONG MELFORD). Seconds out! with a preface by Georges Carpentier. 287p il $2.50 Brentano's [6s T. W. Laurie] 2

796 Boxing

"Enthusiasts will find in 'Seconds Out' a wealth of anecdotes drawn from the author's thirty years' experience as a sports writer for the British press. He discusses pugilism and its followers, its major branches and contributory side-lines, with candor, humor and usually, with authority."—N Y World

"Mr. Dartnell rambles on somewhat incoherently. A dogged raconteur, he is not always able to distinguish an imbecility from a real story." D. R.
— Ind 113:290 O 18 '24 400w

"The author has been entirely successful in avoiding any professional jargon that would restrict his public."
New Statesman 23:580 Ag 23 '24 220w
N Y World p8e N 30 '24 100w
Sat R of Lit 1:234 O 25 '24 100w

"He has plenty that is quite entertaining to say. Some of his information is perhaps rather trivial; but he is interesting when he sticks to business."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p439 Jl 10 '24 170w

DAVENPORT, CYRIL JAMES H. Architecture in England. 154p il $2.40 Dutton [6s Methuen]

720.942 Architecture—Great Britain

An introduction to the study of English architecture, chiefly ecclesiastical, from the first to the present century. Most of the space is given to the Roman and Saxon remains, the Norman and the Gothic period, ten pages only being allotted to the Renaissance period from 1600 to 1900. There are 65 drawings in the text and eight photographic plates. Index.

Reviewed by E. L. Shuman
Int Bk R p736 S '24 130w

"Here is one of those rare books into which an author profoundly steeped in a subject has packed into small space an immense amount of information and yet has illuminated its every page with significance and his vitalized it all, because of his own keen interest and feeling, into high readability."
+ N Y Times p20 Ag 17 '24 500w

"All that is in this very elementary book is simple and useful."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p323 My 22 '24 100w

DAVENPORT, E. H., and COOK, SIDNEY RUSSELL. Oil trusts and Anglo-American relations. 272p $2.50 (7s 6d) Macmillan

338.2 Petroleum industry and trade. Great Britain—Foreign relations—United States. United States—Foreign relations—Great Britain 24-3484

The book gives a history of the oil policy of Great Britain and of the United States and of the part played by the oil interests at the international conferences at Genoa, the Hague and Lausanne. The authors' conclusion is that the "open-door" policy in oil should prevail and that governments should abandon all participation or interference in the oil business, which should be left to private initiative. Appendices give the San Remo agreement concerning oil, and a summary of the oil resources of the world.

Am Pol Sci R 18:654 Ag '24 80w
Reviewed by H. T. Collings
Ann Am Acad 115:259 S '24 420w
Booklist 20:323 Je '24
Ind 112:158 Mr 15 '24 60w

"Without indulging in cheap tricks to appeal to careless readers, the authors have made a readable and useful contribution to one of the most important subjects in the modern world. Interesting and useful though the book is, however, it must not be read with an uncritical eye. It is a British statement of the British case." J. Bakeless
+ — Ind 112:210 Ap 12 '24 450w

"I know nothing of the authors, but they are evidently fair-minded, well informed, in touch with the technical details of the oil industry, yet unconnected with any of the larger interests, for they wield a free and even playful pen against them all. Their book gives a succinct appendix summarizing the oil resources of Great Britain and then of the United States." A. E. Zimmern
+ Lit R p520 F 16 '24 1100w

"'The Oil Trusts' is the completest and most recent account of the world struggle for oil, well documented and provided with a valuable appendix summarizing the oil resources of the world." L. S. Gannett
+ Nation 119:20 Jl 2 '24 220w
New Statesman 22:341 D 22 '23 1050w
N Y Tribune p26 Jl 13 '24 160w
Outlook 137:112 My 21 '24 40w
St Louis p336 O '24

"The descriptions of the different oil fields, supplemented by a map, will be found most useful by those who are concerned with the future of oil."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p11 Ja 3 '24 200w

DAVENPORT, FRANCES ISABEL. Salvaging of American girlhood. 302p $3 Dutton
176 Girls. Sex instruction 24-19986

The sub-title of the book is perfectly descriptive: "a substitution of normal psychology for superstition and mysticism in the education of girls." Based on a systematic investigation of the state of sexual knowledge of normal girls and young women as indicated by questions submitted by a large group of girls, the book analyzes their knowledge of matters of sex and their interest in the subject. The author shows the dangers which lie in their lack or inaccuracy of knowledge and outlines a definite program of sex instruction.

Booklist 21:96 D '24
J Home Econ 16:659 N '24 120w
Reviewed by A. V. Ende
Lit R p6 S 20 '24 660w

"The work makes a very thorough study, which is perhaps a little overwordy in its presentation of the ignorance revealed by the questions of these representative girls."
+ — N Y Times p20 Ag 24 '24 530w
N Y Tribune p10 O 19 '24 150w

DAVEY, NORMAN. Good hunting. 312p $2 Doran [7s 6d Chapman & H.]

Julian Carr, a successful novelist, is the prey of the seven huntresses of the story each of whom uses all her feminine wiles to capture him. Some of his pursuers are more brazen than others, but the weapons they use are similar and chief among these is the sensual lure. Somehow Julian escapes six of them, only to succumb to a seventh when he has turned fifty-five and become stout and bald and grey. His methods of eluding his pursuers do not endear him to the reader, who cannot grieve for him when Wendy, on the morning of her marriage, sums him up to her mother as a horrible old man whom she hates and confesses that she loves young Jerry and intends to keep up her affair with him.

"It evidently starts out as satire, but it does not stay on that exalted plane long. Nor does he get back his sense of humor in the least until the end, and then he endeavors to pull the volume together with a conclusion of such grim farce that we shall think the whole thing was that all along. It was not. It degenerated into plain corset shop stuff, unadulterated, in the middle." I. W. L.
— Boston Transcript p15 Mr 29 '24 1000w

"Mr. Davey is a facile and sometimes amusing writer and his books turn out to be pieces of candied roguery flavored with dashes of spice and satire. To those who digest what is commonly termed as light reading, Mr. Davey's work is beautifully suited." Howard Weeks
Detroit News Mr 2 '24 200w
Reviewed by H. W. Boynton
Ind 112:157 Mr 15 '24 280w

"Mr. Davey knows how to write, as he proved with 'The Pilgrim of a Smile.' This latest volume of his is clever, cynical, interesting and contains more truth than many women will altogether like to admit." L. M. Field
+ Int Bk R p397 Ap '24 500w

"'Good Hunting' is a product of rather aimless cleverness playing about the theme of the predatory, or acquisitive, female." H. W. Boynton
— Lit R p627 Ap 29 '24 480w

"The performance soon becomes wearisome, so that the hero's ultimate capture in the final pages of the story leaves one emotionally uninterested and more than a trifle bored."
— Nation 118:715 Je 18 '24 70w

"Each of the stories is admirably written, with a directness and a richness of expression that one expects from the author. It is a testimonial to the power of the writer that each of his succeeding heroines wins the sympathy of the reader, even though she may be a scheming designer. Each of them is a distinct character, vividly brought to life by an opulent pen."
+ N Y Times p16 F 24 '24 650w
Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e F 24 '24 250w

"It is all very 'smart' and up to date, and Mr. Davey, as he has already proved, has a real sense of style and no meagre descriptive powers. It is a pity he should not employ them in showing us rather better sport than the indifferent 'hunting' described in this book."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p638 S 27 '23 220w

DAVIDSON, DONALD. Outland piper. 82p $1.25 Houghton
811 24-4563

"The first volume of verse by one of a group of young and original poets who have been making their magazine, The Fugitive, of Nashville, Tennessee, famous among Americans who look sharply for good verse. The prevailing tone is satiric—a reader thinks of T. S. Eliot, Maxwell Bodenheim, and occasionally E. A. Robinson."—Nation

"His is a refreshing book to read, illumined with strange lights and glamours, aliens to our little streets. Technically, the poetry is that of a competent workman—though one might complain of the prevalence of unusual words, taken from the language of the self conscious intellect, not from the free and simple speech of poetic feeling." D: Morton
+ — Bookm 59:346 My '24 300w

"Lightened by a partially concealed humor at times, many divergent ideas lurk in rather odd juxtaposition. These are worth noting and remembering perhaps, as one hopes other readers will find. All in all, a pleasant volume, practiced and meaningful."
+ — Boston Transcript p4 My 10 '24 200w

"Mr. Davidson is often slack of phrase and does not do himself justice. But in almost every poem there is a peculiar presentation of idea that leads us to believe this poet will struggle through the flowering thicket of his present style to good effect." W. R. Benet
— + Lit R p918 Jl 26 '24 100w

"There is evidence of a lively lyric gift, and on every page there is proof of a nimble, fearless mind. Mr. Davidson's next volume may well be a little more unified and much less obscure."
+ — Nation 118:376 Ap 2 '24 100w

"The phrasing is pleasing. The emotion is cold; and this deliberate aspect of writing is to be found in nearly all of the poems in this book. And although Mr. Davidson is more mental than emotional there is nevertheless a certain charm and excitement about his book."
+ — N Y Times p7 Mr 30 '24 400w

"An undisciplined yet promising collection." Arthur Guiterman
— + Outlook 136:649 Ap 16 '24 100w
Reviewed by L: Untermeyer
Yale R n s 14:160 O '24 170w

DAVIDSON, GLADYS. More stories from the operas. 325p il $2.50 Lippincott
782 Opera

This second volume of opera stories includes some of the works of the best known British composers. The entire stories of the operas are simply related and incidents of the libretto are given exactly as they occur in the various acts and scenes. The book also contains twenty short biographies of composers.

N Y Times p26 D 14 '24 220w

DAVIDSON, GLADYS—Continued

"This volume supplements Miss Davidson's previous collection of 'Stories from the Operas,' and, with it, forms a useful and fairly complete guide to any work that the opera-goer is likely to come across, whether in England or abroad."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p829 D 4 '24 100w

DAVIDSON, GUSTAV. Half century of sonnets. 66p $3.50 Brown, N. L.
811 24-3557

"'A Half Century of Sonnets,' as the title implies, contains fifty sonnets, and the great bulk of them are the usual amatory effusions outlining a love affair in which the loved one goes her own way, leaving the poet to turn his woes out in neat little packages of fourteen lines each."—N Y Times

"Most of the poems are love sonnets, and while many of them possess no sharp distinction of idea or feeling, they make, in some instances, pleasant reading." D: Morton
+ — Bookm 59:347 My '24 130w

"Perhaps it is a bit unfair to seem to belittle Mr. Davidson's laborious exploit, for not a few of the sonnets are excellently fashioned and nearly all of them contain elements of beauty and lyrical lines. Still, there is nothing new here."
— + N Y Times p7 Mr 30 '24 250w

"Mr. Davidson is a competent sonneteer, who mixes the Shakespearian and the Petrarchan mode rather casually. His quiet musings on love, its wonder and regret, are, however, sincere, and will conduct the reader agreeably through a series of gentle moods."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p407 Je 26 '24 150w

DAVIDSON, LAURA LEE. Isles of Eden. 200p $2 Minton, Balch
818 24-22260

"Isles of Eden" is a narrative of the summer vacation spent by two women on "a small green isle in a blue lake" about forty miles north of Kingston. In this charming spot Mrs Davidson and her friend Patricia dream and fish and study the birds and small animals, and pay calls on their French Canadian neighbors, with whom they laugh and weep in turn. There is a vague plot running thru the book about the love affair of fifteen-year-old Cecile Baulac.

Booklist 21:64 N '24

"There is a magic of the pastoral about it and if it does not persuade the reader to go and do exactly as these two women have done, at least it will persuade them that it is something they would like to do." D. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p4 S 24 '24 580w

"It is written in an artless, unassuming style that is, in itself, an example of engaging simplicity, and which forms a suitable vehicle for the expression of her delight in the beauties of her environment, and for her sympathy with the inhabitants of the district in the many hardships they must endure." W: A. Deacon
+ Lit R p3 S 13 '24 210w

"Those readers who love the authentic tang of the outdoors, the spirit and feel of unspoiled woodlands and silvery lakes where the fish bite readily will find much to please them in 'Isles of Eden.'" Jean Wright
+ N Y Times p7 S 14 '24 1450w

DAVIES, MARY CAROLYN. Skyline trail. 159p $2 Bobbs
811 24-9370

"Verse capturing the spirit and exhilaration of youth and celebrating the far West: the towns and gardens of its present, the forests, mountains and wide spaces, the pioneers, buckaroos and prospectors of the past."—Cleveland

Booklist 21:15 O '24

Reviewed by H. S. Gorman
Bookm 59:469 Je '24 90w

"Personally we think it worth reading and owning." I. W. L.
+ Boston Transcript p6 Je 21 '24 350w

Cleveland p70 S '24

"She writes spirited verse about cowboy and buckaroo, she eulogizes Portland, Ore., and Mount Hood. Much of the singing has genuine gusto, and some of it is forced. At her best Miss Davies handles sentiment delicately and captures the exhilaration of youth in her measures—at her worst she writes sentimental magazine verse."
+ — Lit R p732 My 3 '24 120w

DAVIES, WILLIAM HENRY. Secrets. 48p $1.50 Harcourt [3s 6d J. Cape]
821 24-19424

The spirit of the poems in this little book is perfectly expressed in these lines from one of them:

The power was given at birth to me
To stare at a rainbow, bird or tree,
Longer than any man alive;
And from these trances, when they're gone
My songs of joy come, one by one.

Booklist 21:103 D '24

Reviewed by H. S. Gorman
Bookm 60:226 O '24 190w

"The moods he lays before his readers are varied. They are never self conscious. He is too skilled an artist to strike cheap attitudes. If his verse is free, it does not lack melody." D. F. G.
+ Boston Transcript p5 D 24 '24 420w

Dial 78:77 Ja '25 40w

"Mr. Davies, if one may prophesy, should run Herrick close in the estimation of posterity." V. Sackville-West
+ Nation and Ath 35:118 Ap 26 '24 150w

Reviewed by F. L. Lucas
New Statesman 23:470 Jl 26 '24 470w

Reviewed by H. S. Gorman
N Y Times p5 Ag 31 '24 500w

"In this volume Mr. Davies draws on the principal sources of his inspiration, the nature-lover, the lover, and the humanitarian. In each of them he increases the store of his achievement, and in the middle category in particular shows that though he has been praised for being simple, that is by no means exclusive of sophistication, of the delicate perception of emotional relations. In technique on one or two occasions he is unwarrantably lax, but in compensation gives us, in a poem like 'The Schemes of Love,' a greater fluidity of rhythm without sacrificing that lucid and direct expression which is the primitive virtue of his poetry."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p353 Je 5 '24 800w

DAVIES, WILLIAM HENRY. True travellers; a tramp's opera in three acts. 52p il $2 Harcourt [7s 6d J. Cape]
822

"The plot of Mr. Davies's work is slender enough. The pretty daughter of an innkeeper falls in love with the very presentable boy who has applied for kitchen work, on the plea that he must earn a few shillings to enable him to reach the city where an estate awaits him as the heir of his deceased uncle. The lad, who is in reality a hobo, further hoaxes the simple and avaricious innkeeper with a fake letter from the alleged executor, thereby inducing the loan of £20. When the deceit is discovered the father of the girl has the boy and an accomplice arrested and thrown into jail; but before the expiration of the sentence a real uncle in South Africa conveniently dies to the enrichment of the boy, and, it is unnecessary to relate, the girl also."—N Y Times

"Mr. Davies is hardly a playwright, but he is utterly ingenuous toward his worthless and attractive characters, and he has put into their mouths a number of songs of the sort which he is uniquely qualified to write. Admirers of his poetry will be charmed with the book."
+ — Nation 118:662 Je 4 '24 70w

New Repub 39:81 Je 11 '24 170w

"It is clear that Mr. Davies would be far wiser to keep to his own special vein than to challenge comparisons, which cannot be taken seriously, with a work like Gay's." F. L. Lucas
— + New Statesman 22:214 N 24 '23 500w

"There is no full-blooded character-drawing in the play; Davies's tramps are but shadows on a screen. But there is something of an Elizabethan touch in some of the lyrics, albeit Davies, because of his sophistication, which he has not sufficient art to conceal, comes nearer to the studied verse of the first James than to the robuster days of Shakespeare's Queen."
+ — N Y Times p5 Mr 23 '24 1100w

"If you like Davies's work and there are some who inexplicably do, you will probably like this, for it is in spirit and quality like everything else he has done." Maxwell Anderson
— + N Y World p6e Mr 9 '24 150w

"It is discouraging to find a gallantly produced volume so disfigured by misprints. Altogether, but for his unfailingly lovely lyrics, Mr. Davies is at a disadvantage."
+ — Sat R 137:14 Ja 15 '24 600w

Spec 131:805 N 24 '23 420w

"There is no call to dwell on the obvious resemblances and differences between this tramps' opera and The Beggar's Opera. Mr. Davies might not have written his opera but for Gay's, but he has matter of his own with which to fill the adapted mould; he has all, and more than all, Gay's gift of song-writing, and he shows a sense of fun as jolly and as brazen as Gay's with just enough reticence to betray his period and not enough to dandify his vagabonds."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p704 O 25 '23 900w

DAVIES, WILLIAM WATKIN. How to read history; with a chapter on American history by Edwin W. Pahlow. 259p $1.25 Doran [2s 6d Hodder & S.]

016.9 History—Bibliography 24-22805

The latest addition to the Modern readers' bookshelf series is intended to show people with little knowledge of history how best to approach the study of the past so as to keep the sense of proportion and historical continuity. Tho the book in reality consists of a series of critical bibliographies of the source books for each of the great epochs of history it is equally adapted to consecutive reading.

Boston Transcript p5 O 4 '24 160w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p210 Ap 3 '24 60w

DAVIESS, MARIA THOMPSON. Seven times seven; an autobiography. 321p $3 Dodd

B or 92 24-9280

The author of "The melting of Molly," and "The matrix" has told her own life story with simplicity and frankness. She has divided her life into seven different phases, each one of which she calls a reel. The first is the Lullaby reel; the second, the Lyric reel; the third, the Ballad reel. Then follow the Roundelay reel, the Idyl reel, the Sonnet reel, and finally the Threnody reel. In Miss Daviess's life there have come many interesting and well known people. These she speaks of with intimacy and kindly criticism. She touches upon her escapades in Rome and her life in the Latin quarter.

Booklist 21:23 O '24

"It will be read by many who do not know the author's novels, as a document of great human interest and breadth of understanding." J. F.
+ Bookm 59:458 Je '24 370w

"Miss Daviess tells the story of the 'seven times seven' years of her life with an uncommon impartiality of self-analysis and a perhaps even more uncommon candor of revelation. Indeed, so marked is the latter quality that at times we almost feel a sense of indelicacy, as if we were trespassing upon sacred ground." Frances Bartlett
Boston Transcript p3 My 10 '24 1000w

Cleveland p46 Je '24

Ind 112:268 My 10 '24 10w

"One does not have to read far in 'Seven Times Seven' to realize that Miss Daviess' life is not only important to her, it is interesting to her, it is exciting and enjoyable. What gives significance to her story is this directness of revelation of the personal reaction, and its complete preoccupation with itself, coming at a time when all the literary fields are vocal with the bitter whining of the younger generation to the effect that life in U.S.A. kindles no flame at all." Mary Austin
+ Int Bk R p589 Jl '24 680w

"It might be said that the most interesting quality of the book as a whole, is its concrete manifestation of some of the elements that go to the making of modern feminism, especially in so far as that is but a part of the broader current toward individualism as an underlying philosophy of life."
+ Lit R p745 My 10 '24 420w

"We close with incredible indecision, a formless autobiography that somewhat suggests a recording diary." Edwin Clark
— + N Y Times p17 My 18 '24 800w

N Y World p6e Jl 6 '24 500w

St Louis p354 O '24

Springf'd Republican p5a My 18 '24 950w

DAVIS, BEALE. One way street. 317p $2 Brentano's

24-21807

" 'One Way Street' tells of the haps and mishaps of a young American, usually known as 'Bobby' Austin, who fell in love with a married woman, the Lady Sylvia Hutton. Of course, there was a girl; Elizabeth Stuart, well born, well bred, fresh and sweet, clear-sighted and generous-hearted, the very antithesis of Lady Sylvia. She was a good fighter, too, and it was in great measure, thanks to her and to one of his own compatriots, that the too simple-minded and unsuspicious Bobby was able to emerge from the 'One Way Street' into which he had been led by his infatuation for the beautiful, exotic and revengeful Lady Sylvia." —N Y Times

"The author is young enough to take everything very seriously. He is not able either to look below the surface of his characters. One feels that he really thinks that men and women are only virtuous when they live in the suburbs."
— Boston Transcript p3 N 1 '24 360w

"Here is an excellent novel, brilliantly written, among the best of the autumn crop." Katharine Wright
+ Lit R p12 N 1 '24 800w

"An entertaining first novel, very light but agreeably told, and with plenty of variety in the matter of background."
+ N Y Times p24 S 14 '24 500w

"They all go through their parts efficiently and according to stage directions. It will make a popular picture on the screen."
— + N Y Tribune p17 S 21 '24 160w

"It is a long time since there has been written such a readable, plausible and faithful portrayal of the more recklessly gay and sophisticated side of society life in London." G. H. S.
+ N Y World p6e S 21 '24 450w

Sat R of Lit 1:210 O 18 '24 150w

DAVIS, ELMER HOLMES. I'll show you the town. 373p $2 McBride
24-8166

A young assistant professor of Latin with a reputation for respectability and the confidant of ladies in distress finds himself charged with showing the town—New York—to three women of widely different types. One is a rich, young but dowdy widow in whom he awakens the sense of tasteful personal adornment; the second, a nineteen-year-old millionairess with twenty millions and a taste for adventure; the third, his former college sweetheart who has run away from her husband to express her individuality in New York. The time is short but the predicaments that he falls into as a result of his escorting are many and amusing. Tho actually innocent he seems to be continually caught in compromising acts. But after all his adventures end happily.

"Mr. Davis's comic invention survives three hundred pages in merry and diverting fashion." F. A. G.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 12 '24 400w
Cleveland p36 My '24

"A story of great and restrained humor, of a disarming frankness in presentation, of complications that border on the farce, but maintains somehow, the dignity of comedy." D. R.
+ Ind 112:315 Je 7 '24 300w

"'I'll Show You the Town' is almost wickedly funny; it flashes and chuckles; it is wise, brilliant, and very nearly too amusing to be borne." Kenneth Fuessle
+ Int Bk R p672 Ag '24 350w

"'I'll Show You the Town,' is a good book. It is an entertaining book, written neither to excite neurotics, flatter the unco guid, nor to exact the carnal ecstasies of the now not-so young generation. Mr. Davis writes with the drawl of a Yankee cracker-box raconteur and with much the same leisurely humor. The result is a spacious, easy style, original, but free from mannerism. Although the action covers only a few June days in Manhattan and is elaborated in compact, rapid sequence, yet the variety of character and the author's knack of taking his time give one the effect of an ample piece of fiction." J: Carter
+ Lit R p661 Ap 12 '24 950w

"Entertaining as the book is, it would have been uproarious perfection itself had it been condensed to two-thirds of its present length."
+ — Nation 119:242 S 3 '24 100w

"Mr. Davis writes this merry comedy with the same impetuous flow of narrative and complexity of incident that characterized his 'Times Have Changed' of last spring."
+ N Y Times p8 Mr 30 '24 660w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson
Outlook 137:362 Jl 2 '24 200w
St Louis p399 D '24
Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 13 '24 300w

DAVIS, SUSAN LAWRENCE. Authentic history, Ku Klux klan, 1865-1877. 316p $3.50 Am. library service
363 Ku Klux klan 24-4514

This is a story of the original Ku Klux klan of Reconstruction days. It is a defense of the society, which the author claims was effective in keeping law and order, in establishing the policy of "white supremacy" in the South and in putting down carpet-bag and Negro rule. She traces the history of the organization of the Klan in the different southern states and recalls the names of prominent klansmen.

"Miss Davis is chiefly bent upon correcting the long-standing unfavorable impressions of the organization in Northern circles. She went about her task to make out the best possible case, and we must give her the credit of marshalling details and circumstances in most effective fashion. . . Few of us will be able to escape the conviction that she has gone out of her way to criticize and condemn. We see her with an extremely prejudiced pen." F. P. H.
— + Boston Transcript p5 Ap 19 '24 1000w

"In style, content, knowledge, and taste the book is hopelessly bad. The most untrained student of history will discover after very few pages that there is nothing authentic about it." J. G. DeR. H.
— Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p7 Je 29 '24 1900w

"A highly sentimentalized and idealized history of the Klan during the Reconstruction Period, of some historic interest, perhaps, because of the author's original research work and of her personal acquaintance with many of the figures that move through her pages. Mrs. Davis's book is not especially well written. Its chief appeal will be, no doubt, to those who hold views in sympathy with her own."
— + Lit R p694 Ap 19 '24 200w

"While the book may be consulted for information—if consulted with caution—it seems by no means to have been written in the mood of an impartial historian."
— Outlook 136:653 Ap 16 '24 220w
R of Rs 69:446 Ap '24 110w
St Louis p338 O '24

DAVIS, WATSON. Story of copper. (Century
^{2} books of useful science) 385p il $3 Century
553.43 Copper 24-25856

A non-technical account of copper, its history, geology, mining and refining, chemistry, compounds and alloys, and the many uses to which it is put in the world.

"Mr. Davis, who is managing editor of Science Service, writes interestingly and easily, and the book is well illustrated, especially notable being the reproduction of woodcuts from Agricola's 'De Re Metallica,' published in 1550." M. A. E.
+ Boston Transcript p3 N 15 '24 540w

"'The Story of Copper' is highly instructive, but it is too diffuse. It would be much improved by condensing it eighty or one hundred pages and bringing its price down in proportion." H. W. Jordan
— + Ind 113:459 N 29 '24 410w

DAVIS, WILLIAM STEARNS. Beauty of the purple; a romance of imperial Constantinople twelve centuries ago. 570p $2.50 Macmillan
24-22819

This historical romance gives a picture of the brilliant life of Christian Constantinople in the eighth century. The central character of the story is Leo, the Isaurian peasant lad, who by his own efforts and valor rises to high command, and eventually saves Constantinople and the later Roman Empire from the Saracens. Thruout the tale of his victories over the Saracens, by land and sea, is threaded Leo's romance with beautiful Anthusa, the daughter of Kallinikos, a scientist and discoverer of the "maritime fire" which aided Leo to defeat the enemy. The concluding chapter of the book describes the magnificent ceremonies which take place when an emperor chooses his bride, the emperor in this case being Leo, and his bride, Anthusa.

Booklist 21:152 Ja '25

"One does not expect such a novel as this from the pen of a professor of history, so alive, so vigorous, so well constructed, so successfully carried through on a well-sustained note of high emotional intensity, so gorgeously colored. But Professor Davis proves that he is able to stand well to the front in that select and small company that can write historical romance, can weld fiction and fact with glowing and fascinating result." F. F. Kelly
+ Int Bk R p898 N '24 880w

Reviewed by Ernest Hackett
Lit R p12 N 22 '24 450w

"It is done so vividly that the reader ceases to think of Leo the Isaurian as an imperial figure on purple tapestries: sees him take life and brush shoulders with peasant, soldier, merchant, sybarite, and ruler; even more—joins in the applause for The Lion when the Golden Gate clangs open, the Saracens are repulsed and the last plotters foiled."

+ N Y Times p26 O 26 '24 580w

"So much of current fiction is jerry-built of the flimsiest materials that a soundly constructed, substantial structure such as this newest historical romance by William Davis fairly towers. But it does not need the contrast with inferior work to make the book noteworthy; it is entitled to a respectable place in any company."

+ N Y Tribune p8 N 2 '24 300w

Outlook 138:340 O 29 '24 50w

"The harmless admixture of a love story, made the basis of a thoroughly entertaining novel that reminds one forcibly of Kingsley's 'Hypatia.' Abounding as it does in battles, intrigues, and dramatic suspense, it yet shows more profound scholarship and holds more human interest than does the great Victorian's theological romance."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:211 O 18 '24 380w

DAW, ALBERT WILLIAM, and DAW, ZACHARIAS WILLIAMS. Oil and gas engine power. 491p il $12 Van Nostrand [45s Constable]

621.43 Gas and oil engines 24-11450

"A treatise on the internal combustion engine for engineers, draughtsmen and students of applied science."—Subtitle

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:364 Jl '24

DAWSON, CONINGSBY WILLIAM. Coast of folly. 341p $2 Cosmopolitan bk.

Joyce Gathway, a young American heiress, thru her innocent flirtations with a married man whose wife is seeking divorce from him becomes involved in the plot which Mrs Fay's lawyers are hatching to rid her of her husband. As a consequence of Joyce's folly her millionaire grandfather disinherits her, threatening to leave all his money to charity unless, before he dies, she finds something worth living for, which in his old-fashioned language he calls God. The story tells of Joyce's fight with herself, in the winning of which she is represented as finding not only God but a real love and regaining her fortune as well.

"To one who has read Mr. Dawson at his best, who has felt the surge of his spirit in war days, 'The Coast of Folly' will seem a disappointing book. Here is a novel exactly fitted to the commonplace purposes of the screen." S. L. C.

— Boston Transcript p6 Ja 30 '24 600w

Cleveland p24 Mr '24

"The action lags a bit toward the end. Some of the conversation might be cut without damage to the story, a few details omitted that are rather anti-climactic, once we know what the conclusion is to be. But on the whole the plot moves swiftly and with interest." Dorothy Scarborough

+ — Int Bk R p197 F '24 1200w

"It is banal as a theme and the plot itself is awkwardly constructed. The author is a little too obviously in earnest over the sins of society."

— Lit R p495 F 2 '24 380w

N Y Times p9 F 17 '24 820w

"A singularly outspoken tale with a distinctly original moral." Isabel Paterson

N Y Tribune p19 Ja 6 '24 900w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p6e Ja 13 '24 720w

Springf'd Republican p7a Je 15 '24 400w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p193 Mr 27 '24 100w

DAWSON, MARSHALL. Nineteenth century evolution and after. 145p $1.50 Macmillan

213 Evolution [24-1278]

The book shows that there is no conflict between the evolutionary account and the Biblical account of man's origin and nature, and that while man was growing a backbone he was developing also as a moral vertebrate. The argument rests on the conviction that human progress is linked to man's quest for God and that as soon as the quest for God ceases man slides backward.

"Men and women with open minds will read it with pleasure. It will create new centers of interest by transferring energy from those which are lower to those which are higher, and a broader and more progressive thinking will result." G. O. M.

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p12 Ap 6 '24 950w

"A 'smart' popular book, intermingling facetious dramatizing of incidents in the evolutionary process with clever identifications of these with scriptural ideals."

— J Religion 4:329 My '24 60w

"Whether one likes it or no, it is impossible to deny the courage and the forcefulness of this book."

+ Lit R p679 Ap 12 '24 240w

Reviewed by L. L. Cline

N Y World p6e Ja 13 '24 300w

R of Rs 69:224 F '24 30w

"This is a pugnacious book expressing many views on modern life and conduct and, while not of marked theological importance, will have the desired regulating effect on men and women who are inclined to agree with Mr Bryan in religious matters."

+ — Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 22 '24 150w

Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 29 '24 240w

DAWSON, WARRINGTON. Adventure in the night. 253p $2.50 Doubleday [7s 6d Unwin]

A tale of adventure and mystery staged in the France of not so long ago, but filled with devices of torture dating back to the Inquisition. Gilbert Lawrence, head of the American branch of a noble French line, the de Laurencys, goes to France to attempt to regain his inheritance. In an ancient chateau he meets his adventure in the night, which is made more thrilling by the mad marquis, the soulless Spanish marchioness and the servitor Gazeaux. But he also meets the Lady in white and that adventure ends more happily.

Boston Transcript p6 N 5 '24 400w

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas

Int Bk R p858 N '24 100w

"Fascinating adventure, attired in excellent language, and it holds the attention readily to the last page."

+ N Y Tribune p9 S 28 '24 210w

N Y World p7e Ag 31 '24 120w

"The writer seems to fall between two stools. His work is too good for devotees of the merely sensational; but not even Mr. Conrad's encomium can persuade us that it has originality or inspiration enough to satisfy those who are more fastidious."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p354 Je 5 '24 230w

DAWSON, WARRINGTON. Opportunity and Theodore Roosevelt. 192p il $1.95 Honest truth pub. co., 508 S. Dearborn st., Chicago

B or 92 Roosevelt, Theodore 24-5098

"The book deals with Roosevelt's African trip as does no book other than the Colonel's own account. Mr. Roosevelt offered the author the opportunity (and Warrington Dawson took it, whence the title of the book) to accompany him on his journey into the jungle, and used him as a buffer between the party and the press. Mr. Dawson started out as a correspondent for the United Press, but he dropped this rôle to remain as a friend and assistant.

DAWSON, WARRINGTON—Continued
The book is composed for the most part of diary entries made by Warrington Dawson on the spot."—N Y Times

"Many who admired Roosevelt's good qualities and admit his great ones, will never forgive him some things he did, but that he was a mighty hunter none after reading Mr. Dawson's very interesting book, will deny."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 19 '24 210w

" 'Opportunity and Theodore Roosevelt' is a valuable contribution to the literature of T. R.' "
+ N Y Times p2 Ap 6 '24 400w

"This little book—badly bound and abominably printed—admirably supplements Colonel Roosevelt's own 'African Game Trails.' "
+ — Outlook 136:484 Mr 19 '24 550w

DAY, RICHARD EDWIN. Dante: a sonnet sequence; and other poems. 90p $1.25 Yale univ. press [5s Milford]
811 24-21054

This volume is the fourth work published in the Oliver Baty Cunningham Memorial publication fund. Besides the Dante sonnet sequence it also contains some lyric and meditative verse.

"Mr. Day's technique is good enough; he rhymes with felicity and he gathers a certain momentum into his sonnets, but the final touch that would transmute these efforts into authentic poetry is always lacking. Moments come when the reader is almost persuaded that he is perusing poetry, but reconsideration convinces him that the lines are no more than very good rhetoric." H. S. Gorman
— + N Y Times p5 Ag 31 '24 450w

"Mr. Day would have been wiser to choose the Shakespearian model. The Petrarchan octet, too, manifestly strains his ingenuity, and several of his rhyming variations in the sestet are not effective. The result is that the whole sequence bears the stiff front of unreal ceremonial."
— The Times [London] Lit Sup p634 O 9 '24 250w

DAYTON, HELENA SMITH, and BARRATT, LOUISE BASCOM. Book of entertainments and theatricals. 298p il $3.50 McBride
791 Entertainments. Amateur theatricals 24-211

A book for clubs, churches, little theater groups and all those who are called to serve upon entertainment committees. It treats in detail all manner of organized entertainments—costume dance, charity bazaar, society circus, pageant, dinner reunion, exhibition and play—and the preliminary arrangements, printing, publicity, decorations and tickets. One third of the book is given to amateur theatricals.

Booklist 20:207 Mr '24

"We know of no book of its kind that covers so much and covers it so well."
+ Boston Transcript p5 Ja 26 '24 210w

"Attractive book. It will be found of much value for the amateur, and is so well written that it will interest the lay reader who has no immediate intention of plunging into the actual management of such tasks."
+ Nation 118:396 Ap 2 '24 70w
N Y World p6e Ap 20 '24 90w
Theatre Arts Mo 8:352 My '24 100w
Wis Lib Bul 20:66 Mr '24

DAYTON, KATHARINE. Loose leaves. 219p $1.50 Doubleday
817 23-17213

Humorous sketches by a writer familiar to Saturday Evening Post readers. Partial contents: A happy day in the wide-open spaces; Choose your exit now; New Yorkers I know; The profiteer's anthology; Hootch! Have you joined the Fascisti? Some simple success stories; Say it with whitewash; A columnist's child's day-book.

Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 12 '24 300w

"Clever humorous sketches."
Wis Lib Bul 20:95 Ap '24

DEAKIN, FRANK B. Spain to-day. 221p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Labour]
914.6 Spain—Social conditions. Spain—Politics and government 24-15320

"In these pages the reader will catch no echo of castanets and serenades. Here Spain is stripped of the glamour and charm which illude the traveller, and we are shown instead the combined forces of feudalism, sloth and reaction that hold the people in their bondage. A chapter is devoted to health, housing and sanitation in Madrid. It contains facts well authenticated, based as they are on official statistics and the statements of prominent Spaniards. . . The book was written so soon after the change of government as to preclude any forecast of the future, but in his chapter on the Military Directorate, as well as in the foregoing chapters dealing with such matters as the agrarian problem, Separatism in Catalonia, Spanish justice. Mr. Deakin provides his readers with abundant material from which they may estimate the difficulties confronting General Primo de Rivera and his colleagues."—Spec

Am Pol Sci R 18:831 N '24 120w
Booklist 21:106 D '24
New Statesman 23:45 Ap 19 '24 550w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p11 Jl 13 '24 800w

"Painful as it is to lovers of Spain this little book of Mr. Deakin's is worthy of study as a straight, honest speaking bit of recorded fact; and the publication of it may prove to be an act of true friendship and service to a country and people which, clearly as he sees them, are evidently very near the author's heart."
+ Sat R 137:415 Ap 19 '24 550w
Sat R of Lit 1:34 Ag 9 '24 900w

"Spain To-day may be warmly recommended to all students of Spanish conditions and should serve as a wholesome corrective to those of us who cling to our romantic love of Old Castile and sun-baked Andalusia."
+ Spec 132:759 My 10 '24 450w

"The book is an honest and unprejudiced account of modern Spain as it has appeared to an English observer. It keeps to facts and avoids opinions; and though it does not try to explain causes, it leaves the reader with a pretty clear idea of the clerical influences which are mainly responsible."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p243 Ap 17 '24 200w

"Mr. Deakin is a very frank reporter, with no appreciable tendency to romanticize. He has been very painstaking in his observation and research." Coley Taylor
+ World Tomorrow 7:354 N '24 200w

[2] DEAN, REGINALD SCOTT. Theoretical metallurgy. 2d ed rev 246p il $3 Wiley [15s Chapman & H.]
669 Metallurgy 24-4031

"Supersedes Schenck's 'Physical chemistry of the metals,' which was translated by Dean in 1919. The present work is prepared on the same general plan, incorporating much of the earlier book and using many of the original illustrations, but with many additions so that it is no longer a mere translation."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:518 N '24

DE BEERSKI, P. JEANNERAT. Angkor, ruins in Cambodia. 304p il $5 Houghton [18s G. Richards]

913.596 Angkor. Cambodia—Antiquities

Angkor-Thom, the capital of the once powerful empire of the Khmers was, at the height of its prosperity in the days of Kublai Khan, a city of a million inhabitants. Now this ruined city is but a relic. The most conspicuous of its remains are the town of Angkor-Thom and the temple of Angkor-Vat. The author, who was entrusted by the French colonial minister in 1919 with the task of writing a monograph on the Khmer ruins, has woven into his history and description the legends of the early Cambodians. There are sixty-five illustrations reproduced from drawings by the author and from photographs.

"It is all a glorious piece of literary and artistic work. The text glows with poetic passages which thrill, and with realism which fills the soul with horror, for there was cruelty in that religion, as in all religions." N. H. D.

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 11 '24 1900w

Reviewed by S. F. Reavis

Int Bk R p528 Je '24 50w

"He has made skillful use alike of his pen, his pencil, and his camera, and he writes throughout, not only with genuine artistic appreciation and feeling, but with a fine Gallic enthusiasm, which betrays his nationality in spite of his very considerable command of our language. His book should be in the hands of all who contemplate a visit to Angkor, and it conveys a far better idea of the wonders which are to be found there than any that is easily accessible to English readers." Hugh Clifford

+ Nation and Ath 34:464 D 22 '23 1100w

New Statesman 20:308 Je 16 '23 250w

"What M. de Beerski lacks in his somewhat strained English adds a somewhat quaint tang rather than interfering with his clarity, and is more than compensated in his enthusiasm for his subject and his highly Gallic reflections by the way. The mission, literary and artistic, imposed on him by Albert Sarraud, French Colonial Minister, in 1919, has been carried out with the most commendable conscientiousness and with a genuinely poetic feeling and appreciation of the task." Howard Devree

+ N Y Times p11 Je 15 '24 1100w

N Y Tribune p26 My 25 '24 250w

"Mr. de Beerski is a little too given to rhapsodical description, but his book is well worth reading in spite of it."

+ — Outlook 137:320 Je 25 '24 200w

"If Mr. de Beerski has not produced a work that will make much appeal to the scientific archaeologist, his vivid style and his feeling for the beauties of the ruins which he was sent to investigate should procure him many readers; one can read his descriptions of temple sculptures representing scenes of life in bygone ages and involuntarily look back to the beginning to make sure that the writer is not narrating some of his own experiences, so naturally does the description read."

+ — Sat R 135:842 Je 23 '23 500w

Spec 131:224 S 18 '23 500w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p483 Jl 19 '23 600w

DE BURGH, WILLIAM GEORGE. Legacy of the ancient world. 462p $6 Macmillan [15s Macdonald & E.]

901 Civilization—History 24-12630

"An introduction to the study of ancient civilization, for the general reader whose demand for a history of Greece, Rome and Israel is not satisfied by elementary manuals."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

"Professor de Burgh has produced a book that is sound in its essentials. In general it is readable and lucid, although some sentences are too packed with facts and hence lacking in clearness. As might be expected the writer is most at home in the discussion of philosophical topics. The inclusion of a chapter on the Legacy in the Middle Age is to be commended." LaRue Van Hook

+ Am Hist R 30:120 O '24 1100w

Booklist 21:105 D '24

"Encyclopaedic, lucid, and often original. Unfortunately in one respect it is extremely unoriginal, and that is in its prime conception of civilization as a teleological development." F. S. Barr

+ — Lit R p12 S 6 '24 1200w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:380 Jl '24

The Times [London] Lit Sup p217 Ap 10 '24 1600w

DEHAN, RICHARD, pseud. See Graves, C. I. M.

DEJEANS, ELIZABETH. Double house. 273p $2 Doubleday

24-8652

When Karesia Kaime rented one side of her attractive double house to John Dascome, she little realized the mystery in which she was to become involved. Charged with the murder of his wife, but later acquitted, Dascome devotes his life to tracing the murderer. He comes to Los Angeles where he meets Mrs Kaime. She falls deeply in love with him, believing against the world in his innocence. Her strange, demented maid unconsciously assists in the solution of a mystery which has baffled the police for over seven years.

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 26 '24 650w

Cleveland p67 S '24

"Elizabeth Dejeans's latest novel is both ingenious and interesting, even tho it displays all the conventional faults of melodrama."

+ — Int Bk R p809 O '24 300w

"As a puzzle story it is well built, but the rest of it, especially the colossal nobility of the badly used John and the emotions of the various ladies in the case, is a bit cloying."

+ — Lit R p810 Je 7 '24 120w

"The book is an excellent mystery story, marred only by somewhat inadequate character realization. The style is clear and compelling. The interest is maintained to the end."

+ — N Y Times p16 Ap 13 '24 330w

"'The Double House' is a mystery story and a thrilling romance as well. Neither element is slighted for the other, and both are given satisfying treatment, through the medium of an intricate plot."

+ N Y Tribune p24 My 11 '24 900w

+ N Y World p6e Ap 20 '24 120w

"It is a first-rate murder mystery but the tenor of the narrative is somewhat spoiled by the introduction of too many unimportant characters."

+ — Springf'd Republican p5a My 18 '24 100w

DE KNOOP, FREDA, baroness. Pauline. 351p $2 Appleton

24-28965

The narrative is a character study, almost plotless, of a rarely sensitive girl who lived entirely in a world built up by her imagination. While still a child she married a Russian count more than twice her age whose love offered her rescue and protection. He kept her away from life's realities, in a prison-house, and tho she had a longing to do and to create, she persuaded herself that she was happy. The count's death brought Pauline freedom and with it, a more compelling love, but so completely was her personality merged in her love for Reginald that he felt swamped by it, uncomfortable and imprisoned. When he released himself, she lay for weeks in anguish, but finally she came to see that her love had passed beyond him and that he had really shown her the way to herself. Then, for the first time, she felt color, light and purpose coming into her life.

DE KNOOP, FREDA—Continued

"Originality in a story is the rarest of all qualities. Yet it is the one which is most firmly impressed upon this story of Pauline. Almost nowhere do we find the story lapsing into what is ordinary. From start to finish Pauline takes hold of us with her vivid and unusual personality." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 23 '24 1250w

"This reviewer frankly doesn't pretend to know what it is all about. But it is clothed in a literary style that has charm to a degree and originality to a fault." S. S. A.

— + Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Je 15 '24 450w

"This novel falls somewhere between a presentation of neurotic adolescence, with no more vitality than a painted figure on a porcelain mantel clock, and an old style parlor romance infused with smatterings of pseudo-theosophical talk."

— Lit R p676 Ap 12 '24 250w

"This arresting book with its strange technique, and stranger but very decided charm, comes from the publishers without the customary flourish of trumpets for either novel or novelist. This omission seems noteworthy, for both 'Pauline' as a story and the Baroness de Knoop as a story teller are both well able to stand and merit attention in their own right."

+ N Y Times p27 F 3 '24 1000w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p7e F 10 '24 470w

Spec 130:807 My 12 '23 60w

DE LA MARE, WALTER JOHN. Ding dong bell. 79p $1.75 Knopf [5s Selwyn & B.]

828 Epitaphs [22-21049]

It is in reality a collection of epitaphs which these three sketches written in old churchyards prove to be and the epitaphs are probably of the author's own making, tho he seems to decipher them on the lichen-grown stones. It adds to the shadowy atmosphere that one of the churchyards was visited at midnight and another was wrapped in snow and the growing dusk of a winter afternoon. Contents: Lichen; Benighted; Winter.

"Quite unworthy of the genius of Walter de la Mare. One never imagined that this poet's writing could fall under a suspicion of vulgarity, but this small volume comes perilously near it. How can Mr de la Mare make jocular allusions to Mrs Grundy, to umbrellas, to goggles, after quoting such memorable passages from the old masters as are to be found on the first few pages of his book?"

— + Dial 77:525 D '24 200w

"His gift is lyric. He has reproduced moods and a manner; a task, again, and beautifully performed." E. A. Niles

+ Ind 113:161 S 13 '24 350w

"Whether he has written them himself or simply gathered together epitaphs he has found is a matter of only fugitive interest. Here they are, as charming a group as we have ever read, in a setting as remote from the bustle of today and as shadowy and as fragrantly cool as any old churchyard."

+ Lit R p964 Ag 16 '24 480w

"Mr. de la Mare's latest book is a small but very fragrant flower in the meadows of English literature. Common words do truly take on a new value, a surprising significance, under his handling, so that their very appearance on the printed page is altered, and their meaning charged with a brighter colour, a clearer note. If a poet can give us this, and can go on giving us this, as Mr. de la Mare can, then, indeed, he is justified in printing even the scraps he writes on the backs of envelopes. Graveyards, too, may be said to be very much Mr. de la Mare's subject. His is a twilight mind. Among the gravestones, among the yews, in a fading light, this poet of dusk moves as tenderly as a wraith, uttering the epitaphs of his own making." V. Sackville-West

+ Nation and Ath 35:415 Je 28 '24 250w

"Even to the silent reader his words seem to croon themselves aloud in a voice that is only theirs—gentle, persistent, like Coleridge's brook in the midnight woods of June, with the quiet monotony of small things older than human, the wistful patience of things that have looked far longer on the world than the fleeting generations of men." F. L. Lucas

New Statesman 23:470 Jl 26 '24 760w

N Y Times p5 Ag 24 '24 300w

"'Ding Dong Bell' is a slight book, read in an hour. But, then, it will be read many such hours by him who possesses it." L. S.

+ N Y World p8e Ag 17 '24 500w

"It is Mr. de la Mare's 'Fort' to write poetry: here he is writing prose. 'Ding Dong Bell' has things in it worthy of its author. But they are the poetical things." Gerald Gould

+ — Sat R 137:614 Je 14 '24 420w

"De La Mare writes nothing that is without charm, but this little book is but a footnote to his history."

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:51 Ag 16 '24 250w

Reviewed by R: Hughes

Spec 133:166 Ag 2 '24 800w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 31 '24 750w

"We should read it congenially among the summer grasses, but we can think of it without terror as a bedside book. It is a slender but intensely characteristic morsel, and in the literature of epitaphs there can hardly be a subtler or sweeter one."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p319 My 22 '24 1050w

DE LA MARE, WALTER JOHN. Henry Brocken. 223p $2.50 Knopf

24-4621

Into regions whose "frontier stretches just this side of Dream, that border Impossibility, that lie parallel with Peace," Henry Brocken, dreamer and poet, sets forth on his old mare Rosinante. In the regions he visits dwell the immortal people loved in books, of whom we never tire of reading. He passes a night with those strange lovers, Jane Eyre and Rochester. In the Garden of the Hesperides he meets the bright ladies, Julia, Electra, Dianeme and Anthea, of whom Herrick wrote. He finds Titania and Nick Bottom resting on a bed of asphodel, and in the enchanted palace the Sleeping Beauty. With Lady Macbeth's doctor, he discusses that lady's malady and the strange visions of her husband. These and many others greet and guide the traveler on his way.

Booklist 20:299 My '24

"Henry Brocken is a book that deserves to stand alone because of its amusing and surprising interpretation of the poetic imagination." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p6 F 20 '24 1100w

"The flower-perfect prose delights and cloys. One must be able to be nourished by mere perfume and ripe contours if one is to receive nourishment from books of this type."

+ — Dial 77:85 Jl '24 100w

"Lovers of Mr. de la Mare's poetry will perhaps observe that his prose is less entrancing than his verse; that the imagination is less vivid, the witchery more attenuated; and while one may unhesitatingly admit this to be the case, yet one must acknowledge that his prose works are striking for their originality as well as for their whimsical beauty." S. A. Coblentz

+ — Int Bk R p479 My '24 560w

"Like gems in a rich setting shine forth the exquisite lyrics with which the narrative is sprinkled. They are delights in themselves. The prose is murmurously cadenced and always trembling upon the edge of poetry itself." W: R. Benet

+ Lit R p535 F 23 '24 650w

"There are pages and chapters in it of great beauty; there are pictures in it that might have come straight from Mr. Nahum's book at Thrae. And about the whole narrative there clings a fragrance of old tales and poems—the bookishness of Henry Brocken himself." Forrest Reid

+ Nation and Ath 34:924 Mr 29 '24 400w

"The familiar figures he shadows forth, the airy intangibilities to which he gives names and habitations form only half of the enchantment. The other half exists in his liquid prose phrasing packed with reminiscence. . . In Henry Brocken Mr. de la Mare has been able to follow Bottom's mysterious counsel: he has found out moonshine." H. G.
+ New Repub 39:191 Jl 9 '24 340w

"Mr. de la Mare's sentences are always filled with an unworldy atmosphere, a charming capturing of poetical nuances. Of slighter interest, yet always apparent, is the critical insight displayed in the handling of such figures as Jane Eyre and Criseyde. The reader carries away with him a more vivid comprehension of these living fragments of long dead minds."
+ N Y Times p8 F 3 '24 800w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:292 Je '24

"Here is a rare imaginativeness, a poetry of criticism. And there is more: the depth in his vision, microcosm though it be. One may glide through the book, but it is not one to be read in haste and cast aside, for the pellucid-looking images hold secrets to be mused over endlessly and pleasantly."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p189 Mr 27 '24 850w

DE LA MARE, WALTER JOHN, comp. Come hither. 696p il $6 Knopf

821.08 Children's poetry. English poetry—Collections

For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

Booklist 20:209 Mr '24

"The rarely conceived introduction and the fascinating notes at the end make a greater adventure of a book which could, at any rate prove an adventure, including as it does some of the greatest of poems." J. F.
+ Bookm 59:69 Mr '24 200w

"It is more than a book. It is the testimony of a living poet of childhood to the reality of his own experience of the continuity of the life of the imagination. 'Come Hither' belongs in every reference and school library in the country. It holds the key to so many other books."
+ Bookm 59:299 My '24 230w

Dial 76:289 Mr '24 140w

"An anthology which is easily the finest of its kind. The selections are by no means exclusively juvenile, though the charming introduction is addressed to children, and the illustrations are such as the imaginative young most like to see. There is only one obvious defect—none of the editor's own verse for children, equal as it is with the best in English, is included."
+ — Nation 118:511 Ap 30 '24 80w

"Mr. de la Mare's choice is a beautiful and abundant expression of a poet's mind discovering kinship of delights all through the English heritage of verse. He gives us wealth of fancy and music, and a spirit of youth in everything." Edmund Blunden
+ Nation and Ath 34:sup406 D 8 '23 70w

"Unlike most anthologies, this tempts one irresistibly to read from cover to cover its six or seven hundred pages, known poems and unknown unlike, in one ecstatic séance. For Mr. De La Mare's mind is far too delicate to allow him to include anything which would be offensive except to the most arid temperament, and at the same time his choice is so catholic that he cannot but introduce even the most learned to new 'Beauties.' " R: Hughes
+ Spec 131:1035 D 29 '23 430w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p734 N 1 '23 170w

Wis Lib Bul 20:64 Mr '24

"I think that the young of all ages love his abstracted air. I think that they lean to catch his casual words. It is apparently causing Mr. de la Mare not the least anxiety that many of the listeners at times fall into reverie. They listen no more for a little. He sets them dreaming. He has created a book to which they will turn back again and again." G. H. Conkling.
+ Yale R n s 14:183 O '24 400w

DELAND, MRS MARGARET WADE (CAMPBELL). New friends in Old Chester. 272p $2 Harper [7s 6d Murray]
24-11140

Most of the friends in these three novelettes of old Chester are new but Dr Lavendar and Willie King are in the background of the familiar scene. Contents: The Eliots' Katy; An Old Chester secret: "How could she!"

Booklist 21:27 O '24

"The flavor of something old and something new impregnates these stories. They have a vitality in them that has endured and that will endure when the literary fads and eccentricities of the first quarter of the twentieth century have disappeared and are forgotten."
+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 7 '24 1200w

Reviewed by V. R. Bowker
Int Bk R p819 O '24 200w

"They are domestic in tone, and record with great simplicity the victory, moral or actual, of the weak over the strong. Mrs. Deland likes ignored and odd people, but her championship of them would be more effective if she did not imply that they ceased to exist fifty years ago. She is admirable in straightforward narrative, and her account of the servant-girl's trudge through the storm in the first story is vivid." Edwin Muir
+ Nation and Ath 35:669 Ag 30 '24 260w

"This new book has much of the charm, the sympathy, the wistful delicacy, the fragrance as of dried rose leaves and lavender, which one expects to find in Mrs. Deland's stories of Old Chester. Readers who have enjoyed their previous expeditions thither under her guidance need not hesitate to undertake this new one for any fear of acute disappointment."
+ N Y Times p8 My 25 '24 950w

Reviewed by A. L. Hill
N Y Tribune p24 Jl 27 '24 340w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e My 25 '24 40w

Spec 133:234 Ag 16 '24 90w

"Mrs. Deland was never more gracious than in the characterizations to which she treats the reader in 'New Friends in Old Chester.' "
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Je 15 '24 300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p478 Jl 31 '24 230w

Wis Lib Bul 20:178 Jl '24

DELL, ETHEL MAY. Unknown quantity. 429p
2 $2 Putnam [7s 6d Hutchinson]
24-27644

"Jeannette Wyngold is the daughter of a great banker. When her father commits suicide, preferring death to imprisonment for fraud, she is left destitute and discovers who are real, and who are merely fair-weather, friends. She tries to earn her living as companion to another girl and then on the stage (where her faithful though uninteresting lover, 'Buck,' follows her, to become stage carpenter) but has to leave both employments on account of distasteful male attentions."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"It might have been written in 1870, and it is as popular to-day as it would have been then: an enduring feminine popularity, for it is as hard to conceive of a man reading it as it is impossible for even a Harold Bell Wright to have written it." H. L. Pangborn
— Int Bk R p19 D '24 240w

Reviewed by Dorothie Bobbe
Lit R p16 D 27 '24 400w

N Y Times p9 N 2 '24 600w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p733 N 13 '24 130w

DELL, FLOYD. Looking at life. 312p $2.50 Knopf
814 24-26381

In this reprint of fugitive essays written from 1914 to 1923 Floyd Dell expresses his opinions upon many things. Tho in some cases the subject is a few years behind the times, style and variety are strictly modern. The range is from such a theme as Talking in bed, a light little sketch of married life, to a serious discussion of Wells, the destroyer. Some are personal experiences, some musings, and some are reviews. Partial contents: Feminism for men; Burlesquerie; Shaw and Jesus; Jesus and George Moore; Sherwood Anderson, his first novel; A woman's view of the sex-muddle; Negro poetry; Vachel Lindsay's voice; G. K. Chesterton, revolutionist; Walt Whitman and the American temperament; Men, women, and booze; Dolls and Abraham Lincoln; Aphrodite without any nightie; Wells the destroyer; Babbitt and my Russian friend.

Booklist 20:330 Je '24
Cleveland p68 S '24

"We enjoy reading these essays not so much for the light that they throw on these hard matters as for a certain elfish, pucklike quality that we find in them."
+ Dial 77:173 Ag '24 60w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd
Ind 112:230 Ap 26 '24 250w

"At best his interest is in the brain of life, rather than its heart. But granted this limitation, it must at once be added that he observes with consistent detachment and annotates with candor, modesty, good sense and at times with nice discrimination." F. C. Davison
+ — Lit R p771 My 24 '24 400w

Reviewed by J. J. Smertenko
Nation 119:472 O 29 '24 430w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett
New Repub 39:23 My 28 '24 500w

"It is writing like this, simple and unaffected, which gives to these essays what weight and interest they may have—the writing of a clever, clear-headed, and patriotic American who is eager to see fair play. But would it not possibly have been better for us, if in the days of his eager and receptive youth he had been influenced less by Shelley and more by what he is pleased to call 'the honey-pot world of Keats?' " Llewelyn Powys
+ — N Y Times p14 Ap 20 '24 1400w

"He is, in a sense, an unclean critic who takes advantage of a helpless, unoffending book waiting to be reviewed to argue with himself in public over his own shortcomings. He makes a prayer, you gather, similar to that of Barrie's character: 'Dear God, don't make me a masterful man (but I should like it fine).' He is frank to admit that he is dogmatic, but he throws out his chest with pride." J. W. C.
N Y World p6e Ap 6 '24 550w
St Louis p350 O '24
The Times [London] Lit Sup p844 D 11 '24 300w

DELTA, pseud. See Wentworth, P.

DENDY, ARTHUR. Biological foundations of society. 197p $2.50 Appleton [7s 6d Constable]
570 Biology. Sociology [24-25370]

This small volume is the contribution of a biologist toward the discussion of pressing social and political problems. In the evolutionary history of the animal kingdom he traces the sources of human behavior. He shows the analogy between human society and the animal body and how almost every organ that the body possesses has its counterpart in the social system.

Booklist 21:96 D '24

"Dr. Dendy speaks with authority; he is professor of zoology in King's College, University of London, an F. R. S. and a Doctor of Science, and the author of textbooks long accepted as standards. But he is also a literary artist, able to make his points in such fashion that the layman not only follows him with ease but is always kept interested." H. P.
+ Lit R p11 O 25 '24 220w

"The book is a valuable one, intelligible to the uninstructed reader, full of information, clearly presented." Margaret Sherwood
+ No Am 220:168 S '24 1450w

Reviewed by Raymond Pearl
Sat R of Lit 1:262 N 8 '24 1400w
Spec 133:298 Ag 30 '24 470w

"A rapid yet comprehensive and extremely suggestive outline of some of the main doctrines and problems of biology."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p467 Jl 24 '24 300w

DENNIS, ALFRED LEWIS PINNEO. Foreign policies of soviet Russia. 500p $5 Dutton
327.47 Russia—Foreign relations 24-5916

The first attempt to tell the history of the international relations of Soviet Russia from the November revolution of 1917, which placed the Bolsheviki in power in Russia, to the present time. The author has had unusual opportunities of access to the files of the foreign offices of several nations and he has quoted liberally from notes, speeches and articles by Soviet leaders and the official Bolshevik press. The book does not deal with the policies of other countries toward Russia, with the exception of a final chapter on American relations, but with the policies which the revolutionary government has pursued toward foreign governments and peoples.

"The subject-matter of the book is virgin forest, but in the clearing which Professor Dennis has made the streets are laid out with care and precision. It is urbane, highly civilized, and not at all 'pioneer' in its method." Arthur Bullard
+ Am Hist R 29:772 Jl '24 600w

"The book is, what the author claims it to be, the 'undress rehearsal' at Williams, worked into a course of lectures at Clark, hastily revised and brought out at Dutton's. Had more time been spent on it the book would have been more scholarly and less bulky." F. A. Golder
— Am Pol Sci R 18:819 N '24 550w
Cleveland p87 N '24

"It seems that Professor Dennis the scholar and historian had to endure a hard battle with Mr. Dennis the gentleman with certain inherent prejudices. Evidence of the clash may be found throughout his book, and this evidence, moreover, shows that the historian has all too often yielded to the gentleman. In spite of apparently laborious efforts to attain fairness and historical objectivity, he falls far short of these qualities. With all this Mr. Dennis's work will prove of considerable value to the really interested and attentive reader who will take the pains to check up the sources and make the necessary reservations." Leon Talmy
— + Nation 119:575 N 26 '24 1100w
Nation and Ath 35:650 Ag 23 '24 120w

"To a large extent he has allowed the Soviet chiefs to speak for themselves in his pages, and he gives the sources of his quotations in copious notes which bespeak the thoroughness of his work. While it is evident that he does not sympathize with Bolshevism, he makes it equally clear that he has no desire to misrepresent it. On the whole, his style is restrained and convincing." A. S. Will
+ N Y Times p5 Ap 13 '24 2400w

"It is an amazing and illuminating story told at times in a manner almost conversational in its ease and simplicity." W. N. C. Carlton
+ N Y Tribune p21 Ag 10 '24 1450w

"A work of irreproachable sincerity and clarity, and possessing an unsurpassed—upon its special subject unrivalled—opulence of detailed and authentic information." W. F. Johnson
+ No Am 219:893 Je '24 400w

"His book is primarily a source and reference book, and as such it must be held invaluable to any disinterested student of to-day's Russia."

+ Outlook 138:563 D 3 '24 320w
St Louis p336 O '24

Reviewed by N. Peacock
Sat R 138:311 S 27 '24 1200w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p443 Jl 17 '24 1400w

DENNIS, CHARLES HENRY. Eugene Field's creative years. 339p $4 Doubleday
B or 92 Field, Eugene 24-28244

A friend of Eugene Field's during the years of his most creative work writes this book from a full store of memories. It is a series of pictures of Field rather than a consecutive biography. He is shown in his early days as newspaper columnist in Chicago, in the years of his growing fame as humorist and poet, in his pastimes and hobbies and with his friends and neighbors. Many quotations from his writings are included.

Booklist 21:148 Ja '25

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p3 O 18 '24 1800w

"Mr. Dennis's book is large, full, well-organized, and carried on with a fine tactfulness." H: B. Fuller
+ Nation 119:650 D 10 '24 1000w
R of Rs 70:669 D '24 200w

"Mr Dennis's book is vivid and authentic, and may be read with delight by all who relish American personality and the older American scenes."
+ Springf'd Republican p5a N 2 '24 1700w

DENNISTON, JOHN DEWAR. Greek literary criticism. (Lib. of Greek thought) 224p $2 Dutton [5s Dent]
888 Greek literature

"Mr. Denniston, of Hertford College, gives us here, in translations often by well-known scholars, a large number of extracts from Greek authors illustrative of Greek literary criticism. His authors are Aristophanes (Murray), Plato (Jowett and others), Aristotle (Jebb and Bywater), Demetrius (Rhys Roberts), Dio Chrysostom, and Plutarch. In a short general introduction Mr. Denniston traces the history of criticism in Greece, and touches on questions raised by these authors and others." — The Times [London] Lit Sup

Sat R 137:591 Je 7 '24 800w

"Very useful and interesting book."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:17 Ag 2 '24 250w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p341 My 29 '24 90w

DERENNES, CHARLES. Life of the bat; tr. from the French by Louise Collier Willcox. 183p $2 Harper
599.4 Bats 24-20842

The author of this book, a French nature writer, at the age of twelve years captured and tamed a little noctilionid which he christened Noctu. With great patience he studied this silver-gray creature, and a real friendship was formed between Noctu and her master. This book is primarily the record of Noctu's life, but the reader will also get a close insight into the life and habits of bats in general.

"The translation, while not especially noteworthy, has the compensating virtue of catching the spirit of the original."
+ — Boston Transcript p6 O 18 '24 130w

"M. Derennes writes as a careful and painstaking observer and at the same time as a poet, for he is as much impressed with the strangeness and beauty of his little friends as with the more scientific aspects of their existences. His is a charming and unusual book." H. B.
+ Lit R p15 O 11 '24 210w

Reviewed by L: S. Gannett
N Y Tribune p14 S 21 '24 750w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y World p8e O 19 '24 1650w
Outlook 138:340 O 29 '24 20w

"Fabre never did anything so impersonal as this, nor Thoreau so humorous, nor Hudson so delicate. It is a thoroughly satisfying book. My thanks go out to Charles Derennes and to Louise Collier Willcox." W: Beebe
+ Sat R of Lit 1:426 Ja 3 '25 700w

DE SCHWEINITZ, KARL. Art of helping peo-
2 ple out of trouble. 231p $2 Houghton
361 Social service 24-24388

The secretary of the Philadelphia Society for organizing charity describes in a human sort of way how to go to work to help people out of their troubles. The organized method of doing this is known as social case work but its principles may have a wider application to the daily, individual relationships of life. In a simple, helpful way, with many illustrations of cases drawn from his own experience, the author explains how to get at the facts of a case, how to understand and interpret them and to plan a way out of the trouble.

"Teachers and preachers, parents and physicians will find invaluable suggestions and examples of how to help and how not to help." T. C. R.
+ Boston Transcript p7 D 6 '24 170w
Cleveland p93 D '24

"He writes in a way to make his faith contagious. Only the initiated will wonder if it is all as easy as Mr. de Schweinitz, for all his warnings, makes it seem." Helen Wallerstein
+ Lit R p11 Ja 17 '25 300w

"It is lucid, practical, full of information and will doubtless prove helpful not only to social workers but also to every one to whom those in difficulty or crisis turn for advice and counsel."
+ N Y Times p26 N 2 '24 400w
Outlook 138:513 N 26 '24 20w

"The author, a sympathetic, clear-sighted social worker of wide experience, neither lets his subject slip nor yet reveals on it the finger marks of pressure."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:331 N 29 '24 180w

DE SELINCOURT, BASIL. English secret; and other essays. 174p $3.50 Oxford [10s 6d Milford]
824 24-2283

"Mr. de Sélincourt, besides tackling the problem of education in his title essay, deals with such subjects as the aristocracy of service, 'Reconstruction,' certain aspects of the League of Nations, 'Town Housing,' 'The Revolution of the Mind,' 'The Evolution of World Peace.' 'Industry and Humanity,' 'Spiritual Democracy' and 'Meeting the Megatherium.' The author also turns to more distinctly literary themes in essays on the French Romantic, M. Maurras; in 'The Challenge to Poetry,' in 'Lord Grey' and 'The Prelude' and in 'Poetry and Immortality.' "—N Y Times

Ind 112:80 F 2 '24 30w

"Mr. De Sélincourt is a writer of enviable powers whose mind moves easily on high levels. He is nowhere more sound and suggestive than when dealing with a subject so practical as 'Town Housing' and the futility of the suburb—that 'conscious chaos' more depressing than a slum, without civic architecture or country charm, inhabited by deluded hankerers after green fields." A. W. Colton
+ Lit R p536 F 23 '24 800w
+ New Statesman 22:348 D 22 '23 200w

DE SELINCOURT, BASIL—Continued

"The author exhibits all the virtues and such of vices as are characteristic of 'The Thunderer'; he cannot lightly be passed over by thinking persons, and he is overponderous for all but those who have ample time at their disposal."

+ — N Y Times p15 F 10 '24 600w

Reviewed by P. N. Stone
N Y Tribune p22 Je 15 '24 400w

"Literary caviare should not be consumed in the subway, and from the mere difficulty experienced in digesting the thought of Basil de Selincourt's 'The English Secret and Other Essays' we are justified in predicting for it not only a slim but a discouraging sale. Yet, whether regarded as a piece of composition or as an example of bookmaking, 'The English Secret and Other Essays' is a book which should be read in a study and, for those so inclined, be reread before its wealth can be realized." Harry Salpeter

+ N Y World p6e Ja 27 '24 1100w

"One may confidently range this slender book of wisdom among the best we have to show. The style and texture are instinct with graceful gravity; the matter is such as may only be attained by delicate balance."

+ Sat R 137:159 F 16 '24 700w

"Mr. de Selincourt discusses his thesis with knowledge and insight in a style which is always lucid and often felicitous. Another distinctive quality in his work is his equal familiarity with French and with English literature, which enables him to illustrate each of them from the other by very apposite illustrations of comparison and contrast."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p807 N 29 '23 600w

DE SELINCOURT, HUGH. One little boy. 266p $2 A. & C. Boni
24-1966

"The headmaster of the English 'public school,' where the scene is laid, detects a youngster in 'the worst offense that boy can commit, an offense which defiles a community, which saps the roots of character,' Headmaster Lake tells the assembled school. And announcing his determination 'to keep my school pure at whatever cost,' he flogs the offender publicly in chapel and forbids his talking with other boys for the rest of the term. Mrs. Hullertson, the boy's widowed mother living nearby, greatly distressed by what has happened to her son, Graham, hurries to the school to learn from the headmaster that she has been an indulgent mother and that to save her son from wickedness she must not spare the rod. But both she and her son remain bewildered and unhappy. Their problem is solved by the entrance into the story of a very lovely girl, several years Graham's senior. Paula and her father, who comes to assume something of a father's part toward Graham, are fresh, spontaneous, and wholesome. And being what they are they supply the common sense lacking in Mrs. Hullertson and the stimulus that Graham needs."—Nation

---

"One cannot read this book carefully and feel that the author is not convinced that his subject is an excellent one and that his book is an important contribution to a certain necessary literature. His careful style, his lack of offensive detail, his interest in his characters, all show that he is genuine in his viewpoint and candid with his public."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ja 30 '24 200w

"'This astonishing study of adolescence is concerned primarily with certain aspects of the sensitive boy's growth that are usually ignored and never mentioned in polite conversation. But 'One Little Boy' goes beyond this and becomes in essence a carefully fashioned and beautiful picture that is not far removed from poetry."

+ Int Bk R p557 Je '24 230w

"He has brought together realism of the highest excellence and a melodramatic plot; and the baldness of his forced coincidences is emphasized by the beauty of his natural narrative. It is clear that to the author these accidents were more or less symbolic of the experiences which could influence Graham; but they are far too palpable to be accepted as symbols. Mr. de Sélincourt might have improved the dénouement and turned a fine book into a great work of art." J. J. Smertenko

+ — Lit R p503 F 9 '24 1100w

"If the ending appears rather vague and leaves the reader in doubt, the author's underlying purpose is unmistakable from the opening chapter. Being an artist Hugh de Sélincourt has deliberately avoided giving us a tract but instead has created a fragment, delicate and fragrant, gently ironical at times, and occasionally sentimental. The characters are on the whole well drawn. Yet one can but wonder at the striking disparity in the constant picturing of Graham as 'a little boy' and what we know his age, for physiological reasons, must be." Ernest Gruening

+ — Nation 118:237 F 27 '24 600w

" 'One Little Boy' is a book for every parent, a book especially for every mother. Nothing published in recent years possesses to such a degree the power to awaken parents to the problems they must face in directing the deep-rooted impulses of their children into normal healthy channels." Margaret Sanger

+ N Y Tribune p24 Ja 13 '24 1150w

Reviewed by Harry Salpeter
N Y World p6e F 3 '24 900w

D'ESME, JEAN, pseud. See Esménard, J. d'.

DEVOLUY, PIERRE, and BOREL, PIERRE. The French Riviera; with a preface by Arnold Bennett. 156p il $2.50 (7s 6d) Medici soc.

914.4 Riviera 24-26887

The latest volume of the Picture guides series is devoted to the towns of the French Riviera —Hyères, Cannes, Grasse, Nice, Villefranche, Monte Carlo, Mentone, and the rest. The history and traditions of the countryside are combined with description, and, as in the other volumes of the series, the illustrations are in photogravure.

Booklist 21:64 N '24

"One of the super-guide books is this, its text possessing literary value, and its illustrations rarely complementing its verbal descriptions."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 23 '24 340w

"This is an unusually lovely book. One could hardly ask for a more delightful guidebook than this, either for the journey itself or for a trip bound by the four walls of a library." H. B.

+ Lit R p971 Ag 16 '24 140w
N Y Times p12 Ag 24 '24 580w
Outlook 138:137 S 24 '24 90w

"The proof-reading in places has been careless, and one deplores the lack of an index. But it is the pictures that count, and they are charming in themselves and beautifully printed."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p385 Je 19 '24 420w

DE VOTO, BERNARD. Crooked mile. 432p $2 Minton, Balch & co.
24-22274

The setting of this story of American life is a small Western city. Endowed with the hardihood of his pioneer ancestors who struggled to build the West, Gordon Abbey, the central character of the story, cynically regards the achievement of his forefathers—the smug little town of Windsor with its cheap politics, its art patrons and "clan", its banks, smelters and railroads. The vapidness of it all makes him eager for new freedom and power, and this he endeavors to express thru new modes of thought, different methods of industry. He is each time defeated and finally returns to the old homestead, the old love, and the task of tending the earth and enjoying the fruits thereof.

Boston Transcript p2 O 4 '24 1500w

"The quality of sardonic laughter is the most valuable thing about the book and will place Mr. De Voto in a high position if he mellows instead of rotting as his experience expands." G. C.

+ Ind 113:346 N 1 '24 430w

"'The Crooked Mile' deserves genuine reading, and the author close watch. He has direction and structure, one who when he hits hits hard. While he seeks to understand his characters, he is not fooled by them. They may, however, speak for themselves." H. A. Potamkin

+ Lit R p9 O 25 '24 240w

"The author has set himself a huge task and has failed gallantly in the larger aspects of his intention without diminishing a lively sense of acute penetration and virile creative ability. In spite of his missing the centre of his mark he leaves a definite impression of a vigorous intellect which is not afraid to come to grips with the actual conditions of his life and his art."

— + N Y Times p6 O 5 '24 700w

"The book is verbose—this single mile, even if it be such a twisted one, could be covered in less than the 400 pages the author uses. Yet withal, Mr. De Voto has written something that does not fall into the facile patterns created by our popular fiction writers." Babette Deutsch

— + N Y Tribune p9 N 2 '24 660w

N Y World p8e N 30 '24 220w

"One might wish that there were fewer windings in 'The Crooked Mile.' It is an excellent piece of psychological analysis. It is an admirable study of the squalidly commercial New West which has supplanted the romance breathing country our fathers read about. Nor is it badly told. The exposition is clear and straightforward and descriptions sometimes attain considerable beauty. But there is no emotional crescendo to lend that interest which pulls the reader from page to page and from chapter to chapter."

— + Sat R of Lit 1:329 N 29 '24 440w

DEXTER, ELISABETH WILLIAMS (ANTHONY) (MRS ROBERT CLOUTMAN DEXTER). Colonial women of affairs. 204p il $5 Houghton

396.5 Woman—Occupations. United States—Social life and customs 24-15275

A search through town and court records, old newspaper files, wills, family papers and diaries has yielded the author most interesting material for this study of women's activities in colonial times. The study shows that women were engaged in many gainful occupations—as innkeepers, shopkeepers, dressmakers, manufacturers, nurses and midwives, school dames, writers, printers, religious leaders, actresses, and landed proprietors.

Reviewed by E: F. Humphrey

Am Hist R 30:180 O '24 400w

Booklist 21:51 N '24

"Dr. Dexter has applied herself to the task with great care and commendable enthusiasm. She has dug deep into colonial records seldom quoted and brought to her effort that skill and understanding which accompanies fitness and training. She has given us a study of the times that is generally admirable." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 28 '24 1300w

Cleveland p94 D '24

"It is practically a new field of historical research and account that Mrs. Dexter studies in this very interesting book. As she points out, investigations into the conditions and occupations of women during the early days of this country have heretofore been concerned with the years during and following the Revolution. So it is new soil which she has turned, and it has yielded rich results."

+ N Y Times p11 Jl 6 '24 1900w

N Y World p8e Jl 27 '24 100w

Outlook 138:602 D 10 '24 530w

R of Rs 70:671 D '24 170w

Wis Lib Bul 20:212 O '24

DEXTER, WALTER. London of Dickens. 269p $2.50 Dutton [6s C. Palmer]

914.21 London—Description. Dickens, Charles. Literary landmarks [24-24494]

In a series of fifteen literary rambles, the author visits the London sites and scenes associated with Dickens and his novels. Most of the routes described can be accomplished on foot in the course of two hours. Full quotations are given in the text of Dickens's descriptions of the scenes and at the end of each route is a list of references with book and chapter quoted. There is an index of places.

"The book, which is neatly written with some humor and liberal quotation but slight literary design, is a convenient geographical summary of the work of Dickens."

+ Bookm 60:233 O '24 100w

"Those who read to be carried along by the momentum of connected and polished prose will be hindered by too much gear-shifting, too many traffic signs, too much of the personally conducted. The pleasure to be derived is only for those who are as earnestly interested and thorough as the author." R. E. Spiller

+ — Lit R p972 Ag 16 '24 550w

"This appears to be particularly good in the comprehensiveness with which it covers its subject and the arrangement of its tours or walks."

+ N Y Times p20 Ag 3 '24 300w

Outlook 137:30 S 3 '24 110w

Sat R 136:138 Ag 4 '23 220w

DIAL (periodical). Stories from the Dial. 330p $2.50 Dial press

Short stories—Collections 24-21360

A compilation of short stories by various authors, which have appeared from time to time in the Dial. Contents: Desire, by James Stephens; I'm a fool, by Sherwood Anderson; Rex, by D. H. Lawrence; The gentleman from San Francisco, by Ivan Bunin; The sad sequal to Puss-in-boots, by Padraic Colum; A white heart, by Aleksei Remizov; The dark city, by Conrad Aiken; Ghitza, by Konrad Bercovici; Speed the plough, by Mary Butts; The Greek dancer, by Arthur Schnitzler; The porch, by C. M. Rourke; The little master of the sky, by Manuel Komroff; Hurley-burly, by A. E. Coppard; Hungarian night, by Paul Morand; Tristan, by Thomas Mann; Appendix.

Booklist 21:67 N '24

"This anthology, chosen with taste, gay with the flags of all nations, is an infinitely diverse book, truly representative of the writers of the hour." Paul Morand

+ Dial 78:51 Ja '25 900w

"This is a collection of short stories, the majority of which one is safe in calling masterpieces. It is an international anthology, as distinguished from the usual American or English volumes; naturally with half a dozen nations to choose from the quality is distinctly higher than if the scope were more limited." Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p4 Ag 30 '24 500w

Reviewed by J: Franklin

New Statesman 24:205 N 22 '24 250w

"For all their conscious artistry there is more vigor, genuine literary substance and character in one story by Harry Leon Wilson or Booth Tarkington than there is in the entire collection of 'Stories From The Dial.'"

— + N Y Times p9 S 14 '24 1100w

DIAL (PERIODICAL)—Continued

"One might question the inclusion of two or three, but few readers would deny the excellence of the others, even those that failed to appeal to their own personal taste."
+ — Outlook 139:35 Ja 7 '25 140w

"The name of this volume prepared me more or less for displays of youthful impudence and a not very discriminate hankering for novelty. I was agreeably surprised. I found instead rare authenticity and unusual dignity." Sidney Cox
+ Sat R of Lit 1:124 S 20 '24 800w

"To the student of the short-story, this book is an outstanding collection of types less frequent in magazines today. There is a distinct artistic aim, and a happy freedom from commercial formulas. But the achievement is uneven. Better in some ways, perhaps poorer in others, they are by no means average stories."
— + Springf'd Republican p7a O 12 '24 430w

DICKEY, SAMUEL. Constructive revolution of Jesus; a study of some of his social attitudes. 165p $1.60 Doran [3s 6d Swarthmore press]

232 Jesus Christ—Teaching

A study of the personal social opinions held by Jesus—his attitude toward the parties of his day and the political and social order, his interpretation of the Mosaic law, his feeling for the Temple and its services. The study shows Jesus as a conscious revolutionary, "the most audacious thinker the world has known," whose teachings imply the overthrow of the present form of society and anticipate what we begin to call the international mind.

"One might well ask whether the modern followers of Jesus may not be doing violence to his memory when they represent his interests and the main content of his teaching as falling in the realm of modern social idealism." S. J. Case
J Religion 4:100 Ja '24 480w

"A forceful book."
J Religion 4:106 Ja '24 20w

DICKINSON, ASA DON, comp. One thouand
2 best books. 416p $5 Doubleday

028 Bibliography—Best books. Books and reading 25-1864

From over fifty published lists of best books made by scholars and booklovers the librarian of the University of Pennsylvania has compiled this list of one thousand books. The main text is arranged alphabetically by the names of the authors whose books are included, with brief descriptive notes. In each case the number of endorsements the book has received on previous lists is indicated. The main text is followed by lists of various arrangements: authors and anonymous classics by dates, by nationality, and by number of endorsements; titles, by endorsements; authors and titles classified by subject or literary form, general title index. Finally, the one thousand books have been distributed into ten lists of one hundred titles each to provide a course of reading for ten consecutive years.

"It was inevitable that somebody would take in hand the numerous lists of 'best books,' analyze, compare and select and out of the result compile a superlist of best books whose titles have all triumphantly passed the tests of the previous selections. That is what Asa Don Dickinson, librarian of the University of Pennsylvania, has done in this unique volume."
N Y Times p26 Ja 4 '25 600w
N Y World p9e D 28 '24 300w

DICKINSON, EMILY NORCROSS. Complete poems. 330p $3.50 Little 811 24-19785

The poems of Emily Dickinson. published in a series of three volumes at various intervals after her death in 1886, and in a volume entitled "The Single Hound," published in 1914, with the addition of a few before omitted, are here collected in a final complete edition, with an introduction by her niece and biographer, Martha Dickinson Bianchi.

Reviewed by Katherine Brégy
Cath World 120:344 D '24 3200w

"I find among her hundreds of poems in this first complete edition a few of the most beautiful, the most whimsical and the most illuminating poems I have ever read, and I find others that mean nothing at all to me . . . it would have been kinder to Emily Dickinson and more reverent toward her rare gift to have permitted many of her pieces the oblivion she seemed to have desired for them." Walter Yust
+ — Lit R p949 Ag 9 '24 400w

"Her verse, which is to our whang-bang school poor technique, accomplishes the most miraculous sound-flutings; her assonance-rhyme, like her thought, is a tone that opens in the central atom of feeling, outward. Her images, magnificent, tempered, utterly her own, make her the only genuine Imagist." Genevieve Taggard
+ Nation 119:376 O 8 '24 850w

"She touched a thousand things gracefully and she was always herself. Nobody has yet traced her to any source except her own fancy." M. A.
+ N Y World p6e Jl 6 '24 450w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson
Outlook 137:479 Jl 23 '24 700w
Springf'd Republican p7a O 26 '24 1350w
Wis Lib Bul 20:211 O '24

DICKINSON, EMILY NORCROSS. Life and letters of Emily Dickinson, by her niece, Martha Dickinson Bianchi. 386p $4 Houghton

B or 92 24-7241

In a short biography introducing the letters Mrs Bianchi, the niece and sole survivor of the family, does all that is possible to bring Emily Dickinson's "shy reality" into the light. The background of her ancestry, family life and friends is sketched in, but it is from letters and sayings of hers which friends wrote down as she uttered them because they were too precious to lose, that the clue to her personality must be drawn. The letters, which take up more than two-thirds of the volume are revealing, tho those to her few chosen friends are lacking because of the promise she exacted that these letters should be burned after her death.

Reviewed by S. V. Benét
Bookm 59:732 Ag '24 2400w

Reviewed by Clifford Orr
Boston Transcript p14 Mr 29 '24 3250w

Reviewed by Katherine Brégy
Cath World 120:344 D '24 3200w

Reviewed by D. B. Woolsey
Ind 113:20 Jl 5 '24 600w

"The letters are unique and show her rare genius. Sometimes the expression is obscure but only because her thoughts flash out with such tumultuous spontaneity that connecting links are forgotten." L. H. Smith
+ Int Bk R p587 Jl '24 1300w

"Mrs. Bianchi's life of her aunt is too rapt and uncritical to be very suggestive, but it has the documentary value of new anecdotes and new letters. It is the only considerable life or collection so far to appear, but there is nothing definitive about it. Another book on Emily Dickinson is waiting to be written." A. W. Colton
+ — Lit R p788 My 31 '24 920w

Reviewed by Genevieve Taggard
Nation 119:376 O 8 '24 850w

Reviewed by Percy Lubbock
Nation and Ath 136:114 O 18 '24 300w

Reviewed by P. H. Boynton
New Repub 39:130 Je 25 '24 2600w

"It proves to be both a pleasure and a disappointment. Much is revealed but nothing is explained, and that is the prime fault with Mrs. Bianchi's book." H. S. Gorman
+ — N Y Times p7 Ap 13 '24 2500w

"The information she gives about Emily Dickinson is extremely well chosen and exceedingly interesting. That there is a great deal of information which it is either not in her power to give or that she does not choose to give, she makes quite plain." Esther Murphy
+ N Y Tribune p25 Ap 20 '24 2000w

Reviewed by F. V. Roman
N Y World p6e Mr 30 '24 900w

Reviewed by F. V. Keyes
No Am 219:911 Je '24 400w

Reviewed by Ethel Parton
Outlook 136:701 Ap 23 '24 1200w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:377 Jl '24
Pratt p37 summer '24
R of Rs 69:558 My '24 120w
Sat R 138:447 N 1 '24 350w

Reviewed by Alan Porter
Spec 133:sup549 O 18 '24 1450w
Springf'd Republican p7a D 2 '23 120w

"Strong in local color, this book will have an especial interest for readers in Springfield and Amherst as well as Boston."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 27 '24 120w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p673 O 30 '24 1550w
Wis Lib Bul 20:125 My '24

DIMOCK, EDWIN. Monsieur and madame. 143p il $2 Harper
448 French language 24-3692

"Its purpose is to make it easier to remember those baffling but fundamental things, the genders of ordinary French nouns. And so Mr. Glackens has dressed them all up as men and women and Mr. Dimock introduces them in quaint verses on opposite pages. Some seventy or more of the utensils and objects whose names are most frequently used in ordinary conversation thus parade through the book tricked out in quaint form and attire as human beings, those of masculine gender as men or boys and those of feminine in women's apparel."—N Y Times

"A new and amusing picture book for any child and a series of unforgettable visual impressions of the genders which are the Waterloo of most English students of the French language."
+ Bookm 59:302 My '24 80w

"Thanks to Mr. Dimock and Mr. Glackens, the murky twilight of the first six months of beginners' French is lightened by cheer and entertainment."
+ Boston Transcript p6 Mr 12 '24 200w

"This book is the first of its kind and will be welcomed by all who are trying to teach little children the rudiments of French." M. K. Ford
+ Int Bk R p807 O '24 250w

"This is a uniquely instructive book for children who are beginning French. The book can be recommended as an eminently practical help to all young people beginning the struggle with the gender of French nouns."
+ Lit R p598 Mr 15 '24 120w

"Any one who is beginning the study of French, no matter at what age, will be helped over some of the initial difficulties by this attractive, amusing book, although it is intended especially for the use of children."
+ N Y Times p26 F 17 '24 300w
N Y Tribune p25 My 4 '25 70w

"This humorous aid to the study of French is worth investigation. Artistically, the book is a credit to the publishers."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 30 '24 200w

DINGLE, A. E. Wide waters. 310p $2 Brentano's 24-21585

"Here is a book abounding in strong language and strong characters. It is laid in these times, and it concerns the voyage of a clipper ship from London to Java, carrying, among other things, a girl and two men. Alden Drake, master, retired, wealthy and a gentleman, stows away on the clipper Orontes to follow the girl. The captain, Jake Stevens, rough and hardy, signs him contemptuously as ship's boy, and the battle for the lady's heart begins. There are action and surprise to the end of the story."—Lit R

Boston Transcript p4 O 22 '24 650w

"The plot is admirably handled, and, what is rare, the end cannot be guessed. Captain Dingle has written a good story well."
+ Lit R p10 O 11 '24 80w
N Y Times p16 D 14 '24 450w

"The story is full of surprises. It is well done, so far as its mechanism is concerned. It also has touches of humor, and its style is good, but the second part is marred by streaks of eroticism and a good deal of stuff that seems introduced to meet the supposed demands of a magazine reading public. But it is always a lively yarn."
+ — N Y Tribune p18 O 26 '24 160w

"Capt. Dingle's chapters are well written. They are sometimes lurid but never cheap. We commend 'Wide Waters' to all readers who like a story with a stir and especially to millionaires softened by indulgence who need a recipe for a thorough-going tonic." E. W. Osborn
+ N Y World p7e S 21 '24 250w

DINGMAN, CHARLES FRANCIS. Plan reading and quantity surveying. 201p il $2.50 (12s 6d) McGraw 2
692.5 Building—Estimates 24-898

"A practical guide for the estimator. Confined to building construction."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:509 N '24

DITCHFIELD, PETER HAMPSON. Country folk; a pleasant company. 244p il $3 Dutton [7s 6d Methuen]
914.2 England—Social life and customs. Country life [23-17762]

"The writer of these pages has lived most of his life in the country, and nearly forty years have been spent in one pleasant, peaceful Berkshire village. He has written much about village life in all its aspects, historical, archæological, ecclesiastical, architectural and social. In this book he has tried to sketch the villagers themselves, in whose pleasant company he has passed the main portion of his life, and whose uninterrupted friendships he has greatly enjoyed. He knows them very intimately. . . Changes are taking place in country villages. The old-world amenities and customs have been rudely shaken. Perhaps it may be well to catch a glimpse of the village and its folk before these changes mature, and before the old landmarks become unrecognisable." (Preface) Contents: The squire; The parson; The country doctor; Churchwardens and sidesmen; The parish clerk; The schoolmaster; The farmer; The labourer; The carrier; The landlord of the inn; The gamekeeper; The poacher; The shepherd; Village women; Village handicraft workers; L'Envoie; Index.

"All who love the old-fashioned England, who love the picturesque, who yield to the spell of Anglo-Saxon romance, will appreciate the book."
+ Boston Transcript p6 Ja 23 '24 200w

"The rector of Barkham, realizing that a great many of the choice types of rural life in England are on the wane and some of them already fading from memory, has sought to bring them into the centre of the picture for a final

DITCHFIELD, PETER HAMPSON—Continued
curtsey. His studies are manifestly a labour of love, and he has wrought these papers with care and a certain antiquated grace." L. B.
+ Freeman 8:526 F 6 '24 220w

"Mr. Ditchfield's subject matter in these agreeable essays is the 'Main Street' of England, yet he writes with none of the cynicism or disillusioning irony of a Sinclair Lewis, but rather with the genial warmth and the cheerful enthusiasm of one who has lived among the country folk for years, learned to appreciate and even to love them, to understand that which is praiseworthy, picturesque and unusual in their manner of life, and to look with eyes of kindly criticism upon all their foibles and failings."
+ Lit R p511 F 9 '24 180w
New Statesman 22:124 N 3 '23 350w
N Y Tribune p19 Mr 16 '24 120w
St Louis p384 N '24

"He is happiest when his kindly humour can have full play. His book is full of good stories."
+ Spec 131:520 O 13 '23 450w

"He is no stickler for accuracy in his quotations, or in the spelling of names and places. But he knows country life well, and the changes which the war has hastened give ample opportunities for comparison."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p638 S 27 '23 300w

DIVER, MAUD. Siege perilous, and other stories. 309p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Murray]

"'Siege Perilous' named after the longest narrative in the volume, is a collection of a dozen short stories. The theme of 'Siege Perilous' Maud Diver used subsequently in a novel. The rest of the stories, with the exception of 'Complete Surrender,' which relates one of those post-war tragedies so common in present-day literature, depict the life of India under British dominion. 'Light Marching Order,' 'Lakshmi,' 'The Gods of the East' and 'Sunia' cover again, with a certain degree of success, the ground that Kipling had the priority of exploiting to the fullest."—N Y World

Boston Transcript p6 Ag 6 '24 700w
Reviewed by A. D. Douglas
Int Bk R p858 N '24 40w
Lit R p9 Ag 30 '24 130w

"Mrs. Diver, who has lost none of her power to interest—it is her subject that has deserted her—is now most interesting when her tales are not of the Indian Army or of the lovers, young or elderly, who follow the flag to Simla!"
— + Nation and Ath 35:546 Jl 26 '24 120w

"It is in the tales of Indian life and character that Mrs. Diver is always at her best. It is permitted to suspect, indeed, that she idealizes her Indians more or less. But she puts the semblance of truth into her presentations."
+ N Y Times p9 Jl 27 '24 700w

"There is little in the volume that is new. Maud Diver is really at her best in the longer forms and one feels that she has labored under constraint in producing the present collection of stories." F. V. Roman
— + N Y World p8e Jl 27 '24 140w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p448 Jl 17 '24 240w

DIVINE, CHARLES. Gypsy gold. 58p $1.25 Seltzer
811 23-17670

"The gypsy of this book, roaming carelessly through town and countryside of France, Spain, and North Africa, makes songs about the highways and stars and chimney pots, carnivals of Paris, dreams of love and romance, and his own casual and unhurried progress through fair lands in fine weather. He knows sorrow only as a delicate shadow in his path."—Bookm

"His heart is full of sentiment and laughter, and the humor of life gets the better of his sentiment time and again, especially when he tries to contemplate death. Everything moves by him in a colorful procession worth weaving into a brief song, but not worth very much more of thought." B. L. Kenyon
+ — Bookm 59:79 Mr '24 360w

"Mr. Divine is thoroughly poetical in his coining of picturesque phrases, and if anything, a trifle too sparing in his use of them. 'Gypsy Gold' is another of the little books that romanticists will wish to slip into their pockets."
+ — Boston Transcript p15 Mr 29 '24 300w
Reviewed by J: G. Fletcher
Freeman 7:622 Mr 5 '24 30w

"Mr. Divine's second book of verse is well named. In the quaintness and whimsy of its vision, in the curious sympathy it breathes for the most unexpected features of life. Certainly its author shows promise. Of course there are lapses to the easier level of phrases that are not characteristic, especially into rhythms that pall after a time."
+ — Lit R p511 F 9 '24 220w

"Pure, lyrical verse is so rare nowadays that 'Gypsy Gold' is a find. Verse that is easy to read, that articulates our own dormant longings for flight, certainly deserves recognition." Milton Raison
+ N Y Tribune p26 Je 8 '24 150w

DIXON, THOMAS. Black hood. 336p $2 Appleton
24-14019

"'The Black Hood' is a story of North Carolina in the beginning seventies and of the original Ku Klux Klan in the period when, to the wise eye of its State leader, the organization seemed to have outlived its prime purpose and to be in danger of degenerating into a common instrument of private or political vengeance. John Craig is the leader of the Klan who becomes the hero of Mr. Dixon's book. He falls in love with the daughter of his fiercest enemy, and the girl of his heart shares the deadly perils due to his act of dissolving the Klan. It is love that saves him from his worst temptation, and by that same love he eventually finds happiness."—N Y World

"Mr. Dixon has written a novel which, in addition to the news value of its background, possesses a plot full of love and action." S. L. R.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 25 '24 600w

"Faults Mr. Dixon has from a literary standpoint, but he can tell a story and make it gripping. 'The Black Hood' is often rank melodrama, but well-constructed melodrama can be thrilling, and the thrills are not lacking here." Herschel Brickell
+ — Lit R p867 Jl 5 '24 480w

"From beginning to end the ultimate purpose of the author is too evident. He has written a scenario, rather than a novel, and it is possible that the moving pictures may be able to supply the characters with the life which they lack in the printed version."
— N Y Times p30 Je 22 '24 650w
Reviewed by Hunter Stagg
N Y Tribune p25 Je 29 '24 1400w
N Y World p7e Je 8 '24 50w

"'The Black Hood' is a book of intensely melodramatic quality, one written, we should say, in a good deal of a hurry and not without thought of the films. The best thing about it is the pointed fashion in which it carries rebuke and condemnation to leaders who are promoting recklessly in our present day a revival of the K. K. K. under the worst possible impulses and auspices." E. W. Osborn
— + N Y World p7e Je 15 '24 170w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p500 Ag 14 '24 500w

DIXON, WILLIAM MACNEILE. Tragedy. 228p ² $2 Longmans [6s Arnold]
808.2 Tragedy

"Mr. Dixon's subject is tragedy as a whole, especially as seen in its greatest four masters, the three Greeks and Shakespeare; and he has not much to say of particular tragedies, whether Greek or Shakespearean. His subject is the method and business of tragedy, and above all the view of life which he considers it to imply. For these purposes he discusses the theories of various critics—Aristotle, Hegel, Hume, Schopenhauer, Nietzsche, and others."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"This essay by the Professor of English Literature at Glasgow is original alike in style, content and arrangement. It has (apart from a reference or two) no footnotes; instead of being an exhaustive treatise on a narrow topic, it is a short and suggestive essay on a large and vital theme. And although some of the sentences are over-long, and a few of the discursive passages just slightly overloaded, it has the further rare merit of being well written. From start to finish an extremely thoughtful work, it reveals a breadth and depth of general outlook upon life such as are only too seldom met with nowadays."

+ New Statesman 24:338 D 20 '24 1500w

"It is impossible for anyone who cares for such inquiries at all to find him dull. That he never is, unless indeed for some temperaments there be a kind of dulness in continuous strain and excitement. But, dull or not, he is certainly often difficult. His sentences, which often disdain the assistance of punctuation, are constantly requiring a second or a third reading before their meaning comes."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p819 D 4 '24 2100w

DODGE, DANIEL KILHAM. Abraham Lincoln, master of words. 178p $1.50 Appleton

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham 24-19205

Professor Dodge offers herewith a collection of papers written by Lincoln, all of which are significant of his marvelous mastery of words and powers of expression. There is included an interesting study of the Gettysburg address which gives some details regarding its composition and delivery. Contents: Speeches in the Illinois legislature and in Congress; On the platform and in Congress; 1852-1858; From the "Cooper Institute address" to the "Second inaugural"; The "Gettysburg address"; Messages and proclamations; Lectures and occasional addresses; Letters and telegrams.

"It is carefully written, as careful of words as if it were by Lincoln himself, but it contains a most admirable analysis of some of his principal speeches."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 23 '24 250w

Lit R p982 Ag 23 '24 350w

"Interesting little study."

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 10 '24 780w

DOMVILLE-FIFE, CHARLES WILLIAM. Among wild tribes of the Amazons. 282p il $5 Lippincott [21s Seeley, Service]

918 Amazon river. Indians of South America. South America—Description and travel [24-13254]

"The forests of the Amazon valley present the only extensive portion of the earth's surface that is still virgin ground for the adventurous explorer. There are nearly a million square miles of unknown territory there, Mr. Domville-Fife says in one place. He gives a very readable account of some hazardous journeys, carried out, as he justly says, 'under conditions to which African exploration has been merely child's play.' The sole paths through this dense and mainly impenetrable jungle are the water-ways, and it is only at considerable risk that the white man can go even a mile or two away from the rivers. The native tribes are naturally inhospitable. Among the most interesting pages in Mr. Domville-Fife's book are those which describe the methods by which the admirable Indian Service of the Brazilian Government is endeavoring to tame these wild races, 'half-devil and half-child.'"—Sat R

Boston Transcript p4 Jl 26 '24 1000w

Reviewed by E. B. Smith

Lit R p987 Ag 23 '24 400w

"Mr. Domville-Fife has secured a valuable series of photographs, and his story of his experiences among the tribes makes exciting reading."

+ Nation and Ath 34:476 F 9 '24 120w

"It is a fascinating book dealing with almost, sometimes quite, unknown country, and bringing home very vividly to the reader the fact that even in 1924 there are vast tracts of this earth of which our civilisation knows nothing."

+ New Statesman 22:678 Mr 15 '24 130w

Sat R 137:87 Ja 26 '24 450w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p60 Ja 31 '24 750w

DONNELLY, FRANCIS PATRICK. Art principles in literature. 144p $1.50 Macmillan

801 Literature 23-17211

In his study of literature as an art, it is the principles of Aristotle which have guided the author. He considers two modern tendencies—individualism and the scientific influence—as destructive of art and literature and he decries the modernism which has driven classical literature and methods from the schools.

Cath World 119:273 My '24 500w

Cleveland p44 Je '24

"It is catchingly balanced; but it is also constructively urgent. The vividness of concrete instance and abundant illustration matches the iconoclasts. The scorn with which they are answered is gayer than their own. It is gayer, and it is more persuasive, because it expresses not destructive animus, but constructive conviction. The animating conviction holds the book together." C: S. Baldwin

+ Lit R p454 Ja 19 '24 950w

"Dr Donnelly's discourse, popular rather than scientific, is captivating in its humor and clever criticism."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 F 6 '24 400w

DORGELES, ROLAND. Saint Magloire; tr. by Pauline De Chary. 329p $2.50 Doran [7s 6d Collins]

Magloire Dubourg, commonly known as Saint Magloire, returns to France after forty years spent as a lay missionary, because he thinks his own people need his lesson more than the Africans. His reputation had preceded him, he is acclaimed as a miracle worker and everywhere he goes he is followed by the sick and crippled as well as by curiosity-seekers. But tho he preaches the simple gospel and obedience to Christ's teaching, he lacks human understanding and sympathy and evil follows him. He stirs up hatred, foments disturbances and creates riots. He is branded as a neurotic and a victim of religious monomania. Scarcely a year after his arrival in France amid the acclaims of the people he returns to Africa with their execrations. There is both irony and allegory in the study of this saint with one idea, this inhumanly good man.

"M. Roland Dorgelès merely essays to show us the events which follow the visit of a saint to modern France, and he does it with an ironic cleverness, a manner of standing aside and leaving it to the reader to decide on the verdict, an understanding of human feelings and human reactions, which make one believe in the reality of the events he records."

+ N Y Times p22 My 4 '24 850w

N Y Tribune p7 D 21 '24 100w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p500 Jl 26 '23 250w

DORR, MRS RHETA (CHILDE). Woman of [2] fifty. 451p $2.50 Funk

B or 92 24-26024

Mrs Dorr tells a vital and moving story of her struggle for her own freedom and the freedom of other women. She has lived much, taking part in many of the events that mark her generation and she remembers vividly. Born in Nebraska of pioneer blood, she was a "premature feminist" and from earliest childhood struck out for herself. She tells of her release from an unhappy marriage, her labors to support herself and her boy, and her experiences as journalist and militant suffragist. As war correspondent she was in revolutionary Russia and went to the front with the women's battalion of death. She also spent three years in after-war Europe.

DORR, RHETA—Continued

"A delectable compound of common sense, keen observation, tolerant criticism, irrepressible zest of living and an abiding humor as irrepressible. The reader feels the magnetism of a peculiarly vivid temperament, and the contagion of her enthusiasm for that hard and tireless work which alone can give concrete results, and eagerly turns the stirring pages of the story unfolded with that sophisticated simplicity which is the flower of the best journalistic training." Frances Bartlett
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 24 '25 1300w

"It has the prime quality of being a good story; and that is too weak a description, for it is a breathless story. It hurries you along and keeps you turning pages feverishly, whether you will or not, for it has the quality of the unexpected." C: W. Thompson
+ Int Bk R p27 D '24 2500w

"'A Woman of Fifty' is not only a human document but above all else an intensely, absorbing and unforgettable story—the kind of story that everybody is reaching out for—the fact story. . . The book is a record of intense, original thought and fearless action. It is this which makes it such a colorful, dramatic story." Anzia Yezierska
+ Lit R p6 Ja 17 '25 760w

"As a personal chronicle, the book is not only valuable but intensely interesting. The vivid, pictorial style of the writer, her ability to create the very mood and feeling of the years she lived through, gives her story a quality that is much more absorbing than most fiction. But, as a transcript of comment and deduction, it can hardly be taken seriously." Alison Smith
+ — N Y World p8e Ja 25 '25 480w
Outlook 139:117 Ja 21 '25 30w

DOTY, ALVAH HUNT. Walking for health. 44p 50c Appleton
613.72 Walking. Hygiene 23-18192

The medical director of the Western Union telegraph company in this little book presents the great value of that commonest form of exercise, walking, as a health aid and a safeguard against the congestion of internal organs, particularly the brain.

Boston Transcript p4 F 23 '24 200w
N Y Times p20 Ja 6 '24 300w

DOUGHERTY, GEORGE S. Criminal as a human being. 290p $2 Appleton
364 Crime and criminals 24-22905

From his many years' experience, first as a Pinkerton detective and then as chief of detectives in the New York Police department, the author writes of the interplay of crime and detection. There are chapters on the art of shadowing, on the ways in which crimes are planned and rehearsed by their perpetrators, on the third degree method of enforcing confessions from prisoners, on blackmail, dinner thieves and pickpockets, bandits and burglars, and the work of the city detective.

"The book as a whole interests and entertains. It seems a pity that a man with so many yarns in the back of his head has not told more of them. But, since Commissioner Enright of New York has just written a detective story, Mr. Dougherty may be saving his experiences for future books. Judging from his first book, if he does this his other books should be widely read." K. S.
+ Boston Transcript p6 N 8 '24 600w

Reviewed by W. D. Lane
Nation 120:97 Ja 28 '25 900w

Reviewed by Leonard Woolf
Nation and Ath 36:267 N 15 '24 190w

"The book is written with a fine, direct simplicity, sometimes with a touch of Celtic humor, which makes it very easy reading."
+ N Y Tribune p11 Ja 18 '25 260w
Outlook 138:468 N 19 '24 20w

"The book is an interesting and instructive treatise in practical criminology."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 O 15 '24 150w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p855 D 11 '24 290w

DOUGLAS, LLOYD C. Minister's everyday life. 220p $1.75 Scribner
262.1 Ministers of the gospel 24-7742

This book gives practical suggestions on the problems of young ministers. In a clear journalistic style, not without humor, it treats of the ministry as a profession, the pastoral relationship, methods by which the minister may honorably add to his income, the care of church property, church finances, sermon preparation, visitation of the sick, weddings, funerals, the minister's reading, his correspondence, and other matters that confront him daily, including a survey of the personal problems confided to him by those who seek his counsel.

"It is an unusual book and one that even the veteran in the profession will find refreshing." E. E. F.
+ Bookm 59:adv Jl '24 90w

"The son of a minister, and himself twenty years a minister, Dr. Douglas writes out of a rich experience. He also writes with the pith and point of a journalist. While written primarily for the young preacher, it is a volume that every minister will do well to read, mark and inwardly digest."
+ Boston Transcript p4 My 3 '24 80w

"If the targets of these lectures can only catch something of Dr. Douglas's breeziness and let it ventilate the ecclesiastical atmosphere of their ministry, without tempting them to fall into sensationalism, a lot of good will result; and if now and then a layman, willing to learn how the other half lives, should pick up the book and be held to the final page by its vivacity, the church may benefit thereby."
+ Springf'd Republican p12 Je 20 '24 280w

DOUGLAS, O., pseud. (ANNA BUCHAN). Pink sugar. 316p $2 Doran
24-18907

Kirsty Gilmour, left alone at the age of thirty upon the death of an exacting stepmother who has led her from one smart hotel to another in a weary round of social activity, finds herself in her native Scotland—the possessor at last of a real home. "Pink sugar" is the tale of her experiences in trying to make the world happier not only in the community in which she lives, but for three small and quite delightful motherless children, to whom she opens her home until the remarriage of their father relieves her of their care. She succeeds in making others happy and herself as well—for the book ends with her approaching marriage to Archie Home, crippled by the war, and owner of a large estate of which her own home is but a part.

Booklist 21:26 O '24

"It makes you happy at once just to read about it, for you know you are to receive something refreshing. And so you do." I. W. L.
+ Boston Transcript p1 Jl 26 '24 600w

"The working out of the plot proceeds on normal, not greatly exciting lines to the expected conclusion of the two love stories; but, after all, it is no more than framework upon which to display the individualities of the actors. A quiet unassuming, but substantial and finely finished piece of work, to delight readers who do not demand sensationalism of any sort." Harvey Parrish

+ Lit R p947 Ag 9 '24 420w

"It is a very pleasing story to read. The characters are human, even though they are less swayed by primitive passions than is usual in most modern fiction. They are, most of them, good and kind without being in the least priggish. In justice to O. Douglas, it is only fair to state that her book is not quite so cloyingly sweet as the title would lead one to believe."

+ N Y Times p18 Jl 6 '24 360w

"Of its kind, it is very good, indeed." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p24 Je 29 '24 700w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p488 Ag 7 '24 550w

DOW, DOROTHY. Black Babylon. 90p $1.75 Boni & Liveright

811 24-9278

The title-poem in this collection of poems by a young Chicagoan is a description of a night in the dance halls of Chicago's black belt, where black and white dance together and vice flaunts itself in the din of the jazz. The love lyrics that follow bear no relation to the first poem.

"Dorothy Dow's 'Black Babylon' has a nice eagerness, an ability to note the unusual object or emotion and to catch it in a phrase. Those of her poems that are best as writing are apt to be those that are most conventional in thought and rhythm. Her book is cleverer than it is profound; but there are lovely, youthful things, of much promise." J: Donelson

+ — Bookm 59:604 Jl '24 60w

"The lengthy, excoriative and unhewn fragment of verse called 'Black Babylon,' from which this collection of verse takes its name, is about the worst piece of literary work yet to come to our attention. When we finish that, we are introduced to a collection of short poems, written with fair regard to mechanics, that are readily readable."

— + Boston Transcript p3 My 17 '24 220w

"Miss Dow is first of all a lyricist and into the short pieces that make up the bulk of her volume she generally manages to infuse an individual beauty. One must read Miss Dow for her deftness of touch, her delicately smooth rhythmical effects, and the atmospheric charm that lingers over much of her work."

+ — N Y Times p12 Jl 6 '24 260w

"The little poem, 'Black Babylon,' is a sort of emasculated Vachel Lindsay epic. It rarely approaches the sudden beauty of the lyrics further back in the book. It is almost impossible for the girl poets to write wholly free of Millay's influence—but Dorothy Dow succeeds in being herself more than most of the recent truth-tellers." Milton Raison

+ — N Y Tribune p22 Jl 27 '24 240w

"For the most part, the verses are competently made, but the feeling is not convincing." D: Morton

— + Outlook 137:318 Je 25 '24 180w

DOWNEY, EZEKIEL HENRY. Workmen's
3 compensation. 223p $2 Macmillan

331.25 Employers' liability. Insurance, Industrial 24-6851

"A discussion of the cost and prevention of industrial injuries, the scope and administration of workmen's compensation and of compensation insurance, with special reference to the American system. Not an elaborate technical treatise but an effort to give the average reader an intelligent understanding of an important social problem. Valuable bibliography." —Booklist

"Of especial interest to students of government is the chapter on 'The Administration of Workmen's Compensation' in which the author has described the principles which should govern the organization, methods and tools of the compensation board."

Am Pol Sci R 18:834 N '24

"The net impression created by this discussion of the shortcomings of existing compensation laws is somewhat depressing. One wishes that Dr. Downey might have elaborated upon his brief statement that, measured by the situation which obtained before compensation, the advance has, nevertheless, been very great. After all, however, Dr. Downey has rendered the greatest possible service to the advancement of labor legislation in this country." J: R. Commons

+ Ann Am Acad 116:280 N '24 420w

Booklist 21:51 N '24

"This is not only the latest, it is also the most authoritative and interesting of the many books on accident compensation. Dr. Downey was a close student of workmen's compensation. He was a thoroughly qualified statistician and actuary, and as a public administrator he was able and alert. His untimely death a year ago was a very serious loss to the movement for adequate laws, efficiently enforced." J: B. Andrews

+ Survey 53:244 N 15 '24 340w

DOWNING, ELLIOT ROWLAND. Our physical world; a source book of physical nature-study. (Univ. of Chicago nature-study ser.) 367p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press [14s Cambridge univ. press]

507 Science. Physics 24-16213

"It is the purpose of this book to organize the subject-matter of elementary physical science or physical nature-study about toys and familiar home appliances. It is hoped it may serve as a guide in the workshop of the boy or girl who enjoys making things, that it may help children understand how commonplace appliances work and may aid parents and teachers in answering the questions of inquisitive youngsters. It is a source book in the sense that it brings together in one volume material elsewhere scattered and difficult of access."—Preface

Booklist 21:55 N '24

Boston Transcript p4 Jl 26 '24 230w

"In this volume the author brings together hitherto unavailable source material which will be invaluable to the teacher of elementary physical science or physical nature study." W. L. Beauchamp

+ School R 32:636 O '24 240w

DOYLE, SIR ARTHUR CONAN. Memories and adventures. 410p il $4.50 Little

B or 92 24-22951

The autobiography of the creator of Sherlock Holmes reads very much like the adventures of the great detective himself. The record of a most active and many-sided life, beginning with an account of his school days at Stonyhurst, the book follows the stages in his varied career from his brief experience in the practice of medicine through his first literary success and the creation of Sherlock Holmes, military service in South Africa and in the World war, travel in many lands and meetings with notable people. The last chapter is given to his psychic quest which he now regards the most important thing in his life.

Booklist 21:108 D '24

"His is an interesting book, changing and colorful, and one that should be read by every lover of Sherlock Holmes." L: Bromfield

+ Bookm 60:493 D '24 300w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p1 S 27 '24 2800w

"Reading this book, one has a slight sense of disappointment. The writer stays on the surface of life. It is not one of those intimate self-revelations to which we have become accustomed of late. The book is a better record of the external life of his time than it is of the real personality of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle."

DOYLE, SIR ARTHUR CONAN—Continued
— + Ind 113:402 N 15 '24 220w

Reviewed by A. B. Maurice
Int Bk R p877 N '24 1200w

"Nothing that this brilliant writer has given us in the 'Adventures of Sherlock Holmes' or his other wanderings in the realms of dreamland is comparable with the fascination to be found in the simple, modest story of his own life." M. E. Stone
+ Lit R p1 O 18 '24 2700w

"Here is an autobiography which in many ways is excellent; it tells, clearly, unaffectedly, and most entertainingly, the story of an exceptionally interesting, an enormously busy and therefore happy life. Certainly no lover of the Holmes Saga should fail to read it. But from beginning to end the book is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of metaphysical speculation." R. F. Dibble
+ — Nation 119:682 D 17 '24 700w

New Statesman 24:sup8 O 11 '24 350w

Reviewed by J. D. Adams
N Y Times p1 S 28 '24 2000w

Reviewed by Llewelyn Powys
N Y Tribune p4 O 26 '24 1150w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson
Outlook 138:256 O 15 '24 850w

"A very readable, though hardly a memorable book, and so long as the Sherlock Holmes stories are read it will be the book to which anyone who wishes to know about the author must go." A. W. Colton
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:199 O 18 '24 850w

"A very interesting and varied panorama of life." Lilian Whiting
+ Springf'd Republican p7a O 12 '24 1400w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p591 S 25 '24 650w

DOYLE, SIR ARTHUR CONAN. Our second American adventure. 250p il $3 Little [10s 6d Hodder & S.]

917.3 United States—Description and travel. Canada—Description and travel. Spiritualism

Conan Doyle's first campaign in the United States covered the eastern states only. His second lecture tour started at New York, carried him to the Pacific coast and home thru Canada. As in his previous volumes of psychic travels he describes his impressions of the cities visited, the reception given his lectures and the things he found America interested in at the time, but his chief interest is always in his psychic experiences.

Booklist 21:6 O '24

"Altogether, his book will be found to offer not a little interesting information along with much entertaining narration."
+ Bookm 59:613 Jl '24 110w

"That Sir Arthur would write entertainingly upon any subject is as unquestionable as is his sincerity. Little escapes the observation of his keen eyes and mind, and his comments are as arresting as they are friendly. If ever there were a 'Britisher' who loved and was loved by Americans, it is he who for years, through the creation of his fancy, gave us so vivid a pleasure." Frances Bartlett
+ Boston Transcript p2 My 24 '24 600w

Cleveland p88 N '24

Reviewed by C: de Kay
Int Bk R p879 N '24 450w

"It is thoroughly Arthurian—which is to say, an exuberant, human, näive, and yet artistic diary, written for the most part on the spot. The constant mixture of mundane and psychic—using the latter term in its general meaning—is not only because the events are chronologically recorded, but because Sir Arthur wants to impress new readers that outside of his special domain he is a sensible, hard-headed observer. Incidentally he reveals himself a showman par excellence." Horace Green
+ N Y Times p17 My 25 '24 1500w

Outlook 138:65 S 10 '24 40w

"He writes with all his usual brightness and whether one remains unconvinced or not by his chronicle of wonderful happenings it is certainly very entertaining. Besides his spiritualistic researches, Sir Arthur has much of interest to tell us of the United States, of the dancing craze, of prohibition, of the film world, and of the oil fields."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p131 F 28 '24 160w

Wis Lib Bul 20:176 Jl '24

DOYLE, CAMILLA. Poems. 73p $1 Appleton
821 24-5691

These poems are for the most part songs of nature. A number of them have for their scene the old canals and tow-paths that thread the English countryside.

"In her gypsy-blooded verses of the canals which dot England's countryside she strikes some living chords. Had she been more careful and given her inspiration better polish she would have produced a volume of pretty verse."
— + Boston Transcript p3 My 31 '24 150w

"Miss Doyle has a light touch which she employs with placid and genial result." Edmund Blunden
+ Nation and Ath 34:sup406 D 8 '23 40w

"Camilla Doyle has very little excuse for writing poetry. Her volume is full of platitudes and conventionality. It never rises above mediocrity and there is nowhere a glint of redeeming vision. We look in vain for any real spark of emotion." B. S. Wagstaff
— N Y Tribune p26 Ap 27 '24 80w

"Pleasantly lyricizes the loveliness of the little canals of England and the perfections of the English countryside." Arthur Guiterman
+ Outlook 136:649 Ap 16 '24 140w

"A fine craftsman working hand in hand with the sensitive observer of simple things has produced the small volume of poems by Camilla Doyle. The countryside is her commonest inspiration, and she has a range of moods which, though they fall short of the heights of grandeur and palpitating beauty, is her own discovery and has in it the thrill of a personal joy."
+ Spec 131:660 N 3 '23 200w

"Though they lack the charm and the sweet scents of Robert Herrick's Devonshire verses, they exhibit an ability to create impressions of color and sound."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 27 '24 50w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p674 O 11 '23 250w

Wis Lib Bul 20:124 My '24

DRAGO, HARRY SINCLAIR. Following the grass. 320p $2 Macaulay
24-19214

A picture of the settling of northern Nevada by the Spanish Basques, sheepherders, who in the great drouth of 1862 followed the grass and thus played an important part in the history of Nevada. The central characters of the story are Joseph Gault, the offspring of David Gault, a Kentuckian, and Margarida Irosabal, a Basque. The marriage of Joseph's parents worked the beginning of a bitter hatred between the two families, making Angel Irosabal, Margarida's father, her most obdurate foe. Several years after the death of his brave mother and the flight of his father, who had been unjustly accused of murder, Joseph, now a young man, returns to his home to avenge the injustice that had been heaped upon his parents. With a coyote and a crow for his companions, Joseph lives on the peak of a mountain, shunned and feared by every one because of his strange power of prophecy. But he ultimately clears his father's name and thru the gracious spirit of a beautiful girl a bond of love is established in the house of Irosabal.

"'Following the Grass' may rightfully take a unique place among the growing mass of fiction which endeavors to color the often prosaic pages of pioneering history with the bright hues of romance."

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 17 '24 750w
N Y Tribune p8 D 14 '24 190w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p8e O 5 '24 120w
Springf'd Republican p5a N 2 '24 80w

DREIER, KATHERINE SOPHIE. Western art and the new era; an introduction to modern art. 139p il $7 Brentano's

704 Art. Impressionism (art) 24-86

"Miss Dreier, president of a 'Modern Art' society in New York, here expounds some of the virtues which she recognizes in 'post-impressionism,' 'futurism' 'cubism,' 'simultaneism,' 'dadaism,' 'vortexism,' and the like."—Boston Transcript

Boston Transcript p7 F 2 '24 450w

"At first glance the book is impressive. It is well printed, attractively bound, and illustrated with exceptional taste; it contains an occasional truth—old truth, but not less valid on that account—but after a few pages the reader's hopes for enlightenment are quickly frustrated. The writing is bad; the sentences are loose and inexpressive." T: Craven

— + Dial 76:357 Ap '24 1500w

"With all its faults, and they are exceedingly plentiful, Miss Dreier's book nevertheless holds some germ of feeling for the humanity whose expression in all ages is related." H. J. Seligmann

— + Nation 118:184 F 13 '24 1200w

Reviewed by L: Mumford
New Repub 39:188 Jl 9 '24 550w

DRESBACH, GLENN WARD. Enchanted mesa, and other poems. 120p $1.50 Holt

811 24-7239

These are songs of the Southwest and of the desert, wth some lyrics and narrative poems in which place does not enter or matter.

"While at moments Mr. Dresbach's touch of melancholy seems a bit too unrelieved (perhaps a bit too pagan), it is, nevertheless, authentic and veritable, and it is so far removed from the superficial romanticism of the ordinary Western writing that it deserves the name of truth and distinction." C. P.

+ Cath World 119:712 Ag '24 180w
Cleveland p70 S '24

DRESSER, HORATIO WILLIS. Psychology in theory and application. 727p $3.50 Crowell

150 Psychology 24-5747

A comprehensive treatise the purpose of which is to coordinate the various divisions and applications of psychology so far as they belong under the head of science. It covers individual and social psychology, vocational and industrial psychology, and the psychology of the unconscious. Bibliographies. Index.

"This is not a book for a beginner who is pursuing the study of psychology without the assistance of a competent instructor. Psychology has developed a terminology all its own, which must necessarily be employed in defining and explaining mental and moral phenomena. This terminology is found throughout the entire work, but more especially in part one. The earnest student, under the guidance of a helpful teacher, can gain immense benefit by a slow and careful study of this book."

+ Boston Transcript p7 My 24 '24 300w

"On the whole, while this book should serve as a useful reference for students of psychology who wish to get the various authoritative statements on a given topic conveniently arranged, it will hardly serve to clarify the ideas of the general reader in regard to what psychology is and does. Dresser's style is often involved and not always clear, and he has an almost too affectionate regard for the terms 'psychic' and 'purposive' which to many of us have very little meaning." H: E. Garrett

+ — J Philos 21:304 My 22 '24 750w

"As a source book and outline the volume has definite value."

+ N Y Tribune p26 Jl 13 '24 100w
Outlook 136:748 Ap 30 '24 50w

DRESSLER, MARIE. Life story of an ugly ^{2} duckling. 234p il $3 McBride

B or 92

An autobiography of one of America's well-known comediennes told in an amusing and informal way. As the title indicates, Miss Dressler has no illusions concerning her personal beauty, and in her instinct to "turn drawbacks into drawing cards" lies her success. She tells the story of her life from the time when as a fourteen-year-old amateur she was engaged as leading lady by a traveling stock company.

Booklist 21:148 Ja '25

Reviewed by Philip Hale
+ Ind 113:494 D 6 '24 300w

"Marie Dressler has always made people happy on the stage and is certain to do the same thing to her reading public." C: P. Sawyer

+ Lit R p6 Ja 3 '25 1100w

"Marie Dressler's book has the qualities of its defects. Abrupt in transition, it is never tedious; occasionally sentimental, it is never smarty; a trifle egotistical, in its way it is as frank and unabashed as Cellini's. Those who like Marie Dressler's acting will like 'The Life Story of an Ugly Duckling'; those that don't will have less excuse than ever for their ignorance of a wholesome, whole-hearted actress." J: Carter

+ — N Y Times p5 O 26 '24 1300w

"Marie Dressler must have enjoyed herself hugely in the writing of her autobiography, and perhaps that is why most of us will enjoy reading it. Only at times is this mood a little overdone." L. L. Hess

+ — N Y Tribune p11 Ja 11 '25 440w
Outlook 138:608 D 10 '24 60w

DREWRY, JOHN ELDRIDGE. Some magazines ^{2} and magazine makers. 237p $2 Stratford

071 Periodicals 24-21959

Dividing American magazines into the three classes, informative, entertaining and specialized and trade journals, the author selects the principal periodicals in each group and characterizes them as to field covered, nature of appeals, departments, special features, contributors, etc., giving a brief history of each and the name of its editor. A section of the book is given to sketches of great writers and editors.

"A book such as John E. Drewry has achieved has long been needed."

+ Lit R p13 Ja 3 '25 150w

"Dull details are omitted, but in a sketchy way he gives abundant facts about each group and each publication with which he deals."

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 4 '25 440w
Outlook 138:513 N 26 '24 50w

DRINKWATER, JOHN. Patriotism in literature. (Home univ. lib. of modern knowledge) 255p $1 Holt [2s 6d Williams & N.]

801 Patriotism. Patriotic poetry 24-20165

This is an essay on patriotism, with illustrations from literature, rather than a patriotic anthology. The quotations in prose and verse, are mostly from English authors. Contents: Public patriotism—the statesman; Public patriotism—the soldier; Private patriotism—the citizen; Patriotism of place; The exiles; The rebels; Conclusion; Note on books; Index.

DRINKWATER, JOHN—Continued

"His little book is reasoned out calmly and carefully, and is worthy of thoughtful reading by all good citizens who realize how complex and paradoxical their relations to the state many times appear to them."
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 13 '24 350w

"The book as it is has its interest, but I am sorry that Mr. Drinkwater did not write the one which I had hoped for on patriotic literature. I was really astonished, after reading this book, to find how extraordinarily difficult it is to scrape together even a small number of pieces of patriotic prose and poetry which have any literary merit." Leonard Woolf
+ — Nation and Ath 35:322 Je 7 '24 870w

"What Mr. Drinkwater's book is it would be difficult to say. For 'literature' we must read 'English poetry and prose, especially modern,' and for 'patriotism' we might substitute 'sentiment, either affectionate or disgustful, about place.' The only part of his book which has any value—and that is slight enough—is the chapter which Mr. Drinkwater calls Patriotism of Place, by which he means that ardent love for particular localities which may spring up in people who have not the least filial relation to the place." R. E. R.
— + New Statesman 23:549 Ag 16 '24 1600w

"Mr Drinkwater's book is not a collection of quotations, though there are several liberal quotations from his own plays. It is the better for that. It is thoughtful throughout, and should provoke thought in the reader."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a S 7 '24 750w

"The fact is that while Mr. Drinkwater has included many fine things and many that will be new to most of his readers, he has been too easy in including many poems that have 'no proper reason for existing' here."
— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p432 Jl 10 '24 1200w

DRINKWATER, JOHN. Victorian poetry. (Doran's modern readers book-shelf) 236p $1.25 Doran
821.09 English poetry 24-9113

A brief study of the poetical characteristics of the Victorian age which distinguish it from the great ages that preceded it. Both the material and the manner of Victorian poetry are studied, chiefly thru the work of Tennyson, Browning, Arnold, Swinburne, Rossetti and Morris.

"The first portion is particularly noteworthy—it is a keen critical analysis of the stuff that poetry is made of, and word values are weighed with delicacy and precision that betray the craftsman. All of it is written simply and colloquially to interest the casual reader as well as the professional writer, and there are passages of insight and appreciation such as only a poet could write."
+ Bookm 59:356 My '24 150w

"Mr. Drinkwater has written an illuminating and provocative volume which deserves well of lovers of Victorian poetry." J. J. R.
+ Cath World 119:569 Jl '24 180w

Lit R p764 My 17 '24 480w

Reviewed by Robert Graves
Nation and Ath 34:492 D 29 '23 1400w

"Not merely loyal Tennysonians, but all who in an authoritative criticism of poetry properly expect a wide knowledge of it, a catholic enjoyment of all kinds, with no prejudices of schools or cliques, sensitive taste, sure judgment, along with a richly-nurtured humanity, will thank Mr. Drinkwater for his entirely admirable book." R: Le Gallienne
+ N Y Times p3 Je 29 '24 2300w

"It is evident that with the space at his disposal Mr. Drinkwater could not give more than a bird's-eye view of the period, and by concentrating on a few of the chief figures—Tennyson, Browning, and in a lesser degree Swinburne—he has cleared the way for a sound appreciation."
The Times [London] Lit Sup p10 Ja 3 '24 150w

DRINKWATER, JOHN, ed. Anthology of English verse. 368p $2 Houghton [6s Collins]
821.08 English poetry—Collections 24-24256

Mr Drinkwater's anthology contains poems from Chaucer to Swinburne, with a very few selections from contemporary poets. The first section of the book consists of a small gathering of lyrics, the second is given to reflective and elegiac verse, and the third to some longer and narrative poems.

"Mr. Drinkwater's choice among the moderns is disputable, but on the whole he has made such an attractive little book that one hesitates to quarrel with him on minor issues." Babette Deutsch
+ — Lit R p5 N 1 '24 200w
Nation and Ath 35:186 My 10 '24 100w

"Mr. Drinkwater avowedly sets out to provide the unlearned reader with a 'representative selection' of English poetry. No doubt it is impossible for an anthology to get born without some potent uninvited spirit appearing to cast a curse on it. But with all allowances, may we not reasonably ask on what sort of 'representative' system Mr. Drinkwater excludes, for instance, Christina Rossetti, Mrs. Browning (who did, after all, write same great poetry), Coventry Patmore and James Thomson, in favour of 'Rule Britannia' and John Collop?" F. L. Lucas
— New Statesman 23:194 My 24 '24 250w

"There are some notable omissions, as, for example, Shelley's 'To a Skylark'; and Donne. Blake and Burns seem rather inadequately represented. On the whole, however, it is a solidly satisfactory volume." G. H. Busey
+ — N Y Tribune p10 N 16 '24 300w

"In lyrical excellence no new collection is likely to equal the original edition of the 'Golden Treasury.' But the richness and diversity of English verse are so great that a new classification or mere individual taste may be a proper basis for proceeding with new anthologies. Moreover, little-known writers of the 17th and 18th centuries are still being brought upon the stage of discussion and recognition. Mr Drinkwater does not eschew narrative and elegy and he mingles well the more and less familiar."
Springf'd Republican p10 D 17 '24 250w

DRINKWATER, JOHN, ed. Outline of literature, a plain story simply told. 3v v 2 & 3 299-686; 687-1136p il ea $4.50 Putnam
809 Literature—History and criticism (23-10548)

The second volume of the "Outline of literature" is devoted chiefly to English literature, from Shakespeare to Shelley and Keats, with chapters on French literature in the age of Louis XIV and of the French revolution, and another chapter on Goethe, Schiller and Lessing. The third volume covers the nineteenth and early twentieth century writers. Beginning with Scott, Dumas and Hugo the history deals with the early and late Victorians, French writers of the nineteenth century, the New England writers and contemporary writers, English, American and European. There are numerous illustrations, some of them in color.

Booklist 20:129 Ja '24 (Review of v 2)
Booklist 20:331 Je '24

"Of permanent literary and biographical value."
Bookm 59:87 Mr '24 200w
Bookm 60:235 O '24 220w

"This entire series of three volumes is admirable, with its complete index, for reference, and its illustrations in themselves give an excellent pictorial survey of the literary epochs of the world." E. F. E.
+ Boston Transcript p6 Je 7 '24 450w

+ Cath World 118:858 Mr '24 350w (Review of v 3)

"Does not altogether bear out the promise of the first. It is less comprehensive and more definitely national in design." H: L. Stuart

— + Lit R p660 Ap 12 '24 600w (Review of v 2)

R of Rs 69:671 Je '24 100w

DRISCOLL, LOUISE. Garden grace. 132p $1.25 Macmillan

811 24-7136

Poems that sing the grace and glory of gardens from springtime to the first snow.

"Miss Driscoll sticks to the accustomed forms and attempts no elaborate rhythms—but then, neither do the birds. Let us take the book for what is, a succession of lightly charming poems, which may assuage that spring hunger to get out and dig." M. E. P.

+ Boston Transcript p1 My 24 '24 300w

Cleveland p70 S '24

Reviewed by L. C. Woodman

Lit R p990 Ag 23 '24 100w

N Y Times p13 Jl 27 '24 300w

"Her poems are veritable hymns of nature's moods and her pictures are lovely and clear-cut and satisfying. She sketches with the delicacy of a pastellist and her taste is sound and elevated. The collection is marred only by two things—a certain monotony of manner and a carelessness in construction." B. S. Wagstaff

+ — N Y Tribune p26 Ap 27 '24 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p503 Ag 14 '24 150w

DRURY, SAMUEL SMITH. Backbone, the development of character. 216p $1.50 Macmillan

170 Conduct of life 23-18002

Twenty talks to young people on the development of character or backbone, by the headmaster of St. Paul's school, Concord. They are addressed to all sorts of boys and girls in their teens. "If any reader wonders," Dr Drury says, "what these papers are—whether they are talks or essays or sermons, whether they are secular or religious—I reply that I never know where confidential friendly advice leaves off and where a sermon begins, because I do not recognize any line between. I am simply concerned with the application of truth to life."

"What he says is so vital, so fundamental, for upright, efficient, wholesome living and is said so sanely and so lucidly that for parents and teachers and elders generally it will be encouraging and illuminating."

+ N Y Times p26 Ja 6 '24 400w

"The author speaks to boys and girls in a sympathetic and understanding manner. Parents and teachers should find the series of twenty talks an aid in meeting problems of character development. The language is such as to be readily understood by all. The book should make a decidedly popular appeal." C. V. Good

+ School R 32:472 Je '24 580w

DU BOIS, WILLIAM EDWARD BURGHARDT. Gift of black folk; the negroes in the making of America; introd. by Edward F. McSweeney. (Knights of Columbus racial contribution ser.) 349p $2 Stratford

326 Negroes 24-17975

"This essay is an attempt to set forth more clearly than has hitherto been done the effect which the Negro has had upon American life. Its thesis is that despite slavery, war and caste, and despite our present Negro problem, the American Negro is and has been a distinct asset to this country and has brought a contribution without which America could not have been; and that perhaps the essence of our so-called Negro problem is the failure to recognize this fact." (Foreword) Dr Du Bois shows how the Negro helped in the discovery of America, furnished the first great labor force of the new world, served in all its wars, influenced a broader democracy, contributed to literature and art and brought a "peculiar spiritual quality" into American life.

"He has told the story of the Negro so often that his interest in history seems perfunctory, but he has the gift of style and of polemic."

— + Bookm 60:357 N '24 130w

"It is almost ungrateful to point out faults or omissions or errors (many of them due to careless proof reading). The book reads at times as thrillingly as a novel; it is never uninteresting or dull. If there were some way by which every citizen of these United States could be made to read and comprehend it sympathetically most of the myths about racial superiority and inferiority would evaporate overnight." Walter White

+ — N Y Tribune p12 S 21 '24 950w

R of Rs 70:448 O '24 120w

DUCHESNE, LOUIS MARIE OLIVIER. Early history of the Christian church, from its foundation to the end of the fifth century; tr. by Claude Jenkins. v 3, The fifth century. 555p $6 Longmans [21s Murray]

270.1 Church history—Primitive and early

"The concluding volume in the translation of this scholarly and accurate history. The fifth century is known 'as the century of the Fathers of the Church' and this volume discusses the controversies and influence of Jerome, Augustine, Chrysostom, Cyril and Theodoret."—Booklist

Booklist 21:135 Ja '25

"This third volume of Mgr. Duchesne's great work has interest for Protestants and for members of the Latin church alike. An exhaustive index of some eighty-five pages has been added by Mr. Jenkins who, as translator, was more concerned with faithfulness to the original text than with the attainment of a smooth English style. The book is decidedly readable, nevertheless." R. B. M.

+ Boston Transcript p1 S 6 '24 470w

"No work of the distinguished French prelate is more distinctive of his special genius. His minute knowledge of the fifth century gives his comments the peculiar flavor that might be looked for in the words of one who was an actor in the scenes he describes." P. J. H.

+ — Cath World 119:852 S '24 480w

"He has done his work well. Here and there a sentence seems to have lost its meaning, but Duchesne's great virtues, his gifts of lucid arrangement, firm judgement and clear—often dramatic—narrative are as conspicuously displayed in English as in French. Nor does his demure irony evaporate."

+ New Statesman 23:388 Jl 5 '24 900w

"One may agree or disagree with his conclusions, but the mass of digested facts which he presents excites the wonder of the reader at the enormous labors of his task and his mastery of the source materials which he abundantly quotes."

+ — N Y Times p14 Ag 31 '24 1950w

"We cannot call this a good translation. But, to make amends, Dr. Jenkins has fitted the volume with a most desirable equipment, which the original lacks—a copious index. As he considerately gives the pagination of the original in the margin, the index will serve for that also, and is worthy of standing beside it on a shelf."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p428 Jl 10 '24 1300w

DUDENEY, ALICE (MRS HENRY ERNEST DUDENEY). Finger-post. 323p $2 Minton, Balch & co.

24-31100

The Durrants, large, handsome, steady, were known thruout the country for their skill as

DUDENEY, ALICE—Continued
thatchers. Therefore when the youngest son, Joseph, proved to be a weakling apparently in mind and body, he was made the subject of ridicule not only by his own family, but by the whole town. The lad with the misshapen body had a singular craving for beauty and vowed he would earn money enough to buy beautiful things. So he starts to work for Mr Coombes, the builder, and becomes a business man. He works diligently, saves money and in time becomes a property owner. Henry, his brother, meanwhile marries beautiful Rose Coombes, whom Joseph passionately loved, and has to depend upon Joseph for a living. Joseph realizes his dreams—he buys beautiful things, a great many for his large, fair-haired mother, but thru a horrible tragedy Joseph's triumphs come to an abrupt end and Henry becomes master of Lone Brow.

Boston Transcript p6 O 29 '24 400w
Ind 113:401 N 15 '24 260w

"'The Finger-Post' is a strong story, well told, with a character study of one man which alone would make the book worth while." Madelin Leof
+ Lit R p4 N 22 '24 750w

"Mrs. Dudeney has drawn an effective character in Joseph. Besides the ruthlessness, meanness, and secret depravity which much modern fiction teaches us to expect in the peasantry, he has a curious strain of generosity and sensibility which makes him, though dreadful and deplorable, also human and convincing." L. P. Hartley
+ Nation and Ath 34:382 D 8 '23 150w
N Y Times p8 S 14 '24 700w

"Done with her accustomed thoroughness and fidelity to detail, and a penetrant understanding of elemental human emotions and passions. But, like most of her many predecessors in this narrow field, she makes a grim business of it, though she is not neglectful of some of the lighter phases of the thing."
+ — N Y Tribune p14 S 21 '24 370w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e S 14 '24 100w

"The story is not cheerful, but it has subtle knowledge of human nature and underlying power, as well as faithful local coloring."
+ Outlook 138:258 O 15 '24 80w

"A pleasant and readable novel of provincial England by a writer who evidently knows and understands the people and the customs of the Sussex countryside."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:169 O 4 '24 220w

"Interesting reading, though people who like sanity will find it painful."
+ — Spec 132:93 Ja 19 '24 100w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p838 N 29 '23 100w

DUKES, ASHLEY. Youngest drama. 187p $2.50 C. H. Sergel & co., 542 S. Dearborn st., Chicago [8s 6d Benn]
809.2 Drama [23-18962]

A study of contemporary drama which includes the work of fifty of the younger dramatists, chiefly British and European, with two Americans. The first section is devoted to the group of forerunners, some of them dramatists of the last generation, to whom the impulse of the youngest drama is due.

"These studies of Mr. Dukes are fragmentary. They are evidently passages lifted from reviews of single plays. They contain many sentences very keen-edged in meaning and felicitous in phrasing but not likely to convey much to one who has not a fairly intimate acquaintance with the subject under discussion. What is remarkable about Mr. Dukes's little book is the fine catholicity of his appreciation." Ludwig Lewisohn
+ — Nation 118:592 My 21 '24 700w

"Mr. Dukes is a welcome explorer, gifted with the indispensable faith in there being always something worth discovering just over the next ridge of hills. And this is all to the good. With courage, but no very highly-developed sense of direction, he has found his way hurriedly across the well-mapped lands of Becque and Ibsen and Galsworthy, plunged into several of the most outlandish territories of the modern Continental drama, rapidly acquired a general idea of what their habitants are up to, and, jotting down contours of the more conspicuous peaks and watersheds, has emerged with an entertaining and provocative survey of the whole terrain." H. M.
+ — New Statesman 22:455 Ja 26 '24 900w

"His book wears rather the air of a bundle of occasional papers on plays than an intensely synthesized study of tendency, organically illuminated by examples. The result is, in a sense, an anthology of sensitive, intelligent, but highly impressionistic comment, which leaves the theatre very much where it was before."
— + N Y Times p8 Je 15 '24 1100w
St Louis p348 O '24
The Times [London] Lit Sup p871 D 13 '23 550w
Theatre Arts Mo 8:649 S '24 220w

DU MAURIER, GERALD. See Parsons, H., pseud.

DUNBAR, IANTHE M. Edge of the desert. 148p ^{2} il $4.50 Small [12s 6d Allan]
916.1 Tunis [24-21417]

"Starting from Tunis the author goes, sometimes by motor and sometimes by train, to Sousse and Sfax and on to a beautiful oasis and its towns, thence to Gabes and round about its neighborhood, and finally back to Tunis. It is a region fairly well known to such modern tourists as are rather more venturesome than the general run of travelers."—N Y Times

"Miss Dunbar went quietly and thoughtfully through the native parts, sketching and making observations, and there is a sharp and just quality about them, combined with a unpretentious grace of feeling that is most agreeable." H. J. Massingham
+ Nation and Ath 34:sup408 D 8 '23 50w

"Miss Dunbar's book is as flooded with color and romance as the bazaars of which she writes are soaked with sunshine."
+ N Y Times p21 D 21 '24 330w

"A pleasant, friendly book descriptive of that part of Tunis which is, as it were, the suburb of the desert." Blair Niles
+ N Y Tribune p13 Ja 11 '25 450w

DUNHILL, ALFRED. Pipe book. 262p il $7.50 ^{2} Macmillan [18s Black]
394 Tobacco pipes. Smoking

The author describes an infinite variety of pipes—both as to shapes and material, picturing them in twenty-eight full-page plates and 240 illustrations in the text. He treats the pipes of different lands and peoples as well as smoking customs and symbolism. Separate chapters are given to Indian pipes, pipes of the far north and the Far East, African pipes, some choice European pipes and the modern briar.

"Mr. Dunhill, himself a famous maker of new pipes and collector of old ones, had a rich field before him when he set out to write 'The Pipe Book.' The result of his labor is a body of most fascinating information conveyed with great clarity and illustrated with plates which in many cases must make an appreciative mouth water." Mark Van Doren
+ Nation 120:96 Ja 28 '25 780w

"No man who loves his pipe can fail to be interested in Mr. Dunhill's book, and most of them will be amazed by it. Certainly we were amazed to learn of the infinite variety of pipes. All these are admirably illustrated in Mr. Dunhill's book by photographs and drawings."
+ Nation and Ath 36:226 N 8 '24 130w

"The name Dunhill has been for some time associated with pipes in the minds of right-smoking men, and will henceforth extend its association therewith to those who combine respect for serious literature with serious respect for smoking."
+ New Statesman 24:306 D 13 '24 540w

"You do not need to be a smoker of pipes, or of tobacco in any form, to enjoy this beautifully made and attractive book. If you like to be entertained and instructed by unique and out-of-the-way information about any sort of human pleasures and foibles, and interests, you will probably find it a fascinating volume, whatever may be your attitude toward Lady Nicotine. For this is a book of facts about tobacco pipes, an amazing number and variety of facts that carry the reader all over the world and range for him up and down the centuries through hundreds of years and all stages of civilization."
+ N Y Times p26 Ja 4 '25 650w

DUNLAP, ORRIN ELMER. Radio manual. 267p $2.50 Houghton
654.1 Radio communication 24-12756

"Mr. Dunlap has dealt with the historic and romantic as well as the technical aspect of radio. In his capacity as radio editor of the New York 'Times' he has answered thousands of questions on the subject, and he evidently had the answers to these questions in mind in planning his book. It will appeal to every type of radio follower, from the casual listener to the man who sits up most of the night to get the greatest distance from his receiver. Sections of the book interesting to one or the other class are skilfully alternated, and emphasis is shifted from time to time to satisfy each type of fan."—Bookm

"The material is up to date and offers a vast reservoir of information for the new radio fan as well as the experimenter who gets his greatest pleasure from radio by assembling and disassembling sets." W: R. Boehnel
+ Bookm 60:347 N '24 500w

"A radio book must be unusually clear in its presentation of facts and must contain a rich store of descriptions of the more interesting features. Mr. Dunlap has met these difficult requirements in his recent 'Radio Manual' in an unusually successful way." A. M. Goldsmith
+ N Y Times p2 Jl 13 '24 750w

DUNN, JOSEPH ALLAN ELPHINSTONE. Water-bearer. 312p $2 Dodd
24-3536

"The scene is laid in the city of Golden, Cal., and the hero and principal character of the book 'The Water-Bearer' of its title, is a young civil engineer, Caleb Warner from New England. Having been born on the 21st of January, about the time when 'the sun enters the Zodiac sign of Aquarius, the water-Bearer,' he had decided to specialize on water. And to Golden the question of water was an extremely serious one, for the city was fast outgrowing its water supply, and there seemed no way of increasing it. Caleb Warner however quickly saw how it could be done, and demonstrated the practicability of his plans to the entire satisfaction of every one, except the man who was his violent enemy. There is a girl, of course, Betty Clinton. The same enemy who tried to upset Caleb's water supply arrangements also tried to interfere between him and Betty Clinton, but, needless to say, he was foredoomed to failure." —N Y Times

Booklist 20:299 My '24

"The whole idea, with its skillful solution, is one of unusual interest, and the author handles it well. But we must repeat that Mr. Dunn debases his idea with a fable of which one can only repeat the scant praise that it assumes the proportions of bad melodrama told rather well."
+ — Boston Transcript p4 Ap 9 '24 350w

"While 'The Water-Bearer' is moderately entertaining, it lacks both that individuality of style and succession of thrilling incident necessary to make it truly interesting." H. P. P.
— Lit R p873 Jl 5 '24 160w

"A moderately entertaining little story developed along thoroughly familiar lines. There are a good many technical and, to the lay reader, somewhat intricate descriptions of engineering feats scattered throughout the book."
— + N Y Times p9 F 17 '24 400w

Outlook 136:402 Mr 5 '24 80w

Springf'd Republican p8 Mr 14 '24 300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p733 N 13 '24 120w

Wis Lib Bul 20:97 Ap '24

DUNSANY, EDWARD JOHN MORETON DRAX PLUNKETT, 18th baron. King of Elfland's daughter. 301p $2 (7s 6d) Putnam
24-24254

The wise men of the land of Erl demanded of their king the rule of a magic lord. So the old king summoned his son, Averic, and sent him on a mission to Elfland. He was to wed Lirazel, the king of Elfland's daughter. Armed with a magic sword Averic overcame all dangers and returned to Erl with his bride. As the years went by the king of Elfland grew lonesome and sent a powerful rune to his daughter in the land of Erl and when she read it she was once more in Elfland. And more years went by and the people of Erl became much interested in magic. There came a day when the horns of Elfland were heard blowing in the land of Erl and Elfland passed over the land so that the inhabitants of Erl dreamed peacefully in the calm of Elfland. But the land of Erl was no longer known to man.

Booklist 21:111 D '24

"A strange and beautiful book, wanting in the extremes of terror or of farce found respectively in 'The Laughter of the Gods' and in parts of 'Don Rodriguez' but with all their sorcery; few primary colors here, but pastels, and the deep blue of the night sky." E. A. Niles
+ — Ind 113:550 D 20 '24 340w

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas
Lit R p3 O 18 '24 700w

"Delicate, imaginative and persuasive. In the fantasy there is no hint of terror, the magic is a white magic, the enchanted light that touches both worlds is soft and benign." Forrest Reid
+ Nation and Ath 35:448 Jl 5 '24 70w

"The story of how Alaric of Erl married the Elf-King's daughter is a simple story fit for an old man to tell in simple language on an early evening. But it is a dangerous story to be written in a book. For it is made up of the inexpressible moods and magics that children know, yet it is not written for children."
New Repub 40:233 O 29 '24 180w

"On the broad expanse of 300-odd pages of consecutive narrative, his style becomes affected, precious, and for this reason 'The King of Elfland's Daughter' seems to be more like a bag of verbal tricks than the genuine fairy tale that it pretends to be."
— N Y Times p9 O 12 '24 650w

" 'The King of Elfland's Daughter' cannot be read to children; it is too grown up for them; and, despite its indubitable appealing poetic quality, it is likely to seem not quite grown up enough for most grownups."
— Outlook 138:338 O 29 '24 100w

"Children would be delighted by the book, but adults should find it a source of unique enjoyment."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:186 O 11 '24 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p402 Je 26 '24 400w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p466 Jl 24 '24 30w

DURAND, MORTIMER HENRY MARION. Sincérité. 305p $2 (7s 6d) Longmans
24-22947

"Deals with the awful effect on a house party of the consumption of a burgundy called 'Sincérité.' The dictum, in vino veritas, is emphasized by this beverage, which appears to have a peculiar effect in revealing the subconscious self. Murder, the pursuit of the murderer, and a terrifying ghost all play their part in this entertaining melodrama."—Spec

"It is an ingenious and entertaining detective story."
+ Boston Transcript p8 D 6 '24 320w

"This is a cleverly executed divertissement, rather elaborately staged and costumed, but fairly successful."
+ — Lit R p9 N 1 '24 80w

"A most promising first book." J: Franklin
+ New Statesman 24:269 D 6 '24 250w

"Mr. Durand, whose name is new to me, is as subtle as anyone needs to be—at any rate in the sort of story he has set himself to tell. He has wit, a sense of character and a feeling for plot; he has indulged these gifts in the concoction of a fantastically, hilariously improbable tale." Gerald Gould
+ Sat R 138:527 N 22 '24 80w

"A very original first novel."
+ Spec 133:750 N 15 '24 70w

"He entertains agreeably, turns a neat phrase, but not too often sees a bit of the humor of things, isn't especially worried about technical difficulties—in short, he is a companionable fellow in print."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 4 '25 250w

"Mr. Durand is to be congratulated, not only on the genuine surprise he keeps up his sleeve, but also on the bright and engaging manner in which his vividly differentiated house-party prepare the way for it."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p653 O 16 '24 100w

DUTTON, CHARLES JACKSON. House by the road. 313p $2 Dodd
24-6683

A chance witness who is already in a mood of nervous apprehension after a nerve-wracking drive thru a stormy night over unfamiliar and dangerous roads, stumbles upon a mysterious murder. Because he is himself held under suspicion, he sends for his friend, a noted criminal psychologist, who comes to the rescue, and finally takes charge of the case as a detective. In the working out of a solution of the crime, people and events are treated as so much laboratory material. There is little attempt to dramatize situations, but the interest of the reader is focused upon the skill with which all the contributing elements are combined and the experiment successfully concluded.

Cleveland p43 Je '24
Lit R p970 Ag 16 '24 100w

"Well written, with several tense moments and more than one thrilling episode, Mr. Dutton's new mystery story suffers from a weakness of motivation."
+ — N Y Times p22 Mr 30 '23 400w
Springf'd Republican p7a My 25 '24 200w

E

EAGLE, SOLOMON, pseud. See Squire, J: C.

EASON, ALEX BIRKS. Prevention of vibration and noise. (Oxford technical publications) 164p il $5 Oxford [15s Milford]
534 Vibration. Sound [23-13771]

"On sound insulation and prevention of vibration in structures and machinery—a field in which information is relatively scanty. The author has surveyed and summarized the existing literature."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:69 F '24

EAST, EDWARD MURRAY. Mankind at the crossroads. 360p $3.50 Scribner
312 Population. Food supply 23-13779
For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

"Among the books of the same general character which have appeared during the past few years this is the newest and perhaps the best. While we may not be able to accept all of the views presented the most careless person must recognize the importance of the problems discussed. The treatment is, in the opinion of the reviewer, sane, comprehensible and practical."
+ Am J of Public Health 14:148 F '24 1100w

"The entire book is written in a style that is not lacking in brilliancy, though erring somewhat on the side of dogmatic finality." F. H. Hankins
+ — Am J Soc 29:612 Mr '24 950w
Am Pol Sci R 18:202 F '24 240w

"Among the numerous volumes on Malthusianism that have appeared in the last few years this is the strongest and best." E. M. Patterson
+ Ann Am Acad 114:164 Jl '24 300w

"'Mankind at the Crossroads' is a valuable contribution to social study. It deserves careful consideration from all students of social problems, and from all those who plead to an interest in social welfare." G. O. M.
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Ja 20 '24 800w

Reviewed by C: W. Gould
Int Bk R p266 Mr '24 2750w

"Professor East is an unusually good specimen of the present day American bio-sociologist. That is to say, he makes a wide survey, assembles a large number of more or less related facts, some of them startling, throws out incidental pieces of dogmatism on matters in regard to which he is not well informed, and quotes many writers without warning the reader against such of them as are misleading or wholly worthless. Professor East is a serious student, and in falling into the current vices of his tribe does injustice to his own powers, which are considerable."
— + New Statesman 22:552 F 16 '24 340w

"Professor East would be a more impressive writer if he pitched the claims of science a little lower, avoided a rather elephantine flippancy, and were less ready to throw out casual judgments on politics, philosophy and history not necessary to his theme and showing little evidence of knowledge on these specialized subjects."
— Spec 132:644 Ap 19 '24 400w

"He has the advantage of combining with his interest in demography and biological trends considerable knowledge of world agriculture and food resources, but he shares with other prophets of calamity a certain lack of imagination or of faith in the power of a society to adjust itself to new circumstances." B. L.
+ — Survey 52:105 Ap 15 '24 550w

EAST and west: the confessions of a princess. 296p $2 Seltzer [7s 6d Jarrolds]
24-17261

This is the romance of a beautiful English woman who was destined to become the wife of a Burmese prince. Her mother, while the princess was yet a child, made the acquaintance of Prince Mindoon and by clever scheming later married her to him. In her new rôle as princess this English girl meets many celebrities and comes into contact with a dazzling life. Her love for her husband prompts her to thrust aside such rumors as are abroad from time to time concerning his infidelities. During a sojourn in England the princess meets St John Audries. The outcome of this meeting is the beginning of a heartrending tragedy which opens her eyes to her husband's true character and her life as a Burmese princess comes abruptly to a close.

"Those who love to feel the pulse of adventure undoubtedly beating in this so-called prosaic world of ours will be enchanted with these anonymous memoirs. Literary form they lack. The Princess details the events of her life as they happened, in straight narrative style of notes or conversation. It is a pleasant enough story, with many climaxes and so many peaks of interest that the reader's attention is always held tight and fast." Madelin Leof

+ — Lit R p948 Ag 9 '24 450w

"Apart from the fact that this theme is one that might have been invented by any third-rate fictionist, the story is told with but little vividness and with but small attention to specific detail on those occasions when specific detail is particularly necessary. The book abounds in inconsistencies and incongruities that are distressing when they are not merely comic."

— N Y Times p2 Ag 17 '24 550w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p81 F 7 '24 120w

EATON, RICHARD. Under the red flag. 262p il $2.50 Brentano's

914.7 Bolshevism—Russia. Russia—Description and travel 24-11784

"Mr. Eaton's is one of those true stories of Russian prison life. Sent to Soviet Russia by 'The Daily Mail' and 'Le Matin,' Mr. Eaton was mysteriously arrested and as mysteriously released after the usual Cheka horrors. He respects the potentialities of the land of his imprisonment enough to predict that within fifty years the Russian nation will be the most powerful on the Continent.' "—N Y Tribune

---

"In telling of his adventures Mr. Eaton makes one mistake. He writes hastily and eagerly, giving out facts and incidents to the readers of his book exactly as if Russian geography and Russian political centres were well known to Americans. His narrative moves almost too rapidly, though the tenth chapter is decidedly clear and pertinent. It is almost a pity that it was not inserted toward the beginning of the volume. . . He is thoughtful, logical and optimistic in these conclusions of his. His philosophy is discriminating. He has written a valuable book."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 My 28 '24 450w

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 23 '24 450w

N Y Tribune p27 Je 15 '24 100w

EATON, RICHARD, ed. Best continental short stories of 1923-1924, and The yearbook of the continental short story. 452p $2.50 Small

Short stories—Collections (25-765)

"The field of the short story anthology is here extended to include all of Europe. There are thirty stories in the volume, representing twenty-two nations, among the lot three from Latvia. Italy scores with two. There are two also from Rumania and three from Russia."—Lit R

"Mr. Eaton has performed a large task surprisingly well. The grouping appears hastily or carelessly done, as it is obviously at fault." Herschell Brickell

+ — Lit R p15 D 13 '24 250w

"The book has been thrown together with such carelessness that it is absolutely a curiosity rather than a more or less reliable guide to current short story writing as planned by Mr. O'Brien. His scheme is preserved, but the knowledge and qualifications necessary to follow out that scheme are wofully absent." Ernest Boyd

— N Y World p9e D 14 '24 650w

EATON, RICHARD, ed. Best French short [2] stories of 1923-1924; and the Yearbook of the French short story. 462p $2.50 Small

Short stories—Collections 24-29533

Twenty-one stories, by as many authors. Among the authors represented are Paul Bourget, Georges Duhamel, Claude Farrère, Paul Geraldy, R. H. Lenormand, Paul Morand, and the Brothers Tharaud. "The yearbook contains names and addresses of twenty-four magazines, all of them in Paris, publishing short stories; a biographical Role of Honor, filling eight pages, of notes concerning important French writers of short stories; titles and authors of seventeen volumes of the best French short stories published during the year and a more comprehensive similar list of forty-one volumes; a list of articles on the short story; a table of magazine averages, and an asterisked index of short stories published in French magazines."—N Y Times

---

"Mr. Eaton says in his preface that he has taken into account the American prejudice in favor of the story with a plot in making his selections; how far this influenced his choice I cannot say, but the stories are nearly all thoroughly readable and some deserve inclusion in the next set of short story masterpieces, which some enterprising publisher is sure to publish." Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p15 D 13 '24 250w

N Y Times p28 Ja 11 '25 600w

"The field is wide, the variety and contrasts are strong, and it affords capital illustration of the theory and practice of short-story writing abroad."

+ Outlook 138:690 D 24 '24 70w

EATON, WALTER PRICHARD. Actor's heritage. 294p il $4 Atlantic monthly

792 Theater. Actors and actresses 24-21607

In his "scenes from the theatre of yesterday and the day before" Mr Eaton ranges over the early English and American stage, bringing together entertaining gossip and comment about the actors and actresses, plays and audiences of those days. Among the figures and scenes he calls up are Thomas Holcroft, an eighteenth-century strolling player; some famous Shylocks; Sol Smith and the frontier theater; Macready in America; Colley Cibber as critic; bad manners of present-day theater audiences; and Weber and Fields burlesque. There are many interesting illustrations.

Booklist 21:99 D '24

N Y Times p6 S 14 '24 350w

Reviewed by Bernard Sobel

N Y Tribune p14 O 26 '24 950w

"It is directness and simplicity that gives Mr. Eaton's work its principal appeal. He uses no mystic terms and technicalities to get to the root of a fact or a hypothesis. But he does make use of a rare impishness of expression." Hugo Sonnenschein

+ N Y World p9e O 19 '24 520w

Reviewed by M. J. Moses

Outlook 138:508 N 26 '24 170w

St Louis p410 D '24

Springf'd Republican p10 D 19 '24 380w

"Throughout the entire volume Mr. Eaton is confiding and amusing. He never loses his temper, and (which is rare indeed in a man whose hobby is collecting from the past) never loses his optimism when facing the present." J: M. Brown

+ Theatre Arts Mo 8:790 N '24 520w

EBERLEIN, HAROLD DONALDSON. Manors and historic homes of the Hudson valley. 328p il $12 Lippincott

917.47 Hudson valley. New York (state)—Historic houses, etc.

Mr Eberlein shows how the history of the valley of the Hudson is inseparably bound up with the old houses that stand upon both banks of the river. He makes reference to the life

EBERLEIN, HAROLD DONALDSON—Cont. that went on in the historic homes of the two urban centres, New York and Albany, and emphasizes the social and economic system of the houses and estates and its subsequent effect upon the development of the state. The scope of this volume is confined to the east side of the Hudson, from New York to Rensselaer, and the west side from Albany to the New Jersey border. The book contains eighty-one double-tone illustrations mostly from photographs by the author.

Boston Transcript p6 N 22 '24 850w

"This is a beautiful and interesting book—and an irritating one. . . A valuable book none the less."

+ — N Y World p8e D 14 '24 200w

Outlook 138:691 D 24 '24 30w

EDAR, pseud. See Anthony, E:

EDDY, SHERWOOD. New world of labor. 216p $1.50 Doran

331.8 Labor and laboring classes 23-18420

A survey of the industrial situation and of conditions of labor based on a trip around the world during 1922 and 1923, in which the author visited China, Japan, India, Russia, Germany and the Ruhr, France, Italy and Great Britain. A questionnaire on the industrial situation was sent in advance to representatives of each country visited and information was gathered before arrival, which was afterward supplemented by inspection of factories, interviews with government officials, labor leaders, and employers. The expressed purpose of the book is "to win sympathy for the toiling masses in the new world of labor."

"Students of industrial relations will be interested chiefly in the first four chapters on China, Japan, India, and Russia, and in the final chapter which embodies the general conclusions. Here the author has made a definite contribution to the existing knowledge of labor problems." G. S. Watkins

+ Am Econ R 14:342 Je '24 460w

Booklist 20:247 Ap '24

Boston Transcript p2 F 2 '24 400w

Cleveland p56 Jl '24

Nation and Ath 35:786 S 27 '24 650w

"Though Mr. Eddy deals elaborately and thoroughly with Russia, what he has to say about labor is not so interesting as what he says about politics, for the reason that the labor discussions have been to some extent anticipated by other writers." C: W. Thompson

— + N Y Times p10 F 10 '24 1800w

Survey 51:709 Mr 15 '24 450w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p541 S 4 '24 150w

EDGINTON, MAY (MRS FRANCIS EVANS BAILY). Triumph. 304p $2 Holt [7s 6d Chapman & Dodd]

24-5802

Anna Land had worked hard from the time she was fifteen and at twenty-two was forewoman in the bindery of a printing house. At night she would return to the two rooms she called home and practice singing, accompanying herself on her really fine piano, her one luxury. She hoped one day to realize the finest that life had to offer, but she wanted to achieve it thru her own efforts. So when Bertie Silver, manager of the printing house, proposed marriage, she refused him. When King Garnet, the wealthy owner of the business, fell in love with her she refused him also. Step by step she climbed to success and became a prima donna. There came a time when, with voice and friends gone and poverty staring her in the face, she almost wavered. Then King Garnet, having lost one fortune and made another and gained his own soul in the process, came to her and together they "set out once more for the heights of the world."

"'Triumph' gives good measure of entertainment, some excellent characterization and an agreeably readable style."

+ Boston Transcript p13 Mr 29 '24 340w

"Fortunately for the reviewer, the majority of novels published have more to recommend them both of interest and of verisimilitude than is to be found in May Edginton's new story."

— N Y Times p9 Mr 9 '24 450w

"Precisely the sort of tale that would have brought delirious joy to the editor of the Fireside Companion in those bright years when that weekly journal of fictional ecstacies carried delight on the instalment plan to countless households of the Republic." E. W. Osborn

— N Y World p7e Je 1 '24 150w

"A story which, promising in the first pages to deal with the business problems of a great printing works, degenerates into an account of the downfall of a beggar on horseback."

— + Spec 131:662 N 3 '23 30w

"A sensational novel burdened with humorous melodramatic climaxes and overdrawn characters."

— Springf'd Republican p5a My 18 '24 180w

"In spite of many dexterous twists and turns, the moral or meaning of Triumph is excessively familiar."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p688 O 18 '23 400w

EGAN, MAURICE FRANCIS. Recollections of a happy life. 374p il $4 Doran

B or 92 24-28257

The book bears out its title, for the life described in these pages was full and evidently happy and it is told with urbanity and humor. Mr Egan's memories begin with Philadelphia in the fifties, shift to Washington in Civil war times, to New York in the eighties and finally to Denmark, where by President Roosevelt's appointment Mr Egan became American minister, holding the post thru three successive administrations. The book is crowded with names and personalities, gossip even, but of the most good-humored kind.

Reviewed by L: Bromfield

Bookm 60:494 D '24 220w

"His talk is bound to be interesting. This is the word to use of the late Maurice Francis Egan's 'Recollections of a Happy Life.' It was happy and the Saxon who reads his account of it wishes rather wistfully that his own race had the genius for happiness that seems to endue much of the Irish." J: H. Sedgwick

+ — Boston Transcript p5 N 22 '24 1550w

Reviewed by H. S. Gorman

Int Bk R p121 Ja '25 3200w

"Few American autobiographies have the urbanity, the breadth of viewpoint, the nice sense of what gossip to tell and what to omit, that one finds in Maurice Egan's 'Recollections of a Happy Life.' It is from first to last stimulating, graceful, genuinely amusing." J: Farrar

+ Lit R p2 N 22 '24 1400w

Reviewed by J: H. Finley

N Y Times p6 N 30 '24 2250w

"In view of the acrid, pessimistic memoirs that dot the flood of books, it is a treat to follow joyously the path of his life laid out in this last and perhaps most satisfactory volume of all that came from his fruitful pen." C: de Kay

+ N Y Tribune p5 D 14 '24 1050w

Reviewed by J: L. Heaton

N Y World p8e N 16 '24 900w

Outlook 138:653 D 17 '24 70w

EGGLESTON, MRS MARGARET W. Womanhood in the making. 199p $1.50 Doran

173 Girls 23-17915

A book for mothers and teachers on the training of girls during the adolescent period. It shows the needs and possibilities of girl life and how to use opportunities at the right time to develop the physical, mental and religious life of the girl. The underlying spirit of the book is religious and stress is laid on the need of Christian education. Contents: The building of the body during adolescence; The mental life in the making; Building the social life; The religious life in the making; A business woman in the making; The needs of the foreign-born girl; A leader in the making; A mother in the making; Bibliography.

"It would be impossible to over-estimate the value of this book to those who need it, or to over-praise the author who so intimately, delicately and helpfully touches upon vital subjects too often forbidden."
+ Boston Transcript p3 F 9 '24 280w

J Home Econ 16:145 Mr '24 100w

EICHLER, LILLIAN. Customs of mankind; with notes on modern etiquette and the newest trend in entertainment. 753p il $3 Nelson Doubleday

390 Manners and customs. Etiquet 24-20056

The book traces back to their origins the customs which we observe today—age-old habits handed down thru many generations, some of them based upon the fears and superstitions of primitive man. Going back to the early history of man and searching archeology, mythology and folklore and the sacred writings as its chief sources, the author traces back over the ages the beginnings of etiquet, the origin of speech, courtship, marriage and funeral customs, hospitality and entertainment, holiday customs and popular superstitions. The book is plentifully illustrated, in color and halftone, and indexed.

Booklist 21:136 Ja '25

"It would be evident from the ample bibliography with which the book closes that Miss Eichler has given long and patient study to the sources. But that is of a piece with her evident enthusiasm for the subject. And the skill with which she expounds the lore of custom through the ages adds to the strength of its popular appeal and should ensure for it a wide demand."
+ Boston Transcript p6 N 12 '24 450w

"Popular rather than scientific, 'The Customs of Mankind' is a record of many quaint and curious fragments of forgotten lore. The profuse and excellent illustrations add dignity and conviction, as well as historical perspective, to the work." J. T. Shipley
+ Lit R p8 N 1 '24 680w

"Bewilderingly comprehensive and almost as varied and fascinating as a dictionary. However, in a book meant for popular reading and offering instruction and entertainment upon such an immense number and variety of subjects, it would be too much to expect complete accuracy in them all."
+ — N Y Times p10 O 5 '24 1150w

Reviewed by Ernestine Evans
N Y Tribune p12 O 19 '24 450w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y World p8e N 16 '24 1500w

"The material is presented in readable and orderly fashion, and is of itself of such rich interest as to insure for Miss Eichler's book a large public."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:217 O 18 '24 280w

ELDRIDGE, SEBA. Political action; a naturalistic interpretation of the labor movement in relation to the state. (Lippincott's sociological ser.) 382p $2 Lippincott

320 Social psychology. Political science. Democracy

The book studies the effect of social factors —instincts, habits and traditions—on political action, with the purpose of determining whether the success of liberal democracy is possible. The author finds most of these factors unfavorable. The orderly progress of democracy requires two things: leaders, and an intelligent public opinion which shall be capable of recognizing the wisdom and justice of the policies presented by these leaders. Democracy has provided the ballot for expressing the popular will but not the means of forming a public will in accordance with reason and justice. Mr. Eldridge is therefore not hopeful about the results of political action.

"It is doubtless true that political behavior is more adequately approached in Eldridge than in Burgess' Political Science. The misleading title should, however, be supplemented by one which will indicate just what the reader will discover in the book." H. E. Barnes
+ — Am Pol Sci R 18:619 Ag '24 550w

"The book is a stimulating one and one which should challenge the attention of all interested in the social sciences." H. F. Gosnell
Ann Am Acad 114:165 Jl '24 350w

Boston Transcript p6 Ap 16 '24 300w

Cleveland p53 Jl '24

Reviewed by T. V. Smith
Int J Ethics 34:301 Ap '24 130w

"This book is a serious and in the main valuable attempt to apply what is known, or what is thought to be known, about social psychology to political theory in the hope of determining thereby what is possible in the peaceful and orderly progress of our democracy. There are not many books which fly in the face of more cherished American notions than this. But Mr. Eldridge is doubtless safe from the inquisitors by reason of his correctly academic and far from brilliant style." Norman Thomas
+ — Nation 118:374 Ap 2 '24 1000w

Reviewed by Hulsey Cason
New Repub 38:318 My 14 '24 450w

"All students of politics must unite in congratulating the author on his pioneer work of attempting to obtain an objective and scientific view of all of the forces making for fundamental social change, and of endeavoring to consider this problem in the light of the latest discoveries in economics, sociology and psychology." H. W. Laidler
+ Pol Sci Q 39:347 Je '24 750w

"It can not be said that the author's conclusions are optimistic, but at least they tend to stimulate the mind to a clearer conception of the true ends of democracy."
R of Rs 69:336 Mr '24 100w

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p307 My 15 '24 30w

ELIOT, CHARLES WILLIAM. Late harvest. 305p $3 Atlantic monthly

814 24-5843

This selection from the essays and addresses of President Eliot written by him between the ages of eighty and ninety opens with an autobiographical chapter on "How I have kept my health and working power till eighty." The papers that follow represent what he has done with this health and working power in the meantime. The essays are grouped under the following headings: Biographical and reminiscent; Human society; Education; Labor problems; Medicine and public health; Religion; The country and the world. A bibliography of President Eliot's writings between 1914 and 1924 is appended.

Booklist 20:331 Je '24

"Rich, substantial, commanding in contents and beautiful in binding, page and type." G: A. Gordon
+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 15 '24 3200w

"After his biographers have read all the pages composed by this master of words, this athlete of practicable ideas, they will still be obliged to simplify their problem into terms of character. They will, indeed, endeavor to explain Charles Eliot's dominance over his contemporaries by painting the portrait of a regnant figure, but they will also reveal to us the yearning, long-enduring, intense inner life of a lover of mankind." Bliss Perry
+ Lit R p626 Ap 29 '24 1200w

ELIOT, CHARLES WILLIAM—Continued
"In their style, clear, precise, unadorned, impressive through simplicity and conviction, they preserve an enduring memory of their author in that distinction of character and dignity of utterance in which he is the first American of his day." R. M. Lovett
+ New Repub 38:156 Ap 2 '24 1850w

Reviewed by H: B. Fuller
N Y Times p1 Mr 30 '24 1850w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:322 Je '24

R of Rs 59:560 My '24 130w

"The whole collection, 'A Late Harvest,' has that general appeal to young and old that justifies its appearance now as a special recognition of President Eliot's 90th birthday."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 20 '24 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 20:123 My '24

"As we face the grave perils which threaten Democracy from reactionaries on the one hand, and radicals on the other, we can all learn lessons of encouragement and inspiration from 'A Late Harvest,' which gives the mature thought of one of the most consistent and hopeful of the intellectual liberals of our generation." A. P. Stokes
+ Yale R n s 14:161 O '24 1800w

ELIOT, ETHEL AUGUSTA (COOK) (MRS SAMUEL ATKINS ELIOT, jr.). Buttercup days. 188p il $1.50 Doubleday
24-10259

"A real fairy tale wherein three children, playing on their own lawn on a Sunday afternoon, encounter a fairy and have a most interesting time with the little creature. And the next day Beth carried him to school in her pocket and then there were very exciting times, for some children could not see the fairy at all and some could see him at once. Interesting experiences of many kinds followed during the days Fairy Tim stayed with the children, and they learned from him a great number of fairy truths."—N Y Times

"The author of this book has a sure sense of what will charm children in fairy lore, as well as interest them by way of a continuous plot."
+ Lit R p891 Jl 12 '24 110w

"The author has had much experience with children and she writes for them with understanding and unusual appreciation of what will please them."
+ N Y Times p12 Jl 22 '24 110w

Reviewed by G. M. Goldman
N Y World p7e Je 8 '24 50w

ELLIOTT, GEORGE ROY, and FOERSTER NORMAN, eds. English poetry of the nineteenth century. 825p $3.50 Macmillan
821.08 English poetry—Collections 23-17365

"'English Poetry of the Nineteenth Century' is designed to give 'a connected representation of poetic art and thought from 1798 to 1914.' It is divided into three chronological sections including the poetry respectively of the earlier and the middle nineteenth century, and the later nineteenth and the early twentieth centuries. The poets who loom most conspicuously in English literature—Wordsworth, Byron, Shelley, Keats, Tennyson, Browning and the others—are the poets who are most extensively represented in its pages."—Boston Transcript

Booklist 20:258 Ap '24

Boston Transcript p6 D 22 '23 400w

"The volume is well suited to the needs of the college and university students. One does not often see a college text-book so attractively made as is this volume. It is a substantial and beautiful product of bookcraft." W. P. L.
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p10 F 17 '24 550w

"Our only objection to this volume is the manner in which it is bound. The compilation itself is thorough and scholarly."
+ — Lit R p414 D 29 '23 200w

"The book will be more valuable for high school work than for advanced study."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 11 '24 200w

ELLIOTT, MABEL EVELYN. Beginning again at Ararat; with an introd. by John H. Finley. 341p il $2 Revell
956 Armenian question. Near East relief. European war, 1914-1919—Hospitals, charities, etc. 24-4643

"Dr. Elliott went to the Near East as the representative of the 'American Women's Hospitals,' one of the American humanitarian activities connected with the war, and increasing in scope during 'the less dramatic but more terrible years of the peace.' Dr. Elliott's humanitarian work in the Near East was of four distinct periods: first at Marash in Anatolia and on the terrible retreat from there of the army and populace; second, at Ismid, in hospital and training school for nurses; third, in Trans-Caucasus; and lastly in Smyrna, devastated by both Greek and Turk. The present volume records the experiences of the first three periods. One thing, however, is common to them all—the revelation of a physical suffering of which we of the relatively happy Occident can have no true idea, unless, like Dr. Elliott, we have either witnessed or shared it."—Boston Transcript

Booklist 20:260 Ap '24

"More even than the story and analysis of epochal events is Dr. Elliott's chronicle. It is the revelation, unconsciously given, of a rarely dauntless spirit." F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p6 Ja 23 '24 1200w

"One can scarcely conceive of any person so hard-hearted as to read these tales of hideous brutality, of almost unbearable suffering without wishing to do something to stop the one and relieve the other."
N Y Times p15 Ja 20 '24 1500w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:334 Je '24

ELLIS, HAVELOCK. Impressions and comments; third (and final) series, 1920-1923. 241p $3 Houghton [12s Constable]
824 24-29669

The leaves from his journal which make up Havelock Ellis's third and final series of "Impressions and comments" cover a very wide diversity of themes, but they are all concerned, whatever the apparent topic, with the mysterious problem of man and of living. The author's philosophy of life is compressed into these detached and separate paragraphs of reflection.

Boston Transcript p6 D 17 '24 820w

"The style of these notes, affirmations, impressions that Havelock Ellis has now for some years been sending to the press is at times rich and satisfying, and at times, I think, a little thin and even vague." C: R. Walker
+ — Ind 113:550 D 20 '24 800w

Reviewed by Mark Van Doren
Nation 119:640 D 10 '24 1500w

"Sincere and beautiful books like this one are too seldom written to-day. These pages are full of tenderness and joy and sweet reasonableness."
+ Nation and Ath 36:418 D 13 '24 950w

"This is the third and unhappily the last volume of this engaging series of note-books—and, it may be confidently added, the best. Such personal records grow in richness as the soil which sustains them becomes deeper. Mr. Ellis is like a valley through which flows the stream of experience, physical, intellectual, aesthetic, which in its overflow leaves a constantly deepening alluvium." R. M. Lovett
+ New Repub 41:149 D 31 '24 1500w

Reviewed by J. D. Adams
N Y Times p9 D 21 '24 1400w

Reviewed by Carl Van Doren
N Y Tribune p1 D 14 '24 1400w

"These impressions and comments may not be sown in so deep a furrow as the major seeds which fall into the great, rolling lines of his thoughts. They are of that extra earth upturned by the plowshare, perhaps, but for me they are quite as brilliant, as fruitful, as beautiful as those others." Laurence Stallings

+ N Y World p9e N 23 '24 800w

"This book is mellow, graceful, tolerant, and often but not always wise."
+ Outlook 138:653 D 17 '24 80w

"Though the book is without plan or continuity it is held together by strong character and earnest convictions." Allen Monkhouse
+ Sat R of Lit 1:428 Ja 3 '25 1050w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p818 D 4 '24 980w

ELLIS, LUCY, and TURQUAN, JOSEPH. La belle Pamela (Lady Edward Fitzgerald). 484p il $6 Brentano's

B or 92 Fitzgerald, Pamela (Lady Edward Fitzgerald). Genlis, Stéphanie Félicité, comtesse de

"The biography of Pamela, natural daughter of Madame Genlis and the Duc d'Orléans." (Bookm) "As a record of the life of Lady Edward in her relations with her husband's family, with Mme. de Genlis and Philippe Egalité, and with her daughters, Pamela, Lady Campbell, and Mrs. Lucy Lyon, it is probably the last word on the subject. In the second part of the book, which is largely concerned with the position which Lady Edward occupied in the affections of the Fitzgeralds and of her children, Miss Ellis has had at her disposal various collections of family letters, many of which have not previously been published." (The Times [London] Lit Sup)

"'La Belle Pamela' is an interesting commentary on the morals and manners during the period of the French Revolution."
+ Bookm 60:510 D '24 100w

"In spite of blemishes, the story is absolutely interesting and even exciting, and the twenty-four portraits from paintings and miniatures by famous artists generally contemporary, and now belonging to various descendants of 'la Belle Pamela,' add greatly to the fascination of the book. It is indeed a romance in biography." N. H. Dole
+ — Boston Transcript p5 Ja 3 '25 2850w
Ind 113:381 N 8 '24 60w

"The background of the Palais-Royal and the routes of the émigrés of 1792-3 are lightly but surely drawn, but only one or two vivid spots stand out in the picture." D. B. Woolsey
Ind 113:522 D 13 '24 330w

"The book which Miss Ellis and M. Turquan have put together is no less than a genuine addition to the history of the closing years of the seventeenth century and the opening years of the eighteenth. As a whole it gives a vivid and unforgettable picture of political and social life when political and social life had not ceased to be arts."
+ N Y Times p5 O 12 '24 1950w

Reviewed by R. T. House
N Y Tribune p8 D 21 '24 240w

Reviewed by C. G. Bowers
N Y World p8e Ja 11 '25 1500w

"The searchlight thrown so mercilessly upon Mme. de Genlis—not to mention her interminable correspondence, memoirs and quotations from her books—reveals scandal too musty to be entertaining, and a bourgeoise hypocrisy of outlook that cannot but nauseate the observer by its pettiness and inadequacy. As history the book suffers from lack of construction; as biography from irrelevancies as romance from lack of wit and brevity."
— Spec 132:136 Jl 26 '24 200w

"Not only a moving story of Pamela's life, but, with regard to the connexion of Mme. de Genlis with the Orléans family and the French Revolution, and the part played by Lord Edward in the Irish Rebellion, an historical study of deep interest."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p415 Jl 3 '24 950w

ELSON, ROBERT. Morry. 383p $2 Small [7s 6d
2 Hutchinson]
24-23491

"Maurice Abramson, the chief character in the story, is a barrister of great ability in the English courts and his legal career offers a varied scope of cases—murder, national politics, down to the most trivial. Not only are the various aspects of each case shown, but the power and personality of 'Morry' as barrister and man are revealed."—Lit R

"An unusual story. 'Morry' just misses being something worth while, because it tries to be so many things at once."
— Boston Transcript p6 O 29 '24 320w

"It would seem an almost impossible thing to use a series of law cases as the basis of an interesting book. We might imagine such a book, but not in the sense of entertaining reading and related action. Robert Elson, however, has done the difficult thing and done it in such a way that 'Morry' proves to be an altogether commendable tale." E. S. Alexander
+ Lit R p10 N 1 '24 240w

"The intention is excellent, but perhaps the heights at which the author aimed are too elevated for success to have been probable."
— + N Y Times p22 D 14 '24 350w

"The movement never drags. The minor characters are also carefully done, although they are always kept subordinate to the heroic figure of the lawyer."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:186 O 11 '24 340w
Spec 132:252 F 16 '24 30w

ELVESTAD, SVEN CHRISTOFER SVENDSEN. Man who plundered the city; tr. by 2 Frederick H. Martens. 279p $2 McBride
24-29827

A mystery story which has its setting in the city of Christiana. A series of robberies committed by a thief of unusual audacity who tries to plunder the whole city keeps the chief of police and his cleverest detective, Asbjörn Krag, on tenter-hooks. The running down of the criminal reveals an involved network of crime and a most unusual motive underlying it.

"With this translation from the Danish, those readers of English fiction who are partial to tales of sleuthing and narratives of crime have a pleasant surprise awaiting them. Not only does a brand-new detective, known and approved for some time in European literature, await their discerning inspection, but one whose individuality is as distinctive as his birthplace." W. B.
+ Boston Transcript p4 D 13 '24 420w
N Y World p8e D 7 '24 140w

ELY, OWEN. Railway rates and cost of service. (Hart, Schaffner and Marx prize essays) 148p $2 Houghton

385 Railroads—Rates 24-9576

The aim of this study is to clear up the inconsistencies of railway rate-making and to develop a practical cost of service theory. The author sketches the work and policies of the Interstate commerce commission, and gives a brief résumé of recent rate regulation; analyzes the various rate theories advanced by students of transportation; presents a study of railroad operating costs as related to rates and an examination of the attempts made to develop a cost-accounting technique.

Management and Adm 8:602 Jl '24 120w
R of Rs 70:110 Jl '24 50w
Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 7 '24 180w

ELY, RICHARD THEODORE, and MOREHOUSE, EDWARD WARD. Elements of land economics. (Land economics ser.) 363p il $3.50 Macmillan

333 Land 24-10632

The book deals in an elementary but scientific way with land as an economic factor and

ELY, R: T., and MOREHOUSE, E: W.—Cont. lays a foundation of economic principles for the treatment of land as a commodity. Successive chapters deal with the characteristics and classification of land, its uses—urban, agricultural, mineral and forest—ownership of land, land credit, land values and valuation, the social ends of land utilization; policies of land settlement and development and of taxation. Illustrations include maps and diagrams. Bibliography. Index.

"This book is constructive and stimulating and a real contribution in the field of study relating to future development of the nation, as affected by the manner in which our natural resources are used and distributed among the people." A. H. Benton

+ Am Econ R 14:530 S '24 700w

Booklist 21:51 N '24

Cleveland p94 D '24

Reviewed by H. W. Jordan

Ind 113:132 Ag 30 '24 700w

"The 'Elements of Land Economics' is a book that all real estate men might well digest thoroughly. It is an excellent textbook for any student of economics. It contains illustrative pictures, maps and tables with valuable, up-to-date statistics."

+ N Y Times p16 Je 29 '24 500w

"He not only illuminates the whole subject of land economics, but illustrates its relation to the economics of labor, capital and management in the most significant and striking manner."

+ R of Rs 70:109 Jl '24 160w

ENFIELD, RALPH ROSCOE. Agricultural crisis, 1920-1923. 211p il $3.50 (10s 6d) Longmans

338.1 Agriculture—Economic aspects 24-12890

The book is an analysis of the causes and effects of the agricultural depression which has followed the war, both in England and in the United States. It is chiefly concerned with the prices and cost of production of agricultural products, the causes of their rise and fall during the last decade, and the question of price stabilisation.

Reviewed by R. G. Tugwell

Nation 119:420 O 15 '24 1250w

"Reasoned, temperate in statement, this book is a contribution to the study of agricultural problems, which breaks fresh ground and promises a fertile harvest of new ideas and new policies."

+ New Statesman 23:416 Jl 12 '24 650w

"R. R. Enfield deals with farm problems sympathetically. Sometimes his sympathy clouds his judgment, but we may let that pass for the present. The prime value of this book is in bringing together facts to show just how the prices of farm products hit the toboggan slide in 1920, how the descent to the Avernus of production at a loss was related to the prices of other commodities and how this phenomenon was manifest in all parts of the globe." Silas Bent

+ — N Y Times p12 Ag 3 '24 2200w

"Nowhere else can the purely economic argument be found in so grimly consistent, or so undiluted a form. His diagnosis is exemplary; but he has left the method of cure to others." W. B. Thomas

+ Sat R 138:44 Jl 12 '24 600w

"'The Agricultural Crisis' is not easy reading. On the contrary, it requires sustained attention. But anyone who makes the effort will be repaid by the lines of thought that it suggests. It goes to the heart of the mystery, without diverging into unimportant or passing symptoms. For this reason it is a valuable contribution to the solution of one of the most difficult problems of constructive statesmanship."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p364 Je 12 '24 1200w

ENGLAND, GEORGE ALLAN. Vikings of the ice; being the log of a tenderfoot on the great Newfoundland seal hunt. 323p il $4 Doubleday

639.1 Seals (animals) 24-10943

Account of a six weeks' experience on two sealing steamers of the Newfoundland fleet. The writer of this log calls the annual Newfoundland seal hunt the "greatest hunt in the world," not only because of the animals slaughtered but also on account of the perils of ice, blizzards, fire and other hardships. The ships operate every spring for five or six weeks between the Newfoundland and Greenland coasts and in spite of hardships and small rewards, berths are eagerly sought. The "tenderfoot" who was allowed to join the hunt describes all its essential features—life on ship board, the ways of the sealers, working thru the ice-pack, the life of the seals and the habits of the herd, and the hunt itself. He came back with a mass of notes, photographs and impressions from which this book has been made up.

"It is indeed a book of travel and adventure that ranks high. It is the first time that a writer ever made this thrilling trip amid the crashing, crushing, grinding ice floes of the North Atlantic on this most dangerous and thrilling of all hunting expeditions. It is a gorgeous epic of violence, hardship and bloodshed."

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 31 '24 180w

Reviewed by S. F. Reavis

Int Bk R p531 Je '24 120w

"Mr. England writes with the ease of the skilled hand at narrative; he reproduces the vernacular of the seal fishery, slips in tables of statistics, and dashes off pencil sketches of the officers and crew, at the same time holding the interest of the reader in a manner that does him credit."

+ Lit R p748 My 10 '24 380w

Reviewed by H. J. Massingham

Nation and Ath 36:sup384 D 6 '24 100w

N Y Times p14 Je 1 '24 950w

N Y Tribune p26 Je 15 '24 100w

N Y World p6e My 11 '24 80w

"Mr. England's presentation of the sealer, at home in his rock-bound outport or afloat on a reeking, overcrowded steamer, is most sympathetic. His book, rich in dialect, description and lore, is better than a movie."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a My 25 '24 950w

ENGLISH, DOUGLAS. Friends of mankind. [2] 284p $3 Dutton

636 Domestic animals

A study of the evolution of domesticated animals from Miocene times, and of the gradual development of farming from the first attempt at taming animals and plants. Mr. English shows how from the idea of hunting animals to death there slowly grew the idea of preserving them alive for food and for the services their strength and willingness might render. He treats all our domestic breeds, telling in what localities they originated and how they reached their present forms.

N Y Tribune p9 Ja 11 '25 180w

"The author, a distinguished British zoologist, has blended scientific knowledge with interesting personal observations. Lit up with flashes of humor, his analysis of the stolid ox, phlegmatic cow, and obstinate donkey as well as the more familiar horse, dog and cat, make pleasant and profitable reading."

+ N Y World p8e D 7 '24 70w

"This is a good book, but we wish it had pictures."

+ — Outlook 139:38 Ja 7 '25 30w

ENOCK, ARTHUR GUY. Problem of armaments; a book for every citizen of every country. 196p $1.50 (6s) Macmillan

355 Armaments. Armies, Cost of. Navies, Cost of. European war, 1914-1919—Economic aspects 23-16466

Beginning with a statement of the causes of armaments, and the reasons advanced by governments and the ordinary citizen for maintaining them, the book then gives a concise account of the enormous extent and effects of the business of war, with tables summarizing the total war expenditures of the principal countries of the world from 1900 to 1920, the casualties, losses and damages caused by the Great war, and the part played by chemicals and gas warfare. The last part of the book suggests some practical steps looking toward disarmament.

Am Pol Sci R 18:207 F '24 60w

"Discussions of war and peace are important, but more careful analysis is needed."
— Ann Am Acad 112:290 Mr '24 150w

Booklist 20:324 Je '24

"Mr. Enock's book is an arsenal of arguments for all who believe that war ought not to be, as well as for those who hold that the gains of war, however considerable they may appear on the surface, are rarely if ever commensurate with the cost. The carefully compiled statistical exhibits which are offered of the military and naval expenditures of the principal countries of the world from 1900 to 1920, and of the casualties and other losses of the World War, afford an unanswerable demonstration of the futility of attempting to settle international disputes by force of arms." W: MacDonald
+ Nation 118:236 F 27 '24 460w

R of Rs 69:333 Mr '24 60w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p547 Ag 16 '23 230w

"Good material for debaters and public speakers."
+ Wis Lib Bul 20:23 Ja '24

ENRIGHT, RICHARD E. Vultures of the dark. ^{2} 360p $2 Brentano's 24-25416

"Police Commssioner Richard E. Enright has written of the conflict between the New York police and a band of crooks and thugs controlled by the 'master-mind' of a man who was apparently perfectly respectable. The hero of the tale is a young detective sergeant, Roger Warren, the heroine is of course the villain's daughter, Audrey, and these two fall in love without any loss of time. It is a most involved tale, a tale containing more than one robbery and any amount of shooting. The identity of the criminals and even of the master-criminal himself, are known to the reader from the beginning and the interest of the story centres in their efforts to baffle the police and in the methods by which the police officers discover and follow out the clues which lead at last to the discovery of the truth."—N Y Times

"In Warren Mr. Enright has not invented another Sherlock Holmes, and often the story moves too much like 'real life' to give you spinal curvature. As in all detective stories, the love theme stands rather in the way; but there is no denying the breathless march of events and the always absorbing information on the methods of detection employed by the metropolitan police. The real romance lies in the high poetic style employed by one whose stern duty it is to beard the gangster in his lair and the rich malefactor in his hall." A. D. Douglas
+ — Int Bk R p139 Ja '25 450w

"An entertaining, action-filled tale."
+ N Y Times p8 N 30 '24 400w

"He is not capable of the fullest use of the language, but he does not use it to misrepresent."
— + N Y World p8e N 30 '24 240w

ERSKINE, LAURIE YORK. Laughing rider. 307p $1.75 Appleton 24-5452

Smiling Billy Argent was twenty-nine, part Irish, and found life very enjoyable. He was owner of a horse ranch in Texas from which he one day sold his favorite horse to "a foreigner from Canada." Not satisfied that the horse would get good treatment on the way, Billy suddenly decided to catch up with the train and take care of the horse himself. He told none of his friends his plans, so when Jim Harkness was found murdered, and people knew Billy had started in his company, the conclusion was that Smiling Billy was the guilty one. By the time Billy reached Canada the Mounted police were on his trail. But they reckoned without Annette Savardé who had promptly fallen in love with Billy. With her help Billy held off the police until his innocence was proved. When Billy returned to Texas he did not go alone.

"A capital tale."
+ Boston Transcript p6 Jl 23 '24 200w

"It is a most entertaining tale."
+ Lit R p843 Je 21 '24 90w

"He knows the country of which he writes and his bits of description and local color are authentic. But his heroes are a bit too good to be true to life; the din of gun play is heard with the monotony of machine-gun fire, and the story wallows in a maze of risks and perils."
+ — N Y Times p9 Mr 9 '24 600w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e Mr 16 '24 60w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p254 Ap 24 '24 100w

Wis Lib Bul 20:148 Je '24

ERTZ, SUSAN. Nina. 326p $2 Appleton 24-21582

"Nina is the study of a girl whose love, once given, cannot be revoked by any act or will of her own. Brought up by her aunt, Nina falls in love with Morton Caldwell, adopted as a boy by that same aunt. Morton is extraordinarily handsome, goodhearted, and hopelessly susceptible to women. Tony Fielding has the qualities of fidelity and devotion which Morton lacks. Henri Bouvier, the son of a French family in England, is a playmate in childhood. Miss Ertz deals directly only with Nina and Morton after their marriage; what has gone before is cleverly reflected in the scenes put before the reader. As in Madame Claire, a delightful feature is the points of view from which the story is told. Much of it is seen through the eyes of Henri, grown to manhood, French in his ideas, sophisticated, and almost equally sympathetic and discreet. His comments, both spoken and unspoken, are delicious. They do much to enliven a situation at bottom profoundly tragic by reason of Morton's limitations as a husband and Nina's tenacious love."—Grant Overton

Booklist 21:111 D '24

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson
Bookm 60:496 D '24 180w

"It is not spectacular, and yet there is in it a perception and a revelation of certain sides of human nature which are so general that they must interest a wide audience. There is a breadth of sympathy and understanding here which is at least significant." D. L. Mann
+ Boston Transcript p5 O 25 '24 1500w

"The novel is as unusual as it is competent, and the unusualness springs from the author's competence. And when I say competence, I am not thinking only of the writing, which is admirable, but of the wisdom in human nature which underlies the tale. Every woman will be charmed with this novel because it is veracious in its feminine psychology, as most novels by men are not—and as most novels by women would be if women could avoid sentimentality as cleanly as Miss Ertz does. Yes, women will be engrossed by Nina because they will find in it

ERTZ, SUSAN—Continued
those accents and indications which are their tests of the reality of men and women in intimate relation to each other, especially in the relations of love and marriage."—Grant Overton in Cargoes for Crusoes

"As in 'Madame Claire,' Susan Ertz has written in 'Nina' a character of fine dignity. She never gives insignificance undue importance. Wit and charm are her distinctions as writer; and a quiet tolerance which is, a little sad. 'Nina' would, perhaps, be a good book without Henri Bouvier in it at all. But with him it becomes notable. For Henri moves about in the story, more than spectator, yet always spectator, stemming from the thoughtful philosophies of Susan Ertz, a little capricious, a little cynical, but always kind and understanding. He is as rare and beautiful a characterization as is Madame Claire." Walter Yust
+ Lit R p4 S 13 '24 600w
N Y Times p8 O 19 '24 400w

"This is an intelligent, deft, subtle and genuinely well-bred production. It has distinction." Isabel Paterson
+ N Y Tribune p10 S 21 '24 750w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p8e O 5 '24 400w

"All four characters are admirably handled, and the book as a whole has the clear incision of a professional writer. If one may criticize adversely it would be to state that the action is so close to life that it is rather unsatisfactory in the artistic sense."
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:169 O 4 '24 700w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p632 O 9 '24 170w

ERVINE, ST JOHN GREER. Lady of Belmont; a play in five acts. 95p $1.25 Macmillan
822 24-3016

Mr Ervine's play is a sequel to "The Merchant of Venice," the time being exactly ten years after the date of Antonio's trial. The scene is laid at the home of Portia and Bassanio in Belmont where Doctor Bellario, a lawyer of Padua and cousin to Portia, is being entertained. Among the guests are Antonio, Jessica and Lorenzo, Nerissa and Gratiano. Shylock's chance entrance on the scene produces an immediate dramatic effect and arouses passions and prejudices touching all the other actors in the drama.

Booklist 20:291 My '24

Reviewed by V. Sackville-West
Nation and Ath 34:740 F 23 '24 300w

"Mr. Ervine made a daring experiment when he re-created these Shakespearean characters, but his play justifies the liberties he has taken. There is, of course, no comparison between 'The Merchant of Venice' and 'The Lady of Belmont' in point of literary merit, for Mr. Ervine is least of all a poet."
+ N Y Times p7 Ja 27 '24 1150w

Reviewed by Maxwell Anderson
N Y World p6e F 10 '24 250w

"St. John Ervine has produced an amusing but irrelevant 20th century reaction to a Shakespearean theme. But as in the majority of contemporary dramas, the playwright works his story to a climax and lets it fall to pieces in the last act, where the discursiveness of many a speech cloaks the gradual disintegration of the plot." D. G.
Springf'd Republican p7a My 11 '24 180w

"In spite of its weak comedy and a style which is an unfused mixture of the archaic and the modern, it is evident from the play's best scenes that Mr. Ervine had an impulse to express. This is not enough to justify the use of Shakespeare's characters, and the deliberate writing-off of the poetic nature of creations so essentially poetic as these is not to be easily forgiven. So far from drawing strength from its great origin, the particular vitality with which, in a modern setting, Mr. Ervine would have infused his play is sapped by it."
— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p73 F 7 '24 750w

ERVINE, ST JOHN GREER. Organised theatre. 213p $1.75 Macmillan [7s 6d Allen & U]
792 Theatre 24-26939

"In the brief prefatory note to 'The Organized Theatre' Mr. Ervine tells us that the book grew out of a series of lectures which he delivered at the University of Liverpool in 1923. Mr. Ervine's thesis springs from the assumption that much of the best drama will never get a hearing without the existence of the repertory theatre. And in view of the list given by the author of important plays which saw their first productions in the smaller repertory theatres of England when West End managers were afraid to venture on them, the assumption would seem to be more than well founded."—N Y Times

---

"Mr. St. John Ervine shares my own inability to feel crushed by highfalutin' jargon, and I can suggest nothing more pleasant for those who share our weakness than a reading of 'The Organized Theatre.' About its other merits, I have no space to speak, except to say that at last a sane piece of plain English, by a critic passionately devoted to the theatre, has come as a welcome break in the monotonous procession of pretentious piffle." Ernest Boyd
+ Ind 113:198 S 27 '24 1550w

"He has produced a characteristic book, at once solid and attractive, full of pregnant and pertinent matter and consistently interesting—if not always convincing—from the first page to the last." J. R. Towse
+ Lit R p4 O 4 '24 750w

"Only one chapter is concerned with the title. Of the rest of the volume, perhaps, the less said the better. All this is a pity, because Mr. Ervine is on the side of the angels and bursting with zeal." Frank Birch
— Nation and Ath 35:621 Ag 16 '24 800w

"Mr. Ervine writes with gusto, and he has certainly produced an interesting and stimulating book."
+ New Statesman 23:710 S 27 '24 600w

"'The Organized Theatre' suffers from a thinness of style which, in view of its origins, should be forgiven the author, especially since the author has a thesis which has a right to be given consideration."
+ — N Y Times p6 S 14 '24 1200w

"Having read it, I find I have marked it copiously, and when one marks a book, either in agreement or disagreement, one has had a pleasant time reading it." M. J. Moses
+ N Y Tribune p3 O 5 '24 360w

Reviewed by M. J. Moses
Outlook 138:508 N 26 '24 130w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p460 Jl 24 '24 1250w

"Mr. Ervine's violent disregard of what he sees and hears and reads where it runs counter to his prejudices would be a serious matter in a critic of reputation and standing if it did not so often lead him into statements too ridiculous to be taken seriously."
— Theatre Arts Mo 9:68 Ja '24 400w

ESHER, REGINALD BALIOL BRETT, 2nd viscount. Ionicus. 272p $3.50 Doubleday [15s Murray]
B or 92 Cory, William Johnson

William Johnson Cory, 1823-1892, was an English schoolmaster and poet, for twenty-six years assistant master at Eton where many of the foremost Englishmen of his time came under the influence of his teaching. He inspired all Etonians with respect and affection and was accepted as an Eton institution. Lord Esher, tho not as his pupil, knew him intimately at Eton and later, and corresponded with him for many years. This book, which derives its name from Cory's volume of verse entitled "Ionica" is largely made up of his letters to Lord Esher.

"For those who take the pains to read this somewhat large book with care there is much material which will interest all who enjoy literary reminiscences." D. F. G.
+ — Boston Transcript p1 Ap 5 '24 380w
N Y Tribune p27 Jl 13 '24 100w
N Y World p6e Mr 9 '24 350w

"He was a charming man, when he allowed himself to be known, and worthy of this handsome record."
+ Sat R 136:546 N 17 '23 700w

"Lord Esher's thread of comment is slight and rather colorless, though gratefully appreciative. It is a pity that the letters should have been merged, very confusingly to the eye, in a text which is scarcely important enough to carry them."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p746 N 8 '23 1200w

ESMENARD, JEAN D', vicomte (JEAN D'ESME, pseud.). Red gods (Les dieux rouges); tr. from the French by Moreby Acklom. 365p $2 Dutton
24-5505

This strange narrative of adventure in the wilds of French Indo-China takes the reader beyond the last outpost of civilization in the Annamite country into the deep forest land where dwells a race of prehistoric men—the Red gods—and the remnants of antediluvian monsters. Seeking to find some trace of her lost brother, a woman with two men sets out to penetrate beyond the Dead zone where no male human being may enter and live, and to discover the cause of the terrifying fears of the natives. It is Jieng, the head-sorceress of the tribes, who holds this sway over them, and who is determined to protect her secrets from the world. How these three pass thru the Dead zone, reach the inner Temple and discover the amazing secrets, is the story of the one man who miraculously escapes the vengeance of Jieng long enough to tell his tale.

"For him who would be thrilled, 'The Red Gods' is exactly devised. From cover to cover it provides excitement, adventure of the wildest, most uncommon sort."
Boston Transcript p6 Jl 16 '24 200w
Cleveland p43 Je '24

"It is out of the common in scene and theme and incident and better than the ordinary in the large, sweeping, compelling force of its imagination, in the artistry with which it is wrought and in the brilliant realism of its scenic portrayal."
+ N Y Times p16 Mr 23 '24 720w

ESPINA DE SERNA, CONCHA. Mariflor (La esfinge Maragata); auth. tr. from the Spanish by Frances Douglas. 425p $2.50 Macmillan
24-8371

"The author has rescued from oblivion the story of that inarticulate group of Spaniards, known as Maragatos, whose women eke out a miserable existence from that bleak steppe in North Central Spain which they inhabit. Mariflor, the daughter of a Maragato who married 'an outsider,' returns to her people and it is through her eyes that we witness the communal life of this strange people. Mariflor herself is deeply involved in this life for she is obliged, in the end, to marry a rustic, but wealthy cousin to save her grandmother, her aunt and cousins and even her own father in South America from financial ruin which would have made them paupers, even in poverty-stricken Valdecruces."—N Y Times

Booklist 21:27 O '24

"A simple moving story, told with sympathy and understanding." S. L. R.
+ Boston Transcript p6 My 3 '24 950w
Cath World 120:131 O '24 250w
Cleveland p43 Je '24
Ind 112:317 Je 7 '24 250w

Reviewed by Eliseo Vivas
Nation 119:168 Ag 13 '24 400w

"'Mariflor' is rich in atmosphere. Things inanimate, no less than persons, are made to yield their share toward intensification of the tragedy. Even the landscape broods. There are passages of striking beauty in this novel, passages which recall nothing so much as those dolorous Russian folk songs which, in their sadness, retie the bonds by which the world is made aware of its kinship."
+ N Y Times p9 Ap 27 '24 720w

"This novel possesses a melancholy and austere charm, like that of the mountains and the desert." Isabel Paterson
+ N Y Tribune p25 Je 22 '24 300w
N Y Tribune p7 D 21 '24 90w
Outlook 137:480 Jl 23 '24 150w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:344 Jl '24

ESPINA DE SERNA, CONCHA. Red beacon; tr. by Frances Douglas. 287p $2 Appleton
24-12524

A romance of the Basque country which tells the story of beautiful Dulce Nombre, the miller's daughter. She loved young Manuel Ayuso, but the rich Malgor, twice her age, bought her in marriage, and arranged for Manuel's embarkation to Cuba. Tho outwardly fulfilling all the obligations of a wife, Dulce nursed her love for Manuel and never doubted his abiding love for her. Malgor's death happened simultaneously with Manuel's return to Spain as a wealthy man. By an irony of fate, he saw first not Dulce herself, but her replica, Dulce's beautiful daughter María. Meeting her in the dusk he thought he saw Dulce. A bit of impassioned love-making followed, and Dulce remained forgotten. She was driven almost to madness by her grief but by a most unexpected dénouement, another way to happiness opened for Dulce.

"In working out her plot, Concha Espina shows a deep comprehension of the intricacies of the human heart. . . Her work has dramatic force, although it is tinged with mystic melancholy. It is well translated, so that even in English the flavor of the Spanish atmosphere is preserved for American readers. The story is beautiful, never sordid, yet unutterably true to life."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 21 '24 240w

Reviewed by Eliseo Vivas
Nation 119:168 Ag 13 '24 400w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson
N Y Tribune p25 Je 22 '24 650w
N Y Tribune p7 D 21 '24 70w

"What stands out is the human qualities of the persons and the human naturalness of the story. The translator, Frances Douglas, has rendered the simple, direct Spanish in English of the same simplicity."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 3 '24 180w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p466 Jl 24 '24 200w

ESQUEMELING, JOHN. See Exquemelin, A. O.

ESTAUNIE, EDOUARD. Call of the road; tr. from the French by Hiram Janus. 346p $2 Boni & Liveright
23-17345

Three men, friends from childhood, come together after years of separation and in their interchange of experiences find that all three, in different cities, have been the witnesses and to some degree, the participants, in a human drama which they have watched from different angles. Duclos, the physician, begins the tale, Tinant, the professor, takes it up, and the third ends the narration. The three versions, brought together, round out a dramatic tale some links of which are still unknown even to the actors.

Booklist 20:27 Mr '24

ESTAUNIE, EDOUARD—Continued

"It is an original device, cleverly handled, and the tale as told by each of the first two is so utterly different that there is no monotony of repetition. . . The story is typically Gallic in temperament—intense, emotional, and dramatic."

+ Lit R p582 Mr 8 '24 400w

"The translator is guilty of many infelicities in rendering the French into English, and in some instances he is also guilty of bad English. However, despite these handicaps the reader is well repaid. 'The Call of the Road' is not a casual piece of fiction. Into a masterfully developed story of human relations is woven a discussion of the value of suffering; indeed, this is really the theme."

+ — N Y Times p6 D 16 '23 780w

"Lovers of finished conception and finished execution will welcome it."

+ Springf'd Republican p11a Mr 2 '24 220w

EUWER, ANTHONY HENDERSON. By scarlet torch and blade. 152p il $2 (9s) Putnam

811 23-14381

This book of poems is divided into five sections: The open spaces; People and things; More rhyme than reason; A pageant of the trees; Rhymes of France. Most of the poems are on outdoor subjects. One section, A pageant of the trees, is concerned with the life histories of some of our northwestern trees.

"Among nature-lovers this volume of verse will probably find a certain amount of favor. But to the majority of the audience the possible beauty of the selected piece will be overshadowed by the inequalities in the rendering."

— + Boston Transcript p4 Ja 26 '24 300w

"The poems of Anthony Euwer are full of dignity and calm power. He writes of nature with fine understanding and sympathy, and one breathes the open vistas and grandeur of earth through all his lines." B. S. Wagstaff

+ N Y Tribune p20 Ja 27 '24 190w

"He writes what we must term doggerel, but he carries it off by his enthusiasm and knowledge of the matter in hand. He has far more of entertainment and enlightenment than many a solemn and doubtless dignified scribe."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p67 Ja 31 '24 100w

EVANS, R. T. Aspects of the study of society. ² (Doran's library of philosophy and religion) 202p $1.25 Doran

304 Social problems

The book consists of summaries of weekly talks to groups of miners and school-teachers in South Wales, 1922-1923. These discuss very briefly and clearly some of the more important social problems and the ways of meeting them. Contents: The scope and method of sociology; The evolution of society; The psychology of social life; Racial factor in history; Nationality; The economic organisation of society; Population; Economic basis of social well-being; The political organisation of society; Concluding note; A short bibliography; Index.

"Written especially for the intelligent lay reader."

J Religion 4:664 N '24 30w

"The appearance of this book should be highly pleasing to Professor Robinson and others who are interested in the humanizing of knowledge, for here, in ten short chapters, are set forth with unusual clarity and succinctness the important points of view on some of the more outstanding social problems." M. M. Willey

+ Sat R of Lit 1:348 D 6 '24 420w

EVOE OF PUNCH. See Knox, E: G: V.

EVRARD, EUGENE. Mystery of the hive; tr. by Bernard Miall. 369p $2.50 Dodd [7s 6d Methuen]

595.79 Bees 23-16848

The author is a devoted bee-keeper who for twenty years has loved and studied the bee and observed all the secrets of the hive. He follows the miracle of the life of the bee from the day of swarming to the supreme event—the nuptial flight, explaining and interpreting every step in the mystery both as scientist and as poet.

Booklist 20:286 My '24

Reviewed by M. G. Bonner

Int Bk R p469 My '24 40w

"Except for frequent anthropomorphic allusions the work seems to be quite accurate, and will prove stimulating to every lover of nature."

+ — Lit R p530 F 16 '24 700w

"Evrard is less of the philosopher than Maeterlinck and more of the observer. The charm of his book lies in the author's simple but attractive style of recounting what he had noted and pondered over." A. D. I.

+ Nature 113:452 Mr 29 '24 180w

"A worthy addition to the literature of beemanship. The wonder of the bee year is described once more, from the viewpoint of a beemaster not merely well-versed in all the theory and practice of his hobby, but possessed of a poetic temperament and wielding a lyrical pen." B. D.

+ New Statesman 22:supviii D 8 '23 60w

"A delightfully written book, translated from French into English in excellent fashion by Bernard Miall."

+ N Y Times p5 F 3 '24 1700w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p794 N 22 '23 20w

EXQUEMELIN, ALEXANDRE OLIVIER (JOHN ESQUEMELING). Buccaneers of America. (Broadway translations) 480p $5 Dutton [12s 6d Routledge]

910.4 Buccaneers

"Whether Esquemeling was a Dutchman or a Frenchman is still in doubt, but it is certain that he took service in the French West India Company in 1666, became a pirate, and wrote in Dutch an admirable account of his adventures. . . After a description of the fauna and flora, and all other things necessary to be related for the satisfaction of such as are curious, of the great and famous island of Hispaniola, Esquemeling professes to proceed with a quaint and stirring account of how he assisted the pirates in all their designs and served them in many notable exploits. He tells us very interesting things about the origin of the most famous pirates of the time and their peculiar manners and customs, and he gives us a spirited account of the careers of Pierre le Grand, Bartholomew Portugues, Roche Brasiliano, and Francis l'Ollonais—the original engravings of all these buccaneers are admirably reproduced—and then he comes to his principal villain, the Welshman, Captain Morgan. This reckless rascal, who lacked fear and shame completely, is the subject of several thrilling chapters." (The Times [London] Lit Sup) This edition is the translation of 1864-5, revised and edited by William Swan Stallybrass, to which is prefixed an introductory essay by Andrew Lang.

"A very complete volume, well worth adding to any person's library. This volume is nicely prepared, well printed, illustrated by reproductions of old engravings, and in every way a readable book." J. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 3 '24 550w

"Master John Esquemeling, buccaneer (1645-1707), was a downright kind of man, and there is a dry insolence in the record that he made. He flings facts in your face with a take-it-or-leave-it air, and it is to his glory that he possesses the subtle qualities of unity and vigor of narration. Nor, spite of all the blood and the death and the pillage, shall you go unpaid for the reading of his tale, seeing that there stands, well revealed, the splendor of courage and of endurance." C: J. Finger

+ Nation 118:659 Je 4 '24 480w

New Statesman 22:671 Mr 15 '24 500w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Outlook 137:282 Je 18 '24 60w

Sat R 137:160 F 16 '24 780w

"Here is the good raw stuff of fifty romances. . . And for background there is the quaint figure of John Esquemeling, who must certainly be numbered amongst the mildest-mannered men that ever cut a throat."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p32 Ja 17 '24 960w

EYTON, JOHN SEYMOUR. Expectancy. 329p $2 Century [7s 6d Arrowsmith]

24-20376

Jimmie Vaine, eager-eyed, imaginative, first comes into contact with the romance and beauty of India while a child, when under the guardianship of his big Uncle Nicholas he leaves London to join his indifferent father, a forest officer in that alluring country. After the death of his father, a few years later, Jimmie assists his uncle in the cultivation of a fruit plantation located in the Himalayan foothills. It is here that his love for his beautiful cousin, Joan, whom he had worshipped from boyhood, blossoms into a glorious thing for this idealist—something to be honored and cherished. But Joan has an independent spirit, and it is this shadow that thrusts itself between them. There comes a crucial moment when Jimmie risks his life to save Joan and then she realizes the depth of his love and how much she really cares for him.

Cleveland p91 D '24

"It is easy to speak of 'Expectancy' as slight—it is slight; there is nothing rushing and violent about the narrative. But it is charming and full of many delightful characterizations. Its pages are peopled with real persons, whom the discriminating reader will be glad to meet and to know."

+ N Y Times p25 N 30 '24 650w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p7e S 21 '24 80w

"The title of Mr. Eyton's novel is unusually appropriate. It is certainly an extraordinary novel, it is most certainly, taken as a whole a bad novel; but it is a novel to awaken our lively expectancy." Edwin Muir

— + Sat R of Lit 1:243 N 1 '24 750w

"The quality of the writing unmistakably is good, and just as unmistakably Mr. Eyton understands his characters and is able to set them forth as he understands them. Personal predilection aside, one will have to rate 'Expectancy' well above the par average."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7a O 26 '24 350w

"The leisureliness of the narrative—against which at first one is inclined to rebel—justifies itself in its ample and telling conveyance of scenery, life, and character."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p129 F 28 '24 100w

F

FABIAN, WARNER, pseud. Sailors' wives. 316p $2 Boni & Liveright

24-21814

The background of Mr Fabian's new novel is the same as that in "Flaming youth"—the pleasure-loving town of Dorrisdale. From this harbor the hardy mariners of business embark each morning for the city, leaving behind their restless wives to amuse themselves as best they can. Into this atmosphere comes the vivacious Rollo Trent, with one more year of life, before her, and then—blindness. So, in the face of this impending tragedy she determines to "squeeze the orange of life dry." At the end of her allotted time she gives herself to one man, altho very much in love with another. The darkness comes, but Rollo is prepared. An accident occurs. The destiny of her life is auspiciously altered—and she marries the man she loves.

"While on occasions the author reveals an ability to write vividly, pointedly, and even with beauty, it can not be said that on the whole the book is constructed effectively."

+ — Int Bk R p906 N '24 290w

"Mr. Fabian has a flair for the breezy, the light, the sensational, the spirited. His words race each other across the page. Speed is Mr. Fabian's greatest asset, just as it is the dominant note in the lives of his men and women." Madelin Leof

Lit R p12 S 20 '24 300w

N Y Times p19 S 21 '24 440w

N Y Tribune p15 D 14 '24 400w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y World p8e N 30 '24 580w

"In actual narrative content this novel is sister to those cheap fly-by-night volumes that shop girls read in lofts during their lunch hours. In manner, however, and in superficial charm of racy and rather entertaining conversation, 'Sailors Wives' is unquestionably superior. So much so, indeed, that one feels safe in prophesying that it will make a secure place for itself among the best fiction sellers of the fall."

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:209 O 18 '24 180w

"Perhaps a reviewer ought to fling a stone or two at Mr Fabian's book, out of deference to the conventions; so let us remark that the unformed susceptible young person is likely to get, temporarily at least, some ideas from the volume not at all essential to his youthful well being. The adults who read it in the hope of titillation presumably can't be harmed." P. W. N.

Springf'd Republican p7a S 21 '24 180w

FAIRHOLME, EDWARD GEORGE, and PAIN, WELLESLEY. Century of work for animals; foreword by H. R. H. the Prince of Wales; introd. by Lord Lambourne; Compassion, an ode, by Thomas Hardy. 298p il $3 Dutton [7s 6d Murray]

179.2 Royal society for the prevention of cruelty to animals. Animals, Treatment of [24-21394]

A review of the work of the Royal society for the prevention of cruelty to animals, during the last one hundred years. The book tells of the sufferings endured by animals before the enactment of laws for their protection, the cruelty of bull-baiting, cock-fighting, etc., the early difficulties of the pioneers in the work for protection, the gradual growth of more humane feeling, and the passing of the first legislative act. The rest of the book is given to the reforms brought about by the society, with a chapter on the growth of the work in other countries and another on the work yet to be done.

Boston Transcript p9 D 13 '24 750w

Reviewed by Gilbert Thomas

Nation and Ath 35:541 Jl 26 '24 620w

New Statesman 24:28 O 11 '24 280w

Sat R of Lit 1:252 N 1 '24 150w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p384 Je 19 '24 650w

FAJANS, KASIMIR. Radioactivity and the latest developments in the study of the chemical elements; tr. from the fourth German ed. by T. S. Wheeler and W. G. King. 138p $3.50 Dutton [8s 6d Methuen]

537.53 Radioactivity. Chemical elements

A survey of the progress made in chemistry, and more particularly in the study of the chemical elements, as the result of radioactive investigations. The author deals also with the newer study of isotopes, the results obtained from X-ray spectroscopy, and the constitution of the atom. The subject-matter is so presented that, in general, it should be intelligible to readers having a knowledge of elementary physics and chemistry.

FAJANS, KASIMIR—Continued

"The fourth German edition, of which this book is a translation, brought the subject up to the end of 1921, and the appendix to the present English translation includes references to some works published as late as early 1923. The book is well arranged and interestingly written, and has many good diagrams and plates. Professor Fajans is to be congratulated on a fair and even generous exposition of controversial themes." N. F. Hall

Am Chem Soc J 46:1065 Ap '24 320w

Boston Transcript p6 Ja 23 '24 310w

"The subject of radioactivity is progressing so rapidly that it is impossible for new editions of a full treatise to appear at sufficiently frequent intervals to keep continuously abreast of all the phases of development. Consequently, these gaps may be filled acceptably by a series of smaller, more specialized works like the present one, which lend themselves to frequent revision. The success of the present work is attested to by the four German editions that have appeared since 1919." S. C. Lind

+ Ind & Eng Chem 16:543 My '24 180w

"We welcome a survey written by one who is so well versed in the subject and has himself contributed toward its elucidation; it portrays, in language which should be intelligible to any reader having a knowledge of elementary physics and chemistry, a wonderful series of advances over a frontier which, twenty years ago, was considered quite impassable."

+ Lit R p736 My 3 '24 200w

FALK, ISIDORE SYDNEY. Principles of vital statistics. 258p $2.50 Saunders

614.1 Vital statistics 23-13176

"Deals with the results of vital statistics rather than with the theory and the methods."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

"The book, written in a clear, simple style, places emphasis on the distinctions between crude and refined rates and indicates the proper usages of each. The subject-matter is well illustrated by graphic charts." B. D. Mudgett

+ Am Econ R 14:374 Je '24 120w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:363 Jl '24

Reviewed by G. I. Drolet
Survey 51:550 F 15 '24 200w

FARIGOULE, LOUIS. See Romains, J., pseud.

FARINGTON, JOSEPH. Farington diary; ed. by James Greig; v 3, September 14, 1804-September 19, 1806. 346p il $7.50 Doran [21s Hutchinson]

B or 92 23-7187

The third volume of this social diarist continues the artist's minute record of people great and small, conversations and occurrences thru the two years' period from September, 1804. The most important events recorded in volume three are the battle of Trafalgar, the death of Nelson, and the passing of Pitt and Fox. Numerous references are made to these in the diary.

Booklist 21:23 O '24

Bookm 60:354 N '24 350w

Boston Transcript p6 D 17 '24 150w

"Fascinating diary. . . Mr. Farington makes the men and women of the past move before the reader in a living pageant." A. H. Wharton

+ Lit R p4 Ja 3 '25 950w

"'Slow' its pace most undeniably is, and the incidents it records are either historically very familiar or else domestic in their triviality; yet 'drag' it never does, for there is hardly a page of it that does not contain something well calculated to attract, if not indeed to rivet, the attention of a reader interested in the period. Never was any Diary fuller of those small details of life that seldom fail to interest the leisured occupant of the proverbial armchair." Augustine Birrell

+ New Statesman 23:163 My 17 '24 800w

"Doubtless there will be eventually biographical and other studies drawn from these abundant sources; but in the mean time no one with any taste for original documents can wish the narrative shortened or the brilliance of any redactor to intervene between him and the sober, factual style of this honest landscape painter." S. P. Sherman

+ N Y Tribune p1 O 12 '24 1600w

Reviewed by J: L. Heaton
N Y World p8e N 2 '24 520w

"Joseph Farington is becoming quite a valued acquaintance, thanks to the judicious labours of Mr. James Greig, who now gives us another instalment of his entertaining diary. What he wrote down is nearly always readable—though perhaps there is a little too much about the internal affairs of the Royal Academy for the general taste."

+ Sat R 137:390 Ap 12 '24 380w

"Into many other odds and ends of life and gossip Farington enters with his usual desultory dryness, which makes his record one that it is impossible to read consecutively for any length of time. All the same, it is a wonderful storehouse from which future historians will certainly benefit."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p233 Ap 17 '24 520w

FARIS, JOHN THOMSON. Book of everyday heroism. (Sunrise inspirational bks.) 232p $1.75 (9s) Lippincott

179.6 Heroes 24-11671

This is a book of the inspirational type which brings together many examples of unconscious heroism in daily living. These records are not of those who become heroes in the instant of danger but of those who live long lives of sacrifice or devotion to a cause—the patient endurance of quiet faithful people who have no idea that they are heroes. These examples are grouped under such headings as home heroism, moral heroism, the heroism of work, etc.

Booklist 21:30 O '24

"The book is full of inspiration and puts a halo around common life. It has in it the imperative 'Go thou and do likewise.' It makes the father and mother, the teacher and the physician, the servant and the common man feel that their lives are not so drab after all."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 14 '24 160w

N Y Tribune p28 Je 29 '24 130w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p450 Jl 17 '24 30w

FARIS, JOHN THOMSON. Romance of forgotten towns. 335p il $6 Harper

973 United States—History. Frontier and pioneer life 24-22259

The author has told here stories of towns all over the United States which have had a brief experience of fame or romance and then declined or disappeared from memory. The histories of the towns he thus revives he has arranged chronologically from the story of the settlement of Pemaquid, Maine, to the founding of the Italian colony at Tontitown, Arkansas. These histories include colonial settlements, pioneer ventures, attempts to develop the new West, towns settled by faddists, lumberjacks, gold seekers, oil boomers and missionaries.

Booklist 21:105 D '24

Boston Transcript p2 N 15 '24 650w

Cleveland p87 N '24

"Mr. Faris is always keenly alive to the human element, it is always to the fore on every page, and it is because of this that the book makes a very genuine appeal."
+ N Y Times p6 O 5 '24 1650w

Reviewed by Blair Niles
N Y Tribune p9 N 2 '24 350w

"An interesting volume for those who like to know more about this country."
+ N Y World p9e O 19 '24 90w

"The facts in each case are presented without any frills, but with sufficient narrative skill; the frequent effect of poignancy is enhanced by the simplicity."
+ Outlook 138:563 D 3 '24 110w
R of Rs 70:670 D '24 200w
St Louis p417 D '24

"Mr Faris's book is little more than an industrious compilation, and it cannot be said that his writing exhibits graphic quality, or in geographical and other details, unimpeachable accuracy. But there is quaint and interesting material which affords a good occasion for historical browsing of the lighter kind."
+ — Springf'd Republican p10 N 26 '24 480w

FARIS, JOHN THOMSON. Seeing Canada. 265p il $6.50 Lippincott
917.1 Canada—Description and travel
24-21370

Mr Faris's book will serve as an informative and general guide for those who contemplate traveling in Canada or making their residence there. It contains one hundred and fifty double-tone illustrations, and also an appendix giving automobile roads in the Canadian Rockies.

Booklist 21:106 D '24
Boston Transcript p3 D 13 '24 330w
Cleveland p96 D '24

" 'Seeing Canada' is illuminated with exceptional pictures that add value to interesting text."
+ N Y World p8m Ja 4 '25 100w
Outlook 138:260 O 15 '24 130w

"It is discursive and anecdotal but informative enough to serve as a general guide. The east of Canada has been covered by many excellent books with as much merit as this one, and some of them with more charm of style. Western Ontario and the plains provinces, and particularly those parts of British Columbia not on the main line of the Canadian Pacific, were less easily accessible to the reader, and here 'Seeing Canada' is a fresh and valuable addition."
— + Sat R of Lit 1:422 D 27 '24 500w

FARJEON, JOSEPH JEFFERSON. Master criminal. 304p $2 Dial press [7s 6d Brentano's]
24-21153

Geoffrey Mordaunt and John Mordaunt, brothers, are both masters in their professions —Geoffrey, the master detective, and John, the master criminal. Geoffrey, in the guise of a tramp, one day in the privacy of a closed room reveals himself to his brother. They declare a truce until each smokes a cigarette to the end and then—death for one. In a short time a shot is heard and John Mordaunt, the master criminal dies by his own hand. When his accomplices enter the room they see the body of the tramp on the floor and "John" Mordaunt standing over him. From that moment on, Geoffrey Mordaunt, in the hope of solving a murder mystery in which his brother was involved, plays the part of the master criminal. Not until a moment before he delivers his assistants in crime to the police, does Geoffrey disclose his identity to them—and he is surprised to find that someone else was playing the game, too.

Boston Transcript p4 O 4 '24 250w
Dial 77:436 N '24 50w

"Besides being a startling story full of thrilling episodes and innumerable surprises, Mr. Farjeon's narrative is forcefully, clearly, and virilely written, with good, concise portraits of a group of crooks and a rival group of crook-seekers. Mr. Farjeon has proved himself capable of inventing and writing a Sherlock Holmes novel of the first degree."
+ Lit R p10 Ag 30 '24 300w

"Mr. Farjeon displays a great deal of knowledge about story-telling, and multiplies the interest of his plot through a terse, telling style and a rigid compression. He never pads. He never explains what can be left to the reader's intelligence."
+ N Y Times p9 S 7 '24 350w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e S 14 '24 210w
Springf'd Republican p7a O 5 '24 100w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p289 My 8 '24 80w

FARRAR, JOHN CHIPMAN. Middle twenties. 74p pa $1.50 Doran 811
24-18455

The thirty-two poems in this little book are divided into three groups. The first, Search, opens with a poem in free verse on the Ego and includes two commemorative odes. The second group, Cavalier, consists of playful poems in praise of Amaryllis. The third, Portraits of war women, is the most serious group.

Reviewed by D: Morton
Bookm 60:95 S '24 200w

"Unquestionably the book is meant for a lark. When the mood took him, Mr. Farrar wrote it, and someone said, 'Get them published.' Our principal regret is that the jacket takes them so very seriously." I. W. L.
— Boston Transcript p6 Jl 16 '24 600w

"Despite poems so impressive as Lucille and Marguerite, one feels in this book, a lack of poetic machinery commensurate with the gravity of certain themes which the author has chosen, or has generously consented, to treat."
— + Dial 77:266 S '24 50w

"In the double sestets, as in his sonnets, he writes with dramatic directness and poetic grace on themes of human dignity. But the first group, 'Search'—what has it found? 'The Squaw' has hill and forest quality, as well as human vitality. Even here the note is sometimes forced, and in the two definitely Vermont poems the vigor often lapses into violence and the passion becomes merely exclamation." K. L. Bates
+ — Int Bk R p671 Ag '24 700w

"The only portion of worth of this book is that constituted in the reprinted (we believe) 'Portraits.' These eight little etchings from the war gallery have something of quality about them. Hardly enough to justify all the stuff that precedes them, however." G. S.
— + Lit R p923 Jl 26 '24 140w
Springf'd Republican p7a S 14 '24 280w

FARRAR, JOHN CHIPMAN, ed. Bookman anthology of essays. 271p $2 Doran
814 American essays—Collections 23-17208

"This book is not properly titled. It should not have been called 'The Bookman Anthology of Essays.' This is not a collection of essays, but of sketches, of discussions, of literary jottings, miscellaneous pieces that have been published in The Bookman during the past two years." (Preface) Contents: Sarah Bernhardt, by C: H: Meltzer; The church and the library, by A. E. Bostwick; Criticism and bad manners, by Floyd Dell; Mr Dempsey's five-foot shelf, by Heywood Broun; The Dickens of it, by Keith Preston; Gentle argonauts, by William McFee; The hundredth amendment, by Oliver Herford; A landmark passes, by A. B. Maurice; An open letter to H. L. Mencken, by Hugh Walpole; Mr Mencken replies, by H. L. Mencken; Murray Hill's recollections of James Huneker, by R. G.

FARRAR, JOHN CHIPMAN, ed.—Continued
Holliday; The Negro in American literature, by Benjamin Brawley; Nietzschean Pilgrim fathers, by D. C. Fisher; The new word in play producing, by Zona Gale; O. Henry, playwright, by Alexander Woollcott; On works of reference, by Aline Kilmer; Josephine Peabody, "The piper," by A. F. Brown; Religion and the theatre, by Kenneth MacGowan; George Santayana's "Life of reason," by Burton Rascoe; Spotlight or fame? by John Erskine; Surrender books, by T: L. Masson; The unreality of modern realism, by M. R. Rinehart; The why of the best seller, by W: L. Phelps; Women as audience, by Mary Austin; The Wright American, by Hildegarde Hawthorne.

Booklist 20:129 Ja '24

"The Bookman anthology is a well-selected assortment of entertaining news." L. B.
+ Freeman 8:503 Ja 30 '24 300w

Nation 118:566 My 14 '24 90w

"We are unwilling to believe that the twenty-five miscellaneous pieces are representative of what living Americans can do in the field of the essay, and we dread what our cousins abroad will think should they accept Mr. Doran's definition of this book as an anthology." H. S.
— N Y World p6e F 10 '24 550w

Wis Lib Bul 20:23 Ja '24

FARRAR, JOHN CHIPMAN, ed. Literary spot-
2 light; with portrait caricatures by William Gropper. 356p il $2.50 Doran

814 Authors, American 24-28240

These literary portraits appeared originally in the Bookman. They combine personal impressions of the writers with estimates of their work. Under a cloak of anonymity the authors of the sketches have been able to indulge in a good deal of frankness and humor, not much of which is ill-natured. Mr. Farrar has added bibliographies and brief biographical notes. Among the writers sketched are Brander Matthews, Booth Tarkington, Sinclair Lewis, Mary Johnston, Amy Lowell, Edna Ferber, Robert Frost, H. L. Mencken, Stuart Sherman, H. S. Canby, Sherwood Anderson and others.

"A few of the portraits are excellently complete, and the whole is a document of value; but Mr. Farrar as a patron of satire should not have been so much afraid of producing a 'mean-spirited book.'" Mark Van Doren
— + Nation 119:574 N 26 '24 100w

"Some of these spotlights are good, a few are brilliant, several are quite bad, one or two show malevolence, several show a decided attempt to 'puff.'"
+ — N Y Times p6 N 16 '24 600w

N Y World p8e N 9 '24 100w

Outlook 138:513 N 26 '24 40w

FARRERE, CLAUDE, pseud. (CHARLES BARGONE). Thomas the Lambkin, gentleman of fortune; auth. tr. from the French by Leo Ongley. 433p $2 Dutton

24-22266

Thomas Trublet, ironically named Thomas the Lambkin for his ferocity, was captain of the frigate "Belle Hermine" which, in the days of the Corsairs, left St Malo to seek fortune and fame in the land of the filibusterers. Thomas found both. His fame spread thruout the Antilles and Louis XIV conferred upon him the certificate of nobility for the valor of his exploits. In one of his victorious battles with a Spanish galleon he captured a beautiful Andalusian girl and was in turn captured by her. Under her power and evil influence the honest Corsair and once loyal subject of the king turned pirate, carrying on his warfare in a time of universal peace against every flag that flew. And the beautiful Juana was the real captain of the ship and Thomas her lieutenant. He was finally captured by the king's ships and for his misdeeds made his way to the gallows.

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas
Int Bk R p857 N '24 120w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton
Lit R p12 N 8 '24 780w

N Y Times p19 O 12 '24 720w

N Y Tribune p7 D 21 '24 120w

Outlook 138:381 N 5 '24 30w

FAURE, ELIE. History of art: v 4 Modern art; tr. from the French by Walter Pach. 517p il $7.50 Harper

709 Art—History

In the fourth and final volume of his history, Elie Faure starts with the Flemish and Dutch painters and carries the account thru the beginnings of contemporary art, with an appendix on pointillism, cubism, etc.

Booklist 20:328 Je '24

Bookm 59:745 Ag '24 150w

"It is a remarkable book for the author, in spite of his high-pressure, orchidaceous style, sees the meanings of things beneath mere phenomena and is a philosopher who realizes the significance of art as the basis of civilization." N. H. D.
+ Boston Transcript p2 My 31 '24 500w

Reviewed by T: Craven
Dial 77:342 O '24 1400w

"It is an interesting work, and is excellently and fully illustrated, and has 'synoptic tables' at the end, which are extremely useful for those who are not blessed with a historical memory. A slight disadvantage is that Mr. Walter Pach's translation of the rather flowery original French is too literal to make for altogether comfortable reading."
+ — Nation and Ath 35:154 My 3 '24 160w

"Art has waited long for an interpreter of M. Faure's resources, sympathies, and understandings. Unless I am mistaken the work he has accomplished in the History of Art will not have to be done again for many a long year." L: Mumford
+ New Repub 39:335 Ag 13 '24 1350w

"The moment one opens M. Faure's volume the beauty of feeling and, in a florid fashion, of language is revealed."
+ N Y Times p12 My 4 '24 1100w

N Y World p7e Mr 30 '24 170w

Spec 132:970 Je 14 '24 20w

"He is a good showman, sincerely convinced that art is the greatest show on earth; but his unstanched enthusiasm hinders his own object by arousing not so much opposition as a defensive stolidity."
— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p429 Jl 10 '24 700w

Wis Lib Bul 20:123 My '24

FAURE, ELIE. Napoleon; tr. from the French by Jeffery E. Jeffery. 252p $3 Knopf [7s 6d Constable]

B or 92 Napoleon I, emperor of the French
24-28707

Elie Faure's study is not a biography of Napoleon, but an interpretation of his character, a deeply searching study of his psychology. M. Faure is a great historian of art and as an artist he views Napoleon. "From the point of view of morality he is indefensible. Indeed, he is incomprehensible. . . From the point of view of art, everything about him becomes clear. . . Like all artists, he was capable of making mistakes in his art; and from the moral angle these are regarded as crimes. But his work as a whole is as astonishing as any ever conceived by an artist. It is as lasting, too, because of its spirit."

Booklist 21:148 Ja '25

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 3 '25 320w

"His 'Napoleon' is unlike any other book upon the subject that I know. It is peculiarly his own; its qualities are native to his genius, and its slight defects are born of his exuberance. It is not a biography, not a historical narrative, not an apology: it is an essay in artistic criticism, with one of the world's greatest men for its subject. And as artistic criticism it succeeds superlatively." B. R. Redman

+ — Int Bk R p87 Ja '25 1700w

N Y Times p7 D 14 '24 1050w

"If it came from a lesser man the book would be dismissed as naïve. In its style, at any rate, it is curiously antiquated." Albert Guerard

— N Y Tribune p4 D 14 '24 840w

"'Napoleon' by Elie Faure is acclaimed by everybody from Havelock Ellis to the Borzoi Broadside, but I regret to say, I can see very little in it. It is an extended and extremely literary essay. It is muddy, it is hysterical, it is dull." J. M. Cain

— N Y World p8e O 26 '24 1100w

"M. Faure can be very annoying to readers with orderly minds. His enthusiasms can so often trail away into the clouds, to vanish in mist just when we are hoping they will be solidified by argument. But the result of a succession of somewhat windy chapters on different phases of Napoleon's character and career is that there emerges a remarkable picture of the man."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p602 O 2 '24 1000w

FAURE, GABRIEL. Italian lakes. 143p il $2.50 (7s 6d) Medici soc.

914.5 Italy—Description and travel 24-8657

A guide to the enchanting region of the Italian lakes—Maggiore, Orta and Varese, Lugano, Como, Iseo and Garda, with some 200 photogravure illustrations.

Booklist 21:20 O '24

"We open M. Faure's book gratefully, and as on a magic carpet are at once transported to lands 'where falls not hail . . . or snow, nor any wind blows loudly.'" F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 26 '24 320w

"The illustrations are from unusually attractive photographs, and include the work of Ballance, the famous Alinari Brothers, and others."

+ Lit R p782 My 24 '24 40w

"The author of this vivid and picturesque guidebook wins the reader by his descriptive skill and fervid style."

+ N Y Tribune p26 My 11 '24 120w

"The whole region is strikingly described and depicted."

+ Outlook 137:70 My 14 '24 120w

"The English text is the work of writers with imagination and a keen sense of aesthetic values."

+ R of Rs 69:559 My '24 70w

FAURE, GABRIEL. Land of St Francis of Assisi. 138p il $2.50 (7s 6d) Medici soc.

914.5 Assisi. Perugia. Francis of Assisi, Saint

This volume of the Picture guides series is devoted to the Umbrian country beloved of St Francis and by him endeared. It is chiefly the towns of Perugia and Assisi that are described—their natural beauties and their works of art. A chapter is given to the circle of little towns which surround Assisi and Perugia, including Spoleto, Spello and Trevi. As in the other volumes of this series, the illustrations are in photogravure.

Boston Transcript p5 D 10 '24 1000w

"It contains almost no information except what is conveyed by the pictures, which are interesting and abundant, though not remarkable. We wish that the translator, whose name is not given, had not committed the vulgar error of confusing friars with monks. To him also must be due such impossible plurals as municipios, pisanos and stigmatas. We hope he is not responsible for 'sumptious.' The book was printed in France, and an English proofreader, we judge, was not available." C: H. A. Wager

— + N Y Tribune p3 D 14 '24 400w

R of Rs 71:110 Ja '25 100w

"This is another of the excellent series of picture guides now being issued by the Medici Society. M. Faure is too well known to need any introduction, and he is as safe and pleasant a companion in the gentle Umbrian country as elsewhere."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p671 O 23 '24 480w

FAUSET, JESSIE REDMON. There is confusion. 297p $2 Boni & Liveright

24-7317

The Negro struggling for expression and social betterment is the theme of this book. The Marshalls, a wealthy, ambitious family of Negroes form the nucleus of a group of their race. The story develops around them. There is Joanna Marshall, talented in music and desirous of fame, with her great love for the handsome, indolently rebellious Peter Bye, a descendant of an old honored family of slaves. Her stirring up in him of ambition for success and their difficult romance shares the interest with poor little Maggie Ellsworth's tragedy and subsequent happiness. It is a picture of Negro life as it is lived today among the educated classes.

"A work of high merit. It is discerning and frank in its portrayal of race-relationships and the heart-aches consequent upon these but it is not bitter; it is singularly sweet and sympathetic toward the narrower people of a more privileged race." B. G.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 26 '24 1300w

Cleveland p35 My '24

"The author is a member of the colored race, but she neither demands nor makes any sentimental concessions. She possesses the critical insight and resolute detachment of the novelist, and her picture of the society which her novel surveys is achieved with an art as impersonal as that of Mrs. Wharton. Her novel is neither propaganda nor apology, but art."

+ Int Bk R p555 Je '24 750w

"Miss Fauset has woven a story that has its excellencies. It is not a remarkable novel; rather, a significant one, because in it the educated negro becomes articulate, and in it, too, there is promise of good work for the future." Herschel Brickell

+ — Lit R p661 Ap 12 '24 360w

"This novel is significant because it is the first work of fiction to come from the pen of a colored woman in these United States. Mediocre, a work of puny, painstaking labor, There Is Confusion is not meant for people who know anything about the Negro and his problems. It is aimed with unpardonable naïvete at the very young or the pertinently old." E. D. W.

— New Repub 39:192 Jl 9 '24 300w

"Considered exclusively as fiction, the novel is mediocre; fairly well written, loosely constructed, with most of the usual faults of the propaganda story. Its claim to especial interest lies in its theme, in the fact that nearly all of its characters belong to a section of our population at once comparatively little known and constituting one of the most difficult and perplexing problems we as a nation are called upon to face."

+ — N Y Times p9 Ap 13 '24 900w

"Miss Fauset has told a love story skillfully and given us a comprehensive and deeply enlightening picture of a milieu." Eva Goldbeck

+ N Y Tribune p23 My 18 '24 700w

Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 13 '24 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p828 D 4 '24 300w

Wis Lib Bul 20:212 O '24

FAUSSET, HUGH L'ANSON. Studies in idealism. 278p $2.50 Dutton [6s Dent]

821 Poetry. English poetry. Idealism in literature

In these studies, the author seeks to discover the principles which distinguish poetry in its highest moments from the sensational, sentimental and affected, to analyze the poet's ideal and to show the degree to which poetry is the expression of truth, creative beauty and universal experience of life. He studies English poetry chiefly, from Chaucer to modern times, tracing the idealism to be found in different periods and at different moments in the careers of individual poets.

FAUSSET, HUGH L'ANSON—Continued

Reviewed by P. E. More
Lit R p629 Ap 29 '24 680w

"The book is competent, the result of serious thought, but to the reader it will prove rather dull and wanting in clarity, because it is lacking in pointed phrases which arrest the attention and thereby lead to understanding. Mr. Fausset sometimes falls into that pomposity which he so much deplores in the Victorians, without attaining their dignity."
— + Nation and Ath 34:388 D 8 '23 300w

"Mr. Fausset's style is often too involved, and his matter too heavily weighted to inspire us with pleasure."
— + New Statesman 22:348 D 22 '23 200w

Reviewed by Eva Goldbeck
N Y Tribune p22 Je 8 '24 800w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p754 N 8 '23 30w

"He has written a striking and very thoughtful book. He pursues an argument which might easily run to waste in generalities with a method that is never vague or dull, and is sharpened at every turn by his critical perceptions."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p892 D 20 '23 1900w

FEA, ALLAN. Where traditions linger. 308p il $5 Lippincott [12s 6d Nash & G.]

914.2 England—Description and travel

These rambles thru some counties of south central England begin at Brentford in Middlesex and range from Berks into Hants, from Hants across South Wilts, then into Dorset, back into Wilts and Berks and north into Oxfordshire and the corner of Bucks. Mostly the rambles are thru little sequestered villages "where traditions linger" and which are rich in historical and literary associations. From these as well as from unrecorded events and names held in memory the author of "Nooks and corners of old England" makes up the fabric of his book. There are thirty-three illustrations.

"The illustrations are delicious."
+ Boston Transcript p1 My 3 '24 680w

Reviewed by S. F. Reavis
Int Bk R p531 Je '24 40w

"The book ought to make a delightful companion for a walking trip through that part of England, for by its help it would be possible to get a flavor of that ancient England which is rarely sensed by the ordinary traveler."
+ N Y Times p20 Ap 13 '24 500w

N Y Tribune p25 My 18 '24 80w

Outlook 136:748 Ap 30 '24 20w

FEDERAL COUNCIL OF THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST IN AMERICA. COMMITTEE ON RELIGIOUS DRAMA. Religious dramas, 1924. 334p $2 Century

812 Religious drama—Collections. American drama—Collections (23-18403)

The first of a series of annual collections covers the field for several years past during which time there has been a remarkable revival of religious drama. The plays have been selected on the basis of religious message, dramatic technique, literary quality and educational merit. They include Biblical dramas and episodes, fellowship plays and pageants and dramas of the individual spiritual life. A bibliography of reference books is added. Contents: The rock, by M. P. Hamlin; The good Samaritan, by A. B. Ferris; A sinner beloved, by P. E. Osgood; The Resurrection, by Rosamond Kimball; The seeker, by C. V. McCauley; Larola, by H. L. Willcox; The friend of all men, by A. B. Ferris; The pilgrim and the book, by Percy MacKaye; The crusade of the children, by Elisabeth Woodbridge; Dust of the road, by K. S. Goodman.

Booklist 20:292 My '24

"This is a timely and notable venture." P. K.
+ Boston Transcript p5 F 2 '24 1050w

Cleveland p52 Jl '24

FELT, EPHRAIM PORTER. Manual of tree and shrub insects. (Rural manuals) 382p il $3.50 Macmillan

632.7 Insects, Injurious and beneficial. Trees—Diseases and pests 24-19302

"An up-to-date reference book dealing with noxious insects affecting trees and shrubs. The subject matter is divided into four parts. A brief review of economic entomology with remarks on the natural and artificial control of insects makes up the first of these. Part two treats of insects attacking shade trees and ornamentals. For convenience's sake the pests are grouped according to the type of the injury caused. Thus, the borers and gnawers form one chapter. Another is given to the leaf-feeders, a third to galls and gall makers, and one each to lice, scales and miscellaneous sucking insects. Part three deals with forest insects; those attacking deciduous trees are considered first. Nut weevils receive an entire chapter. The final part consists of a brief systematic account of those families of insects which contained injurious species."—Springf'd Republican

"In readable form, Mr. Felt here sums up not only his own carefully gathered facts regarding our insect enemies, but also the knowledge about forest insects which has been obtained by various workers during the past twenty years."
+ Boston Transcript p3 D 13 '24 600w

"The work is well illustrated and thoroughly indexed. Instead of the usual bibliography at the end of the book, each reference cited follows the article to which it applies. There can be no question that the book will prove a most valuable textbook of forest entomology."
+ Springf'd Republican p6 S 22 '24 450w

FENWICK, CHARLES CHEQUIERE. International law. (Century political science ser.)
2 641p $4 Century [21s Allen & U.]

341 International law and relations 24-10933

"Professor Fenwick exhibits in some detail the salient aspects of international law to-day; he gives a picture of the 'persons' of international law, of their rights, their equality, their municipal powers and the existing limitations on those powers, their contractual and customary relations, their rights, and their methods of enforcing those rights by peaceful procedure, by intermediate methods of self-help, and by war. He sets forth the generally accepted rules of war by land and sea."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"In form and in content this volume is a credit to American scholarship. It will serve as a stepping-stone by which the student of international relations may reach a better understanding of international law—that law which tends to keep the peace between nations." E. C. Stowell
+ Am Pol Sci R 18:812 N '24 1150w

Outlook 137:642 Ag 27 '24 20w

"Carefully compiled book. . . He does not seem fully to realize that the development in the late war of the doctrine of continuous transport was a perfectly logical and moral development, to meet new conditions, of the old doctrine of continuous voyage, a development which the United States, when a neutral, could not possibly resist, as Mr. Bryan admitted."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p729 N 13 '24 1300w

FERBER, EDNA. So Big. 360p $2 Doubleday 24-26188

Selina DeJong would look up from her work and say, "How big is my man?" Then little Dirk DeJong would answer in the time-worn way, "So-o-o big!" And he was so nicknamed. Tho So Big gives the book its title his mother is the oustanding figure. Until Selina was nineteen she traveled with her gambler-father. At his sudden death she secured a teacher's post in the Dutch settlement of High Prairie, a community of hardworking farmers and their thrifty, slaving wives—narrow-minded people indifferent to natural beauty. Soon Selina married Pervus DeJong, a plodding, good-natured boy. With her marriage the never-ending drudgery of a farmer's wife began. Thru all the years of hardship she never lost her gay, indomitable spirit. Unfortunately, she was unable to transmit these qualities to her son. So Big was successful, if success may be measured in terms of dollars and dinner invitations. We leave Selina conscious of a life fully lived. But Dirk admitted to himself that he was no more than "a rubber stamp."

Booklist 20:300 My '24

"A novel of power, delicacy, and understanding." J. F.

+ Bookm 59:68 Mr '24 400w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p4 F 23 '24 1450w

Cleveland p23 Mr '24

Dial 77:523 D '24 130w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton

Ind 112:157 Mr 15 '24 300w

"Here is a young woman who knows the power of the sharp, incisive phrase, dipping her pen into the blood of humanity, bringing us news of life, as she sees it, with no thought of 'serialization' and 'movie rights.' And it is a healthy sign, too, that an editor of so-called popular magazine had the wisdom to see in his panoramic book a splendid continued story which would enrich her readers' minds, and had the courage to place it before them. We need this sort of writing and editing in these United States." C. H. Towne

+ Int Bk R p344 Ap '24 1700w

"With all its flaws and crudities it has the completeness, and finality, that grips and exalts and convinces. By virtue of these qualities 'So Big' is a masterpiece." J. J. Smertenko

+ — Lit R p555 Mr 1 '24 900w

"It is a thoughtful book, clean and strong, dramatic at times, interesting always, clear-sighted, sympathetic, a novel to read and to remember." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p9 F 24 '24 1700w

"To Miss Ferber's narrative and descriptive powers I genuflect in homage. Her vocabulary is rich and vital; she sees material objects with a penetrating and delightful vision; she has portrayed aspects of Chicago more vividly and with greater distinction than any writer I know; she knows the history of the development of Chicago in the industrial age and she is able to convey in a few words the import of that development; she can describe flappers and debutantes, shop girls and stenographers, tell you how they dress, how they talk, what their working philosophy is, with illuminating flashes." Burton Rascoe

+ N Y Tribune p19 Mr 16 '24 1400w

"The book doesn't preach; it shows."

+ Outlook 137:160 My 28 '24 550w

St Louis p399 D '24

"A charming novel." Gerald Gould

+ Sat R 137:392 Ap 12 '24 380w

Spec 132:679 Ap 26 '24 300w

"There can be no question that 'So Big' gets close to the life of its chosen bit of American soil, or that it is persuasively human in its touch."

+ Springf'd Republican p11a Mr 2 '24 420w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p158 Mr 13 '24 400w

Wis Lib Bul 20:68 Mr '24

FERENCZY, ARPAD. Ants of Timothy Thümmel. 320p il $2.50 Harcourt [7s 6d J. Cape]

"An entomological satire. The story might rightly be called the epic of Antdom. After the dawn of ant civilization, when the prophet-King Mye-Mye climbed to the topmost twig of the mystic tree and had the revelation of work pierce through his cranium, there came a long period of warfare, suffering and decadence. Slavery was established and parasitism flourished. Moreover, after the discovery of the juice of the holy berry, the myrmecean world was weakened through overindulgence and the fine race of Mye-Mye was slowly sinking to perdition. However, through the trial-and-error gropings of ant-prophets in recondite realms, the great truth of Mye-Mye was rediscovered: 'The only clear title to life is labor.' Thus the myrmecean world was saved and thrives to this very day under our very feet."—N Y World

---

"It is an extremely brilliant, if occasionally sophistical, satire, written with biting irony by a man who, master though he is of the English language, possesses the subtleties of mind which lie across the Channel from Dover." D. F. G.

+ Boston Transcript p3 S 27 '24 320w

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas

Int Bk R p57 D '24 70w

"It is difficult to do such things really well, and Mr. Ferenczy's touch is a little heavy for the task. But he provides a great deal of ant information, and gives at the end a useful list of scientific works, for the benefit of those who wish more closely to consider this little creature." Rose Macaulay

— + Nation and Ath 35:sup247 My 24 '24 80w

"Mr. Ferenczy has done his work with a lively sense of humor and satire and because this is true there are moments when a Swift-like atmosphere hovers over the novel."

+ N Y Times p22 Ag 31 '24 500w

"Though often harsh and trenchant, his wit is never malignant, so that the book may be enjoyed as much for its searching translation of the most intelligent phase of insect life as for the fitting applications it offers in the case of homo sapiens." F. V. Roman

+ N Y World p8e Ag 24 '24 450w

"Mr. Ferenczy's quotations from many authorities on the social life of the ants shows the solid basis of reality on which he has built his descriptions of ant-activity...We are interested in the ants as ants, but we feel only vaguely that mankind claims more virtue than that to which it is perhaps strictly entitled. Thus we are cheated of a really effective satire."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p447 Jl 17 '24 240w

FERGUSSON, HARVEY. Women and wives. 310p $2.50 Knopf 24-10703

In the flush of first love Jim and Catherine marry and their love is put to the test in a small three-room apartment. Jim is a dreamer, never accomplishing much. Catherine, beautiful and ambitious, and a clever designer, is discontented with her idle and monotonous life. John Strome, the opposite of Jim—aggressive, practical and successful, comes into her life but Catherine is loyal and continues with Jim, trying to snatch any possible happiness, while Jim, sufferer from an inferiority complex, consoles himself with a cheap stenographer. Finally the break comes. Catherine goes to New York to success in her designing and to John Strome, while Jim, freed at last from what he always felt were the shackles of marriage, has not the strength to take his freedom—not enough even to put aside the clinging little stenographer whose admiration soothes him.

FERGUSSON, HARVEY—Continued

"The clearest virtue of the book is its reproduction of that feeling of discontent and unrest which is so large a part of modern life. It is, moreover, a strikingly accurate picture of the haphazardness of modern city life. Its morals are obvious, but this does not infer that they are unimportant." D. L. M.

Boston Transcript p6 My 17 '24 850w

"It is studiously honest, faithful, and intelligent—and a bit dull." J. G.

+ — New Repub 39:336 Ag 13 '24 50w

"There is a good deal of excellent writing in the book."

+ N Y Times p8 Ap 20 '24 1150w

N Y Tribune p24 Jl 20 '24 250w

Outlook 137:641 Ag 27 '24 60w

"The clear thought and sound workmanship of Mr. Fergusson's new novel, are extremely attractive. The combination is a little unusual."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p648 O 16 '24 250w

FERRAND, HENRI. Grenoble and thereabouts. 154p il $2.50 (7s 6d) Medici soc.

914.4 France—Description and travel. Grenoble, France

Grenoble is the capital of Dauphiné and the center of a region of incomparable beauty—the French Alps. This volume, in the Picture guides series, is a book in praise of the town and its encircling mountains. There are many and beautiful illustrations.

Booklist 21:20 O '24

Boston Transcript p1 Ap 26 '24 350w

Cleveland p48 Je '24

Lit R p796 My 31 '24 40w

"The book is a luxury—this we have come to expect from the Medici Society; but it is a complement to, rather than a substitute, for, the undecorative, systematized guide-book." Edmund Candler

— + Nation and Ath 34:746 F 23 '24 200w

"Mr. Henri Ferrand is clearly much attached to the beauties of his native Dauphiné; and in writing this book he has endeavoured to stimulate in others his own passion for them. His book is interesting, not only because the heart of the author is obviously in his subject, but because every page is embellished with the most admirable photographs of Grenoble and its surroundings."

+ New Statesman 22:680 Mr 15 '24 300w

Outlook 137:204 Je 4 '24 120w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:379 Jl '24

FERVAL, CLAUDE, pseud. (BARONNE MARGUERITE AIMERY DE PIERREBOURG). Life and death of Cleopatra; tr. by M. E. Poindexter. 321p $2.50 Doubleday [18s Hurst & B.]

Cleopatra, queen of Egypt 24-24603

Tho following the general historical outline of Cleopatra's life, the author has used so much imagination in filling out the details that the book reads like an historical romance. It opens with Caesar's entry on the scene and the young Egyptian queen's appeal to his omnipotence to restore her crown from her usurping brother. By far the greater part of the book is given to her seduction of Mark Antony which the author also attributes, in the first place, to a political motive.

Booklist 21:107 D '24

"He tells her story simply and well, and adds, as is his avowed aim, a little further light on 'the mysterious ways of that wonderful woman.'"

+ Bookm 60:507 D '24 180w

"This is one of the most florid and heightened pieces of historical writing we have encountered in a long time. M. Ferval's work lacks the judicial balance of the historian but it does give a colorful and inspiriting picture of a gorgeous time and a scintillating figure. It is not without its virtues. It is an historical romance of exceeding fascination and it portrays its subject with a commendable respect for facts." S. L. C.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 O 25 '24 520w

"The book is delightfully written and well translated. The reader will find here the familiar stories retold in a fine way, historical accuracy in facts, and the greatest heroine with which a novelist has ever had to deal."

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8b D 7 '24 700w

"The book is picturesque, but it does not help us much to discover the infinite charm of Cleopatra."

— + New Statesman 24:176 N 15 '24 950w

"His book is extremely readable in a fictional way, but any one who reads it for the purpose of getting information about Cleopatra will need to consult other dependable biographies constantly in order to be sure where fact ends and fiction begins on M. Ferval's pages. As a semi-fictional biography the book is gorgeously graphic."

— + N Y Times p21 O 12 '24 320w

"No one can spoil the gorgeous story of Cleopatra, but M. Claude Ferval and his translator, M. E. Poindexter, give us a résumé, not a recreation. . . Even sober, good Anne Strickland, with her painstaking needle-worked lives of the Queens of England, could have patiently pricked us a more satisfying introduction to the Egyptian Queen."

— N Y Tribune p5 S 28 '24 180w

N Y Tribune p7 D 21 '24 70w

"Her story has been often told but never with greater wealth of detail, or even with more art than by Claude Ferval." C. G. Bowers

+ N Y World p9e O 19 '24 1100w

"Like so many writers of historical novels, the author is a little too informative in archæological details, but she has written a book which gives a vivid picture of the life of Cleopatra and the times in which she lived, and the illustrations are admirable."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p670 O 23 '24 80w

FICKE, ARTHUR DAVISON. Out of silence and other poems. 116p $2 Knopf

811 24-5685

Mr Ficke's latest collection of poems is mostly in his favorite medium of the sonnet, with some lyrics and two longer poems, the first of which, a tribute to his mother, is the title-poem. The book closes with a group of sonnets on Chinese themes.

"'Out of Silence' is a volume compact with that grace and celerity of adaptation to various moods manifest in previous books by this poet; but there is no lift to greater heights, no increasing breadth, nor any particular depth. Mr. Ficke's work continues to be surface work, a matter of musical lyrics, a quite definitive excellence in the sonnet form (although there is nothing here so good as 'The Sonnets of a Portrait Painter'), and the usual Chinese influences." H. S. Gorman

— + Bookm 59:468 Je '24 150w

Cleveland p69 S '24

Dial 77:83 Jl '24 50w

Reviewed by Robert Nichols

Int Bk R p67 D '24 470w

Reviewed by W: R. Benet

Lit R p918 Jl 26 '24 150w

"Lovely, cool verse by the accomplished author of 'Sonnets of a Portrait Painter.' Mr. Ficke fashions as graceful a line as is to be found in contemporary American poetry. Without conspicuous strength he eminently succeeds by virtue of his intelligence and his purity of tone."

+ Nation 118:688 Je 11 '24 50w

"Mr. Ficke has too little 'resistance.' He writes about things that present themselves before him. He is entirely passive, responding almost automatically to the stimuli of a casual world. He is active only in his will-to-write, and I imagine him as welcoming every opportunity to satisfy this one passion." W: A. Norris

— New Repub 40:26 S 3 '24 600w

"As usual, this new book exhibits the versatility of the poet, a versatility distinctly limited in its poetical reach and not particularly important, but nevertheless pleasing to the ear. But the lyrics which form a large part of the book are both limited and innocuous. They are musical scraps and nothing more."
— + N Y Times p7 Mr 30 '24 450w

"Out of the seventy poems included a bare half-dozen reach the level of 'Sonnets of a Portrait Painter.' But these six are very good. indeed, more than making up for the others. The others are facile, but uninspired. They are descriptive without being vivid, introspective without striking one as being particularly true. Some have that strained air of having been written by a puritan turned voluptuary. But mostly they are placid and gentle, without the sharp cry of beauty or the anguish of love." Milton Raison
+ — N Y Tribune p26 Je 8 '24 260w
Wis Lib Bul 20:124 My '24

FIELD, RACHEL LYMAN. Pointed people. 98p il $1.25 Yale univ. press [6s Milford]
811 24-21056

"Verses written as from a child's point of view telling about trees and flowers, elves and fairies, about real people like great-uncle William, or again just thoughts and fancies caught in engaging rhyme. Illustrated with many attractive silhouettes."—Booklist

Booklist 21:116 D '24

"Each poem is a little gem in itself, written in simple English, carefully constructed, yet showing no sign of artifice, while the illustrations have the same dainty completeness and alluring quality. It is a little book to fascinate children old and young."
+ Boston Transcript p6 N 1 '24 320w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p765 N 20 '24 380w

FIELD, RACHEL LYMAN. Six plays; with ^{2} foreword by George P. Baker. 153p $1.25 Scribner
812 24-29331

Here are six one-act plays designed for the amateur actor of school age—eight to eighteen. They call for small casts, never more than eight, usually four to six, and the mechanical requirements and scenery are simple. All the pieces printed are on the borderland where fact shifts to fancy. "Cinderella married" takes up the tale of Cinderella's marital happiness. "Theories and thumbs" deals with the devotion of a scrubwoman to an imaginary child embodied in a museum mummy. The other plays are: Three pills in a bottle; Columbine in business; The patchwork quilt; Wisdom teeth.

"Conceived with a daring fantasy of imagination, executed with all the care and skill of an accomplished workman, the plays which constitute her volume are an admirable collection." B. P. H.
+ Boston Transcript p4 D 27 '24 560w
Reviewed by J: W. Crawford
N Y World p8e D 14 '24 90w

FILENE, A. LINCOLN, and KLINE, BURTON. Merchant's horizon. 265p $2.50 Houghton
331.15 Employees' representation in management 24-11771

"In this book Mr Filene states conclusions derived from his own experience on such matters as profit-sharing, shop councils, pensions, welfare work, and vocational training."—R of Rs

"This is a book which deals with questions that concern us all. It may well be read by the man of public affairs as well as the man of private business, and by the citizen in an independent career as well as by the intelligent wage-earner." V: S. Clark
+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Ag '24 500w
Booklist 21:8 O '24
Management and Adm 8:95 Jl '24 130w
Reviewed by W: MacDonald
N Y Times p10 Je 1 '24 1200w
N Y Tribune p26 Je 15 '24 70w
Outlook 138:298 O 22 '24 50w
R of Rs 70:110 Jl '24 80w

FILENE, EDWARD ALBERT. Way out; a forecast of coming changes in American business and industry. 306p $2.50 Doubleday
658 Business. United States—Economic conditions 24-27360

The author, a successful and forward-looking merchant (he styles himself a shopkeeper), describes his book "as the record of one man's search for the theory and practice of business that would make for permanently successful business and sound social advance." He believes we are facing changes in business and industry as far reaching as those that followed the introduction of machine power into industry. As he sees them these changes will come thru a further extension of mass production and mass distribution and he believes that the primary emphasis in industry must be put upon service to the customer.

Booklist 21:136 Ja '25

"Mr. Filene's remarks are interesting and worth reading." J. G.
+ Bookm 60:adv D '24 120w

"Mr. Filene has theories that are based on years of successful experience. It is to men like these, broadminded and liberal, with a sane and solid background, that one listens with profit and respect. . . Mr. Filene has made a thorough and comprehensive survey of the industrial situation and prospects and his resultant theories and comments are worthy of study by all students of economical and social conditions." W. B.
+ Boston Transcript p7 N 26 '24 850w

"There has been within recent years no book on business methods, affairs and outlook quite so suggestive, so inspiring, so clear-visioned and far-sighted as this. One may not agree with all that Mr. Filene says, but at least he makes the reader do a lot of thinking. It is a particularly good book for the young business man to read, but, for that matter, it is also a good book for almost any one to read who is intelligently interested in life."
+ N Y Times p20 N 30 '24 720w
Outlook 138:513 N 26 '24 10w

FINCK, HENRY THEOPHILUS. Musical ^{2} laughs. 333p $1.75 Funk
817 Music 24-31289

"Jokes, tittle-tattle, and anecdotes, mostly humorous, about musical celebrities, gathered during his forty-three years as musical editor of the New York Evening Post." (Sub-title) Contents: Humorous side-lights on musicians; Stories about opera-singers; Witty pianists; Fiddle-faddle; Conductorial comics; Fun and pathos in the creative world; A few jokes about organists; Music teachers and students; Critical capers; A serio-comic medley.

"A medley of serio-comic remnants completes this amiable work, in which the veteran critic bids good-bye to his faithful public. He leaves them the richer for some excellent additions to their present fund of transferable stories and for much light shed upon certain aspects of musical life rarely or never disclosed to the outside world." Winifred Katzin
+ Int Bk R p97 Ja '25 1150w

"Some of the stories are rather dull, their only excuse for publication being the persons who figure in them."
— + N Y World p8m Ja 4 '25 140w

FINGER, CHARLES JOSEPH. Bushrangers. ² 216p il $3 McBride
24-29100

Like his "Highwaymen" the heroes of these tales were outlaws and most of them ended their careers on the gallows or in the convict colony. The first and longest tale is of "Stormy Petrel" Popjoy who for his own entertainment broke up the coronation ceremonies of King George IV and forced the royal procession to return to the palace by way of back streets and the servants' entrance. The book is illustrated with woodcuts by Paul Honoré. Contents: By way of preface; Popjoy; Captain Moonlight; Beresford of Ballarat; Ned Kelly & co.; Andrew Lang.

"Mr. Finger's latest thriller from life is worth a dozen books of fictitious adventure."
+ Nation 119:713 D 24 '24 230w

"Mr. Finger has admirably succeeded in making the tales in 'Bushrangers' 'jolly reading.' But it must also be said that he has succeeded in making them into something else—a something far too powerful to be dismissed by any such casual word as 'jolly.'" J. M. March
+ N Y Times p15 D 28 '24 1100w

Reviewed by P. F. Sifton
N Y World p9e N 30 '24 620w
Outlook 138:654 D 17 '24 40w

FINGER, CHARLES JOSEPH. Highwaymen; a book of gallant rogues. 258p il $3 McBride
24-82

A collection of stories built around the exploits of such notorious highwaymen as Col Thomas Blood, noted for his attack on the Duke of Ormond and his attempt to steal the crown jewels from the Tower; Jack Sheppard and his remarkable escapes from Newgate; Dick Turpin and his famous ride to York on his mare Black Bess; Claude Duval, as noted for his gallantry to the ladies as for the daring of his robberies; and Bill of Tierra del Fuego, highwayman of a later day.

Booklist 20:297 My '24

"Stirring tales of thieves."
+ Cleveland p16 F '24
+ Dial 76:199 F '24 60w

"These are brisk and well-told stories of Mr. Finger's, set down in a compact and unadorned prose which goes well with the racy events depicted. Robbery, in those times, implied circulation of the blood as well as of the currency; one feels the tingle upon these pages." L. B.
+ Freeman 8:526 F 6 '24 200w

"Mr. Finger is hardly one to destroy a legend that has been repeated for generations by men with gleaming eyes as they beguile the hours over their cups in ale-houses; he smacks his lips as his heroes issue forth, he drinks with them as they quaff their ale and porter, he is one of the mob that cheers them as they climb over the housetops, he joins in the hisses that greet the executioner at Tyburn." Harry Hansen
+ — Nation 118:259 Mr 5 '24 1200w

"It is impossible not to suspect that the author has embroidered his rich tales so much that he has brought them into line with fiction. But his embroidery is never clumsy and always of the appropriate historical material."
+ N Y Times p7 Ja 13 '24 1700w

"A boy who should receive this as a birthday gift would either be scared stiff or tickled to death by the double-page picture of the old-time highwayman in action that precedes these narratives. . . We thank Mr Finger for enlarging and renewing our acquaintance with all these (pseudo) romantic, ribald rascals."
+ Outlook 136:322 F 20 '24 330w
Wis Lib Bul 20:69 Mr '24

FINGER, CHARLES JOSEPH. In lawless lands. 292p $2.50 Kennerley
24-8163

The title well describes the collection of fifteen short stories—tales of primitive life and primitive passions in strange countries and under strange conditions. Contents: The shame of gold; My friend Julio; Some mischievous thing; Ebro; Hyenas; Canassa; The jade piece; A very satisfactory god; My spottgeist; Eric; Dust to dust; The lizard god; Jack Random; Incongruity; Ma-ha-su-ma.

"Mr Finger can make a deal of a slender plot. He has an eye for color and for picturesque action. This collection should please all who like to pass their leisure hours in half-forgotten corners of the world companioned by dangerous adventure. Toward such a life Mr. Finger shows himself here an able and entertaining guide."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 30 '24 320w

"He invariably knows how to entertain the reader; and, moreover, he intersperses his stories with bits of keen common sense that serve to lift them above the level of mere Munchausen yarns."
+ Lit R p809 Je 7 '24 200w

'With the publication of these short stories of Charles Finger a distinctive and original personage is added definitely to our contemporary writers."
+ N Y Times p9 Ap 6 '24 800w
N Y Tribune p25 My 25 '24 140w

"Unusual stories. Very few are pleasant, but all are gripping in their intensity; one reads eagerly despite the hateful characters Mr Finger knows so well how to portray."
Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 13 '24 250w
Wis Lib Bul 20:178 Jl '24

FINGER, CHARLES JOSEPH. Tales from silver lands. 225p il $3.50 Doubleday
Fairy tales 24-26940

Fairy tales which Mr. Finger learned from the Indians of South America. Illustrated with woodcuts by Paul Honoré. Contents: A tale of three tails; The magic dog; The calabash man; Na-Ha the fighter; The humming-bird and the flower; The magic ball; El Enano; The hero twins; The four hundred; The killing of Cabrakan; The tale of the gentle folk; The tale that cost a dollar; The magic knot; The bad wishers; The hungry old witch; The wonderful mirror; The tale of the lazy people; Rairu and the star maiden; The cat and the dream man.

Booklist 21:116 D '24

"Another book of strong character and definite quality." A. C. Moore
+ Bookm 60:167 O '24 120w

"Intended primarily as a book for younger readers, it is so rich in pure beauty, so imbued with charm in every page that none who are still able to enjoy the literature of faery can afford to neglect it." Herschel Brickell
+ Lit R p14 O 11 '24 350w

"There are nineteen tales in this book and all reflect the flavor of the lands of their origin. Mr. Finger's service in gathering them is a valuable one, and in the telling he remains a self-effacing troubadour, never diverting the interest of the reader from his story to himself." Harry Hansen
+ N Y Tribune p6 O 26 '24 700w

"Stories that are entertaining, amusing, and interesting." L. St J: Power
+ Outlook 138:410 N 12 '24 350w

"Unfortunately few men to whom things happen in the open can convey the color of them in a public record. But here is one who can; here is one who can recall the striking phrase of the half-tranced recital he heard long ago and far away, and can remold it in English that gives the glamour. Casually presented as are these tales of ancient imagination they are a distinct addition to the world's folklore." W: R. Benet
+ Sat R of Lit 1:380 D 13 '24 580w

FINOT, JEAN. Race prejudice; tr. by Florence Wade-Evans. 320p $3 Dutton

572 Race problems. Ethnology

The thesis of the book is the essential unity and equality of the human race. M. Finot analyzes the successive theories of the inequality of the races and finds nothing to justify the division into superior and inferior beings. The only difference is that some races and peoples are living inside and others outside the influence of culture. The superior civilization of certain white races and within certain geographical bounds is only the effect of circumstances. Life transcends all artificial divisions and moves steadily forward toward unity.

Reviewed by J. D. Newson
Bookm 60:227 O '24 700w

"With the general intention of the author of this book, namely the encouragement of brotherly feeling amongst different races, everyone must sympathize, and the extent of his reading cannot be denied. Nevertheless we doubt if the book will effect its purpose." B. C. A. W.
+ — Cath World 120:425 D '24 400w

Reviewed by E. F. Young
Int J Ethics 35:192 Ja '25 620w

"If M. Finot errs so egregiously in his literary judgment, must we accept his anthropological word as final? The probability is that the drift of his argument is sound; but his logic is often more scintillant than sound. The book is a noteworthy contribution to a battle no more than half completed. The truth exceeds the error; and that is much in an age deafened with vociferous pseudo-science." Clement Wood
+ — Lit R p14 Ag 30 '24 1000w
N Y World p8e Ag 3 '24 380w

FIRBANK, ARTHUR ANNESLEY RONALD. Prancing nigger; with an introd. by Carl Van Vechten. 126p $2 Brentano's
24-5944

"This tale of the British West Indies has never before been published. The story is of the exodus of the Mouth family, father, mother, two daughters and a son from the village of Mediaville to the metropolis of Cuna-Cuna for the purpose of 'breaking into society' and forming desirable matrimonial alliances. Mrs. Mouth is mundane and brisk, eager for the unfamiliarity of clothes and the hazardous restraints of 's'ciety': as a young girl of 8 she was 'distracting to all de gen'lemen.' Amahdou Mouth, 'Prancing Nigger,' is deeply religious and opposed to surrender to the abominations of the city. The tragic dissolution of the family's fair hopes has the detachment of cool, slightly tarnished fresco. The story has a feeling at once aged and ageless."—N Y Times

"The author's style is brilliant. It is heady and exotic; it is airy and delicate; it is unreal and phantasmagorical. In this slight tale, however, it describes languorously and sensuously life and love on a decidedly low social plane."
+ — Boston Transcript p4 Je 4 '24 300w

"Mr Firbank's latest and for us, his most exquisite impropriety in prose. Readers of Mr Firbank's former novels will vouch that the curious country of his mind has no relation to any known terrestrial region ruled by a presumably moral Providence; it is rather a floating island adrift this time in the cobalt waters of the Caribbean and beset by seas that are anything but forlorn. We hope that the author of Valmouth will continue to write stories as delectable as this one, if only to convince the people who reproach him with being trivial that he has never attempted to be anything else."
+ Dial 76:559 Je '24 200w

"In this depiction of the West Indian negro, the writer who can make even the commonplace exotic has permitted himself a gorgeous holiday in a land of lush tropic beauty, peopled by characters whose thorough primitiveness is a joy to his sophistication. . . 'Prancing Nigger' is Firbank in his suavest and most amusing, tho not most indecorous, vein." B. R. Redman
+ Int Bk R p586 Jl '24 920w

"'Prancing Nigger' is a highly sophisticated novel, the product of an experienced hand, and of a remarkable mind. More than a little of mockery—a fling at civilization, humorous and high spirited." Herschel Brickell
+ Lit R p661 Ap 12 '24 480w

"With genuine humor and the utter sophisticate's thorough relish of the delicately scabrous. Mr Firbank tells the story of their adventures and he makes of it something utterly exotic, utterly fascinating, and, it must be admitted, utterly depraved." J. W. Krutch
+ — Nation 118:685 Je 11 '24 360w

"Mr. Firbank has far more taste for the actual flavor, even the rank flavor of life than most of the writers of the Yellow Book period to whose school he essentially belongs. . . It is not by reason of a lighter touch that Firbank surpasses Aldous Huxley and Max Beerbohm but through his superior artistic seriousness. It is this authenticity combined with strangeness which affords us the peculiar satisfaction we derive from him at his best—the satisfaction in the intensely and personally felt world of the first-rate artist." Edmund Wilson
+ New Repub 38:342 My 21 '24 1300w

"It is obliquely visual, as though it were witnessed in entirety from aloof yet discerningly selective eyes. But, after all, itself is its own best advocate, and itself will keep you reading it until it slips out of your reluctant fingers."
+ N Y Times p8 Mr 23 '24 720w

FIREBAUGH, W. C. Inns of Greece and Rome and a history of hospitality from the dawn of time to the middle ages; with an introd. by Wallace Rice. 271p il $7.50 F. M. Morris, 24 N. Wabash st., Chicago

913.38 Greece—Social life and customs. Rome—Social life and customs. Inns
24-2338

An account of the inns and taverns of antiquity as described by contemporary writers chiefly. The first two chapters go as far back as the inns of Egypt, Assyria and Babylon and the inn at Bethlehem in the stable of which Joseph and Mary were forced to take shelter. The rest of the book is concerned with the inns of Greece and Rome, not only the taverns themselves but their proprietors and patrons, the quality of the service, the foods and drinks and entertainment offered, and the manners of those who frequented them.

"The volume nominally deals with inns. In reality it gives one an amazing view, all taken from original sources, of life in early times. And the book itself is gorgeous." F. I. W.
+ Boston Transcript p3 F 9 '24 750w

"Mr. Firebaugh has written an interesting book, and the reader will rejoice that he is a dweller in the sunlight of today, not compelled by his thirst and weariness to entrust himself to the Roman predecessor of one of Hogarth's gin-shops."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p206 Ap 3 '24 1000w

FIRESTONE, CLARK BARNABY. Coasts of illusion. 410p il $4 Harper

910 Geographical myths. Animals, Mythical. Legends
24-28913

The book presents "those myths and half-myths of geography which are loosely and yet significantly called travel tales. It treats of various countries and races and animals which are, or were, or might have been. Altho their true domain is the imagination, their supposed domain is, or was, somewhere on the earth." Among these myths are lands of legend like Arcadia, Atlantis, and the Kingdom of Prester John; people like the Pygmies, the Satyrs and the Amazons; fabulous beasts like the unicorn and the dragon; and those birds of legend, the phoenix and the roc.

FIRESTONE, C. B.—Continued

"Mr. Firestone has done good work in his voyaging about the Coasts of Illusion. He has done more than garner fabulous creatures —his skill has been enough to embalm them alive—more than simply hoard myth, but has kept the vigor and freshness of their youth. It is truly an absorbing volume." S. L. R.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 10 '25 900w

"He knows not only the obvious sources—Herodotus, Lucian, Pliny, Marco Polo, Mandeville, Hakluyt, Purchas, Sir Thomas Browne, 'The Golden Bough,' and 'Primitive Culture'—but hundreds of obscure studies and stories; his feast is rich if somewhat irregularly served. At any rate, here for the reader's delight are tons of information about unicorns, griffins, harpies, rocs, and cockatrices; about noseless, headless, one-eyed, and dog-headed people; about satyrs, pigmies, Amazons, troglodytes, and gnomes; about Arcadia, Bohemia, Prester John's kingdom, the lotus-land, and the land of Gog and Magog; about Atlantis, Elysium, and Lyonesse; about El Dorado, the Spice Islands, and the Fountain of Youth; and about the Sargasso Sea." Mark Van Doren

+ Nation 119:602 D 3 '24 350w

N Y World p9e D 28 '24 260w

"Almost an encyclopædia in size and comprehensiveness. A fascinating book."

+ Outlook 138:654 D 17 '24 50w

R of Rs 71:110 Ja '25 100w

FIRKINS, OSCAR W. William Dean Howells. 2 356p $4 Harvard univ. press

813 Howells, William Dean 24-29670

This study is more literary than biographical. Beginning with a summary of the facts of Mr Howells's life of which he has himself made record, Mr Firkins reviews in succession the autobiographical works in which these records are embodied, the novels, plays and poems, and lastly, the works of literary criticism, concluding with chapters on his style and his humor. Individual works are analyzed in considerable detail. There is a bibliography and an index.

"Professor Firkins is a strict judge, though ardently admiring. Even the best artists have their Homeric 'noddings,' and these he is not slow to detect and expose. But the sympathy of the critic with his author is constant and close, and the reader feels that the work of dissection is a labor of love. To a superficial mind his treatment may often seem labored and even intricate. A sluggish mind may grow weary in striving to follow the process, but the task is worth the effort." J. K. Hosmer

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 17 '25 2500w

"This unusually handsome and durable model of book-making helps to suggest a deserved longevity for the author whose richness and versatility are set forth wtih rare skill in its pages." C. C. Buel

+ Lit R p2 D 27 '24 1200w

"A many-sided, discerning and graciously phrased criticism of an author which places the author clearly and securely against a national background and orients him with regard to the evolution of the art of fiction to which, both as creator and as critic, be made a significant contribution."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 25 '25 1200w

FISH, HORACE FRANCIS XAVIER. Saint's theatre. 386p $2.50 Huebsch [7s 6d Cassell]

24-7953

"The story of how Terisita of Tarrasa in the Spanish Pyrenees, discovers that womanhood comes before sainthood. A protégée of the good priest of Tarrasa, the young and beautiful Terisita waxes in piety, until she performs miracles of healing. The villagers adore Terisita. And particularly do Rolando and Bernardo adore her. But Terisita's young heart is set on heavenly things, and for a season, the lame, the halt, and the blind of Tarrasa and its vicinity rise and call her blessed. For nearly four hundred closely printed pages, the author analyzes tirelessly the process by which 'little Saint Terisita' becomes a woman who knows that to love and to be loved is the highest vocation to which she can be called."—Boston Transcript

"We remember nothing like it. To the religious, or as specific Roman Catholic reading matter, it may appeal. Outside of that it is difficult to imagine its doing so. For ourselves we confess complete boredom, punctuated by intermittent wonder that anyone possessed of such a sympathetic understanding of Spanish village life, and possessed as well of an uncommon fertility of expression, could have concocted a story so unconvincing, so even futile."

— + Boston Transcript p7 My 10 '24 400w

N Y Times p8 My 11 '24 600w

FISHER, MRS DOROTHEA FRANCES (CANFIELD) (MRS JOHN REDWOOD FISHER). The home maker. 320p $2 Harcourt [7s 6d Cape]

24-26382

Evangeline Knapp's home, while perfectly run on its physical side, was a place of unrest because of her rebellious discontent. Like a martyr she went about her uncongenial task and the atmosphere created by her nervousness and nagging rested like a heavy weight on her husband and children, in whose health, even, it was reflected. One child reacted to it by open rebellion. The rest were crushed. As a homemaker Evangeline was obviously a misfit, while Lester, her husband, a dreamer and a poet, was equally unfitted to business life. An accident which crippled Lester led to an exchange of duties. Evangeline went to work in the department store where her husband had been a failure, but where her genius for organization and salesmanship brought her content and rapid advancement. Lester took over the tasks of the home and by his patience and serenity made it a place of peace.

"Sanity, always the basic quality in Dorothy Canfield's work, skirts the obvious, and there are moments when it crosses the borderline in this very readable little book; moments too, when the mechanics of the story obtrude; when the tract emerges. But these moments are too few to obscure the living reality of the characters, the passionate, introspective intensity of their reaction to the situation." Florence Converse

+ — Atlantic's Bookshelf Ag '24 400w

Booklist 20:337 Je '24

"'The Home-Maker' is as clever a piece of journalism as 'Black Oxen' and not much more than that. There are splendidly drawn children in the book, which is shorter than Dorothy Canfield's other novels and more direct. It will be widely discussed, the publishers assure us—and they are right. To a persistent admirer of Mrs. Fisher's novels, it is a keen disappointment."

+ — Bookm 59:590 Jl '24 170w

"The story is a very interesting story, the conclusion in my opinion is irrefutable, but I feel that scarcely once in a hundred years would we find a domestic situation which could be solved so perfectly as this one." D. L. Mann

+ — Boston Transcript p3 My 31 '24 1200w

"The problem of reversed rôles is dealt with very firmly and convincingly and the pictures of the children, wistful or wilful, but starving for the bread of the spirit, is most understanding."

+ Cleveland p42 Je '24

"The story is a slight one, and the several stages of its development are soon guessed. The characters are presented with the neat inflexibility of diagrams. Only in the treatment of the children is there warmth and penetration; they are endowed with vitality and charm by a sympathetic knowledge that never blunders into condescension."

— + Dial 77:346 O '24 60w

Reviewed by G: B. Dutton
Ind 113:48 Jl 19 '24 350w

"Dorothy Canfield Fisher is only occasionally her accomplished self in 'The Home-Maker.' Fortunately, on the other hand, it is due to her very accomplishments—they are many—that she is unable to write a thoroughly bad book, even when, as in this instance, she does merely a careless best. She seems to have exploded prematurely on a significant problem, and is herself most hurt by the explosion." Kenneth Fuessle
+ — Int Bk R p606 Jl '24 620w

"She shows all her people from both sides—no mere snap shots, but rather sculpturally rounded. She is, perhaps, most successful of all with the children. No one who has ever read any of her novels needs to be assured that simply as a story it is admirably told, and always fully alive, but it is also a book that will repay the closest study and re-reading to get the full flavor of it." H. L. Pangborn
+ Lit R p820 Je 14 '24 750w

"This is a vivid, realistic story. Much insight and valuable commonsense is shown in the description of how peevish, self-willed children should be trained. The details and little events of home life are told with a simplicity that has distinct charms, and the description of a father learning to know those mysteries—his children—is an object lesson and a delight."
+ Nation and Ath 35:330 Je 7 '24 150w

"What is striking is the vividness of some of the scenes, especially those dealing with childhood. . . And, moreover, Miss Canfield has succeeded in being fair even to the mother. There are some rather flagrant unlikelinesses in the book, but for the sake of her virtues Miss Canfield is easy to forgive." Ralph Wright
+ — New Statesman 23:382 Jl 5 '24 380w

"The book is one of those 'novels with a purpose' whose author has a point to prove, and is determined somehow to prove it. Almost inevitably such propaganda work has a touch of the manufactured, the machine-made, and this is quite obvious in 'The Home-Maker,' while the reader's interest in the book will depend largely upon his or perhaps it would be better to say—her sympathy with the author's point of view. But much of it is well and realistically handled."
+ — N Y Times p9 My 25 '24 1200w

"I suspect that it will be the most popular book she has written, certainly the most discussed; but with the exception of the superb portraits of several children it is nothing more nor less than faithful, readable, domestic reporting." J: Farrar
+ — N Y Tribune p24 Je 1 '24 600w
N Y World p7e My 25 '24 430w

"It is a good story, and there are power, pathos, and beauty in the telling."
Outlook 138:100 S 17 '24 230w

"The Home-Maker is written with great conviction and gusto, but its effect as a work of art is compromised by a manipulation of events which does not matter much, and a manipulation of reassuring and uplifting consequences which matters more. But it is an impressive and powerful piece of work." L. P. Hartley
+ — Spec 132:886 My 31 '24 390w
Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 17 '24 200w

"The book almost reads like a manual on housekeeping and salesmanship. But it is time that Miss Canfield came out of the kitchen and returned to the thoughtful style of her earlier books. It would be better for her now to take to fairy tales and let the lives of salesmen go unrecorded."
— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p341 My 29 '24 240w
Wis Lib Bul 20:178 Jl '24

FISHER, ERNEST MCKINLEY. Principles of real estate practice; with a preface by Richard T. Ely. (Land economics ser.) 309p $3.50 Macmillan

658 Real estate business 23-14422

"A full and practical exposition of the real estate specialist and his functions; real estate office organization; renting; leasing and property management; insurance; real estate selling; advertising; the valuation of real estate; building operations; financing real estate transactions; legal considerations; subdividing and city planning; taxation of real estate; the real estate profession and its relationship to the state; professional relationships; requisites to success in real estate practice."—Publisher's note

"It is well adapted for use in evening and extension classes of real estate men, and as an introductory course in departments of economics and commerce. . . The style is clear and attractive." R. E. Heilman
+ Am Econ R 14:326 Je '24 650w
Booklist 20:198 Mr '24

"This book will undoubtedly be read with interest and profit by those already in the profession and the student of land economics." L. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p5 Ja 19 '24 650w

FISHER, HERBERT ALBERT LAURENS. Common weal. 296p $2.50 Oxford [7s 6d Milford]

304 Social problems

"In his volume the author discusses social debt and social credit, the claims of body and mind, patriotism, problems in political obedience, the claims of the race, nationalism and internationalism, international law, the reduction of armaments and international relations." —Ind

"Taken as a whole this book is a timely and helpful contribution to the popular study of politics." A. K. L.
+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 16 '24 1000w
Ind 112:184 Mr 29 '24 50w

Reviewed by A. E. Zimmern
Nation and Ath 34:840 Mr 15 '24 1000w

"A book by the well-known historian and ex-Cabinet Minister on the relation of the citizen to the State should be a work of some significance. But it is not; nor does it really pretend to be. It is lucid and cultured, however, and will be useful to many a social worker when preparing addresses for boys' clubs and adult schools."
+ — New Statesman 23:49 Ap 19 '24 350w

"The book is in itself both captivating and suggestive, its style unpedantic, and its message elevated. But the general effect left on our minds is that amid much good sense and a studied impartiality in surveying many outlooks, it both attempts too much and too little."
+ — Sat R 137:328 Mr 29 '24 1150w
Spec 132:680 Ap 26 '24 230w

"This little book is very characteristic of, and very creditable to, our modern English civilization."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p167 Mr 20 '24 2000w

FISHER, IRVING. America's interest in
2 world peace. 123p $1 Funk

341.1 League of nations 24-23512

This little book is a brief résumé of the author's "League or war" (Book Review Digest, 1923) with some additions to bring it to date. Like the larger book it maintains that America is making a grievous mistake in so long delaying her inevitable entrance into the World court and the League of nations.

Booklist 21:136 Ja '25
Cleveland p93 D '24

FISHER, IRVING—Continued

"Pithy little volume. It is short enough to be read in an hour or two, and yet it covers the whole subject of the League of Nations and our relation to it with masterly completeness." E. L. Shuman

Int Bk R p774 O '24 2650w

N Y Tribune p13 Ja 11 '25 130w

"The chief relation to the Constitution of Professor Irving Fisher's astonishing volume on America's Interest in World Peace lies in its blithe and insouciant disregard of that instrument. Perhaps I might properly take exception to it upon that ground. Yet, what is even the Constitution of the United States, that it should expect to be better treated than Truth itself? An extraordinary passion for inaccuracy—all the more extraordinary because so entirely unconscious and involuntary—seems to possess the author." W. F. Johnson

— No Am 220:370 D '24 380w

FISK, HARVEY EDWARD. Inter-ally debts; an analysis of war and post-war public finance, 1914-1923. 369p gratis priv ptd Bankers trust co.

336.3 European war, 1914-1919—Finance. Finance—Europe. Debts, Public 24-8896

The Bankers Trust Company of New York has prepared this book which gives statistical information about the cost of the World war and the extent of the inter-ally debts which are to be of international importance for many years to come. The accounts of twenty nations are analyzed, as far as possible from their official statistical publications.

"This work is characterized by fullness of detail, accuracy, and impartiality. It is to be noted, however, that the book is meant for popular consumption and not for the student. From the scientific point of view it is defective in not giving any notes, documentation, or references to the views of others, in both Europe and America, who have worked in this field. There is therefore no opportunity to check the statements of fact. Nor is any serious attempt made to form any definite conclusions on controversial questions of theory or principle." E. R. A. Seligman

+ — Am Econ R 14:564 S '24 380w

Bookm 59:adv Jl '24 130w

"Its value as a statistical source book should not detract from its interest as a plain record and clear explanation of the many intricate questions involved. Designed primarily for statisticians, it will prove of greater value to the student anxious to obtain a birdseye view of the problem of war finance than any other similar volume yet published."

+ N Y Times p23 S 21 '24 230w

R of Rs 70:109 Jl '24 120w

FITCH, ALBERT PARKER. None so blind. 366p $2.50 Macmillan

24-4008

A story of life at Harvard and the reactions of a group of widely differing types of men to its influence. Dick Blaisdell, son of a wealthy but middle class New York manufacturer, made a failure of his first three years of college. In his senior year he fell in love with Felicia Morland, who belonged to a fine old New England family. He determined to put up a strong fight and when he had won thru to tell her of his love. With the help of Percy Barrett, a young professor of Felicia's social class, Dick made a success of his last year. When he told Felicia he had decided to be a surgeon and asked her to wait for him, she refused, partly because he was not of her social status. Years later Felicia, married to Professor Barrett, was leading a humdrum life in a western college town, while Dick, married to the daughter of a Canadian premier, was one of the famous surgeons of his day.

Booklist 20:337 Je '24

"Faults aside, it is a distinct relief to find a book that can carry several characters, each of them fully rounded, each of them quite perfectly painted, each of them living and not easily forgettable. It is a relief, too, to find leisure and a story that has balance, crisis, and outcome, even though we are not allowed a 'happy' ending." C. B. O.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Mr 26 '24 1300w

"'None So Blind' introduces a wealth of material handled well from a technical standpoint; but it fails to create the interest which it possesses potentially." S. M.

— + Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 O 12 '24 280w

Reviewed by G: B. Dutton

Ind 112:315 Je 7 '24 450w

"The novel drags at times, but it is a heartening story for boys to read." C: McD. Puckette

+ — Lit R p719 My 3 '24 400w

"Within its limitations 'None So Blind' is a sincere and frequently an intelligent book." A. B. Parsons

+ — Nation 118:714 Je 18 '24 450w

"The Harvard life which Albert Parker Fitch describes is nearer Heaven than the Princeton of F. Scott Fitzgerald, but it is far less plausible." R. C.

New Repub 39:107 Je 18 '24 150w

"Mr. Fitch's account of student life at Harvard, and the drama which informs it, suffers from a simplifying earnestness and a consequent woodenness of his characters. He strives so desperately for impressiveness that he becomes trivial. He arouses hilarity where he intends respect, and boredom where he tried for a passionate identification of the reader with the story."

— N Y Times p8 Mr 9 '24 900w

"Although this book takes a good many more words than it needs to tell the story, it has more than the usual amount of ideas between its pages, and those facts should balance each other. As a picture of university life it is vivid and undoubtedly true although many Harvard men may not recognize their Alma Mater in these dark colors. But it is as the story of a man's fight for his own soul, that it has lasting value." Edith Leighton

+ N Y Tribune p25 Je 8 '24 600w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:292 Je '24

FITCH, CLYDE. Clyde Fitch and his letters, ed. by Montrose Jonas Moses and Virginia Gerson. 406p il $4 Little

B or 92 24-25328

The editors of the memorial edition of Clyde Fitch's plays have prepared this collection of his letters. They are simple, unaffected, spontaneous letters dashed off as the mood prompted, and full of himself, his plays, and his affection for his friends. The letters make an almost daily record of his plays and their progress from the bright day in his life when Richard Mansfield accepted his "Beau Brummel" to the opening of "The city" several months after his death.

Booklist 21:149 Ja '25

Reviewed by S. L. Cook

Boston Transcript p8 D 6 '24 2800w

"This book will be a disappointment to those readers who expect to find in it much about the mysteries of stage craft, inner theatrical history, or the science or theories of dramatic composition. But it is exceedingly interesting as the unconscious revelation of a delicate, energetic, distinctive and fascinating personality." J. R. Towse

+ Lit R p4 N 15 '24 1450w

Reviewed by R: Mansfield

N Y Times p7 N 2 '24 1100w

"The editors of this book have not only let Clyde Fitch reveal himself, but they have presented an important chapter in the history of the American stage. It is a thoroughly enjoyable book." E. L. Pearson

+ Outlook 138:690 D 24 '24 180w

R of Rs 70:669 D '24 140w

FITCH, JOHN ANDREWS. Causes of industrial unrest. 424p $3 Harper

331.8 Industrial relations. Labor and laboring classes—United States 24-20077

"Mr. Fitch has spent some fifteen years as an investigator and student of labor affairs. For many years he was on the staff of the Survey, and now is a member of the faculty of the New York School of Social Work. . . The industrial struggle revolves around certain fixed issues, and in this book Mr. Fitch looks at these in clear perspective. He traces the conflict over hours of labor. He examines the wage-earner's pocketbook and sees that the desire for more income is universal. He detects in unemployment and the fear of it a cause of industrial unrest. . . He reviews the government in relation to unrest. He shows how the workers are irritated by certain policing methods, how laws, injunctions and judicial decisions sometimes exercise an effect upon the worker's state of mind far beyond their intrinsic importance as checks to his purposes. And he sketches the growing monotony of modern industrial processes. But his chief contribution is a restatement, fuller than is usually found, of the worker's substantial psychology." —Sat R of Lit

---

Booklist 21:94 D '24
Cleveland p94 D '24
Lit R p15 N 1 '24 200w
Management and Adm 8:538 N '24 200w
Nation and Ath 36:422 D 13 '24 150w

"This is not a textbook or an abstract treatise: it is a carefully documented record of human experience. By far the most suggestive chapters in the book are those in which Mr. Fitch deals with the status of the workingman in industry." Evans Clark
+ N Y Times p15 Ag 31 '24 1800w

"A very wise and very well documented account of the things which trouble the industrial worker in modern civilization, by a very thoughtful and tolerant man." Stuart Chase
+ N Y Tribune p11 O 5 '24 600w

"Mr. Fitch gives this case clearly. He gets under the facts with a crowbar, writes a first story of his findings, submits it to both sides, and asks for corrections. Employers, unused to such treatment, are sometimes surprised. They come back at him, sometimes with new facts, occasionally with diatribe. He subjects their new facts to inquiry, and when his story is published it not only tells the important truth, but tells it in a way that nobody can attack." W. D. Lane
+ Sat R of Lit 1:142 S 27 '24 1100w

"There is probably no single book in which a fuller, a more candid and more discerning treatment of this issue and its background has been offered. I wish every citizen might read it." G: Soule
+ Survey 52:635 S 15 '24 1250w

FITZGERALD, EDWARD. Edward Fitzgerald and Bernard Barton; ed. by F. R. Barton; with a foreword by Viscount Grey of Fallodon. 190p il $2.50 Putnam [8s 6d William & N.]

B or 92 FitzGerald, Edward 24-14053

"Between 1839 and 1856, Edward FitzGerald wrote many letters to Bernard Barton, father of the woman with whom the famous recreator of Omar Khayyam contracted a strange marriage that ended suddenly after a few weeks. Occasional glimpses of Carlyle and others of literary significance appear in these pages. Some details of the hapless marriage of FitzGerald and Miss Barton are given in the final pages of the volume."—Boston Transcript

---

Boston Transcript p5 Ap 30 '24 600w

"Charming letters; and a charming book generally."
+ Dial 77:349 O '24 150w

"In every letter there are amusing personal observations and in all the letters a sense of beauty, of color, and form, which makes one understand the Translator of the Rubaiyat." F. D. W. G.
+ Ind 112:290 My 24 '24 190w

Reviewed by S: C. Chew
Lit R p900 Jl 19 '24 450w

Reviewed by G. L. Dickinson
Nation and Ath 34:378 D 8 '23 1200w

Reviewed by R: Le Gallienne
N Y Times p7 My 25 '24 2300w

"The book is full of charm and the temptation to quote overwhelming." Guy Eglington
+ N Y Tribune p26 Ap 27 '24 680w

"They are mainly jolly, intimate notes in which we get pleasant passing views of Alfred Tennyson, James Spedding and Thomas Carlyle." D. C. Seitz
+ N Y World p6e Ap 20 '24 300w
Outlook 137:613 Ag 20 '24 40w

"The most timorous need have no fears. The new letters, if not quite so good as the old, are of the same delightful family."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p746 N 8 '23 1250w

FITZPATRICK, JOHN CLEMENT. Spirit of
2 the Revolution; new light from some of the original sources of American history. 300p il $4 Houghton

973.3 United States—History—Revolution 24-27683

Studies made from manuscript sources in the Library of Congress of special aspects of the American revolution—obscure and intimate topics the records of which are not easily accessible. Contents: The manuscript from which Jefferson wrote the Declaration of Independence; Discovery of the Declaration of Independence by the people of the United States; The travels of the Declaration of Independence; Washington's headquarters in seven states; The aides-de-camp of General George Washington; General Washington's Valley Forge expenses; The committees of correspondence and safety of the Revolutionary war; The continental army uniform; Bread and the superintendent of bakers of the continental army; The bands of the continental army; The invalid regiment and its colonel; The story of the purple heart; Peace and demobilization in 1783; A liberty loan of the Revolution; A sea captain of the Revolution; The "United States of America" and the "U. S. A."; The post-office of the Revolutionary war; The personal seal and visiting-card of bygone days in America; Some words of Washington which apply to-day; Index.

"Highly interesting essays."
+ Outlook 138:564 D 3 '24 40w

"Whoever reads Mr. Fitzpatrick's vibrant chapters will not fail to get a better understanding of 'the times that tried men's souls.'"
+ R of Rs 70:670 D '24 170w
Springf'd Republican p10 D 19 '24 500w

FLAHERTY, ROBERT J., and FLAHERTY, FRANCES HUBBARD. My Eskimo friends, "Nanook of the north." 170p il $5 Doubleday

917.12 Eskimos. Belcher islands 24-23155

The pictures of Nanook the Bear, Mr Flaherty's Eskimo friend, who went with him while he made his moving picture films, have gone into most of the odd corners of the world. The author describes some of the adventures by which he secured his wonderful pictures, the explorations leading to his discovery of the Belcher islands, nearly blocking the entrance to James Bay, and his traverses of Ungava peninsula, Labrador. Illustrated with photogravures and color plates from photographs by the author, half-tone drawings by Eskimo artists and maps.

Booklist 21:106 D '24
Boston Transcript p2 N 15 '24 780w

FLAHERTY, R. J. and F. H.—Continued

"It is difficult in writing of this book to refrain from quoting some of the very marvelous bits of description found in it. The strange and terrible beauty of the Arctic is threaded through every page." Barrett Willoughby

+ N Y Tribune p17 D 7 '24 680w

FLAMMARION, CAMILLE. Haunted houses. 391p $2.50 Appleton [21s 6d Unwin]

133 Ghosts. Psychical research 24-15480

Camille Flammarion has long been a patient investigator of psychic phenomena. In this book he gives the results of his study of over five thousand reports of haunted houses all over the world. It is an interesting collection of ghost stories.

Booklist 21:6 O '24

"The evidence is certainly startling. Whether it proves existence of invisible beings in our atmosphere and existence after death will be answered by each reader for himself. Whether he is seeking for evidence of survival after death or not, if he is looking for ghost stories that are exciting, he will find enough to satisfy him in this volume."

Boston Transcript p4 D 24 '24 630w

Cleveland p92 D '24

"His new book, 'Haunted Houses,' treats this long-derided, illusive subject in an up-to-date, business-like way. Coming right down to fundamental facts not to be denied and grasped readily by the hardest-headed skeptic, he shows that ghosts have long been recognized by law." Joan Benedict

+ Lit R p950 Ag 9 '24 1550w

Reviewed by H. de G. Salter

Nation and Ath 35:723 S 13 '24 100w

"Flammarion's work is thorough and cumulative. The cases he piles up have astounding effect, all the more because of the hard, metallic, unsentimental way in which he collates them." C: W. Thompson

+ N Y Times p12 Jl 27 '24 950w

"'Haunted Houses' is hard work getting into, by reason of the innumerable controversial asides which present a barrier before the core of the work. This core, once pierced, is found to contain as fine a collection of ghost stories as one might wish."

N Y World p6e Jl 6 '24 230w

Outlook 138:65 S 10 '24 30w

St Louis p366 N '24

Reviewed by Mary Austin

Sat R of Lit 1:6 Ag 2 '24 950w

Spec 131:1052 Je 28 '24 250w

"M. Flammarion has devoted years to the collection of these phenomena from many correspondents. He throws them together without attempting much in the way of a philosophy of the subject, and, we are bound to add, without much really scientific investigation or verification."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p375 Je 12 '24 200w

FLANDRAU, GRACE HODGSON. Entranced. 323p $2 Harcourt

24-25526

This is the study of human relationships involving the love of brother and sister, and husband and wife. Dick and Rita Mallory's early life had been influenced by the divorce and remarriage of their father. Dick later marries Lydia Robinson, while Rita becomes the wife of Lydia's brother, Gordon. Thus do the Mallory's link their name with that of a respectable and wealthy family. Mr. Robinson generously gives his son-in-law an interest in his business, but Dick's eagerness to make a phenomenal success leads him into faulty business ethics which consequently jeopardize his position and honor. About the same time his sister Rita is on the brink of a dangerous affair of which her husband is unaware. So for the first time Dick and Rita recognize their lack of principles and perceive how utterly different they are than the family into which they have married.

"Mrs. Flandrau's special quality, which is brought to perfection in this book, is her ability to render atmosphere; not mere local color, nor even a personal background, but the tension and temperature, the shading and tone, of a certain group of persons involved in a given relation to each other at a definite place and time." Isabel Paterson

+ Bookm 60:496 D '24 280w

"With 'Entranced,' which is her second novel, the author must be placed well toward the front rank of contemporary American writers of fiction. Her work has not only breadth and depth of vision, but also a certain geniality, a tolerant understanding wisdom, that is apt to be rather conspicuously lacking in the most competent women novelists from Mrs. Wharton down." H. L. Pangborn

+ Int Bk R p18 D '24 480w

"Miss Flandrau writes with an underlying directness for all the feeling one acquires from the story of blurred outlines—of watching the characters through a sort of haze, or listening to them afar off, their words and thoughts blown about by interfering winds. And yet her style is singularly lucid. It is, of course, because of her concern with hidden things, with matters of the mind and spirit, that one misses somehow the hardness of outline so easily attained in a story concerning itself with externals." Herschel Brickell

— + Lit R p3 N 1 '24 600w

N Y Times p8 N 2 '24 720w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson

N Y Tribune p3 D 21 '24 850w

"If Miss Flandrau cultivates her clarity, truthfulness and accurate psychology she will undoubtedly be the considerable literary figure she promises to be." F. V. Roman

+ N Y World p9e D 7 '24 650w

"The author's keen insight into character is seconded by her skilful phraseology. This novel is a notable improvement upon her frothy previous story."

+ Springf'd Republican p5a N 23 '24 300w

FLAUBERT, GUSTAVE. Three tales; tr. and ² with a preface by Arthur McDowall. (Borzoi pocket bks.) 178p $1.25 Knopf

Contents: A simple heart; The legend of Saint Julian the hospitaller; Herodias.

"These three tales suggest the essence of Flaubert's entire genius. His prose has been carefully rendered by Arthur McDowall, whose modest preface illuminates the individuality of the tales that follow. This is a beautiful little book." W. Y.

+ Lit R p10 Ja 3 '25 140w

"The translator has managed to convey these tales to our English-reading eyes with little loss of the vitality and color of the originals."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 7 '25 270w

FLEMMING, LEONARD. Call of the veld. 255p il $3.50 Holt [12s 6d Hutchinson]

916.8 Agriculture—South Africa. South Africa 24-19861

Mr Flemming describes his experience with a piece of barren veld in South Africa which for years refused to be tamed but finally yielded to his efforts and gave him of its best. He went to South Africa when he was a mere boy and without capital or equipment began the shaping of a thousand acres into a farm. He had every kind of setback and discouragement, was scourged by locusts and drought and handicapped at every turn by lack of capital. All that he made out of the earth he put back into it and his book tells an eloquent story of the rewards he has found, which are by no means wholly material.

Boston Transcript p7 D 20 '24 400w

"He is indeed a man of energy as well as of imagination, and we are glad that he has found a spare half-hour or so to write this book. Farming to him is an adventure and he certainly makes it read like one."

+ New Statesman 23:108 My 3 '24 280w

"All Mr. Flemming's reactions, all Mr. Flemming's thoughts and theories are of the popular magazine variety." Llewelyn Powys

— N Y Tribune p10 N 16 '24 600w

"Mr. Flemming's cheery and fascinating book should be put into the hands of every boy with a taste for rural joys who is meditating a career of land work in the Colonies. It is a veritable epic of home-building."

+ Sat R 137:539 My 24 '24 280w

Sat R of Lit 1:329 N 29 '24 340w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p272 My 1 '24 150w

FLETCHER, JOSEPH SMITH. Heaven-kissed hill. 216p $1.75 Doran [2s Hodder & S.]
24-20549

"A tale of the adventures that befell a honeymoon couple in a tiny cottage tucked away in a quarry in a corner of England. Their solitude and peace is disturbed by the advent of a strange man who gives no account of himself. Close on his arrival comes Melchisedech with his three followers and events follow swiftly after that. The young couple are barred from the cottage while trying to arrange a truce and it is from their viewpoint, as the innocent bystanders, that the story is told."—Lit R

"A good yarn with honest to goodness people in it."

+ Detroit News p14 S 14 '24 150w

"It is fairly interesting, but not the best that Mr. Fletcher has done or can do." E. M. U.

— + Lit R p9 Ag 30 '24 120w

FLETCHER, JOSEPH SMITH. King versus Wargrave. 319p $2 Knopf
24-628

The description in the first chapter of a coroner's court in a squalid London neighborhood has a decided Dickens flavor. The court is investigating the murder of Marco Graffi, an Italian teacher of languages, found stabbed in his bed. His granddaughter Gemma who lived with him has been missing since the night of the murder, and the jury, on circumstantial evidence, finds her guilty. When six years later the widow of Sir Robert Wargrave comes to England with her young son, she is recognized as the missing Gemma Graffi. The action then shifts from England to Italy and the dénouement, tho melodramatic, is plausible.

Booklist 20:264 Ap '24

Boston Transcript p5 F 16 '24 60w

"This latest tale from his pen is one of the best which his fertile imagination has spawned. It is ingenious in building up its suspense, interesting in incident, and, though it falls a bit flat in the final dénouement, it is sufficiently fresh in its handling of familiar material to hold attention riveted until the last page is turned."

+ — Lit R p478 Ja 26 '24 200w

"At his best, Mr. Fletcher is very good indeed, and in his most recent novel, 'King versus Wargrave' we have him decidedly at his best. The tale is complicated, interesting and well written."

+ N Y Times p17 Ja 6 '24 720w

Wis Lib Bul 20:68 Mr '24

FLETCHER, JOSEPH SMITH. Mazaroff mystery. 267p $2 Knopf
24-16562

Mr. Mazaroff, gentleman, motors from London to Marrasdale Moor in company with young Mervyn Holt. Arriving at the Moor, events of an unusual nature are revealed. Mazaroff admits he is really Merchison and in that very neighborhood are his wife, Mrs Elphinstone, whom he deserted years ago, and his daughter, Sheila, of whose existence he has been unaware. The next day Mazaroff is murdered. Was it for his diamonds in which he dealt, or for some event in his past life? Did Mrs Elphinstone commit the murder? Before the conclusion is worked out, there are a series of surprising turns, and a romance.

Cleveland p51 Jl '24

"If this is not, to our mind, a great mystery story, it is still a very adequate one; and Mr. Fletcher has trade marked his detective fiction with that best of all brands, a high average merit within a particular field."

+ — Lit R p827 Je 14 '24 180w

"This new novel is quite as satisfactory as any of his previous tales. Perhaps the most admirable thing about the story, cleverly conceived and interestingly told though it is, is the fact that it is written with an imagination as fresh and a touch as unhackneyed as if it were Mr. Fletcher's third or fourth novel instead of his seventeenth. The ability to keep that feeling of young, unjaded, fresh delight in his work is a gift worth having in any kind of writing."

+ N Y Times p22 My 18 '24 540w

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas

N Y Tribune p23 Jl 27 '24 300w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p6e Ap 20 '24 150w

"A good average example of the work of this able, experienced, and competent expert in mysteries."

+ Outlook 137:200 Je 4 '24 300w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 20 '24 240w

Wis Lib Bul 20:148 Je '24

FLETCHER, JOSEPH SMITH. Safety pin. 399p $2 Putnam [7s 6d H. Jenkins]
24-4505

A small and apparently insignificant thing, this safety pin, but it proves to be an indicator of importance in finding a way out of the mystery surrounding a crime. James Deane, an elderly man, obviously wealthy, walks out of his hotel room in a small English city soon after his arrival and drops out of sight. Two days later, when his ward and business partner, a pretty young woman, arrives to join him by previous arrangement and a search is made, his dead body is found—undoubtedly murdered. In the tracing of this crime, it is the unexpected which happens thruout—not only in regard to clues and motives, but in the shifting of the relative positions of persons involved. The solution is satisfactorily held in suspense.

Booklist 20:338 Je '24

Cleveland p67 S '24

"Mr. Fletcher has a gift for characterization only too rare among writers of detective stories. His people are real, and their reality doubles the interest of his ingenious and well-developed plots. An exceptionally entertaining tale is this of the 'Safety Pin.' "

+ N Y Times p8 Mr 2 '24 600w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:344 Jl '24

The Times [London] Lit Sup p145 Mr 6 '24 130w

FLETCHER, JOSEPH SMITH. Time-worn town. 274p $2 Knopf
24-26924

John Wallingford, mayor of Hathelsborough, was accustomed to come every night with his books and papers to the mayor's parlor of Moot Hall, thereby incurring the resentment of petty officials who feared that his investigations might prove dangerous to the vested interests of the ancient borough. One night he was found dead at his desk, run through the heart by a knife thrust. Wallingford had evidently been going a bit too deeply into the abuses of the town and he was made to pay the penalty. Such is the setting of this mystery story.

FLETCHER, JOSEPH SMITH—Continued
Booklist 21:111 D '24
Boston Transcript p2 Jl 26 '24 240w

"The book is written in Mr. Fletcher's usual and agreeable style, and shows, too, that knack at characterization which makes so many of his people real human beings. It is a puzzling, very interesting story."
+ N Y Times p9 Jl 13 '24 450w

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas
N Y Tribune p23 Jl 27 '24 190w
Outlook 138:26 S 3 '24 40w
Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 27 '24 200w

FLETCHER, JOSEPH SMITH. Valley of headstrong men. 307p $1.75 Doran 24-9357

"A chronicle of events in a manufacturing town in Yorkshire. It has nothing to do with detectives or any puzzling mysteries, and although murder and other forms of violence are a part of its plot it deals mainly with the dominating personality and all-conquering activities of a wealthy manufacturer. The one ambition of Oliver Carsdale, possessor of a fine estate on the hills about the town of Halfirth, is to own and live in Ryvedale Abbey, down below in the valley. There he earned his first shilling as a poor lad in its gardens, and there he plans to end his days. Unexpectedly, however, a fellow townsman thwarts him by purchasing it before he is aware that it is in the market, and henceforth his days and months and years are spent in wreaking his vengeance upon his rival. The form of his vengeance is the erection of an enormous mansion facing the ancient abbey, but fate and the vengeance of another against him eventually thwart him."—Boston Transcript

Booklist 21:27 O '24

"The story is skilfully plotted, it is well told in Mr. Fletcher's customary facile manner, and its exposition of the character of Oliver Carsdale gives it a force and permanence that place it in literary quality far above his detective stories." E. F. E.
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 26 '24 350w

"Those who are expecting another detective yarn in 'The Valley of Headstrong Men' will be disappointed, but those who prefer, instead, a novel of character study will find much to please them." Tracy Lewis
Int Bk R p557 Je '24 300w

"It is a well-told, often dramatic, tale, much of whose motivation is concerned with that passionate attachment to one place, which is better known to country dwellers than to those who live in cities."
+ N Y Times p25 My 11 '24 580w

"Mr. Fletcher's early guise as a moral inquisitor is almost as grotesque as Conan Doyle's recent guise as an intellectual confabulating with spooks." A. D. Douglas
— N Y Tribune p23 Je 1 '24 300w

"Mr. Fletcher again shows himself to be a born story-teller and keeps the reader's interest awake and excited throughout."
+ Outlook 138:240 Je 11 '24 120w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:344 Jl '24
St Louis p399 D '24

FLETCHER, ROBERT JAMES (ASTERISK, pseud.). Gone native; a tale of the South seas. 332p $2 Small [7s 6d Constable]
24-24694

"The tale of a child-like woman of the South Seas and her sophisticated white lover, it is devoted largely to indicating the unbridgeable mental gulf that gapes between the mind of the civilized man and that of the savage. George Donaldson, the hero, degenerates both in mind and in body in the years that he dwells with the native woman who comes unexpectedly to his door; he discovers that the only alternative to spiritual ruin is an eventual escape from the islands; and, were it not that the author manipulates the wheels of the plot in his favor, slaying his son and causing his wife to desert him, he would undoubtedly stagnate irretrievably."—Sat R of Lit

Boston Transcript p5 N 1 '24 1200w

"The color in the story is excellent and there is no idealization of native life, which is a relief. Its interest would be fresher if the burning O'Brien had never loved and sung." G. C.
+ — Ind 113:346 N 1 '24 280w

"'Gone Native' is a well written earnest plea against the mingling of the races, written by one who has seen the evils of it at first hand. Furthermore, it is a story of the South Seas without the false glamour with which these islands have been invested." E. M. Umla
+ Lit R p12 N 1 '24 540w

"It is an interesting novel, with plenty of local colour, and, if it fails at times during the first part to hold us, there are two admirable and very moving scenes—one when Donaldson returns to save his child's life, and the other the last scene of all." Forrest Reid
+ — Nation and Ath 35:210 My 17 '24 150w
N Y Times p9 N 23 '24 720w

Reviewed by Gerald Gould
Sat R 137:490 My 10 '24 220w

"'Gone Native' is superior to many books of the South Seas in that it shows the point of view of the native as well as of the white man; it displays a detailed knowledge of native habits and ways of thought; and, while the plot is not sufficiently controlled and manifests an annoying change of emphasis in shifting the interest abruptly from the brown woman to the white man, it is none the less tolerably well written and entertaining throughout."
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:231 O 25 '24 300w

"A simple, unsentimental and thoroughly readable novel of the Pacific."
+ Spec 132:926 Je 7 '24 70w

FLINT, CHARLES RANLETT. Memoirs of an active life; men and ships and sealing wax. 349p il $5 (25s) Putnam
B or 92 23-17759

For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

Booklist 20:215 Mr '24
Boston Transcript p3 Je 26 '24 700w

"Mr. Flint's 'Memories' is a book of men and a man—a unique revelation of contemporary human beings and the frame-work in which they toiled, battled, jested and achieved. It is good to live for a while in such pages." R. D. Skinner
+ Ind 112:54 Ja 19 '24 580w

"An extraordinarily entertaining volume."
+ Lit R p598 Mr 15 '24 150w

"It is interesting and valuable material for the student of history, but to secure it the reader must endure many irrelevancies in the form of discourses on duck shooting, yacht racing and the way of a trout with a fly."
Pol Sci Q 39:544 S '24 200w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p41 Ja 17 '24 190w

FLORENCE, PHILIP SARGANT. Economics of fatigue and unrest and the efficiency of labour in English and American industry. 426p $5 Holt [16s Allen & U.]

331.8 Efficiency, Industrial. Labor and laboring classes

A scientific study of fatigue and the business costs of industrial inefficiency. The main section of the book is given to an analysis of the industrial loss to efficiency suffered thru labor turnover, absence, deficiency of output, defective output, accidents and sickness. The method of investigation is largely statistical. The economic loss is estimated for each type of inefficiency as well as the extent to which prevention is economically feasible.

"Dr. Florence's investigations are of great value...Whether the data presented are sufficient to give more than a very approximate answer to so immense an inquiry is doubtful. It is unlikely that adequate information would ever be forthcoming for a really precise result, and perhaps the book suffers a little from excess of material, which renders the main issues occasionally rather vague. Criticism, however, is beside the point. There is so much in Dr. Florence's work which is of the greatest value that not only should it be read by everyone connected with practical industrial concerns, but economic science itself should receive from it a strong impetus in a new and original direction." Alan Dane

+ Nation and Ath 35:sup252 My 24 '24 430w

"Many details will be corrected and some conclusions will be altered as more experiment is made and more observation is recorded, but on the whole Mr. Florence's contribution is an enduring one." G: Soule

+ — N Y Tribune p4 D 14 '24 1950w

Survey 53:245 N 15 '24 250w

"Readers should understand that the book is technical and difficult, not popular; but for experts, economists and intelligent employers it is a valuable work full of precise and solid information."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p456 Jl 24 '24 780w

FOAKES-JACKSON, FREDERICK JOHN. Anglican church principles. 232p $2.25 (10s 6d) Macmillan

283 Church of England—History 24-5494

In his survey of Anglicanism from the first appearance of Christianity in Britain to the present day, the author shows the features characteristic of the Church of England at different periods of its long history and the changes and crises it has passed thru while keeping its continuity unbroken.

Boston Transcript p6 My 3 '24 180w

Nation 119:659 D 10 '24 120w

R of Rs 69:560 My '24 20w

"An informing, moderate-toned and yet spirited survey."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ap 1 '24 300w

"Dr. Foakes-Jackson has the gift of attractive presentation of great historical movements, and in this volume he uses it skillfully."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p583 S 18 '24 170w

FOAKES-JACKSON, FREDERICK JOHN. Studies in the life of the early church. 263p $2.50 Doran

270.1 Church history—Primitive and early church 24-3091

In these sketches of primitive Christianity, Dr. Foakes-Jackson studies the development of the early beliefs of the church, the circumstances under which dogmas and institutions still recognized in the church came into being, the growth of the various heresies and schisms, the persecutions of the church, the early Christian apologists and the popular Christian literature of that day.

J Religion 4:441 Jl '24 40w

"It is more readable than a textbook and selects a wide field of subjects for rapid description. Unlike the technical works, it eschews the method of biography on the one hand and theology on the other. It will give a simple understanding of what the Church was like."

+ Lit R p796 My 31 '24 130w

FOLLETT, MARY PARKER. Creative experience. 303p $3 (12s 6d) Longmans

301 Experience. Social psychology 24-9443

"It is, briefly, a plea for behavioristic sociology, although it goes a step further than the behaviorists. Miss Follett calls attention to three things in a social situation: what the persons concerned are doing, what they think they are doing and what they say they are doing. She looks upon human relations as a vast interweaving of ideas out of which must come customs and laws. These need not mean compromise, a resignation of individual titles to power, but a state where the various parts coordinate for the greatest good of all."—N Y Times

"The book is 'creative' in the realm of social theory, to borrow a word from its title. But it is brilliant and suggestive rather than systematic. One wonders, as one reads, why Miss Follett touches upon so many ideas which she fails to develop fully and apply. Perhaps she intends to do this in another book. We shall have to wait in anticipation." C: A. Ellwood

+ — Am J Soc 30:223 S '24 700w

Reviewed by W. J. Shepard

Am Pol Sci R 18:617 Ag '24 850w

"Her argument, psychological and scientific by turns, pervaded here and there by apt illustrations, and not wanting in local allusions, shows a remarkable mastery of the whole subject, as well as the workings of an original mind." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 21 '24 600w

"The student of philosophy will find little novelty in fundamental conceptions, but the student of the present social process or the practical worker in that process will find many fresh applications of an old principle, and these should tend to make it a genuine working tool instead of a museum specimen." J. H. Tufts

+ — Int J Ethics 35:189 Ja '25 950w

Reviewed by H. B. Alexander

Lit R p6 Ag 30 '24 1100w

"The book is indispensable to all who, realizing that the problems of society are problems of power, are concerned to see power cooperatively generated and not coercively imposed." A. D. Sheffield

+ Nation 118:713 Je 18 '24 780w

"Miss Follett's book is an acute analysis of our prevailing political misconceptions. It is likewise a most illuminating integration of the more noteworthy conclusions of modern psychology, particularly as they have bearing upon the problems of politics, economics and law." H. A. Overstreet

+ New Repub 39:214 Jl 16 '24 1450w

"Professor Follett has maintained her thesis admirably." J: E. Lind

+ N Y Times p11 Je 8 '24 650w

"For me the reading of Miss Follett's book has in itself been a creative experience." R. W. Bruère

+ Survey 53:100 O 15 '24 1000w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p439 Jl 10 '24 60w

FOLWELL, WILLIAM WATTS. History of Minnesota. 4v v 2 477p il Minnesota hist. soc., St Paul, Minn.

977.6 Minnesota—History (21-20894)

Volume two of this four-volume history by the president emeritus of the University of Minnesota continues the history of the state from its admission to the Union in 1857 thru the period of the Civil war, which included the disastrous Sioux outbreak of 1862.

"This is something more than a monumental and definitive history of a State. In comparison with those amazing conglomerates of incident, story, statistics, genealogy, and antiquarian whatnot which in this country have often passed for local history Dr. Folwell's work glistens with distinction, and while his pages are fairly bursting with data and footnotes and appendices sweep the field of the sources, the narrative itself has a literary quality which makes even its most detailed portions enjoyable reading." W: MacDonald

+ Sat R of Lit 1:46 Ag 16 '24 1000w

FOOTE, JOHN TAINTOR. Pocono Shot. 143p $1.25 Appleton
24-21356

The hero of this story is a wonderful black and white setter, "wise-eyed master of thickets," a dog without a master. The reason for this is branded on the dog's shoulder in the shape of a great scar. In the life of Pocono Shot there was one love, his master Bill Trimble, who earned his living by taking city men out after partridge and woodcock. Then one day tragedy stalked into Bill's life. He killed a man who had nearly slain Shot, and then fled leaving Shot in the hands of a friend. How Shot found his master brings this tale to a heart-stirring climax.

Cleveland p85 N '24

"Foote knows dogs from pads to ears and it's a safe bet he loves them and that his favorite breed is the setter. He's written a lot about them and every line is good reading, but none of his dog heroes can hold a candle to 'Pocono Shot.'" E. A. H.
+ Lit R p10 S 27 '24 210w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p778 N 20 '24 200w

FOOTE, JOHN TAINTOR. Wedding gift; a fish-
2 ing story. 63p $1 Appleton
24-21355

"What happened when a devotee of fly-fishing took his bride and her three overweight trunks to spend their honeymoon at a trout-fishing camp at Buck's Landing. A long-short story that appeared in the Saturday Evening Post."—Cleveland

Cleveland p85 N '24

"Here is a tale that will be enjoyed most by fishermen who are not altogether as far gone on their hobby as George Baldwin Potter."
N Y Times p21 D 28 '24 210w

FOOTNER, HULBERT. Officer! 279p $2 Doran
24-20609

Officer Harker was sauntering down 51st Street one night when a third floor window of an exclusive hotel was opened and a voice shouted "Police!" Harker rushed in just in time to catch a most attractive girl running downstairs. From that moment life took on new meaning for Officer Harker. In following up the case Harker ran into many difficulties in his search for clues and the attractive girl figured largely in them all.

"A very entertaining and delightful story."
+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 20 '24 250w

"Lovers of authentic detective stories will undoubtedly be sorry to find the mystery so diluted with romance; certainly either alone would have been more telling." Helen Kestner
+ — Lit R p10 Ag 30 '24 250w

N Y World p7e Ag 31 '24 50w

FORBES, JOAN ROSITA (TORR) (MRS ARTHUR THOMAS MCGRATH). Fool's hell. 363p $2 Holt [7s 6d T. Butterworth]
24-10644

The beautiful heroine, Leila Grant, daughter of an Egyptologist, has lost her reputation through her defiance of the conventions. Captain Mike Treherne, a young English army officer, meets her in a Cairo hotel, falls in love with and marries her. He is convinced of her innocence, but his love and trust are soon put to the test when she goes away with the young Egyptian, Kamel Riddha, and some valuable documents of her husband's disappear at the same time. Leila lives through a maze of adventures and in the end justifies Mike's faith in her.

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas
Int Bk R p858 N '24 40w

Lit R p10 S 6 '24 280w

"Mrs. Forbes is by nature an article writer, not a novelist. She has little dramatic sense, her characters are stereotyped, her plot not only mechanical but wrapped in such a multiplicity of words that the reader finds it difficult to attend to its development. It is only when the author begins to describe the country and its people that one's interest is aroused."
— + N Y Times p9 Ja 11 '25 600w

"The local color acquired by Mrs. Forbes from first hand experience is impressive. What may justly be said in criticism of the novel is that the characters move indeed, but they do not act. Their only appeal to the reader is through the plot's suspense, not through emotional realization."
— N Y Tribune p11 O 5 '24 300w

"Mrs. Forbes has spent much of her life in the Orient, and her descriptions of life in the Near East ring true; they are colorful and full of information interesting to the average Occidental to whom the manners and customs of the Mohammedan world are apt to be a closed book."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:169 O 4 '24 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p753 N 8 '23 180w

FORBES, JOAN ROSITA (TORR) (MRS ARTHUR THOMAS MCGRATH). Sultan of the mountains; the life story of Raisuli. 351p il $4 Holt

916.4 Morocco—Description and travel. Raisuli, Mulai Ahmed el
24-7813

Mrs Forbes is a renowned traveler, having shot elephants in India, rounded cattle in Australia, done Red Cross work in China, to say nothing of having made extensive trips thru America, Africa, and Syria, where she became interested in the cause of the Arabs. In this account of the Moroccan bandit chief Raisuli, Mrs Forbes presents him as a sort of modern Robin Hood, committing evil for good purposes, and a clever schemer for himself. Yet no one can say his heart is not with his people. The very political wars he has entered into are to save them from the coming civilization. The descriptions of the desert and the accompanying photographs are good. Also the author gives a clear idea of the manners and customs of this Arab tribe.

"A narrative of absorbing interest."
+ Bookm 60:98 S '24 130w

Boston Transcript p7 My 3 '24 1300w

Cleveland p62 Jl '24

"The result of her visit is a book which could be classified either as travel, adventure, or biography, written with the ease of a novelist and, as far as most of her readers can judge, with sufficient accuracy to pass as truth in a land where most history is told and not written." F. B. Spaulding
+ Lit R p741 My 10 '24 500w

Reviewed by Raymond Holden
New Repub 40:51 S 10 '24 200w

"A very interesting man was Raisuli, and, according to his lights and his latitude, perhaps even a great one, although in a modern Christian civilization he would be accounted cruel and wicked. And Rosita Forbes tells his story, mostly in his own words, in colorful and fascinating style."
+ N Y Times p20 Ap 13 '24 1000w

N Y World p7e Je 15 '24 530w

Outlook 137:28 S 3 '24 250w

"It is a vivid and dramatic presentment of the events in which Raisuli has played a prominent, often the most prominent, part. But it is a good deal more than that: it is an absorbing revelation of the struggles of a human soul, touched with an elemental greatness, but set in an environment so essentially barbaric as to seem almost primitive or at any rate well outside the range of ordinary experience in these days."
+ Sat R 137:565 My 31 '24 600w

Springf'd Republican p5a Ja 11 '25 430w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p297 My 15 '24 1000w

FORBES, ROBERT ERSTONE. Transactions of Oliver Prince. 296p $2 Holt [7s 6d Chapman & H.]

24-19418

"If you're lucky, things come your way," declared Oliver Prince, late midshipman in the Royal naval reserve, and being lucky, things do come his way. In straitened circumstances and en route to London to take a clerical position in a bank, Oliver Prince plunges headforemost into an adventure simply because he resembles the renowned Lord Oxney. Even Lord Oxney's mother takes him for her son and later persuades him to help her out of difficulty by masquerading as Roddy. This occurrence is the beginning of a chain of adventures each one more hazardous than the last. There comes a time when Lady Luck seemingly deserts him only to appear once more to make him the principal figure in an oil transaction which brings him a definite position and sufficient assurance to marry the only girl.

Boston Transcript p20 O 4 '24 300w

Ind 113:201 S 27 '24 200w

"It is a rollicking fairy story, this tale of charming Mr. Prince who takes London by storm. Mr. Forbes has a sense of humor and he writes his novel with a broad smile across his face." M. L.

+ Lit R p9 Ag 30 '24 300w

"A pleasant and genial story!"

+ N Y Times p25 N 23 '24 520w

"The story is improbable, except in the case of a very fortunate and charming youth, but is interesting, nevertheless."

— + N Y Tribune p5 O 5 '24 150w

"Bright and intensive. Even if the tale now and then seems improbable, we take it as fiction and are willing to be pleasantly deceived."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:210 O 18 '24 120w

"It must be owned that 'Transactions' which result in so rapid an acquisition of wealth have, to quote once more the philosophy of Lancelot Gobbo, 'a kind of smacks.' "

— Spec 132:926 Je 7 '24 50w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p210 Ap 3 '24 100w

FORD, FORD MADOX (FORD MADOX HUEFFER). Joseph Conrad: a personal remembrance. 276p $2.50 Little

B or 92 Conrad, Joseph 24-30530

This is not a biography in the usual sense but a book of remembrance of Joseph Conrad as little by little he revealed himself to the writer during many years of friendship and collaboration. Dates and the ordinary biographical details are omitted but impression is piled on impression—scraps of the friends' many conversations, discussions about their art and their collaborations, critical estimates of Conrad's work—till at length a full portrait of the man is revealed in his own surroundings.

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p4 D 13 '24 1600w

"A series of impressionistic Conrad portraits in prose, so searching, so alive, one feels that here, and in no other gallery, one gets the whole man." G. W.

+ Lit R p2 D 20 '24 1850w

"One of the most conceited books ever published. Mr. Ford has developed his vanity as a vehicle for wit, or something like wit, so that it must be judged on literary, not personal, grounds. On such grounds it fails here, though it succeeded in those briefer sketches of contemporaries entitled 'Thus to Revisit' three years ago. Then it was piquant and even valiant; now it is silly." Mark Van Doren

— Nation 120:45 Ja 14 '25 450w

"I do not wish to be too exacting in respect to 'A Personal Remembrance,' which, in its peculiar way, is quite a clever production, and does, with all its exaggerations and distortions of facts, contain many interesting picturesque impressions of Conrad as he 'revealed himself' to his collaborator. Unfortunately, in his love of sensational colouring he cannot help distorting and exaggerating as he goes along, since 'facts' are simply the colours on his painter's palette to be mixed to get his forced effects and vibrating impressions." E: Garnett

— + Nation and Ath 36:366 D 6 '24 1500w

"He has tried to do a difficult thing and he has succeeded. At first his method strikes the reader as rather tiresome and egotistic, but he soons finds he is getting a clearer conception of Conrad the man than any other book or essay has given him."

+ New Statesman 24:supxvi D 6 '24 100w

N Y Times p3 D 7 '24 1750w

"Mr. Ford has written one of the most exciting pieces of English it has been my good fortune to read in a year." L: Weitzenkorn

+ N Y World p8e D 7 '24 1600w

Spec 133:742 N 15 '24 100w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p727 N 13 '24 900w

FORD, HENRY JONES. Representative government. (American political science ser.) 318p $3.50 Holt

321.8 Representative government and representation 24-6852

In this treatise the emeritus professor of politics in Princeton university studies the origins and characteristics of representative government. In Part one he shows the development of the theory, the spread of the doctrine and the opposition to it and the influence of the church in shaping the form of organization of the state. Part two traces the corresponding development in the means of effective control and explains the present reaction against representative government.

Reviewed by A. B. White

Am Hist R 29:789 Jl '24 480w

Reviewed by L. H. Holt

Am Pol Sci R 18:615 Ag '24 700w

"His principles are largely sound, but they call for a constitutional convention. Perhaps that is best anyway. At all events, he has written usefully, with a trenchant pen, and has set forth stimulating ideas." R. P. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 31 '24 600w

Reviewed by James Luby

N Y Times p6 O 26 '24 980w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:354 Jl '24

FORESTER, C. S. Napoleon and his court. 247p il $4 Dodd [10s 6d Methuen]

B or 92 Napoleon I, emperor of the French

This narrative is not a continuous biography of Napoleon, but a series of pictures of the man in his relationships with his marshals, his wives, his court, his brothers and sisters, and his likes and dislikes. Napoleon is not a hero to the author but a fascinating subject of study. The most that one can hope to do, he says, is to form one's own conclusions about Napoleon. This Mr Forester has evidently done, but he does not force his conclusions upon the reader.

"Much of this picture is familiar to us. But Mr. Forester writes in a vivid and entertaining manner. His book, while not a tremendous contribution to the Napoleon phase, deserves to be read with appreciation and for the purpose of entertainment." D. F. G.

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 11 '24 850w

"His book is neither captious nor shortsighted, as is the case with most of those who find fault with Napoleon. It ought not to offend even Napoleon's admirers, barring that small school of idol worshipers who froth at the mouth at the bare suggestion that Napoleon was a little lower than the angels. Mr. Forester is not really a fault-finder; he sets forth only to prove that Napoleon was not infallible. A stimulating, invigorating, provocative book." C: W. Thompson

FORESTER, C. S.—Continued
+ Lit R p6 O 4 '24 320w

"I began to read Mr. Forester with a prejudice, not against him, but against the many books now published, part history, part biography, and part historical biographical scandal, about the Charleses and Jameses, the Louis and Napoleons, their Courts, their wives, and their mistresses. It is only fair to say that Mr. Forester is so much more skilful than the ordinary compiler of these volumes that by the time I had finished 'Napoleon and His Court,' the prejudice had nearly evaporated. His account of Napoleon, his wives, mistresses, and Marshals, is really interesting and amusing." Leonard Woolf
+ Nation and Ath 35:778 S 27 '24 800w

Reviewed by H: B. Fuller
N Y Times p3 O 5 '24 750w

"Mr. Forester is not for imposing his opinion upon us. He makes no claim to have read the riddle, and all the same is fairly on the way to approximate truth. The book will serve at once as an introduction for the new student, and as a summary for the adept who is likely to find himself confused and lost amid the overwealth of the detail he has laboriously acquired."
+ Sat R 138:218 Ag 30 '24 550w

"Mr. Forester is the impressionist, satirical observer, of the modern school of historical essayists. He has few cut-and-dried theories. Some of his passages are brilliant."
The Times [London] Lit Sup p530 S 4 '24 900w

FORMAN, HENRY JAMES. Grecian Italy. 190p ² il $3 Boni & Liveright
914.58 Italy—Description and travel. Sicily—Description and travel. Malta—Description and travel 25-591

Here with pen and brush are described the beauties of those Greek cities of Sicily—Palermo, Messina, Taormina, Syracuse. The travellers also visited Malta and the site of ancient Sybaris in Calabria.

Boston Transcript p4 D 21 '24 320w

"There are plenty of facts in this book, but they are not guidebook facts. They have nothing to do with distances, routes, hotels, currencies and prices. They are sugar-coated learning, elegant packages of history and mythology, telling why the regions visited are interesting, and how they fell from elegance and wealth into decay. The illustrations are as attractive as the text."
+ N Y Times p17 Ja 11 '25 650w

"What appealed to me, and what will appeal to the reader, is the artistry of the book, with its simple style and lack of self-consciousness. The words of love for the unspoiled, ancient Sicily ring with genuine feeling, reaching a sweetness that would make Theocritus cry with gratitude." F. V. Roman
+ N Y World p9m Ja 4 '25 450w

FORMAN, HENRY JAMES. Guilt. 252p $1.75 Boni & Liveright
24-7314

For many years, Lowell Bradbury and Van Wyck Greenfield, devoted friends, had led an ideal bachelor life together. One morning Greenfield is found dead in his bed,—stabbed. Bradbury swears to avenge his friend's death at any cost. Suspicion points to three people: Mrs Carter, the housekeeper for the two men, her son and Bradbury's fiancée, Virginia Oliver. Each new clue contradicts former clues. There seems no solution until a psychiatrist comes upon the scene. Then by a comparatively simple method, which involves psychoanalysis he comes to an unexpected solution.

"If it suffers somewhat from sketchiness and haste, 'Guilt' is nevertheless graphic, highly diverting, and excellently conceived."
+ — Int Bk R p742 S '24 350w

"This drama of repressed occasional contradictions is flaringly and crudely handled. It has what the average American editor thinks of as 'punch,' but it has no real subtlety of analysis."
— + Lit R p761 My 17 '24 220w

"The thrills are mild, in no way grisly but of sufficient intensity to afford unflagging interest. The love element and romance are subdued to a point of Victorian delicacy. It is a book that will completely absorb the attention of the reader."
+ N Y Times p9 Mr 23 '24 450w

Reviewed by Kenneth Fuessle
N Y Tribune p28 My 4 '24 250w

"'Guilt' is not a super-story; it does not equal one or two of the season's mystery stories by authors whose specialty they are; nevertheless it is absorbing, intricate, and exciting, with as many false clues as usual, and an unusual conclusion."
+ — Outlook 136:650 Ap 16 '24 220w
Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 27 '24 150w
Wis Lib Bul 20:127 My '24

FORMAN, HENRY JAMES. Sudden wealth. 414p $2 Boni & Liveright
24-23733

"George and Laura Pollock (born Hofer) are a married couple, miserably poor, of eleven years' standing, when the breaking of old Arnold Hofer's vindictive will puts large sums of money at the control of the wife. They had loved and married (in the order stated) when Paris students, and neither has achieved anything since. They begin with vaguely good intentions. There is a little tepid benevolence at the start. A youthful artist and a girl musician are sent to Paris to improve their opportunities. But the help is grudgingly given and is withdrawn with inconceivable brutality when it is discovered that the pair have found nothing more natural to do than to re-enact the idyll of their elders twelve years ago. After one experiment altruism is at an end. The George Pollocks and the Hofer family generally settle down to a steady orgy of spending."—N Y Times

---

"No doubt it has its basis in facts but it is not too interesting in the telling. Mr. Forman would have done better to deal with characters having something of individuality; this prosaic man and woman were as stupid and incapable in poverty as in wealth. No fair test of the situation could be made with them."
— Boston Transcript p2 N 8 '24 320w

"The finest, the most serious and the most important book Mr. Forman has yet written." May Sinclair
+ Int Bk R p856 N '24 1450w

Reviewed by H. A. Jaggard
Lit R p12 N 8 '24 700w

Reviewed by J: Franklin
New Statesman 24:268 D 6 '24 1350w
N Y Times p9 O 12 '24 650w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson
N Y Tribune p10 O 26 '24 1300w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e O 12 '24 600w

"The story has interesting characters, but it is not well put together."
Outlook 138:415 N 12 '24 50w

"Competently written, uninspired book."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p728 N 13 '24 430w

FORSTER, EDWARD MORGAN. Passage to India. 322p $2.50 Harcourt [7s 6d Arnold]
24-19334

"The story concerns the reactions of two newcomers—Adela Quested and Mrs. Moore, a young and an old woman—to Chandrapore or to as much of Chandrapore as holds India. In the background play the vague colors—romantic and unromantic—of India and Anglo-India, and the gross misunderstandings, and the subtler misunderstandings that must arise when two races live together—rather apart than together —conscious of an urge to transplant a 'civilization' and of as vigorous an urge to keep one's own. The conflict of these several points of view, in the novel, wells up into a noisy tempest when Miss Quested believes she has been wantonly attacked by a heretofore respectful Indian, Dr. Aziz, in one of the Marabar Caves." —Lit R

Booklist 21:27 O '24

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson
Bookm 60:494 D '24 480w

"It is a book abundantly worth reading as a story, but it is even more potent in significance as we realize the subtlety and power with which Mr. Forster has revealed to us the Moslem and the Hindu mind and that strange anomaly, the mind of the Anglo-Indian." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p6 S 3 '24 1000w

Cleveland p84 N '24

Reviewed by E. A. Niles
Ind 113:134 Ag 30 '24 550w

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas
Int Bk R p719 S '24 1900w

"After the silence of a decade Mr. Forster makes the welkin ring with his careful novel of India. The sentence seems to carry a note of enthusiasm. And it does—a tremendous one. It is the sort of book which doesn't permit understatement, no matter how wise and protective understatement is." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p963 Ag 16 '24 350w

"The writing, when it does not slip into fine writing, as it does once or twice, is a continuous delight. The novel is a triumph of the humanistic spirit over material difficult to humanize. It is this first of all; it is also a work of art exquisite rather than profound. Last of all, it is a peculiarly valuable picture of the state of India seen through a very unembarrassed and courageous intelligence." Edwin Muir

+ — Nation 119:379 O 8 '24 1050w

"Mr. Forster has made a contribution to the study of a great historical problem. It is such a contribution as only an artist and a novelist could make. He has brought the close observation of human relations, the delicate perception of character as it expresses itself in tones of feeling and shades of manner, which give to his Howard's End a quite unforgettable distinction, to a view of life in British India on the border line where the British and Indians meet." R. M. Lovett

+ New Repub 40:393 Ag 27 '24 1200w

"The book seems to me to be a real achievement. There are things in it that I would have otherwise. Again, there is no one in the book that one can really care for. But even a reader who insists that some characters in a novel should engage his sympathy completely cannot miss the peculiar merits of the book. It is written with great care. It is so full of knowledge and so beautifully perceptive. It is most delicately written." Ralph Wright

+ — New Statesman 23:317 Je 21 '24 1700w

Reviewed by H. S. Gorman
N Y Times p6 Ag 17 '24 1400w

"Mr. Forster sees so very clearly and writes with so magical a fluid, compounded of beauty and ironic salt and limpid clarity, that he is as great a despair to my muddled creative mind as he is an enchantment to my taste and critical faculties. Therefore I find it difficult to say with becoming authority the many things I wish to say. I must content myself with telling every one to read this book, this 'Passage to India,' because it is beautiful and ironic and clear as divining crystal." Elinor Wylie

+ N Y Tribune p1 O 5 '24 750w

"What a book this is, what flights of writing, turns of philosophy. In the feeling for its subject matter, one instantly is provoked to make the inevitable comparison of Kipling's India. But here is Forster, an Englishman too, cracking the whip of reason over this philosophy Kipling followed. And how sharp and incisive the flicks of its lash, how stinging, how accurate! 'A Passage to India' should be your first purchase from the fall list." Laurence Stallings

+ N Y World p9 Ag 13 '24 1000w

"An exceptional novel—a novel in which all is clear as daylight, and nothing, absolutely nothing, is said as any one else would say it or from the point of view of any common observer. This novel is one of the great literary victories over the inherent commonplaceness of words—a triumphant escape from the stereotyped." C. H. Gaines

+ No Am 220:375 D '24 1050w

St Louis p399 D '24

"To call the book 'good' would be a ludicrous understatement: over and over again, as one reads, one thinks: 'This is great'; and yet the total effect is not of greatness, in the sense in which one predicates greatness of great novels. The real, some philosophers tell us, speaking truth, is the individual: in other words, the answer to that insoluble problem of Mr. Forster's is the problem itself, presented concretely in the shape of men and women: great art, in the narrative or dramatic form, gives us reassurance by its sheer power of creation; and it is through this one lack that all Mr. Forster's dazzling and baffling wisdom leaves us only dazzled and baffled." Gerald Gould

+ — Sat R 137:642 Je 21 '24 750w

Reviewed by H: W. Nevinson
Sat R of Lit 1:43 Ag 16 '24 1800w

"A Passage to India is a disturbing, uncomfortable book. Its surface is so delicately and finely wrought that it pricks us at a thousand points." L. P. Hartley

Spec 131:1048 Je 28 '24 920w

Springf'd Republican p5a O 19 '24 800w

"His new novel is the first he has published since 'Howard's End.' Its artistry is of the same finished kind, its vision as original, as that of the foregoing novel: it has the beauty and pathos which belong to Mr Forster's best work. But because it is essentially a definite picture rather than a creative imagining, it is a different kind of achievement from 'Howards End' or 'A Room with a View'; its form is stricter, its appeal more precise."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p370 Je 12 '24 400w

Wis Lib Bul 20:213 O '24

"Aesthetically the book is good; structurally it is a literary masterpiece; but spiritually it is lacking in insight." Blanche Watson

+ — World Tomorrow 7:382 D '24 500w

FOSDICK, HARRY EMERSON. Modern use of the Bible. 291p $1.60 Macmillan

220 Bible, Whole—Criticism and interpretation 24-23626

Dr Fosdick's lectures delivered on the Lyman Beecher foundation at Yale university are concerned with the problem presented to the modern preacher by the contrasts between Biblical thinking and our own. In this time of confusion and controversy his book will help the minister who is ill at ease and fearful in discussing the old Book in a new world to handle the Bible "with new zest, freedom, honesty and power." There is a bibliography at the end of each chapter. Contents: The new approach to the Bible; The old book in a new world; The ancient solution; Abiding experiences in changing categories; Miracle and law; Perils of the new position; Jesus, the Messiah; Jesus, the son of God.

Bookm 60:adv D '24 200w

FOSDICK, H. E.—Continued

"There can be no question that the Bible grips Dr. Fosdick with power, and that he is a sympathetic and persuasive interpreter of its meaning and message to this new age." T. C. R.
+ Boston Transcript p6 N 15 '24 390w

"Dr. Fosdick is at once frank and courageous in facing the issue he raises." R. D. Towne
+ Lit R p12 D 20 '24 1050w
New Statesman 24:276 D 6 '24 370w
R of Rs 71:111 Ja '25 70w

"They may not have the imaginativeness shown in those of Dr A. P. Fitch, nor all of the homely pungent quality which makes Dean Charles R. Brown's addresses so popular. But these lectures do present, in the clear and straightforward manner for which Dr Fosdick is famous, the modern attitude toward the Bible, and the implications for preaching and for life in general which this attitude brings." J. S. Bixler
+ — Springf'd Republican p5a O 19 '24 1500w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p779 N 20 '24 220w

FOSDICK, HARRY EMERSON. Twelve tests of character. 213p $1.50 Assn. press
170 Character. Conduct of life 23-18000

These essays emphasize some practical tests of character, qualities of integrity and force on which right living must rest. Contents: First things first; Long ropes and strong stakes; A high opinion of oneself; Seeing the invisible; The privilege of living; Minding one's own business; Obedience; Above the average; Harnessing the caveman; Magnanimity; Possessing a past tense; The power to see it through.

"His wisdom is of the highest type, his style is vigorous and clear, his presentation of great truths convincing, his allusions pertinent, his quotations helpful and his tests comprehensive. It is a book for every youth in the land."
+ Boston Transcript p2 F 9 '24 150w

"It is a virile, vivid book, as full of color as a day in June, as challenging as it is charming: as far removed in method as in thought from the older makers of sermons." J. F. Newton
+ Int Bk R p360 Ap '24 140w
J Religion 4:333 My '24 20w
N Y Times p6 F 17 '24 380w

"Dr. Fosdick uses the simplest possible style, but he appeals alike to idealist and pragmatist in his emphasis upon the elements that exalt and dignify and strengthen and broaden human character. These are not technically sermons, but they make a good substitute. The inspiration of this 'lay' preaching would probably lead to better church attendance rather than to its falling off."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 F 12 '24 300w

"Simplicity, directness and sincerity are found in the twelve essays in this book." W. E. Brooks
+ Survey 52:250 My 15 '24 80w
Wis Lib Bul 20:121 My '24

"These are practical applications of Christian principles to life under current conditions by one who has a robust and infectious faith in God and man, a wealth of illustrative material at his command, and a delightful style which prevents him from penning a dull page. This book ranks high as a popular stimulant to Christian living." H: S. Coffin
+ Yale R n s 13:810 Jl '24 100w

FOSTER, CECIL P. T. 1700 miles in open boats. 173p il $4 Houghton [10s 6d M., Hopkinson]
910.4 Shipwrecks. Trevessa (steamship)

The captain of the British steamship Trevessa wrecked in June, 1923, in the Indian ocean tells the story of the voyage of her boats to safety. The hazardous trip of 1700 miles was made in two open lifeboats to Rodriguez island.

"A more moving story of unaffected heroism it would be impossible to conceive."
+ New Statesman 24:308 D 13 '24 350w

Reviewed by H: Beston
N Y Tribune p11 Ja 11 '25 500w

"Capt. Foster's unassuming account is an epic fragment of the sort of thing that is a part of the 'day's work' of a sailor."
+ N Y World p8e D 28 '24 250w
Outlook 139:72 Ja 14 '25 40w

Reviewed by R: Hughes
Spec 133:sup694 N 8 '24 450w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p614 O 2 '24 180w

FOSTER, HARRY LA TOURETTE. Gringo in Mañana-land. 357p il $3 Dodd
917.2 Mexico—Description and travel. Central America—Description and travel
24-23942

The "tropical tramp" went to Mexico just after the war as a free-lance newspaper correspondent. This was during the last days of the Carranza régime when banditry was a profitable occupation. Having come under the ban of the Carranzistas, on account of his newspaper articles, the author was obliged to flee the country, but with Obregon's succession, he returned for another trip to Mexico and the little republics to the south. The book is a lively account of personal experience and surface impressions of country and people. The illustrations are from photographs by the author.

Booklist 21:106 D '24
Boston Transcript p6 N 1 '24 750w

"Told with considerable sympathy, a certain amount of insight, and never-failing gusto. Although the book is a little heavy with the good old reliable jokes about Latin currency and Latin military titles, and although the author insists upon designating bougainvillæa as purple, he is a quick and in the main an accurate observer." Muna Lee
+ — Lit R p5 N 15 '24 600w

"If now and then his rash acceptances are brought to pause, it is only for a moment. He finds an explanation as he flits, and brightly embraces all. Happily, he has no political message to deliver, which rather takes the curse off the whole thing." K. A. Porter
— + N Y Tribune p9 N 2 '24 450w

FOSTER, MAXIMILIAN. Humdrum house? 307p $1.75 Appleton
24-18765

Jerry Blandon is seized with a desire to visit his old friend, Norry Colquitt, whom he has not seen in five years. He sends a telegram announcing his coming. When he arrives at the station on a cold, bleak night he is greeted by a surly chauffeur with a large car. Jerry climbs in and his adventures begin. First of all, the car is held up. When he finally arrives at Humdrum house, Norry's home, he meets Norry's charming wife, and also Nanny Granger—the girl who had promised to marry him when he could hold a job. A mysterious atmosphere pervades the house which is emphasized by the fact that Norry had disappeared, no one knew where to or why. Then in rapid successsion strange things occur—messages are hurled thru the window, queer men lurk on the grounds, but Jerry makes a brave fight and comes thru harrowing experiences with a job and a prospective wife.

Boston Transcript p4 O 22 '24 350w

"The other day I heard a reader of detective stories say that he preferred the kind that he could read without having his mind working all the way through trying to solve the mystery. For such readers as that 'Humdrum House' will not fill the bill, for the solution of the mystery is sufficiently obscure to keep one's mind jumping from one conclusion to another straight through the book, but I think the majority of lovers of the mystery story find that a very pleasant sort of gymnastics."

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 O 26 '24 350w

"It approaches the farcial, at times, with intention, but is kept well in hand. An entertaining sketch." H. L. P.

+ — Lit R p10 Ag 30 '24 160w

"When an author in these sophisticated days actually achieves a mystery story that succeeds in holding on to its secrets till well nigh its concluding pages, the event calls for something in the nature of a flourish of trumpets. Such a fanfare Maximilian Foster should receive, for in his latest yarn, 'Humdrum House?' he has constructed a more than usually guess-proof plot."

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 10 '24 1150w

"A mystery novel of intriguing quality." E. W. Osborn

+ N Y World p8e Ag 17 '24 100w

Springf'd Republican p7a S 7 '24 200w

Wis Lib Bul 20:213 O '24

FOSTER, ROBERT FREDERICK. Foster on mah jong. 262p il $2 Dodd

795 Mah jong 24-4949

"In addition to the twenty-five chapters of instruction, which fill half the book, Mr. Foster goes very thoroughly into the history and legend of Mah Jong, follows each trail of claim or story concerning its age, origin and development, and discusses its probable truth or falsity, coming to the conclusion that it is a comparatively new amusement, developed no more than half a century ago from an earlier and somewhat different game. He discusses and explains the various names applied to it and the reason for their difference, giving his approval to Mah Jong as the best variant."—N Y Times

"This will probably become the authority for advanced players."

Booklist 20:290 My '24

"Informing and entertaining little book."

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 9 '24 600w

"Here is an attractive little book, with all that you need to know in order to play."

+ Outlook 136:615 Ap 9 '24 70w

Springf'd Republican p8 Ap 28 '24 240w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p439 Jl 10 '24 30w

FOURNIER D'ALBE, EDMUND EDWARD. Life of Sir William Crookes; with a foreword by Sir Oliver Lodge. 413p il $7.50 Appleton [25s T. F. Unwin]

B or 92 Crookes, Sir William

Sir William Crookes, 1832-1919, was a great experimental chemist whose name is connected with the discovery of thallium, with vacuum investigations, with researches on the rare earths, the nature of cathode rays, radium and other researches leading up to wireless telegraphy and the modern electronic theory. His biography, by a fellow scientist, contains many of his letters and extracts from his notebooks and scientific papers.

Cleveland p79 S '24

"The 'Life' is heartily recommended, for perusal, to every member of the great Guild of Chemists!" E. F. Smith

+ Ind & Eng Chem 16:545 My '24 290w

"The author is well qualified to deal with both the scientific and personal side of his subject, but he does not seem to me to have done as much as he might with so versatile and fascinating a character. He includes, as most British biographers do, unreadable pages of unnecessary detail, such as lists of letters Crookes wrote, what he put into his traveling bag, and how many pills he took, but leaves out many things that we would like to know about such an original scientific genius." E. E. Slosson

+ — Lit R p686 Ap 19 '24 1150w

"Mr. Fournier has written an excellent life of Sir William Crookes, and has placed him vividly before us in a book which is also full—if anything, a little too full—of scientific information." S. S.

+ Nation and Ath 34:674 F 9 '24 350w

"It is a pleasure to acknowledge the faithfulness and fairness of the record; the proportion is quite excellent. Now and again perhaps the reader may be inclined to murmur that something he is reading might have been omitted, yet in the end he will probably feel that admirable justice has been done and that the questioned passages have contributed touches absolutely necessary to portray the man as he really was." A. Smithells

+ — Nature 113:227 F 16 '24 1000w

New Statesman 22:520 F 9 '24 200w

"We have here a faithful but not an inspired account of a great man's life." B: Harrow

+ — N Y Times p17 My 11 '24 2850w

"An interesting biography of a brilliant man and learned scientist."

+ Outlook 136:652 Ap 16 '24 250w

"Dr. Fournier D'Albe has made excellent use of a somewhat overwhelming mass of material and has produced a clear and interesting account of Sir William Crookes and his scientific work. It is a valuable contribution to the biographical history of science."

+ Sat R 136:681 D 22 '23 950w

FOURNIER D'ALBE, EDMUND EDWARD. Moon-element; an introduction to the wonders of selenium. 166p il $3 Appleton [10s 6d Unwin]

546.23 Selenium [24-17695]

"In this book the reader will find the first connected account of the properties and applications of a chemical element which has raised—and disappointed—more hopes than any other element known. Selenium is now just coming into its own and it promises to have a paramount influence upon wireless and other new developments of the present century." (Preface) The book gives a popular account of the history and action of selenium and its applications to picture transmission and television, to the optophone and photophone.

Ind & Eng Chem 16:1290 D '24 370w

"The book is more than a scientific treatise: it is a revelation and a prophecy, and may be read with profit by all men who take an interest in the world in which they live." R. C. Macfie

+ Nation and Ath 35:300 My 31 '24 530w

"In spite of its scientific defects the book is most eminently readable. Dr. Fournier's wide experience as an author in varied fields is a guarantee of that. He has a way with him in writing that grips the reader; the reviewer himself read the book from cover to cover in a single sitting. Dr. Fournier writes with the authority of a recognised expert, and if, as the title rather suggests, he has aimed at arousing the spirit of wondering interest among the general public, he will without doubt succeed." A. O. R.

+ Nature 114:47 Jl 12 '24 380w

"This book is an example of a very rare thing, good popular science."

+ New Statesman 23:168 My 17 '24 500w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p249 Ap 24 '24 950w

FOX, DAVID, pseud. See Ostrander, I. E.

FOX, DIXON RYAN. Herbert Levi Osgood; an American scholar. 167p $1.50 Columbia univ. press

B or 92 Osgood, Herbert Levi 24-4782

The subject of this brief biography was professor of history in Columbia university from 1896 to 1918 and an historian of high scholarship

FOX, DIXON RYAN—Continued
whose monumental seven-volume work on the American colonies is the recognized authority in its field.

"The book would be profitable reading for every graduate student of history, and interesting and inspiring reading too, for Professor Fox, with much insight and literary skill, has contrived to invest this somewhat colorless life with much of the feeling we associate with the Grammarian's Funeral."
+ Am Hist R 29:812 Jl '24 150w

"While intended primarily as an appreciation, Professor Fox's little book is of considerable value to the student, lay or professional, of history, for the Osgood method of inquiry was one to command high respect for its thoroughgoing scholarship." W. K. H.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 7 '24 600w

Canadian Hist R 5:170 Je '24 200w

"Admirably sympathetic and appreciative tribute." C: M. Andrews
+ Nation 119:192 Ag 20 '24 550w

R of Rs 69:672 Je '24 150w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p273 My 8 '24 1500w

FOX, FANNIE FERBER, and SCHWARTZ, LAVINIA S. Fannie Fox's cook book; with an introd. by Edna Ferber. 535p il $2.50 Little

641 Cookery 23-17697

"Since the book has been compiled by two modern, practical, and experienced young women who manage their own households, there is emphasis on left-overs, that problem of the thrifty housewife. There are such necessary and helpful items as what to prepare for the picnic lunch, so vital in these days of motoring, and detailed instructions as to preparation. There are menus for that festive and informal meal, the Sunday-night supper. Here you are told what to have at a children's party by women who have had both children and parties most successfully. Some of the recipes herein are culled from the finest of the Jewish cookery, which, for delicacy and flavor, cannot be excelled. There are other recipes wheedled from the French chef of a famous Chicago restaurant. Every one of the recipes has been tried and proved."—Preface

Booklist 20:203 Mr '24

"There are menus for simple and inexpensive dinners, which will rejoice the heart of any cook, and, merely read, will cause her to turn yearningly to the earlier recipes to discover just what a 'pork chop casserole with rice,' or 'a noodle ring filled with chicken and mushrooms' may be."
+ Boston Transcript p5 F 9 '24 320w

Wis Lib Bul 20:44 F '24

FOX, FRANK. English, 1909-1922; a gossip. 213p $4 Dutton [9s Murray]

914.2 England—Social life and customs [23-17374]

"The author is an Australian journalist who went to England for the first time fifteen years ago, remained for thirteen and thus had the opportunity of studying the inhabitants of that island kingdom both in time of peace and in war. The facts he gathered and his own reactions are presented in this agreeable book." —N Y Times

Boston Transcript p5 My 24 '24 400

"Mr. Fox's semi-political account is shrewd, tolerant, and balanced, and, granted his bias, he has some sound things to say." H. J. Massingham
+ Nation and Ath 34:sup408 D 8 '23 150w

New Statesman 22:372 Ja 5 '24 650w

N Y Times p16 My 18 '24 1100w

FOX, GEORGE R. Fangs of the serpent. 293p $2 Minton, Balch & co.

24-11332

A mystery story which centers about an old Spanish chest. J. Marion Oswald, financier, is found dead with two tiny pricks in his arms—the only clue. The autopsy reveals death by poisoning. Who administered the poison? A young newspaper reporter finds himself entangled in this mystery. Shortly afterward, Isobel's fiancé is found dead with the same marks. Did Isobel kill the two who loved her? After months of searching, the old chest gives up the clue,

"It is a genuinely good yarn from start to finish and the solution is very unexpected."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 12 '24 380w

Cleveland p51 Jl '24

"With plenty of twists, a good deal of ingenuity, and some quite thrilling moments, it must be admitted that when the revelation concerning the identity of 'Deborah' occurs, the tale loses a good deal, if not all of its credibility. Nevertheless, it is an entertaining yarn."
— + N Y Times p9 My 4 '24 380w

"In a regrettable effort to induce original variations into a detective story Mr. Fox has let the supposed narrator of 'The Fangs of the Serpent' talk in Hibernian rhythms and distract you from the stern business of murder. . . What business in a serious tale of gore and passion has a playboy with Western words?"
— N Y Tribune p23 Jl 13 '24 260w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p6e My 11 '24 60w

FRANCE, ANATOLE. Latin genius; tr. by Wilfrid S. Jackson. 315p $2.50 Dodd

844 French literature [24-15094]

Essays on French literature. Contents: Daphnis and Chloe; The Queen of Navarre; Paul Scarron; On the language of La Fontaine; Moliere; Jean Racine; Alain-René Le Sage; The adventures of the Abbé Prévost; Bernardin de Saint-Pierre; Chateaubriand; Xavier de Maistre; Benjamin Constant; Sainte-Beuve, poet; Albert Glatigny.

Booklist 21:61 N '24

"A tranquil and benign book."
+ Bookm 59:745 Ag '24 120w

Boston Transcript p1 Je 14 '24 390w

"A genuine treat to all Antole France lovers. It shows what genius can do with journalistic essays. It sets a pace for all books on books and men, and it is a pace which few if any authors who are writing today can even attempt to keep with the great Anatole." Madelin Leof
+ Lit R p924 Jl 26 '24 550w

Reviewed by Lucien Price
Nation 119:220 Ag 27 '24 600w

Outlook 137:578 Ag 13 '24 20w

FRANCE, ANATOLE. Merrie tales of Jacques Tournebroche; tr. by Alfred Allinson. 156p il $2.50 Dodd [10s 6d Lane]

The nine tales contained in this volume are suggestive of the medieval romances of France, broadly humorous and somewhat ironical. Contents: Olivier's brag; The miracle of the magpie; Brother Joconde; Five fair ladies of Picardy, of Poitou, of Touraine, of Lyons, and of Paris; A good lesson well learnt; Satan's tongue-pie; Concerning an horrible picture; Mademoiselle de Doucine's New Year's present; Mademoiselle Roxane.

Boston Transcript p3 O 25 '24 250w

"The descriptions of child life are delightful and tender."
+ Cleveland p44 Je '24

FRANCE, ANATOLE. On life and letters; fourth series; tr. by Bernard Miall. 341p $3 Dodd

844 French literature

Essays in literary criticism, chiefly of French writers. Contents: Madame Ackermann; Guy de Maupassant; Paul Bourget: The youth of M. De Barante; Mysticism and science; Cæsar Borgia; James Darmesteter; Popular tales and songs: Jean-François Bladé; Popular tales and songs: Albert Meyrac; Father Didon and his book upon Jesus Christ; Cleopatra; Judith Gautier; Jean Moréas; An apology for plagiarism; Jules Tellier; The oar of Ulysses; Blaise Pascal and M. Joseph Bertrand; Maurice Barrès' 'Le Jardin de Bérenice'; Théodore de Banville; M. Gaston Boissier; The emperor Julian; Gyp; J.-J. Wiess; Madame de la Fayette; Charles le Goffic; Albert Glatigny; M. Marcel Schwob; Madame de la Sablière; M. Théodore Reinach and 'Mithridates.'

"He calls these papers of his 'literary tales' and is most animated in stating that they are in no sense critical. However that may be, they contain some of the wisest literary dictums upon French writers that have so far been uttered."

+ Bookm 60:102 S '24 200w

Boston Transcript p5 My 10 '24 320w

"The journalism of a novelist, journalism already three decades old (the preface is dated 1892), but journalism that is also literature. . . In all this work one is aware of an old, an august, an immense tradition of learning, of style, and of high excellence. This high finish, this art, laborious yet always fresh and vivacious, is a thing to make the average writer of English look and feel like a schoolboy." Lucien Price

+ Nation 118:615 My 28 '24 800w

St Louis p350 O '24

FRANCK, HARRY ALVERSON. Glimpses of Japan and Formosa. 235p il $3 Century

915.2 Japan—Description and travel. National characteristics, Japanese. Formosa
24-22806

Mr Franck's book is entirely about the people of Japan as they appeared to an open-eyed, candid observer—their home and industrial life, national traits, manners and customs, religion, theater, etc. His impressions of the Japanese are not favorable. Several chapters are devoted to the island of Formosa which Japan is colonizing and developing. Many illustrations.

Booklist 21:146 Ja '25

Cleveland p96 D '24

Ind 113:325 O 25 '24 40w

"Few books on Japan and the Japanese have been as outspoken as this one. It provokes meditation on what an intelligent and candid Japanese would write after a six weeks' dash through our own country." J: J. McLaughlin

+ Lit R p12 O 25 '24 600w

New Statesman 24:237 N 29 '24 150w

"When Mr. Franck puts a nation on the scales I enter an objection. I admit that in his 'Glimpses of Japan and Formosa' he makes a persistent effort to balance to a nicety his scales, with the inevitable result that for every statement there arises contradictory evidence, nullifying or at least modifying his conclusions, so that the balance has consistently to be readjusted." Blair Niles

— + N Y Tribune p9 D 14 '24 340w

"The book contains much of interest, though little to charm. Mr. Franck elected to live with the people and to travel second class, which is not a good way to see the show. It spoils perspective, without which all traveling is in vain."

N Y World p8e O 12 '24 480w

Outlook 138:380 N 5 '24 180w

Reviewed by Raymond Holden

Sat R of Lit 1:320 N 29 '24 1150w

Springf'd Republican p6a D 14 '24 500w

"Mr. Harry A. Franck is an experienced traveller—and an experienced writer of a certain type of travel book. One cannot help feeling, however, that he had not sufficient justification for writing his latest book."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p822 D 4 '24 450w

FRANK, WALDO DAVID. Chalk face. 252p $2 Boni & Liveright

24-23480

A man's masterful will, symbolized by the mysterious "man with the white head" is the central idea of this tale of mystery and horror. Dr John Mark who strives to make great his will, does it so successfully that it destroys every obstacle which prevents his marriage to Mildred Fayne. Thus does "the man with the white head" kill the doctor's rival, and John's parents, who had objected to his marriage. Finally John Mark faces this horror, struggles with it and overcomes it.

"This fantastic tale is written in a manner supposed to resemble that of the master of horror, Edgar Allan Poe. But there is no resemblance beyond the attempt, which is easily recognizable. There is material here, however, for a true thriller, for the theme and the details are terrible and fantastic enough." W. B.

— + Boston Transcript p5 N 8 '24 600w

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas

Int Bk R p56 D '24 250w

"'Chalk Face' has style and a deep significance to ponder. It is indeed a parable in the sense that the wild 'Rime of the Ancient Mariner' and the fantastic 'Moby Dick' are parables, and, like these, it is in the class of books to be read many times." G. B. Munson

+ Lit R p3 O 18 '24 900w

"It has evidently been Mr. Frank's intention to be not merely weird and phantasmagorial but mysterious, symbolical, profound; he has striven hard and labored mightily to achieve this result, and no doubt there are many who, finding his book more or less incomprehensible, will therefore regard it as extremely deep."

N Y Times p16 O 12 '24 500w

Reviewed by J: W. Crawford

N Y World p9e O 12 '24 900w

"Mr. Frank is a greater poet than Algernon Blackwood, but he can not make you believe in his story considered as a tale of horror which may even take place within a trauma. He has not proved that Dr. Mark and Chalk Face may be one and indivisible in both the flesh and the spirit. Like Arthur Machen, Mr. Waldo Frank is a very fine poet and a consummate artist (in tone poems) who chooses to write in the form of the novel. There can be no impeachment of his very genuine distinction. Perhaps he has not yet invented the symbols which shall best contain his genius." A. D. Douglas

Sat R of Lit 1:244 N 1 '24 1100w

Springf'd Republican p7a N 30 '24 460w

FRANK, WALDO DAVID. Salvos; an informal book about books and plays. 286p $2.50 Boni & Liveright

814 Literature. Theater 24-5111

A collection of essays on literary and theatrical subjects, which have appeared in the magazines during the last seven years. Contents: For a declaration of war; Emerging greatness; Concerning a little theater; Vicarious fiction; The German theater in New York; A prophet in France; Literature in the unmaking; Playing a joke on Broadway; Valedictory to a theatrical season; The art of the Vieux Colombier; A handbook for Americans; The logic of the human body; Passage from Limbo; The American year; Charlie Chaplin; A note on the novel; A thought on the photograph; From talk at the Greenwich Village theater; Dickens revisited; Shakespeare and empire; A letter to the annual Whitman celebration; Index.

FRANK, WALDO DAVID—Continued

"Waldo Frank has done an interesting and honest thing in 'Salvos.' Persons who know Frank only through his sometimes incomprehensible fiction will discover a different prose in these discussions, and the change is all in favor of clarity. A tendency toward pedantry and bombastic effects does not spoil the book."
+ Bookm 59:350 My '24 100w

"A sad world Mr. Frank lives in—not intellectual enough!—dull, provincial individuals criticising him. But he will be our standard bearer—if he may make the standard."
— Boston Transcript p5 Mr 15 '24 200w

"Mr Frank's use of our language is so adventurous that his comments too often seem turgid rather than precise. In his striving after a vital novelty of style, there is repeatedly a suggestion of whimsicality or clownishness which contradicts the passionate sobriety of his convictions."
+ — Dial 77:84 Jl '24 120w

"Mr. Frank brings to criticism poetic imagery and pungent diction. The book scintillates with brilliant phrases and epigrams. Nevertheless, the book is far from lucid. Both criticism and writing suffer from the zest of the zealot." J. J. Smertenko
+ — Lit R p932 Ag 2 '24 850w

"Mr. Frank is as pontifical as if he sat on St. Peter's throne, as dogmatic as Jonathan Edwards, as humorless as Dr. Frank Crane. The fondness for high-sounding terms and sentences is rather Ethiopian; at times it almost creates an illusion that there may be some thought behind it."
— Outlook 136:487 Mr 19 '24 220w

"For a man who defies 'the defenders of a dying culture,' Mr Frank is surprisingly lacking in esthetic philosophy."
— Springf'd Republican p7a O 5 '24 300w

FRANKAU, GILBERT. Gerald Cranston's lady. 433p $2 Century [7s 6d Hutchinson]
24-4266

"The ingredients of 'Gerald Cranston's Lady' will be familiar to novel readers. There is the stern-faced Captain of Industry, phlegmatic and nerveless, who struggles against emotionalism, and suspects that it would disarrange his life. He has a trained automaton of a servant who senses the slightest wishes of his master. There is the woman of birth who marries the Captain of Industry for money and who is inconceivably beautiful. There is the usual misunderstanding between these two, who imagine that they hate one another, but whose hate is merely the hard shell of a bravely worn pride. There is the siren who comes into the Captain of Industry's life just when he is most fed up with his ménage. Of course, the hard-headed financier immediately falls into her toils. Then the board meetings, the strike at which the Captain of Industry gets hit on the head as he defiantly faces the strikers, the months of being nursed by his wife, the sudden recoup of his endangered fortune, and the realization that he and his wife love each other."—N Y Times

Reviewed by D. L. Mann
Boston Transcript p5 Ap 5 '24 1200w
Lit R p650 Ap 5 '24 380w

"The book moves with a well-skilled swiftness and it rises to its proper number of thrilling episodes. The author's language possesses a certain punch, although there is too much of emphasis. As for feminine psychology, it is doubtful that Mr. Frankau knows much about it; his reputation for that subtle knowledge has been gained through a certain virility."
+ — N Y Times p9 Mr 9 '24 950w

"It is a clear and comprehensive work of fiction, strongly related to fact and well worthy of deliberate reading." E. W. Osborn
+ N Y World p7e Mr 2 '24 660w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p64 Ja 31 '24 600w

FRANKAU, GILBERT. Men, maids and Mustard-Pot. 372p $2 Century [7s 6d Hutchinson]
24-21509

A volume of short stories of diverse themes which are divided into three groups: Men's tales; Maids' tales; Mustard-Pot's tales;—Mustard-Pot being a stunning horse, who plays the leading role in six tales, as matchmaker, huntsman, mountebank, etc.

Ind 113:262 O 11 '24 300w
Int Bk R p65 D '24 200w

"Into each story Mr. Franklin injects just the correct percentage of love and thrill. Never does he allow his action to slow up or his men or maids to become tired of life." M. L.
+ Lit R p12 D 6 '24 340w

" 'Men, Maids and Mustard-Pot,' is written a little too much in monotone for straightaway reading. But for twenty minutes now and then it should prove generally amusing."
— + N Y Times p14 O 5 '24 300w
N Y World p8e Jl 27 '24 100w

"A collection of very clever little tales, which prove their author to be a splendid craftsman in the art of the short story." E. M'D. J.
+ N Y World p6e S 21 '24 70w
Spec 130:557 Mr 31 '23 100w

FRANKLIN, FABIAN. Plain talks on economics: leading principles and their application to the issues of today. 353p $2.50 Putnam
330 Economics 24-13606

"The author is an economist of the classical school who restates the old doctrines with particular reference to modern contingencies and follows this by a lengthy section dealing specifically with the issues of the day. The second part deals with matters of immediate controversy, such as trade unions, tariffs, and currencies."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"Apparently the author has performed his task about as well as anyone could, and that without creating an illusion of simplicity. On the contrary, while expounding principles and problems in lucid language, he presents many a knotty problem and gives the reader glimpses of difficulties that conduce to humility, and yet lure the courageous on to further study." J. E. Le Rossignol
+ Am Econ R 14:720 D '24 400w

"Refreshingly clear without sacrificing too much the exactitude which such a subject requires."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 26 '24 100w

"The book is characterized by an absence of definitions and reference to authority. These characteristics, which in a book written for professional students would be a serious fault, contribute in this case to make the treatment simple, direct and forceful." I. H: Warshow
+ Lit R p969 Ag 16 '24 200w

"Mr. Franklin's treatment of the fundamentals of economics is admirably clear and well proportioned."
+ N Y Times p7 O 26 '24 700w

"In simple, lucid and readable form."
+ N Y Tribune p26 Je 15 '24 50w
Outlook 138:182 O 1 '24 20w

"He possesses in fuller measure than most newspaper writers the power of clear and accurate discussion of economic truths. The reader will find Dr. Franklin's treatment of economic themes untechnical, but in the main sound and sane."
+ R of Rs 70:109 Jl '24 90w

"As one might expect, Dr. Franklin's book is particularly well written, presenting the essentials of economics in a clear and interesting way, though without creating an illusion of simplicity by ignoring points of difficulty as they arise." J. E. Le Rossignol
+ Sat R of Lit 1:348 D 6 '24 480w

"The paragraphs on the single-tax movement are much to be commended, and indeed the whole book is thoroughly well done."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p632 O 9 '24 100w

FRAPPA, JEAN JOSE. Princess and the clowns; tr. from the French by Marie Louise Swinburne. 208p $1.50 Duffield 2

A charming little tale about a beautiful Russian princess and the Grand duke of one of the Balkan principalities. At the time of a Bolshevik uprising in Russia, Princess Olga and her mother sought refuge in Paris. Here one day in a music hall, while watching the antics of the famous clowns, Michalis and Partner, the princess recognizes in Michalis the Grand duke of Georgevia to whom she had been bethrothed and who, with his prime minister, was reported to have been killed by the Bolsheviki. The restoration of Michel Provinkoff to the royal throne of Georgevia is quickly followed by an astounding discovery about the king which threatens disaster for the kingdom, but the love of the Princess and Michel overcoming all obstacles culminates in a royal wedding.

"This mad little book, by the gifted Parisian author of 'Salonique,' in its whimsical fancy can only be likened to the lightest of Viennese operettas." G. E. H.
+ Lit R p12 D 13 '24 180w

"Through the early part of the tale there is a good deal of unnecessary verbiage that incites the reader to the vicious practice of skipping, whereby he is likely to lose here and there some good bit of satiric humor. For the author has an impish pen and he takes real pleasure in jabbing it into the foibles and frailties of human nature."
+ — N Y Times p24 D 21 '24 320w
N Y Tribune p7 D 21 '24 30w

"It has light and amusing passages, weighted down with a rather transparent dissuasion of democracy."
+ — N Y World p9e N 23 '24 160w

FRASIER, GEORGE WILLARD, and ARMENTROUT, WINFIELD D. Introduction to education. 274p $1.50 Scott 2

370 Education 24-14184

"The authors of An Introduction to Education state that their purpose is to acquaint the beginning student with 'the various theories current in the field of education, the major problems to be solved, present-day practices and systems, and the history of modern education.' In this volume the field of education is surveyed under the familiar titles of teacher, child, teaching process, school organization and curriculum, and democracy and the public schools. The book was subjected to a tryout while it was still in manuscript form. It was used in teaching 650 Teachers College Freshmen in classes conducted by six different teachers. The bibliographies at the end of each chapter are well organized."—School R

"It is well done. It holds a mirror up to the teacher himself that he may see what makes him fail, what makes him succeed. The book's treatment of old theories of education, its repudiation of monarchial products and substitution of the democratic aim, is fine. It is complete, it is simple, it is workable."
+ Educ R 68:276 D '24 600w

"The book is simply and interestingly written, with points well clarified by carefully chosen quotations and apt illustrative material. A unique and valuable feature of the text is the inclusion of the portraits of some of the leading educators of the present day." P. V. West
+ El School J 25:310 D '24 600w

Reviewed by I. M. Allen
School R 33:72 Ja '25 470w

FRAZER, SIR JAMES GEORGE. Leaves from the Golden bough; culled by Lady Frazer. 239p il $3 (10s 6d) Macmillan

291 Mythology. Folklore. Magic 24-23149

Lady Frazer has gone thru the twelve volumes of the Golden bough and culled those stories which she thought would be interesting to young readers. The book is, therefore, in the exact words of the author, but omits his erudite interpretations of the legends. The stories and legends are grouped under the following headings: Christmas and the mistletoe; Uncanny beings; Quaint customs; Myths and legends; Stories; Landscapes. An appendix gives in tabular form the exact location in the Golden bough from which the stories were taken.

Bookm 60:507 D '24 180w

"The arrangement is regrettable. On the one hand, aspects of the vegetation myth are treated under different headings, instead of being assembled in one section; on the other hand, the 'Stories' consist of similar versions of one type of tale, given consecutively, so that they become most tedious." Babette Deutsch
— Lit R p14 N 8 '24 450w

"Moving through the wonderful landscapes of the world, tasting of genuine savage life, sharing the beliefs of all ages and all races, the child will receive at the same time an excellent foundation for his future humanism. The pleasing illustrations by Mr. H. M. Brock add another touch of life to these entrancing pages."
+ Nature 114:854 D 13 '24 400w

"Apparently she has intended the book especially for the reading of young people, although there is no reason why it should not be equally entertaining to their elders."
N Y Times p10 O 26 '24 380w

"It is difficult to conceive whose needs will be served by this compilation. The small child should be preserved from any such recital of the early terrors and cruelties of the race as one finds here in abundance. Older girls and boys, if they are not bored by the frequent reappearance of certain creatures and certain events, will be stirred to a curiosity which this volume does not satisfy." Babette Deutsch
— N Y Tribune p8 N 16 '24 400w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p632 O 9 '24 10w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p758 N 20 '24 1100w

FREDERICK, JUSTUS GEORGE. Two women. 345p $2 Brown, N. L.

23-18373

"It is nominally a study of two characters, but in reality it is concerned primarily with only one, Phyllis Batterman. She is emphatically a modern young woman, desiring to have an important and interesting literary career as the editor of a magazine. She refuses to be advised or made love to by a man named Mark, who finally gives up trying to win her affection. A period in the girl's life, however, comes when she suddenly decides that she might wisely marry for the sake of garnering one more experience. She selects exactly the kind of husband, strong, efficient women do pick out, if allowed to choose unaided! In other words, her husband is a colorless weak creature, who is young, beautiful and pliant. But when Phyllis again sees Mark only to learn that he has found a certain degree of comfort and companionship from being with Pauline she tries to charm him."—Boston Transcript

"The novel is a very creditable piece of work in several particulars. One of the singular things about it is its modern yet unmistakable decent moral tone. There is neither slush nor sentimentality in it."
+ — Boston Transcript p4 F 9 '24 300w

"Its defects proceed from a too ready acceptance of an exceedingly small world on its own terms. The chief merit of the book is its structure, which erected as it may have been of flimsy material on a shifting base, shows a fairly good sense of proportion."

FREDERICK, J. G:—Continued
— + Lit R p564 Mr 1 '24 380w

"Mr Frederick's thesis seems to be, Can one man love two women at the same time? And his answer seems to be, He can if he can get away with it. It takes delicate writing to present delicate subjects, and at no time during the progress of 'Two Women' does Mr. Frederick suggest that he is a delicate writer."
— N Y Times p22 F 10 '24 600w

FREEBURG, VICTOR OSCAR. Pictorial beauty on the screen; with a prefatory note by Rex Ingram. 191p il $2.50 Macmillan
778 Moving pictures 23-16811

"In this volume Dr. Freeburg contends that in order to be classified among the arts, the Cinema must become something more than a series of clear photographs of things in motion. In other words, a motion picture must be composed of scenes that have certain pictorial qualifications, such as form, composition and a proper distribution of light and shade." (Prefatory note) Basing his book on this contention the author has tried to formulate some of the principles which govern the creation of pictorial beauty on the screen—the art of pictorial composition, or cinema composition, as he calls it.

Booklist 20:207 Mr '24
Cleveland p53 Jl '24

"It is a work which, if it is read as it deserves to be read, may have a profound influence not only on the making of pictures but on their appreciation."
+ Detroit News p13 Ap 13 '24 400w
Nation 118:262 Mr 5 '24 70w

"A sincere but pretentious study of the aesthetic values in the motion picture. On the critical side its work is admirable."
+ New Repub 38:106 Mr 19 '24 200w

FREELAND, GEORGE EARL. Improvement of
2 teaching. (Modern teacher's ser.) 290p $1.60 Macmillan
371 Teaching. Education of children 24-17812

"The book is somewhat unique in its treatment and organization. It is miscellaneous in character; it contains the elements of the methods of teaching, classroom management, psychology, both general and educational, curriculum-making, and scientific testing. All of the elements are brought to bear on one central problem, namely, the improvement of teaching." —School R

"A very definite development of the problems of teaching in an elementary school. Many excellent references."
+ English J 13:688 N '24 20w

"The book is very interesting. It is particularly suitable for teachers in service who do not care to read technical books. It is the type of publication which might be very practical and popular in reading circles. Its simple language, its vivid illustrations, and its miscellaneous nature all tend to make it a profitable book for general professional reading." J. A. Nietz
+ School R 33:76 Ja '25 470w

FREEMAN, FRANK NUGENT, ed. Visual education. 391p il $3.50 Univ. of Chicago press [19s 6d Cambridge univ. press]
371.335 Visual instruction. Moving pictures in education 24-8785

A scientific study of the new methods and devices which go by the name of visual education and an attempt to weigh their educational possibilities. It covers the three principal modes of pictorial representation: slides, stereographs and motion pictures, with emphasis on the last, as the newest and most experimental. The investigation consists largely in a comparison between the various forms of visual education or between visual and non-visual methods. Reports are given, by various educators, of applications of the method to the different studies.

Booklist 21:8 O '24

"The book, with its illustrations and diagrams, is a valuable record of painstaking work which is sure to have its reverberation in the new movement for adding the pictorial to the oral and printed elements in teaching."
+ Boston Transcript p6 My 10 '24 350w

"It is refreshing to read a treatise upon visual instruction without having to guard yourself against the wild and glad advertising propaganda of a writer paid to boom the business." W. M.
+ Educ R 68:112 S '24 380w
Lit R p859 Je 28 '24 120w

FREEMAN, LEWIS RANSOME. Colorado river; yesterday, to-day and tomorrow. 451p il $5 Dodd [25s Heinemann]
917.9 Colorado river 23-15603

The first and much the longer part of the book, Finding the river, is given to Colorado River history, discovery and exploration. This comprises the records of the conquistadores and the padres, the narratives of the pioneer explorers and navigators, some modern feats of navigation, including the historic voyage of the Kolb brothers to obtain moving pictures, and the work of the Geological survey in the Colorado basin. The last part of the book, Binding the river, is given to the vast irrigation and reclamation projects undertaken by the United States government. A concluding chapter relates to Grand Canyon national park. There are many and excellent illustrations.

Booklist 20:214 Mr '24

"Mr. Freeman has produced an extremely valuable and exhaustive story of the history and explorations of the Colorado river, which beyond doubt will speedily take its place as the definite narrative upon this subject. The volume is enriched with a large number of excellent and extremely interesting illustrations from photographs." E. J. C.
+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 15 '24 450w
Cleveland p38 My '24
Reviewed by A. D. Douglas
Int Bk R p443 My '24 250w
+ Sat R 137:64 Ja 19 '24 360w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p867 D 13 '23 1000w
Wis Lib Bul 20:45 F '24

FREEMAN, LEWIS RANSOME. Down the Grand canyon. 371p il $3.50 Dodd
917.9 Grand canyon of the Colorado 24-23943

Beginning with an account of an earlier experience of trying to navigate the Colorado by mule-team and mudscow, Mr Freeman goes on to describe an expedition of the United States geological survey to study the dam-sites of Glen canyon and another which mapped out the middle canyon region of the Colorado. On both of these trips Mr Freeman navigated one of the boats. He also describes how he took a boat thru the delta to the head of the Gulf of California.

Booklist 21:106 D '24
Boston Transcript p4 O 22 '24 980w
N Y Times p7 O 12 '24 1000w
Reviewed by Blair Niles
N Y Tribune p9 N 2 '24 450w

"Many have felt the immeasurable appeal of the Grand canyon as viewed from the rim, and longed to know more of its inner mysteries. To all such this book provides a safe and fascinating journey."
+ Outlook 138:379 N 5 '24 180w

FREEMAN, RICHARD AUSTIN. Blue scarab. 276p $2 Dodd
24-1491

A collection of short detective stories which differ from the usual run of such tales inasmuch as the interest lies not in guessing the identity of the criminal, but in the steps by which the identity was established. In only one story is the element of surprise prominent. As in the author's earlier collection, "The singing bone," the master detective, Thorndyke, and his Watsonian friend, Dr. Jervis are instrumental in solving the crimes. Contents: The blue scarab; The case of the white foot-prints; The New Jersey sphinx; The touchstone; A fisher of men; The stolen ingots; The funeral pyre.

Booklist 20:264 Ap '24

"He gives us no false clues. He never pads a story in order to make an extremely moderate thrill seem an exciting one. Whenever he draws a character it is truly that, rarely a type. Altogether this new volume is a success and all lovers of good detective fiction will be rewarded by reading it."
+ Boston Transcript p6 Ja 30 '24 210w

Int Bk R p613 Jl '24 420w

"They are clever, interesting and well told."
+ N Y Times p17 Ja 20 '24 500w

"These are exceptionally clever puzzles." Isabel Paterson
+ N Y Tribune p22 Ja 27 '24 390w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p6e Ja 13 '24 320w

Springf'd Republican p7a F 17 '24 180w

Wis Lib Bul 20:97 Ap '24

FREEMAN, RICHARD AUSTIN. Red thumbmark. 305p $2 Dodd
24-26925

Further adventures of the scientific detective, Dr Thorndyke, of the "Singing bone," who in this story sets himself the task of running to earth the thief who took the diamonds intrusted to Hornby's in London by a South African customer. The evidence of the case rests on a bloody thumb-print and the trial brings out some interesting facts about fingerprints.

Booklist 21:111 D '24

"It is patently a poor yarn. Even the most mysterious mystery story should have the savour of plausibility now brought to light. It may well be one of Mr. Freeman's first efforts, written before he had learned how to manage a plot."
— Boston Transcript p4 O 22 '24 250w

Lit R p9 O 25 '24 120w

N Y Times p9 S 21 '24 170w

"An interesting tale." E. W. Osborn
+ N Y World p7e S 21 '24 70w

Sat R of Lit 1:186 O 11 '24 330w

FRENCH, JOSEPH LEWIS, ed. Great detective ³ stories from Voltaire to Poe. (Dial detective lib.) 317p $1.75 Dial press
Short stories—Collections 24-23603

Contents: Zadig, by Voltaire; Vidocq, from his memoirs; The devil's disciple, by Balzac; D'Artignan—sleuth-hound, by Dumas; The murders in the Rue Morgue, by Edgar Allan Poe.

Booklist 21:152 Ja '25

Boston Transcript p5 O 8 '24 200w

"In the present work Mr. French has chosen well and has illustrated by examples from Vidocq's Memoirs, from Balzac, Dumas, and Poe, the development of the analysis of crime."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:251 N 1 '24 100w

FRENCH, JOSEPH LEWIS, ed. Sagas of the seas. 281p $2.75 Dial press
Sea stories 24-28271

This anthology of sea stories and writings is drawn entirely from American authors. The selections chosen are not always sea stories, but include such narratives as Governor Bradford's account of the voyage of the Mayflower and a selection from Dr Kane's journal of Arctic explorations. Contents: The voyage of the Mayflower, 1620, by W: Bradford; The Bon Homme Richard; by J: P. Jones; The chase and the capture, by J. Cobb; The privateer, by J. F. Cooper; The main-truck; The log of the Arethusa, by W: H. Macey; Leviathan, by J. R. Browne; An old-time mate, by R. F. Coffin; The gale, by R: H: Dana, jr.; Flogging, by R: H: Dana, jr.; The slave trade, by W. J. Abbot; Ms. found in a bottle, by E. A. Poe; "Mother Carey's chickens," by J. Cobb; The frozen north, by E. K. Kane; The enchanted valley, by Herman Melville; The superstitious seaman, by T: Gibbons; The race it blew, by J. B. Connolly; Riley, by Hall and Nordhoff.

"With the skill of the seasoned anthologist, Mr. French has made and arrayed his selections carefully and wisely." E. F. E.
+ Boston Transcript p6 N 1 '24 550w

"To the reader who has all the terminology of the sea at his tongue's end these 'sagas' may be interesting. Students of naval history may follow Paul Jones's manoeuvres with some excitement. But the layman must not expect the fascination he finds in Conrad."
+ — N Y Times p26 D 14 '24 230w

Sat R of Lit 1:365 D 6 '24 200w

FRENCH, JOSEPH LEWIS, ed. Sixty years of American humor. 401p $2.50 Little 817 24-23495

An anthology of American prose humor from Artemus Ward to Sam Hellman. The examples given are complete sketches, including such stories as Mark Twain's "Jumping frog," Eugene Field's "Cyclopeedy," Stephen Leacock's "Spoof" and Octavus Roy Cohen's "Noblesse obliged."

Booklist 21:143 Ja '25

"Not merely a book of reference for the library shelf, it is a book to be read, if one desires, for nothing more than sheer entertainment."
+ Boston Transcript p5 O 8 '24 450w

"Mr. French is an experienced anthologist, and his choices are tasteful and judicious." H. A. Beers
+ Lit R p5 N 29 '24 300w

"'This hardly gives due credit, in an anthology of American humor, to all that long line of writers over whose witty, grotesque or sarcastic outpourings the people of this country laughed delightedly. It must be said in Mr. French's defense, however, that he could not have included specimens of all our notable humorists without making his one volume of unwieldy size."
— + N Y Times p10 O 26 '24 600w

"Here the foreign reader would find no sign of that fresh, new element which has burst into American humor in the last five years, making it distinctive and decidedly important. In fact, he would know nothing about modern American humor at all." Robert Benchley
— N Y Tribune p6 D 7 '24 600w

Sat R of Lit 1:269 N 8 '24 200w

FREUD, SIGMUND. Beyond the pleasure principle; auth. tr. from the second German ed by C. J. M. Hubback. 90p $1.50 Boni & Liveright [6s International psychoanalytical press]
130 Psychoanalysis 25-1269

" 'Beyond the Pleasure Principle' starts with the assumption, common to psychoanalysis and current psychology, that the course of mental processes is automatically regulated by the 'pleasure principle'; that is, that any given process consists of an avoidance of pain or a production of pleasure. The study digs under the pleasure principle, in order to find the original instinct of life. This instinct he locates in a repetition compulsion, an instinct of the

FREUD, SIGMUND—Continued
organism to return to its original state. A hollow, rubber ball, pressed inward, returns to its original shape; a sapling, pulled to earth tends to fly back. Just so life, which grew from the inorganic, has as its basal instinct a compulsion to return to the inorganic. The goal of all life, then, is death."—Lit R

"While it may be admitted that this blunt and, we believe, much misunderstood treatment of sex has caused him to appear as an obnoxious personality to some, we feel that no fair minded reader can deny that he reveals himself in these studies as having not only admirable but attractive personal qualities." F. W. C.
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 6 '24 550w

Reviewed by L. W: Glaser
Lit R p750 Je 9 '23 950w

Reviewed by Clement Wood
Lit R p6 S 6 '24 550w

Reviewed by C. E. Ayres
New Repub 41:98 D 17 '24 400w

Reviewed by Leonard Cline
N Y World p7e Ag 31 '24 580w

Reviewed by J: C. Ransom
Sat R of Lit 1:162 O 4 '24 430w

FREUNDLICH, ERWIN. Theory of relativity; tr. by Henry L. Brose; with an introd. by Viscount Haldane. 98p $2 Dutton [6s Methuen]
530.1 Einstein theory [24-14718]

"A popular exposition of Einstein's theory by a competent mathematician in three short lectures. They are described as 'for chemists,' but have no special application to chemistry." —Nature

"It seems impossible as yet to explain Einstein's theory of gravitation to people who are not fairly expert mathematicians. Innumerable attempts have been made; perhaps the best is Einstein's own, also published by Messrs. Methuen. Probably fifty years hence the necessary preliminaries will have been gone through, but for the present each new popular exposition seems to make the case more hopeless." Bertrand Russell
Nation and Ath 34:802 Mr 8 '24 520w

"So many excellent little books on Relativity have been published that it requires a rather careful scrutiny to detect their relative merits. Among the special points in which Dr. Freundlich's lectures for chemists are better than some of the other books are his statement of Maxwell's equations in non-mathematical terms, and his argument from the observed appearance of double stars in favour of the constant velocity of light."
+ New Statesman 23:264 Je 7 '24 300w

"Professor Freundlich, of the Astrophysical Observatory at Potsdam, is one of the most brilliant of Dr. Einstein's younger astronomical adherents in Germany. Mr. H. L. Brose has done useful work in translating Dr. Freundlich's latest attempt to explain this very recondite and difficult subject in three lectures for chemists under the title of 'The Theory of Relativity.' Lord Haldane, contributes a brief but interesting introduction to the new volume."
+ Sat R 137:187 F 23 '24 350w

FRIEDLAENDER, V. H. Colour of youth. 319p $2 Putnam
24-24342

" 'The Color of Youth' is the story of the family of an English country doctor and his children, a boy and a girl. Brian Falladay and his wife have irreconcilable temperaments. Brian is touched with quietism and content with his service as a country physician. His wife desires for him wider recognition—the splurge of the city. This parental dissension enters into the life of the children. It leads the mother into pushing her precocious daughter, Nora, and neglecting John. But between John and his father there was a fine spirit of companionship. It was associating with his father that enabled John to retain some confidence in himself. It helped through difficult years, when his father was no longer there to aid him. For after Brian's sudden death Mrs. Falladay had her way, and the family moved to London and she devoted herself to putting Nora before the world as a child genius. They were years of trial for John. Yet the memory of his father and childhood stayed with him, comforted him."—N Y Times

Booklist 21:152 Ja '25

"The delicacy and precision with which this story is unfolded by its narrator is little short of astonishing. She has material which might easily have blended with the commonplace. She uses it with originality and assurance, and reveals a deep and tender understanding of youth." D. F. G.
+ Boston Transcript p4 S 24 '24 700w

Cleveland p91 D '24

"Miss Friedlaender has written a book that is head and shoulders above the average, one that a man can chew and swallow without fear of indigestion. Understanding, truth and style are its distinguishing points." H. B.
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p14 N 9 '24 890w

" 'The Colour of Youth' has the quality of charm. It lies in the background, in the characterization, and in the style." G. C.
+ Ind 113:492 D 6 '24 300w

"The material is well unified and set within strict limits. The style is satisfyingly simple." E. H. Wyman
+ Int Bk R p62 D '24 400w

"Miss Friedlaender has given us something fine and new. Her pages are rich in the poetry of suggestion and her sentences sing. She has assembled a number of figures, carefully individualized and lovable. Were they next-door neighbors they should certainly be welcome friends. It's more than you can say for some created personalities." Walter Yust
+ Lit R p3 O 4 '24 380w

"Miss Friedlaender has written a beautiful book. Her style is colorful and moving. It is rich with a sensitiveness to life and kindly in its irony. Her humor lights the story with a deft and probing touch. Occasionally, in her lyrical phrasing, she strains the alliterative, which is damaging to her fine writing. Also there are moments of abrupt change in the steady flow of her narrative that suggest the effects of the short story rather than the novel and make the movement jerky. Withal it is a rare human story told with relish."
+ — N Y Times p9 O 5 '24 700w

N Y Tribune p11 D 14 '24 150w

N Y World p8e N 9 '24 150w

"Miss Friedlaender can evoke the moods of a lonely misunderstood child with tenderness and sympathy, too much tenderness for truth, but not too much sympathy for art."
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:234 O 25 '24 450w

"Richly endowed with sensitiveness, insight, tender fancy—above all, with a delicate emotional tone that represents the author's own brooding over the experiences that she imagines with so precise and subtle sympathy."
+ Springf'd Republican p5a N 2 '24 680w

FRIEL, ARTHUR OLNEY. King of No Man's Land. 347p $2 Harper
24-7529

Given an opportunity, do man's atavistic tendencies triumph over his thin veneer of civilization? David Rand, student of ethnology, disappears in the wilds of South America where he is making a study of a savage tribe. Three American friends and a Spaniard go in search of him. This Spaniard, José by name, thru innumerable slaughters has made himself king of a territory called No Man's Land. En route they learn that David has become a savage and leader of a tribe hostile to José's. José is no longer a friend—he is an enemy.

After a long search they meet and it becomes a case of the survival of the fittest. The primitive man has triumphed. At last, thru the efforts of the Americans, peace is restored and David and José remain in the wilderness which has wiped out their civilization.

"It is an exceedingly good book of its kind."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 19 '24 900w

"The episodes are well told and the conversations which help to pad out the book are no more tedious than the dialogue characteristic of this type of novel."

— + N Y Times p9 Je 1 '24 190w

"I can endure and have these many years endured any amount of horror, but Mr. Friel's high astounding style presents an impassable thicket." A. D. Douglas

— N Y Tribune p23 Je 8 '24 200w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p6e Ap 20 '24 60w

FRIEL, ARTHUR OLNEY. River of Seven Stars. 476p il $3.50 Harper

918 Orinoco river. South America—Description and travel 24-20968

A narrative of travels thru the wilderness of the Orinoco and its tributary the Venturari. The journey began at Ciudad Bolivar in Venezuela and covered six thousand miles, part of it thru almost unexplored country. It led the author finally to the home of the Maquiritares, or so-called "white Indians."

Booklist 21:146 Ja '25

"It is a great story of the most thrilling adventure, a great description of a little known country and a valuable and vivid travel sketch of one of the world's greatest and least known rivers." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 25 '24 440w

Ind 113:234 O 4 '24 80w

"It is a vivacious narrative of the perils and hardships and also of the humors of travel by water and forest path through unknown or little known country, with much observation of the fauna and of the natives, Indians and various half-breeds." H. L. P.

Lit R p15 S 27 '24 200w

"Here is the most entertaining of the several excellent books of the Orinoco." Blair Niles

N Y Tribune p2 O 19 '24 1350w

Outlook 138:467 N 19 '24 50w

"Mr. Friel is very evidently experienced in photography. The illustrations are excellently chosen and should well repay him for the weary hours spent in taking and preserving them. The book may be summed up as the account of a very creditable performance, creditably placed before the public." Kermit Roosevelt

+ Sat R of Lit 1:182 O 11 '24 700w

FRIEND, OSCAR J. Round-up; a story of ranchmen, cowboys, rustlers, and bad-men happening in the days when the great Southwest was being won for civilization. 373p il $2 McClurg

24-4699

The Nightbird was a leader of a notorious gang of outlaws who roamed the cattle country. Wherever they rode, they left death and destruction behind. After Blaine's fruit farm had been burned and his daughter kidnapped, the boys of the DZX started out on a chase for the vandal. Heading them was Jack Montague, who was in love with Patricia Blaine, the kidnapped girl, and Martin, who had spent years of his life in seeking the murderer of his brother. Martin succeeded in getting his revenge when he murdered the whiskered sheriff Carruthers, and Jack rescued his girl from the Nightbird. At the end of the forty mile chase the Nightbird was captured, and the identity of this mysterious leader proved altogether amazing.

"Consistent, thrilling and interest-holding from the outset."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 7 '24 250w

Lit R p843 Je 21 '24 70w

"Such is the sincerity of the author's writing that from rather hackneyed material he has developed a story that will hold the reader's interest to the end."

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 23 '24 460w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p7e Mr 16 '24 80w

FRIPP, EDGAR I. Master Richard Quyny. 216p $3.35 Oxford [10s Milford]

822.33 Shakespeare, William. Quiney, Richard

"This work is a compilation of facts concerning Shakespeare's friend Richard Quyny (more usually written 'Quiney') and other burgesses and citizens of Stratford: in addition, it contains a number of assumptions and conjectures concerning Shakespeare, an attempt to represent the poet as a morally blameless man, and a disputable interpretation of the Sonnets. The value of Mr. Fripp's book is confined to its quotations from old documents and the Quiney letters, from which a reader gleans picturesque and quaint facts concerning the Stratford of Shakespeare."—Nation and Ath

"A laborious attempt to make William Shakespeare of Stratford real through a portrait of one of his fellow-townsmen. The connection is tenuous and the achievement negligible."

— Nation 119:501 N 5 '24 30w

"Mr. Fripp can hardly be praised except as a compiler of the minutiae of ancient Stratford life. When he ventures into biographical conjecture and critical interpretation he is less admirable." R: Aldington

— + Nation and Ath 36:60 O 11 '24 1600w

"The book is valuable for its details of Stratford life."

+ New Statesman 24:56 O 18 '24 600w

Reviewed by S. A. Coblentz

N Y Times p12 Ja 4 '25 1000w

"Mr. Fripp fails to achieve the impossible task of presenting a vivid picture while sticking close to the records. It is worth while bringing together all that is known about the Stratfordians of Shakespeare's time; and, indeed, we know a good deal. But we also know that that knowledge is of petty and generally disconnected details." S: C. Chew

— + N Y Tribune p9 O 26 '24 600w

FRISCH, EPHRAIM. Historical survey of Jewish philanthropy from the earliest times to the nineteenth century. 196p $1.75 Macmillan

296 Jews—Charities 24-13607

The author traces the broad outlines of the stream of Jewish philanthropy from ancient times to the beginning of the period of emancipation. The book is divided into two parts: From the earliest times to the fall of the state; From the fall of the state to the beginnings of emancipation. There is also a bibliography and an index.

"A comprehensive and clear survey of Jewish philanthropy." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 12 '24 230w

Cath World 119:713 Ag '24 500w

"An excellent manual showing the various trends of Jewish philanthropy and tracing its evolution from Biblical times up to the nineteenth century." M. H. L. V.

+ Lit R p10 Ag 30 '24 210w

FROST, STANLEY. Challenge of the Klan. 302p il $2 Bobbs

363 Ku Klux klan 24-9345

"Many readers will recall the author's articles in The Outlook and will be interested to know that, for this volume, he has made considerable additions, including a complete reprint of the Klan's constitution, excerpts from its published propaganda and a statement by a leading Klansman of the spiritual and religious side of the movement, with the effect this may have inside the Protestant church organizations. There are constant indications that Mr. Frost has exhausted all available sources of information, that he has written without conscious bias and with the purpose to tell the whole truth as he found it."—Boston Transcript

FROST, STANLEY—Continued

---

Booklist 21:51 N '24

"Of the many surveys of Ku Klux Klanism which are daily appearing in print, this will take its place among the most informative, among the most logically considered, and, from the point of view of the organization's enemies, among the most hopeful." F. P. H.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 21 '24 450w

Cleveland p54 Jl '24

"Mr. Frost's study is a model of impartial reporting; a carefully prepared statement of demonstrable fact, based chiefly on his own direct investigation, and as fully documented as the nature of the case permits. He is temperamentally judicially minded, and, although one is left in no doubt as to his own feeling, he manages to keep remarkably aloof and impersonal in his analyses. He is not an alarmist. His final summary refuses to see any 'hideous menace.'" H. L. Pangborn

+ Lit R p720 My 3 '24 600w

N Y Tribune p26 Jl 13 '24 70w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:353 Jl '24

FROTHINGHAM, ROBERT, comp. Songs of the sea & Sailors' chanteys. 288p $1.75 Houghton

821.08 Sea poetry. Chanties 24-5955

An anthology of sea poems drawn chiefly from contemporary poets, since very little sea poetry worthy the name was written previous to the advent of Kipling, the compiler tells us. The sea chanteys are accompanied by the music to which they were sung.

Cleveland p70 S '24

"What impresses us is that he has unearthed some very good sea poems that are not all Kipling, Masefield or C. Fox Smith, though these poets are all well represented. The contents of the book are highly diversified." W: R. Benet

+ Lit R p774 My 24 '24 130w

"There are enough good things in the collection to entitle the book to its inch of footroom on the cabin shelf." Arthur Guiterman

+ Outlook 136:650 Ap 16 '24 50w

Wis Lib Bul 20:175 Jl '24

FROTHINGHAM, THOMAS GODDARD. Naval history of the World war; offensive operations, 1914-1915. v 1 349p $3.75 Harvard univ. press

940.45 European war, 1914-1919—Naval operations (24-14384)

"This work by an American naval officer covers the first two years of the war at sea, including the action in the Bight, the battles of Coronel and the Falkland Islands and the Dardanelles operations. It is compiled from data provided by the Historical Section, United States Navy. Eight maps."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"Of great value to students of naval science. The accuracy of the statements and data presented are beyond question, as the work has been compiled from data provided by the historical section of the United States Navy Department."

+ Am Pol Sci R 18:828 N '24 130w

Booklist 21:63 N '24

"This is a very readable book. It is short, authoritative and interesting." C: T. Davis

+ Boston Transcript p1 Je 14 '24 4500w

"It has the two great merits—from a layman's point of view—of brevity and clarity, and is obviously based on much laborious research, embracing German as well as British and French sources. In this respect it is probably more authoritative than any work yet published in either of those countries, picturing the operations from a naval rather than a national point of view." N: Roosevelt

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 10 '24 1500w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p614 O 2 '24 40w

FRY, CHARLES LUTHER. Diagnosing the rural church, a study in method; with a foreword by Franklin H. Giddings. (Inst. of social and religious research. Town and country ser.) 234p $1.50 Doran

260 Country church 24-13482

The purpose of this study is to apply scientific method to the measurement of the field of the rural church. It is based on an analysis of conditions in thirty-two counties scattered over twenty-six states. Part one deals with the methods and standards of measurement; part two with the factors which influence the life of a church; part three, comparatively, with church life past and present. Numerous tables and charts are included.

Boston Transcript p1 S 6 '24 120w

"There can be no doubt that it is a careful and scientific work. In so far as it is possible to diagnose the rural church, leaving out any study of the ministers' personalities or their message, Mr. Fry has done the job in this book. . . The most obvious criticism that occurs to this reviewer is that Mr. Fry has studied the rural church only as a body of more or less living matter affected by stimuli from the outside. Not once does he assume that the church's function is to change its environment and to provide stimuli instead of simply being affected by them." Fred Eastman

+ — Survey 52:637 S 15 '24 600w

FULLER, CHARLES ARTHUR. Designing, [2] heating and ventilating systems. 2d ed rev and enl 245p il $3 U. P. C. bk.

697 Heating. Ventilation 23-15939

"The practical application of the engineering rules and formulas in every day use, in laying out steam, hot water, furnaces and ventilating equipment for buildings of all kinds, presented in a simple and easily understandable manner; adopted from lecture courses given by the author." (Subtitle) "Theory is handled with avoidance of involved mathematical computations." (Pittsburgh Mo Bul)

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:510 N '24

FULLER, RAYMOND GARFIELD. Child labor and the constitution; with an introd. by John H. Finley. 323p $2.50 Crowell

331.3 Child labor 23-18092

The former director of research and publicity of the National child labor committee has provided a sympathetic discussion of the whole child labor problem, a thorough survey of its present status in the United States, both urban and rural and a digest of legislation on the subject. "The point of view taken in this book is that, while there is still a place in child-labor reform for the compulsions and prohibitions of school-attendance and child-labor laws, the biggest task of protecting children from premature school-leaving and improper labor lies in the direction of better schools with stronger holding power of their own, a varied curriculum and a flexible grading system, educational and vocational guidance, vocational placement, and employment supervision. In this volume there will be frequent reference to the substitutes for child labor, such as suitable play, suitable schooling, suitable work." (Preface)

"It contains a wealth of illustrative material, obtained from reports, investigations and observations." E: Berman

+ Am Econ R 14:343 Je '24 380w

Reviewed by P. H. Douglas
Am Pol Sci R 18:631 Ag '24 280w

"Mr. Fuller marshals his facts on the solid ground of practicability, with the acumen of an engineer. His viewpoint is fresh and sympathetic; his spirit, tolerant; his attitude, sane. He combines vision with patience. The result is a book, authentic, timely, sympathetic, scientific." J. H. S. Bossard
+ Ann Am Acad 114:159 Jl '24 780w

Booklist 20:282 My '24

"Mr. Fuller's statistics, his human documents, his forceful, and soundly backed remarks fascinate and horrify. Yet all the while one gets the feeling that the author is being moderate, if anything, in his choice of material. The book is a worthwhile contribution toward the stamping out of a great and far reaching evil."
+ Bookm 59:227 Ap '24 200w

"Although convinced that federal action is necessary in order to secure proper and effective regulation of child labor, the author is moderate and generally sound in his discussion of the constitutional problems involved. A good bibliography is appended, and, in addition, a shorter bibliography of the most useful material at the end of each chapter." C. A. Berdahl
+ — Educ R 67:175 Mr '24 1600w

J Home Econ 16:211 Ap '24 80w

Reviewed by Reuben Oppenheimer
New Repub 40:302 N 19 '24 1550w

"It is the distinction of 'Child Labor and the Constitution' that, though it lays bare one of the deepest, the most vital, failures of our Constitution, it maintains always the true perspective, the attitude of sanity and calm wisdom." J: Corbin
+ — N Y Times p16 Mr 9 '24 1750w

"There will be wide disagreement with many of Mr. Fuller's contentions, as also there will be wide approval of them. But there will be no challenging of his authority or his sincerity as the spokesman of his side of the great controversy, or of the value of his book as a detailed presentation of the arguments and pleadings for a child labor amendment to the Constitution." W. F. Johnson
+ — No Am 220:369 D '24 200w

Reviewed by H. I. Carman
Pol Sci Q 39:529 S '24 580w

+ R of Rs 69:335 Mr '24 150w

Springf'd Republican p10 D 3 '24 80w

Survey 51:534 F 15 '24 950w

Wis Lib Bul 20:64 Mr '24

"Mr. Fuller's book is a timely and valuable comprehensive presentation of the facts and arguments which must be considered in reaching a decision. One may hope that it is being widely studied at this time." H: P. Fairchild
+ Yale R n s 14:184 O '24 500w

FURNISS, HARRY. Some Victorian men. ² 242p il $4 Dodd [12s 6d Lane]

920 Great Britain—Biography

Harry Furniss was for many years the chief political cartoonist of Punch, and the illustrator of the "Diary of Parliament" by Toby, M. P. His memoirs include the striking personalities of the Victorian era in politics, finance, literature, art and the theater. A whole chapter each is devoted to Dickens, Joseph Chamberlain, Disraeli and Gladstone. There are fifty-eight illustrations.

New Statesman 24:216 N 22 '24 330w

"Mr. Furniss draws better than he writes, but in spite of a tendency to the slipshod and the trivial he has collected much that is entertaining in his new volume of reminiscences of the Victorian age."
+ — Sat R 138:472 N 8 '24 520w

G

GABRIEL, GILBERT WOLF. Brownstone front. 365p $2 Century
24-20377

"Mr. Gabriel has shrewdly chosen the house with the brownstone front as the symbol of a New York that was, not so long ago. It is of a day when La Gioconda was a daring opera, when Dolly Gray was a song of the day, when the Boy Orator of the Platte was storming the citadels of politics, when the Spanish-American War was about to break, when Brooklyn was actually another city in fact as well as in jest—it is of yesterday. The story is of no consequence, nor does it pretend to be. It is the tale of how Robert Ladd recuperated the family fortunes by inventing the Ladd Bicycle Lamp (everybody went bicycling, you know) and then the Ladd Street Arc Lamp, and of how he lost his heritage when the old brownstone house passed away with his mother."—Lit R

Booklist 21:152 Ja '25

"The author has produced a sincere and interesting story, if not a great one. He has been happier in his sketches of such minor characters as 'Gramper' and Exodus Bray than in those of the city and time, but outside of a certain almost painful conscientiousness in the latter, he has done good work." S. L. R.
+ — Boston Transcript p4 O 18 '24 850w

"Mr. Gabriel's 'Brownstone Front' is more than a piece of Americana. It is an outstanding novel." D. R.
+ Ind 113:160 S 13 '24 210w

"There is a host of finely drawn lesser characters. And there is a host of lurking chuckles behind the author's gentle satire. It is a delightful book for New Yorkers." H. S.
+ Lit R p10 S 6 '24 210w

"Here and in many places Mr. Gabriel writes with a commendable restraint. He has a manner of suggesting fine things that points to the artist in literature; yet, counterbalancing all this fine effort, there is a lack of robust life, a strange paucity of vigor that should, were it supplanted by figures more resentful of their lot, lend great color and deep conviction to the story."
+ N Y Times p8 S 14 '24 380w

"If the structure is not strong, the style is masterly in its power of selection. We are never overpowered by the writer's array of detail. Much is said in few words, in a singularly pellucid way. People who have no patience with the congestion of words in some smart modern authors will find pleasure in 'Brownstone Front.' And some people can never have enough of New York, if only it is truthfully rendered." Clare Howard
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:139 S 27 '24 700w

GAGARINA, MARIE (LASAREVSKY) (PRINCESS ALEXANDRE GAGARINE), comp. and tr. Borzoi cook book. 247p $2.50 Knopf [8s 6d Heinemann]

641 Cookery, Russian 24-517

"The house of Madame Dragomirov, wife of the Governor-General of Kiev, was famed for its cuisine. At the request of her friends she compiled a collection of recipes and published it with great success in Russia. This book contains 416 recipes, among them many of these, and others from various sources. For American housewives who are seeking something novel in the way of cookery this book will be of value. It tells how to make such exotic dishes as sherbert mixed with almond peel; walnut jam; borstch (a kind of soup); kvass, the non-alcholic national drink; and koulebiaka—meat-pie. It also shows new ways of preparing the more familiar roast and vegetables. Directions are very explicit even in regard to the details of serving."—Publisher's note

---

GAGARINA, MARIE—Continued

+ Bookm 59:89 Mr '24 160w

"It is not sufficiently complete in its directions to be used by the novice, and it often calls for unusual and expensive ingredients, but it is full of suggestions for appetizing flavors and combinations little known in this part of the world." Sarah Simpson

+ J Home Econ 16:93 F '24 80w

Reviewed by H: T. Finck

Nation 118:235 F 27 '24 100w

"The book is to be particularly praised for the care with which all the details of the making of each dish are described. For the best cooks know that there can be no good cooking without attention to all such little matters, which American cook books are too prone to ignore or to treat in a vague and sketchy way."

+ N Y Times p22 N 25 '23 440w

"The recipes appear to be clearly and simply set forth, and those who wish to make adventures in cooking will find their path made easy."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p129 F 28 '24 150w

GALPIN, CHARLES JOSIAH. Rural social problems. (Century rural life books) 286p $2 Century

630.1 Country life. Sociology, Rural 24-12019

The theme of the book is the human element in farming and rural life, the human needs and problems of farm men and women. The author believes that most of the obstacles to content on the farm are removable. Among the hopeful possibilities he discusses the shortening and easing of the farm woman's day, better trading and merchandising conditions, consolidation of country schools and church groups, enlarged library, hospital and recreation districts, the fostering of rural art, and the formation of effective local municipalities.

Booklist 21:97 D '24

"Every page contains valuable and enlightening information, suggestions and forecasts." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 7 '24 1100w

"He has written a readable, penetrating and stimulating book which surveys the rural social problem in broader terms than it has hitherto been accorded." E. C. Lindeman

+ New Repub 40:sup11 O 1 '24 550w

"Here at last comes a stimulating, forward-looking, all-'round discussion of the complicated and puzzling problems of agricultural life. . . The author is well equipped for such a discussion, for he has long been a student of the problems of rural life. He was formerly Assistant Professor of Sociology in the University of Wisconsin and is now in charge of the division of farm population and rural life in the Federal Department of Agriculture. This volume is noteworthy for its combination of the humanizing spirit with direct, concrete treatment."

+ N Y Times p28 Je 8 '24 580w

"One may get from his little book a clear statement of what the farmers' problems of to-day are and what is being done to solve them."

+ R of Rs 70:110 Jl '24 100w

Reviewed by C. F. Ansley

Survey 52:466 Jl 15 '24 450w

Wis Lib Bul 20:173 Jl '24

GALSWORTHY, JOHN. The forest; a drama in four acts. 115p $1 Scribner

822 24-11573

"The action of the piece is divided between London and Africa in the jungle forests of the Congo region. The chief personage of the drama is a London financier, Bastaple by name. Bastaple is the head of a company called 'African Concessions,' which will become bankrupt unless the British Government will pass a bill permitting coolie labor. To throw dust in the eyes of the people and divert attention from the iniquitous coolie scheme, Bastaple finances an expedition to get evidence of alleged slave trading on the part of the Belgians. The coolie labor bill is defeated and Bastaple would have gone down to ruin,—or, rather, his stockholders would have gone down to ruin, he having craftily sold out—but for a story of the discovery of diamonds, which he turns to account by buying back his depreciated shares to sell again on publication of the diamond rumor."— N Y Times

Booklist 21:15 O '24

Cleveland p86 N '24

Reviewed by J. T. Shipley

Lit R p878 Jl 5 '24 300w

Reviewed by Robert Graves

Nation and Ath 35:sup252 My 24 '24 120w

"The play holds the attention equally as a thrilling story and as a criticism of empire-building. Although it reads well, it is essentially of the theatre, and it is there that it will find its place among the more significant of its author's works."

+ New Statesman 23:326 Je 21 '24 160w

"'The Forest' is the well-matured and dramatically developed plan for a tremendous novel. As a play it bursts drama's bounds." P. A. Hutchison

+ — N Y Times p14 My 25 '24 1500w

"Though the scenes in the African forest do not suffer for lack of action and dramatic episode, one fancies this play to be more nearly first-rate closet drama, of doubtful value for production"

Outlook 137:642 Ag 27 '24 150w

GALSWORTHY, JOHN. Representative plays; ^{2} with an introd. by George P. Baker. 469p $1.60 Scribner

822 24-24259

Contents: The silver box; Strife; Justice; The pigeon; A bit o' love; Loyalties.

Reviewed by M. J. Moses

Outlook 138:510 N 26 '24 120w

"These are just the works which not only the devotee of the drama but the student of contemporary literature needs to know."

Springf'd Republican p14 N 14 '24 660w

GALSWORTHY, JOHN. White monkey. 328p $2 Scribner [7s 6d Heinemann]

24-25182

John Galsworthy's interpretation of the unrest following the war and its expression in the younger generation, is lifted by his art and understanding out of the class of strident novels of rebellious youth into true social history. The book is a continuation of his "Forsyte saga" its central figures being Fleur, daughter of Soames Forsyte, her father and her husband, Michael Mont. Fleur had turned to young Mont from a more consuming passion for her cousin Jon, and her husband, in his great love for her, was only too conscious of the lack in her feeling for him. But his beautiful tact and restraint carried them safely past the reefs, even thru the imminent disaster of an affair between his wife and his poet-friend, and the birth of the eleventh baronet Mont brought Fleur and Michael closer together. The novel gets its title from a Chinese painting bought by Soames Forsyte for his daughter, representing a white monkey holding the rind of a squeezed fruit in his paw—symbol of youth which has eaten the fruit and sits looking at the rind, wondering if life is all a bitter jest.

Booklist 21:111 D '24

"Galsworthy writes with tolerance, wisdom, and a genial fun-poking at the foibles of the younger generation. There is no violent propaganda here for the peculiarities of either youth or old age. There is excellent characterization. Excellent preachment, too, in its way." J. F.

+ Bookm 60:490 D '24 230w

Reviewed by D. L. Mann

Boston Transcript p5 N 8 '24 2150w

Cleveland p91 D '24

Reviewed by G: B. Dutton
Ind 113:548 D 20 '24 1500w

"Extremely interesting, not only as a novel, but as a comment on modern youth, its theories, its art, its attitude toward life." L. M. Field
+ Int Bk R p35 D '24 2000w

"In 'The White Monkey' Mr. Galsworthy has written one of his most engaging and readable books. It has a number of beautifully executed portraits, for Mr. Galsworthy's characters are not only technically perfect, but they have received the divine afflatus as well. Even Fleur's Pekinese, 'Ting-a-Ling,' lives for us, a highly individualized little dog and strangely symbolical, too." Herschel Brickell
+ Lit R p3 O 25 '24 680w

"His young men and women lack body. It is only the older characters who possess sinew and root, and these only in remembrance of wine past. Even when Mr. Galsworthy tries to be most scrupulous toward the unrest of what he thinks is the younger generation, he cannot really esteem the young. He can care only for the youth of his own youth." A. D. Douglas
— + Nation 119:603 D 3 '24 970w

"'The White Monkey' is a fine example of Mr. Galsworthy's impartial art." Edwin Muir
+ Nation and Ath 36:302 N 22 '24 480w

Reviewed by J: Franklin
New Statesman 24:142 N 8 '24 420w

"Galsworthy has followed the lode to the very end. He is no mere patrician, as he is often accused of being, squinting through his monocle at folk he inwardly disdains. He is patrician solely in the fastidiousness of his art, since only by such fastidiousness could the multitude of disparate elements with which he has to deal be brought to a single focal point; be synthesized into a single effective force." P. A. Hutchison
+ N Y Times p9 O 26 '24 1200w

"A delightful book, and much deeper than it seems at first glance, quite worthy of its place as pendant to the 'Forsyte Saga.'" Isabel Paterson
+ N Y Tribune p3 N 2 '24 1750w

"So long as English-writing novelists of our day can produce fiction at once as entertaining and as socially illuminative as this book, we need neither regret the Victorian demigods of the past nor despair at the futility and banality of a large proportion of the stories of our day." R. D. Townsend
+ Outlook 138:460 N 19 '24 750w

"'The White Monkey' is far the most amusing and the most daring, and in some ways the most successful, of all the books Mr. Galsworthy has written. It shows his limitations, but it overrides them." Gerald Gould
+ Sat R 138:476 N 8 '24 720w

"The White Monkey is one of the best novels: there is a cleanliness and tact in it that wins admiration. If only he could blow more strongly!"
+ — Spec 133:748 N 15 '24 750w
Springf'd Republican p5a N 2 '24 480w

GALWAN, GHULAM RASSUL. See Ghulam, R. S.

GANDHI, MOHANDAS KARAMCHAND. Young India, 1919-1922; with a brief sketch of the non-cooperation movement by Babu Rajendra Prasad. 1199p $4 Huebsch

954 India—Politics and government. India—Non-cooperation movement 23-18635

A collection of the writings of Gandhi in the journal Young India, from the date of its first issue in 1919 to his imprisonment in 1922. At this time it had reached a circulation of 40,000. Most of the articles are concerned with the non-cooperation movement, its principles, campaign and program and the campaign of repression waged by the British government in India.

Boston Transcript p3 N 24 '23 500w

"What the reader will probably miss in this volume is a certain eloquence which he has been led to expect from the stories which have come from India of Gandhi's vast influence over his countrymen. There is little here of the conciseness of the great master of popular speech, the Nazarene—little of his matchless poetry, his brilliant irony, his vivid power of parable and phrase. It must be remembered, of course, that the contents of the books are essays or letters, and not addresses. But even so it is obvious that Gandhi's eloquence is that of personality and not of speech. But what a personality! What freedom from prejudice, pride, malice, vindictiveness, self-seeking!" J: H. Holmes
+ — Nation 118:91 Ja 23 '24 1300w

Reviewed by E: A. Ross
New Repub 38:sup6 Ap 9 '24 1350w

GANOE, WILLIAM ADDLEMAN. History of the United States army. 609p il $5 Appleton

355 United States—Army 24-17800

The book is neither a study of campaigns and battles nor of military policy but a story of the service of the soldier in peace as well as in war. It follows the making of the army from its beginnings under Washington thru its service in the World war, placing the emphasis thruout on the work of the rank and file. Appendices include a list of principal officers of the army since its creation and statistics of the punitive expedition into Mexico in 1916. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 21:51 N '24
Cleveland p93 D '24

"The accent of the special pleader occasionally mars Major's Ganoe's forceful and honest speech."
+ — Ind 113:133 Ag 30 '24 330w

"No more valuable and informative book has appeared or will appear this year. For the first time the army of the United States, the continuing but always changing regular army, has its story told. That story is well worth telling." C. M. Morrison
+ Lit R p6 S 13 '24 800w

Reviewed by H: E. Armstrong
N Y Times p1 S 7 '24 2500w

"The book is well conceived and constructed and is extremely valuable for reference." W: L. M'Pherson
+ N Y Tribune p12 O 26 '24 550w

"A chronicle done with a praiseworthy regard for actualities and, considering that the author is a soldier, an endurable minimum of propaganda in behalf of the military arm." Morris Markley
+ N Y World p8e Jl 27 '24 450w
Outlook 138:382 N 5 '24 50w
R of Rs 70:334 S '24 130w
St Louis p417 D '24
The Times [London] Lit Sup p618 O 9 '24 1100w

GANPAT, pseud. See Gompertz, M. L: A.

GARAHAN, MELBOURNE. Stiffs. 311p $2 Seltzer [7s 6d L. Parsons]

24-4502

The stiff belongs to the tramp tribe, but he is distinguished from the beggar or the thug by a cheerful live-and-let-live attitude toward the world. "He can do most things, but chooses to do nothing." Danny Morgan tells his own story—how he became a stiff, how he drifted along thru several years until a lucky chance gave him a push up again into the ranks of the respectable and responsible. He gathers up the stories of his fellow tramps and weaves them into a colorful background for the tale of his own experience.

GARAHAN, MELBOURNE—Continued

"Has a great deal of interest and a good deal of merit."

+ Boston Transcript p5 F 16 '24 360w

"Not of great value, either as entertainment, as literature or as a study." Jim Tully

— Int Bk R p492 My '24 340w

"This story, vivid and obviously sincere, is a valuable addition to the literature of tramping. . . To read 'Stiffs' is to do more than to live through a series of adventures; it is to have the opportunity of doing a bit of real 'creative reading,' for the irony, though unconscious, is subtle and delightful." J. W. Krutch

+ Lit R p806 Je 7 '24 500w

"A very fascinating book. His intention is not to point a moral or make suggestions to social agencies or committees on homeless men, but merely to recreate the experience for its own sake as a vivid and dramatic bit of London life." Glen Mullin

+ Nation 118:374 Ap 2 '24 920w

"The book's chief interest lies in the characterization and comment and in the illuminating sidelights which it throws on tramp temperament and psychology."

+ N Y Times p25 F 10 '24 720w

"A curious and entertaining book. It is written badly and has no pretensions to style, but it contains much to amuse." Laurence Stallings

+ — N Y World p9 Mr 3 '24 1200w

"The plot is unoriginal; but then, there is little harm in that, and it moves well."

+ — Spec 131:563 O 20 '24 300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p618 S 20 '23 350w

GARESCHE, EDWARD FRANCIS. Great Christian artists. 209p il $3.50 Bruce pub.

759 Painters. Christian art and symbolism 24-2013

"Details of the life and work of seven of the great painters of the Holy Family, together with a multitude of large and beautiful reproductions of their work." (Boston Transcript) They are Leonardo da Vinci, Raphael Santi, Michelangelo, Fra Angelico, Bartolome Murillo, Peter Paul Rubens and Anthony Van Dyck.

Bookm 59:adv Ag '24 120w

"The volume is written in a strain of charming piety and beauty, with liquid English, such as might have been translated from the Latin, and with many a picturesque turn of phrase which would permit one to see the picture, even if it were not there."

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 16 '24 240w

"Eighty-three full-page illustrations add, of course, greatly to the interest and usefulness of the book, which brings together in popular form material not easily found in another single volume." K. B.

+ Cath World 120:283 N '24 270w

"An unusually artistic volume."

+ School Arts M 23:640 Je '24 60w

GARFIAS, VALENTINE RICHARD. Petroleum resources of the world. new ed 243p il $3 Wiley

553.28 Petroleum 23-10687

"A concise economic review of producing and prospective fields, with some general information regarding the countries in which they are located."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:197 Ap '24

GARNETT, DAVID. A man in the zoo. 119p il $1.75 Knopf [5s Chatto & W.]

24-14171

"A man in the zoo" resembles "Lady into fox" in that it is based upon an impossible situation described in such a serious and matter-of-fact way that the reader accepts it without question. Two lovers, John Cromartie and Josephine Lackett, had a quarrel in the zoo. In a moment of rage Josephine told John that he was a survival—a missing link, and that he ought to be shut up in the zoo and put on exhibition. Whereupon John acted upon her suggestion, presented himself to the authorities, and was accepted and duly installed in the Ape-house, with a chimpanzee on one side and an orang-outang on the other. He stayed there for some time and attracted great crowds. But he and Josephine really loved each other and in the struggle between their love and their pride love finally conquered. All the way thru the reader is conscious of the allegory and teased by its indistinctness.

Booklist 21:27 O '24

Bookm 59:730 Ag '24 150w

Cleveland p84 N '24

Reviewed by E. A. Niles

Ind 112:316 Je 7 '24 350w

"A slight and lovely book, demanding almost too many superlatives to be real." Kenneth Fuessle

+ Int Bk R p739 S '24 530w

"Mr. Garnett has not taken the fatally easy way of remaining where the last page of 'Lady into Fox' left him; he has been courageous enough to retrace his footsteps, and his courage has been rewarded. 'A Man in the Zoo,' is not the completely successful book that 'Lady into Fox' was, but it is a better book, because it is not a mere tour de force and it has something on the other side of it. It raises an interesting problem."

+ Nation and Ath 35:115 Ap 26 '24 1200w

"A man in the Zoo is not so perfect a work of art as Lady into Fox, and I doubt if it will be so popular. But it makes me certain that Mr. Garnett has only begun to exploit his potentialities; and that, good fortune attending him, he will take his place in the text-books of the future as one of the fixed stars of twentieth-century English literature." Raymond Mortimer

+ New Statesman 23:68 Ap 26 '24 2000w

"He has a first-rate story here, and he has told it well, with fine restraint and mocking insight. The implications may be wide, but the narrative is exact. A fidelity to details—pictorial and psychological—makes it convincing, even when the situations are wildly extravagant."

+ N Y Times p12 Je 15 '24 1000w

"He has more than a whimsical point of view and an austere style: he has a perception of the infinite sanity underlying the insane antics of mankind. This is what gives a double quality to his work: it is allegory and not-allegory: it is absurd and ironical because it tells you with fidelity exactly what would happen in certain fantastic circumstances."

+ Sat R 137:488 My 10 '24 560w

"'A man in the Zoo' is literature and the product of a peculiarly interesting intelligence. It seems to us a mistake to introduce Mr. Waley's translation of a poem by Wang Yen-shou, which adds nothing and is rather an excrescence. But when all exceptions are taken the book is clever and original enough in many ways to warrant preservation among the curiosities of literature." W: R. Benét

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:2 Ag 2 '24 550w

"Mr. Garnett has relinquished the archaisms of his style but preserved its lucidity and simplicity. It is an admirable style, fitting thought closely."

+ Spec 132:720 My 3 '24 700w

"It appears to be simple, though really sophisticated, for such a style is unfortunately not natural to the present generation. Though the dignity is on the whole well maintained, there are some hints that remind us that we are living in an age of journalism. . . Mr. Garnett has discovered a vein of talent which gives much pleasure and is singularly his own. In his exploitation of it he needs to proceed with the greatest delicacy for its value lies in the triumph of quality over quantity, of skill over strength."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p263 My 1 '24 750w

GARRETT, GARET. Satan's bushel. 207p $2
Dutton
24-12764

"Satan's bushel" is the drama of wheat as the author's earlier book, "The cinder buggy" was of steel. No sermon on the evil of gambling could carry over such conviction as does this drama of the huge speculative operations by which, in the United States, farm products are manipulated so as to enrich the spoiler and impoverish the producer. The recurrent miracle of seed, blade and ripened grain is held up to reverence and under its white light the shadows of the "pit" are black indeed. The device by which the story gets itself told is cleverly managed.

"The character of the story makes the avoidance of tract-writing difficult, and Mr. Garrett fails to avoid that difficulty. But it is not a fault, which seriously impairs the strength of the novel, for it must be taken as a problem novel, or not at all."
+ Int Bk R p614 Jl '24 340w

"'The Driver' and 'The Cinder Buggy' revealed Mr. Garrett as an American novelist of imagination and of some power in his ability vividly to describe the dramatic development of great industries. He seems to find, however, too great an interest in the eccentric sides of these captains of finance and industry and in the eccentric side of human nature at large. His is the drama of the abnormal. This characteristic of Mr. Garrett's work is even more apparent in 'Satan's Bushel,' the story of wheat. Let him beware the eccentric—the habit grows upon him."
+ — Lit R p730 My 3 '24 370w

"One derives from his pages considerable illumination concerning the functioning of the wheat market, but rather little light on the human heart. Those who relish economics in story form will find 'Satan's Bushel' to their taste."
+ — Nation 118:688 Je 11 '24 50w
New Repub 38:266 Ap 30 '24 60w

"It takes a fine talent to write entrancingly about commonplaces. A prose that becomes at times interfluent with poetry. And yet this work is not altogether American in its scope, even if the story might not have happened precisely in another country. It is the vast story of the staff of life, the philosophies and ill-fortunes surrounding it plus the suggested remedies to recompense for the eternal sweat on the farmer's brow."
N Y Times p9 F 3 '24 700w

Reviewed by Edith Leighton
N Y Tribune p21 F 3 '24 600w

"Mr. Garrett is at his best in the wheat fields. His description of the 'green-gold wave' moving northward is beautiful and his marriage of the wheat is poetry." Palmer Smith
N Y World p7e Ja 27 '24 450w

"Probably 'Satan's Bushel' is the best of Garet Garrett's novels to date. Mr Garrett, like Frank Norris, is offering something in the nature of an epic of wheat, and there are two or three places where his descriptions have epic force and vividness."
+ Springf'd Republican p5a My 18 '24 180w

GARROD, HEATHCOTE WILLIAM. Wordsworth; lectures and essays. 212p $2.50 (6s)
Oxford
B or 92 Wordsworth, William [24-26023]

"Mr. Garrod is not engaged in the criticism of Wordsworth's poetry. He has concerned himself exclusively with elucidating the development of Wordsworth's thought and feeling, by a careful and acute collation of his life and work, to the end of the poet's period of full maturity in 1807."—N Y Times

"Mr. Garrod on Wordsworth is not easy reading—he presupposes a competent knowledge of the whole of the 'Prelude' and he loves to drive home every point with an intellectual sledge-hammer—but for all that his small volume is well worth a labored perusal." A. K. Gray
+ — Lit R p660 Ap 12 '24 2050w
New Statesman 23:136 My 10 '24 850w

"An interesting and valuable book." J. M. Murry
+ — N Y Times p11 Mr 9 '24 2100w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p648 O 4 '23 2100w

GARROTT, HAL. Snythergen. 157p il $2
McBride
23-18643

"The fantastic adventures of Snythergen, the giant boy. Food reacted upon poor Snythergen in a very curious way, so that if restricted to a diet of round food, such as 'pumpkins, potatoes, tomatoes, eggs and oranges,' he grew inordinately stout, and when his anxious parents effected a drastic change of diet and fed him on such slender comestibles as 'celery, asparagus, pieplant, and macaroni' he became as long and thin as a bean stalk. Snythergen ran away from home and had a great many adventures. He spent the greater part of the time impersonating a tree—an uncomfortable proceeding, since small animals insisted on nibbling his toes. At the end of the book Santa Claus, living up to his reputation of a universal benefactor, discovered a new method of feeding, by which Snythergen was reduced to the size of a normal boy and probably led a far less amusing life in consequence."—Lit R

"It is written with charm and fresh invention."
+ Detroit News p23 D 9 '23 130w

"An amusing story for children." M. G. Bonner
+ Int Bk R p313 Mr '24 250w

"Mr. Garrott has a happy style and shares with Kenneth Grahame the gift of writing about animals as if they were human beings."
+ Lit R p547 F 23 '24 330w

Reviewed by Constance Naar
New Repub 36:315 N 14 '23 60w
N Y World p6e Mr 9 '24 60w
Springf'd Republican p6 D 24 '23 100w
Wis Lib Bul 20:100 Ap '24

GARSTIN, CROSBIE. Owl's house. 392p $2
Stokes
24-1975

A story of gipsies, pirates and smuggling along the Cornish coast. Ortho, the elder of two sons of a Cornish farmer and his gipsy wife, spends his days in horse trading with the gipsies and smuggling, which leads eventually to his being carried off by Barbary pirates as a slave. Eli, meanwhile, devotes himself to the farm and brings it safely out of debt, only to see the probable failure of all his plans by the unexpected return of Ortho. The mother, loving her gipsy son, tries to have Eli carried off to sea as a slave, and so save the farm for Ortho, but Ortho falls into the trap instead, and Eli gains the farm and the love of the neighbor's daughter.

Booklist 20:264 Ap '24

"We scarcely remember any tale of adventure which has more variety and vivacity than Mr. Garstin's recent novel."
+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 16 '24 270w

"It is unreservedly good in plot, in style, and in characterization." S. M.
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Jl 6 '24 500w

"It is a really good piece of work. How accurate the picture of Cornish life is, I cannot say, but it is certainly graphic in its full description of the local customs and costumes and manners."
+ Lit R p51 F 9 '24 300w

"Crosbie Garstin has crammed enough color and romance into 'The Owl's House' to serve for two or three novels and yet he has handled

GARSTIN, CROSBIE—Continued
it so well that the reader is never conscious of a plethora of matter or any straining for undue effects."

+ N Y Times p14 Ja 13 '24 600w

"One feels that Mr. Garstin has an intimate knowledge of places and people he depicts. If only he had let himself go regardless of the cost of white paper—but anyhow, here is an unusually good story as it stands, and if one regrets it is no better that is because of its merits, not for any less flattering reason." Isabel Paterson

+ — N Y Tribune p21 Ja 20 '24 1900w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p6e Ja 13 '24 400w

"The narration is clear and exciting; but the incidents are thrown at the reader's head rather than treated as parts of a well-proportioned romance."

+ — Outlook 136:320 F 20 '24 110w

"From whatever point of view you regard Mr. Garstin's work, it is excellent. I can find no flaw. He writes entirely in the spirit of his theme, always well, always freshly, always naturally. And still the wonder grows that one small head can carry all he knows." Gerald Gould

+ Sat R N 24 '23 500w

Springf'd Republican p7a F 24 '24 240w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p706 O 25 '23 400w

Wis Lib Bul 20:68 Mr '24

GAY, JOHN. Shepherd's week; in six pastorals; ^{2} ed by H. F. B. Brett-Smith. 46p $1.50 Appleton [4s 6d Blackwell]
821

Gay's parodies on the pastoral eclogue were first published in 1714 and are here reprinted from the second of the original Burleigh editions. Gay's shepherds, bearing such names as Lobbin Clout and Cuddy, gambol on the English greens thruout a week in the manner of Spenser's "Shepherd's calendar."

"For an evening's entertainment, there are few books that can excel 'The Shepherd's Week,' herein made available for the first time to many in a semblance of its original." J. F. V.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 3 '25 200w

"The book is pleasantly produced, and the reproductions of the seven little engravings are good enough to make charming illustrations. The poems are delightful examples of light verse. To-day the element of skit has almost faded out of them, but they remain a light, accomplished pastiche, full of quaint and vivid details with a genuinely rural atmosphere breathing through their conscious artificiality." Martin Armstrong

+ Spec 132:166 Ag 2 '24 900w

GAZE, HAROLD. Coppertop; the queer adventures of a quaint child. 338p il $3 Harper 24-8810

"Coppertop was a little red pigtailed girl who lived in Australia with Mrs. Grudge while Papa and Mummie went to India. The one thing which kept Celia—that was her real name—alive was 'magining. She had 'magined two brothers, Tibbs and Kiddiwee, who were perfectly enchanting. She decided to go ask the South Wind for a nice December day. Her two brothers went with her, but unfortunately little Kiddiwee, who was too young to be tactful, told the clerk of the weather what he thought of him, and that worthy was very mad, and made trouble every time he could. They went to see the South Wind, who talked a great deal—'these winds are so long-winded'—and the West Wind, who lived in Africa, and the East Wind, who lived in Egypt, and the North Wind, who lived in—we've forgotten. Anyway, they had a wild time."—Boston Transcript

---

"Is it a jolly tale? It is, and the illustrations, done by the author himself, are excellent."

+ Boston Transcript p3 My 31 '24 350w

"A cleverly handled story of a little girl whose imagination gives her a fantastic and yet at the same time a quite natural dream. I should like to quote much of it, so deftly and originally are the dream experiences revealed." M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p617 Jl '24 80w

"It has not all the charm of Lofting's work and at times its over-rapid succession of transformations, pursuits, disappearances and other magical happenings lead to a sense of formlessness and lack of emphasis. But children of active minds who love 'magic' stories will not find any cause for criticism, and will delight in the hurly-burly. The black and white portrait studies of various amazing individuals are especially delightful, and add immensely to the humor of the book." L. W. D.

+ — Lit R p906 Jl 19 '24 140w

N Y Tribune p25 My 25 '24 120w

GEHRS, JOHN HENRY. Soils and crops. 444p ^{2} il $1.40 Macmillan
633 Soils. Crops 24-11776

"Text-book for elementary schools. Deals mainly with soil fertility and field crops but includes a section on horticulture."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

---

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:433 O '24

GEIKIE, SIR ARCHIBALD. Long life's work. 426p $7 (18s) Macmillan
B or 92 [24-19015]

"Sir Archibald Geikie's name is written across the geological map of England as indelibly as that of Sir Christopher Wren on the dome of St. Paul's. Since the death of Lord Kelvin, he has enjoyed probably a wider international reputation than any other British man of science. No geologist in the last hundred years has done more to elucidate the methods by which the scenery and surface of the earth have been moulded into their present form, and to diffuse an exact yet popular comprehension of the fascinating science to whose service he vowed his life more than seventy years ago. . . The most interesting part of this volume is the detailed description of the author's work in the Geological Survey, which he entered in 1855 at the age of twenty, and from which he retired in 1901 after having presided over its important duties for the last twenty years."—Sat R

"Eminence in the science of geology is not usually associated with high literary attainments, yet Sir Archibald Geikie qualifies in this book not only as an authoritative expounder of the lore of the rocks, but also as an expert in satisfying narrative, now taking professional work for his material, now limning vividly the many personalities he met, or again reaching out into the world for entertaining travel sketches." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 20 '24 1200w

Reviewed by A. Strahan
Nature 114:114 Jl 26 '24 3450w

"Modesty is so admirable, and in the eminent men of to-day so scarce a quality that it seems a pity ever to decry it. In an autobiographer, however, it may possibly be carried to an excess. This is the only fault in Sir Archibald Geikie's account of his long and honoured career. The lucid and charming style which aided him to popularize the teaching of geology is still conspicuous in this modest narrative of a long life spent in single-minded devotion to the advancement of human knowledge."

+ — Sat R 137:592 Je 7 '24 480w

"In this autobiography Sir Archibald Geikie tells the story of his long life with simplicity and charm. There was nothing very exciting in his life, and there is nothing very exciting in his book. But it is a pleasant picture of a career typically Victorian in its comfortable absorption in its own useful activities; and apart from its interest to the author's many friends has an historical value."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p331 My 29 '24 1450w

GENTLEMAN WITH A DUSTER, pseud. See Begbie, H.

GEORGE, WALTER LIONEL. Triumph of Gallio. 308p $2 Harper
24-20613

Like Gallio, the Roman governor, Holyoake Tarrant, "cared for none of these things," these things being life, love, success, failure, progress, honor. He is a thoroughly selfish man, trampling ruthlessly friend and foe. He begins life as a radical agitator, then becomes a peddler; later he is interested in ships and marries a wealthy woman in order to finance his exploits. Eventually he becomes a millionaire. He has everything, and yet nothing. Women to him are a convenience, with the exception of Paula whom he loves as much as he is capable of loving anyone, but forsakes her to marry a woman of wealth who finally deserts him. Financial ruin comes then and he returns to peddling notions. From out all of these experiences he comes forth unscarred, for Holyoake Tarrant cared for none of these things.

"His narrative would be more engrossing if the end were not so clearly in sight from the beginning. It has a certain brilliance, but is thin and mechanical, with something of the staleness of yesterday's newspaper. In it Mr. George attempts to 'come back' to his earlier form. But yesterday never returns." Isabel Paterson
— Bookm 60:497 D '24 300w

"Sometimes Mr. George attitudinizes in his literary style, also he is obsessed with a desire to use paradoxes until they become meaningless and tiresome. But he has written a book of consequence and drawn a character worth remembering." S. L. C.
+ — Boston Transcript p6 N 5 '24 1050w

"Not in a decade has there been anything quite so bitterly and philosophically written as this first-person tale. There are patches of super-writing, phosphorescent, mordant, and with a bite like acid." C: M. Morrison
Lit R p12 O 11 '24 430w

"The vivid detail, the solid carpentry, and the saturnine humour of this book are excellent, but Mr. W. L. George can hardly be serious in calling it 'a philosophical romance.'"
+ — Nation and Ath 36:124 O 18 '24 230w

Reviewed by J: Franklin
New Statesman 24:17 O 11 '24 400w

"'The Triumph of Gallio' is not a strong book. It is not sufficiently documented. Worst of all, it is not interesting enough. It is only the fairly entertaining outline of a theme which required a much more intensive handling if the character was to stand out at all in the light which Mr. George apparently thought he was turning upon Holyoake Tarrant. He will have to do better than this."
— + N Y Times p9 S 7 '24 450w

"Speaking for ourself, we are able to be concerned not at all over this Holyoake or his stale conclusions. We are not even conventionally pleased to have met him." E. W. Osborn
— N Y World p8e S 7 '24 180w

"Romance and sensuality, success and ruin, indulgence and bereavement, are all provided in somewhat unconvincing abundance, to make a case. And it is a case which cannot be made. But Mr. George knows how to tell a story, and many of the episodes, taken separately, make excellent reading." Gerald Gould
— + Sat R 138:315 S 27 '24 1250w

Reviewed by J. J. Smertenko
Sat R of Lit 1:342 D 6 '24 720w

GEORGIAN stories, 1924. 344p il $2.50 Putnam [7s 6d Chapman & H.]
Short stories—Collections (23-4899)

A collection of short stories by contemporary English writers, with portraits of the authors. Contents: Accident of crime, by Stacy Aumonier; Reparation, by J. D. Beresford; Tongues of fire, by Algernon Blackwood; The liqueur glass, by Phyllis Bottome; The probation of Sen Heng, by Ernest Bramah; The ballet girl, by A. E. Coppard; Safety, by St John Ervine; The long arm of Black Andy, by Cyril Falls; The Gioconda smile, by Aldous Huxley; A beautiful superstition, by Mrs. Belloc Lowndes; My son, my son. . . , by St John Lucas; The mystery of the managing director, by Denis Mackail; Nature morte, by Orlo Williams; The purity of the turf, by P. G. Wodehouse.

"Irrespective of its value as a basis for international rivalries, this volume of 'Georgian Stories' provides an agreeable method of passing an hour or two. It contains no great work of art, no classic example of the short story, but a considerable number of good stories, simply told."
+ — Ind 113:206 S 27 '24 300w

"Fourteen specimens of the choicest tales that are being turned out by English writers of the day. The diversity of the stories is as much a matter of form as of treatment. They follow no set rules, which gives them a refreshing quality." Herschel Brickell
+ Lit R p966 Ag 16 '24 300w

"On the whole 'the sombre colouring' of these stories is probably due rather to formalism and lack of style than to the Georgian atmosphere, unless an absence of enthusiasm, sharp individual needs, and imaginative aggression is characteristic of the period." Austin Clarke
+ — Nation and Ath 35:20 Ap 5 '24 220w

Reviewed by S. A. Coblentz
N Y Times p7 Ag 24 '24 1500w

"The present volume, like its predecessor, prefaces each story with a portrait of the author. It is heartily recommended to all as a book containing a day's reading delight." L. S.
+ N Y World p8e Ag 3 '24 320w
Outlook 138:26 S 3 '24 30w

"It has a wide variety of styles, and appears to be a thoroughly adequate and representative selection from the best of the current magazine-stuff, with a touch here and there of something more lasting than that. Most of it is conventional, but some of the most conventional stories are the most competently told within their conventions. On the whole, a good compilation of its kind." Gerald Gould
+ — Sat R 137:441 Ap 26 '24 70w

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley
+ — Spec 132:679 Ap 26 '24 150w

"These fourteen stories, if not specially striking, maintain a good average."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p188 Mr 27 '24 700w

GEROULD, GORDON HALL. Filibuster. 275p $1.75 (6s) Appleton
24-9267

"After a lapse of twenty-five years and more, the incidents of the war in Cuba begin to have a fresh flavor. Mr. Gerould offers a story of how a youngster shanghaied himself on board a gun-running steamer, and went from the United States to Cuba, with a cargo of military stores. He experiences favorable conditions aboard the filibusterer, and grows so in efficiency and in the opinion of the officers and crew, and the gunrunners, that he assists in the discharge of the cargo in a secret place, but becomes lost and misses the return of the steamer. However, the lad manages to land all right, and because of a piece of good work he is received into the ranks of the Insurrectos with open arms. He sees some of the campaigning between the Cubans and the Spanish forces, and

GEROULD, GORDAN HALL—Continued
at last gets back to Key West, thence returning to his home and his relatives."—Boston Transcript

Booklist 21:72 N '24

"This story is written for boys, and any live boy will enjoy such a story of remarkable experiences by a Yankee boy. The story is told in a plausible style, and the incidents are logical enough for the purpose; even though the probability of such a train of events occurring is uncertain. As a reminder of what was going on in Cuba a quarter of a century ago, the story is well worth while."
+ — Boston Transcript p4 My 7 '24 260w

"There is more than a touch of the eternal Tom Sawyer. But it is nowhere overdone; there is nothing of super-boy about him. As narrative it moves steadily and entertainingly enough to hold any one's attention. The ordinary boy will like it—otherwise it would have been a failure—but the grown up, most exacting critic will also find it an admirable book."
+ Lit R p748 My 10 '24 400w

"Employing accurate historic data the author is able to tell a lively story of well-knit incidents that will make interesting reading for the boys with a bent for adventuring."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Je 22 '24 250w

GERSTENBERG, CHARLES WILLIAM. Financial organization and management of business. 723p il $5 Prentice-Hall

658.14 Corporations—Finance

This book is practically the course in corporation finance as it has been given for several years at the School of commerce, accounts and finance, New York university. It is a comprehensive study of the manner in which businesses acquire and use funds and distribute the profits. The actual methods followed in working out a financial plan for a new enterprise are described as well as the financial policy for an established business. Numerous charts and forms are included. Index.

Cleveland p93 D '24

"Although intended primarily for use as a textbook in corporation finance, business men interested in the subject will find much material in this book of value to them in their work."
+ Management and Adm 8:431 O '24 140w

"Mr. Gerstenberg's book, backed by some common sense, should throw light upon many schemes and place buyers of stocks in a position of defense. Facts and statistical statements throughout the volume help in the elucidation of the subject and add to its undoubted value."
+ N Y Times p2 D 28 '24 620w

GESTA ROMANORUM. Gesta Romanorum; entertaining stories; tr. by Charles Swan; with a preface by E. A. Baker. (Broadway translations) 472p $5 Dutton [12s 6d Routledge]

[24-18459]

"These are stories invented by the monks as a fire-side recreation and commonly applied in their discourses from the pulpit whence the most celebrated of our own poets and others have extracted their plots." (Subtitle) "They were gathered about the end of the thirteenth century, and are extant in many editions. They are by no means all Roman, or confined to deeds of chivalry; they show, indeed that mixture of different times, history and fable, good sense and absurd fiction, which is characteristic of mediaeval work. Alexander and Julius Caesar, Virgil and Socrates, saints and late Roman Emperors, all move freely in a region where the critical scholar had not arrived to spoil stories, denounce traditions as worthless and rate human interest at a minimum. Classic, Christian and Oriental influences prevail in turn, or even together." (New Statesman)

"While many of them are too robust for common circulation, they represent the conditions of the times, and they show how literary productions—for these stories were entitled to consideration for a certain literary merit in keeping with the times—from remote and often unknown origins travelled over the then known world, conveyed by word of mouth from country to country and from one language to another."
Boston Transcript p6 Ag 20 '24 280w

"The value of the book to students of life and literature is inestimable. They present phases of human activity the less human and certainly less diverting annals of history fail to show. They are the crude—and not infrequently acute—manifestations of the creative life, which Dr. Ludwig Lewisohn so fervently insists is the completest justification for existence in this vale of hustle and tears. They are significant historically; and, above that, they are generously entertaining." W. V.
+ Lit R p985 Ag 23 '24 100w

"A welcome addition to the 'Broadway Translations' is the collection of entertaining stories with morals attached, known as the Gesta Romanorum."
+ New Statesman 23:290 Je 14 '24 700w
N Y Times p7 S 14 '24 280w
Outlook 138:381 N 5 '24 20w

"We cannot quite endorse Swan's high estimate of the fables themselves either as fiction or as an 'unrivalled description of manners,' or as a 'faithful representation' of other days. They are at once too hybrid in origin and too similar in substance to afford great historical enlightenment, and there is an inevitable but rather wearisome sameness about their incident. Yet the style is simple, vivid, and strong, and moves with all the ease and rapidity of carefree youth."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p189 Mr 27 '24 1350w

GETTELL, RAYMOND GARFIELD. History of political thought. (Century political science ser.) 511p $3.75 Century

320.9 Political science—History 24-11051

"Professor Gettell's aim is to supply the need for a single volume account of the vicissitudes of political theory in all its phases. After a brief chapter attempting to define the nature and scope of political thought, it passes to a detailed review of the theories that were held from age to age, by the Greeks, the Romans, in the Dark and early Middle Ages, down through the revival of philosophy and on through the burning controversies which preceded and in part accelerated and shaped the courses of the American and French Revolutions. Then there are chapters on special phases of political thought and in the end a chapter or two on the latest phenomena of guild socialism and Bolshevism."—N Y Times

"This is a comprehensive and well-balanced text, clearly written and carefully printed." A. N. Holcombe
+ Am Pol Sci R 18:801 N '24 650w
Booklist 21:52 N '24
Boston Transcript p4 My 28 '24 750w
Cleveland p93 D '24

"It is a remarkable compendium, a mine of learning and a marvel of classification. It is, in fact, a sort of super-textbook; it will be indispensable to the academic student of politics and of considerable use as a book of ready reference. But apart from this high utilitarian quality, it is impossible not to feel that the result is in a large sense a disappointment. It is not a book that can be taken up and read as a vital presentation of political thought as a flowing stream through the ages." James Luby
+ — N Y Times p16 Jl 27 '24 1400w

"Literary men should have infinite curiosity about all aspects of intellectual and social life, and Dr. Gettell's excellent volume offers a chance to repair the lack of knowledge of at least one field." C. H. Grattan

+ N Y Tribune p27 Ag 10 '24 1200w

"It is a book which every political student must take into account, both for the author's own illuminating text and for the veritable thesaurus of references to authorities with which it teems." W. F. Johnson
+ No Am 220:175 S '24 450w

Outlook 137:642 Ag 27 '24 10w

St Louis p402 D '24

"It is thoroughly sound and scholarly in purpose. Its bibliographies seem unusually thorough. But it suffers somewhat from the difficulties of condensation. And it has a limitation in its textbook style."
+ — Spring'd Republican p6 Jl 14 '24 600w

"His learning is great, his method orderly, his arrangement of material almost always lucid. There can be no doubt of the infinite pains that have gone to the making of his book, and a criticism which did not pay full tribute to its accuracy and comprehensiveness would be ungenerous indeed. But when all this is admitted to the full, the fact remains that Professor Gettell's work is marred by grave defects which limit its value."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p834 D 11 '24 780w

GHOSHAL, U. History of Hindu political theories; from the earliest times to the end of the first quarter of the seventeenth century. 296p $5.50 Oxford [11s 6d Milford]

320.1 Political science. Hinduism. India—Politics and government

"The book is for the most part technical and covers the development of Hindu political theories from the earliest times to the first quarter of the seventeenth century, when the classical period of Hindu political literature ends. A considerable part of the book is devoted to the Dharmasutras and the Hindu conception of law as a derivative of the divine will. The chapters dealing with the Mahabharata lay special emphasis on the development of the principle of authority and more particularly the evolution of the king idea. A few illuminating paragraphs treat the subject of the origin of king's office and compare the Mahabharata's interpretation with the Hobbesian conception of social contract as the basis of the king's power. Early indications of Machiavellianism in the Hindu scriptures and a treatise on the right of tyrannicide give coloring to a chapter which without them would be too technical."—Nation

"It was certainly worth while to collect all such stray hints within the covers of one book. This has been done, on the whole very adequately, in the book under review. The author is well trained in both Hindu and Occidental learning." Franklin Edgerton
+ Am Hist R 29:367 Ja '24 480w

"Dr. Ghoshal's work is excellently written, and is a model of clear and sober judgment." E. J. T.
+ Int J Ethics 34:402 Jl '24 120w

Reviewed by Emil Lengyel
Nation 118:261 Mr 5 '24 320w

"His full exposition of Kautilya's system (circa 300 B.C.) is an excellent piece of work."
+ New Statesman 21:746 O 6 '23 200w

"Commendably fresh and stimulating." E. G. Hawke
+ Spec 131:560 O 20 '23 120w

GHULAM, RASSUL GALWAN. Servant of sahibs; with an introd. by Sir Francis Younghusband. 282p $2.50 Appleton [9s Heffer]

915.15 Tibet—Description and travel
24-17988

The book is written by a Mohammedan of Kashmir who has worked for many years in the service of English and American travelers in the Himalayas, Central Asia and Tibet. He took care of their caravans, handled their money, bought animals and supplies, hired men, and acted as diplomatic representative for the various sahibs he served. The longest journey described and the most thrilling, was with St George R. Littledale into Tibet, a journey which tested to the utmost Rassul's devotion and resourcefulness. The closing chapter of the book is a drama of the first months of his two years' journey with the "very poor longbeard sahib." He makes close observations of the customs of the lands visited and reveals in a very human way the life of the Himalayan peoples. The language is all his own but easily understandable.

"It makes especially delightful reading aloud, for nothing that happened and especially nothing that his sahibs did escaped Rassul's notice. It is a most interesting human document with much more originality than Daisy Ashford ever dreamed of having."
+ Boston Transcript p2 My 24 '24 280w

"This is in many ways a remarkable book."
+ Nation and Ath 34:584 Ja 19 '24 100w

"We found Rassul Galwan's story interesting in itself. Certainly it was a strain to read so much pidgin-English, and we will not say we quite understood our author all the time. But it was refreshing to get a book of Indian travels told so frankly and so piously by a carrier to Sahibs instead of by the Sahibs themselves."
+ — New Statesman 22:584 F 23 '24 300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p28 Ja 10 '24 260w

GIBBON, MURIEL MORGAN. John Peregrine's wife. 288p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Hutchinson]

The scene is laid in the south of Wales and most of the characters are Welsh. Esther Thomas is sent to Paris for the finishing of her education because her father wished to separate her from Dan Richards whose radical ideas were obnoxious to him. On Esther's return from France she marries John Peregrine, not knowing that he was the father of Sue Lewis's child. It is her old lover Dan who saves her from herself when she discovers John's secret.

"Neither in theme nor in treatment is there anything to distinguish 'John Peregrine's Wife' from the hundreds of stories of similar type."
— N Y Times p24 D 14 '24 330w

N Y World p8e D 7 '24 80w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p614 O 2 '24 170w

GIBBONS, HERBERT ADAMS. America's place in the world. 227p $2 Century

327.73 United States—Foreign relations. United States—Politics and government
24-8899

A brief discussion of America's international relations past, present and future. The author considers this country justified in its policy of isolation and insists upon security and prosperity as the cardinal aims of our foreign policy. He has a strong distrust of the League of nations, the crux of the question of entrance being, in his words, "What do we get out of it?" From this standpoint of aggressive insistence on American rights, he considers our foreign policy and interests, our relations with Latin America, our activities in the Far East, the doctrine of the open door, our immigration policy, etc.

Am Pol Sci R 18:644 Ag '24 140w

Booklist 21:8 O '24

Bookm 59:606 Jl '24 140w

Ind 112:241 Ap 26 '24 10w

"It must be admitted that Dr. Gibbons's vision where his own country is concerned is by no means clear and just. . . This inconsistency or disingenuousness with which Dr. Gibbons ignores the situation created by the obliga-

GIBBONS, HERBERT ADAMS—Continued
tions which the United States assumed when she broke from her isolation and threw her force without stint or limit into a European quarrel, pervades his entire book." R. M. Lovett
— New Repub 30:78 Je 11 '24 700w

"The book gives an excellent summary of our historic foreign policy and is perhaps the most intelligent and open-minded of all the criticisms of our relationship to the League." J: Corbin
+ N Y Times p5 Je 29 '24 1700w
N Y Tribune p25 My 18 '24 130w

"The book would have been far more convincing but for the author's ex cathedra manner of rhetorically brushing off the earth an organization to which more than fifty nations have subscribed." C. G. Bowers
— + N Y World p6e Ap 20 '24 800w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:354 Jl '22
R of Rs 69:669 Je '24 160w
St Louis p336 O '24

GIBBS, GEORGE FORT. Sackcloth and scarlet. 331p $2 Appleton
24-21510

The theme of this novel rests upon the gradual development of the lives and characters of two sisters who, entirely independent of family ties, are accustomed to do as they please. Joan the elder, a serious-minded girl, carefully guards her petulant sister Polly who has the reputation of being a daring flirt. The consequences of Polly's latest escapade get her into grave difficulties, and Joan at the sacrifice of her own honor saves her sister from malicious scandal. An outcast from society, Joan battles her way thru life alone until she meets in Washington, the Hon. Stephen Edwards whose friendship with her causes gossip. About this time Polly returns unexpectedly and seriously complicates the situation, but Joan's problems, in an unforeseen way, are happily solved.

"The story is dramatic, full of action, with plenty of change of scene. The men and women are all distinct types." Madelin Leof
+ Lit R p12 N 29 '24 500w

"This is pretty silly stuff, and there is little to redeem it. The development of the story has about as much logic as a third-rate movie—the motivation of Mr. Gibbs's characters has no truth in it, and he indulges freely in melodramatic dialogue."
— N Y Times p22 N 2 '24 270w

"No bedtime story is 'Sackcloth and Scarlet' but for those who like this sort of romance, it should do very well." E. W. Osborn
— + N Y World p8e O 5 '24 220w

GIBBS, SIR PHILIP HAMILTON. Heirs apparent. 375p $2 Doran
24-5831

The problem of the younger generation is here set forth against a background of English life immediately after the war. The main characters, Julian and Audrey, were born just too late to take an active part in the war, but had absorbed the spirit of restlessness and criticism of life. When they are sent down from Oxford for a youthful indiscretion, they plan to walk back to London together. Their lack of forethought as to public opinion about such an adventure is typical of their general carefree attitude toward life, their disregard of conventions, and their own honorable moral code. They return to different stations in life but remain true to their Oxford training. The spirit in which they face misfortune and disillusion, and afterwards their wiser conclusions about life make the story of this boy and girl, as of many others who seek the purpose and pleasures of life at the same time.

Booklist 20:300 My '24
Cleveland p35 My '24

"'Heirs Apparent' struggles from the start with the burden of having been dedicated to prove a proposition. The suspicion that Sir Philip Gibbs is merely manipulating his characters in order to prove his point gives one an uncomfortable sense of distrust whenever Julian and his friends are speaking, even tho some of the passages are finely done. The story is entertaining, nevertheless, being written in a style that is quick-moving and easy to read, except when a few expressions of the 'furnace of life,' variety get in the way." Byron Dexter
+ — Int Bk R p479 My '24 680w

"Sir Philip's own courage, honesty and good humor in presenting a perplexing condition make his assertions reassuring even to the apprehensions of the Falling Generation." D. B. W.
+ New Repub 38:346 My 21 '24 120w

"As one would expect in a book by Sir Philip Gibbs, there are a number of well-done descriptions."
+ N Y Times p8 F 3 '24 950w

"Gibbs is a firstrate journalist and a fine observer; in the narrower sense, however, he is a novelist only by courtesy. He can transcribe and re-create, but he lacks creative imagination. As a result his characters, in this season's book as in last season's, are chiefly puppets." Kenneth Fuessle
+ — N Y Tribune p23 My 18 '24 880w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:292 Je '24

"Written by anybody less distinguished, this story would not merit mention: written, as it is, by one whom we all know to be brilliant, sincere and influential, it calls for protest—and for the strongest protest from those who admire him most."
— Sat R 136:447 O 20 '23 360w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p653 O 4 '23 350w

GIBBS, SIR PHILIP HAMILTON. Little novels of nowadays. 348p $2.50 Doran [7s 6d Hutchinson]
24-29638

The thread which binds together this dozen short stories is the desolate wake of war as Sir Philip Gibbs has followed it in his journalistic travels from London to Moscow and beyond. A famine ravaged village on the Volga, Berlin in the days when the mark had reached its lowest, Smyrna just before the burning and massacre, Constantinople crowded with refugees, the Ruhr during the French occupation—these are among the scenes of the stories. Contents: The stranger in the village; Miss Smith of Smyrna; The beggar of Berlin; A bargain in the Kremlin; The visions of Yvonne; The castle of Arnsberg; The house with the spare bedrooms; The wells of truth; A gentleman of the old school; Turkish delight; The game of poverty; A mission of the Ruhr.

Reviewed by D. L. Mann
Boston Transcript p3 Ja 10 '25 1350w

Reviewed by Kenneth Fuessle
Int Bk R p98 Ja '25 540w

"The book, except for trivial flaws, is undeniably impressive. I believe that the book is valuable as an honest presentation of the most memorable impressions gained by Sir Philip Gibbs of conditions in Europe during the four or five years following the close of the war. It is far more as an authentic commentary on tremendous living realities than as a collection of short stories that we have found it eminently worth reading." E. C. Beckwith
+ — Lit R p3 D 13 '24 650w

"It is a book which leaves the reader with a feeling of hopelessness, a vision of opposing irreconcilable forces marshaled against each other."
N Y Times p9 N 9 '24 780w
N Y World p9e D 21 '24 450w
Outlook 138:565 D 3 '24 70w

"Tastes, sounds, smells are there, in the words of a man of subtle sensibilities. But not a sign of flummery. Much irony and a great amount of pity. Perhaps Philip Gibbs is, sometimes, a little too much the gentleman. But this very gentleness enriches the tone of sorrow and despair."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:364 D 6 '24 260w

Springf'd Republican p5a Ja 11 '25 220w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p386 Je 19 '24 500w

GIBSON, WILFRID WILSON. Kestrel edge; and other plays. 150p $2 Macmillan

822

Here are five short plays dealing with the sombre passions of the people of farm and moor whom Mr. Gibson excels in portraying. The first is the story of Angus Earnshaw, a masterful young farmer, and Esther Burn, his servant, who proved more masterful than he at "Lovers' Leap." Others of the plays present the shady characters of the country roads—horse-copers, tramps, and their women-folk.

Cleveland p52 Jl '24

Reviewed by V. Sackville-West

Nation and Ath 34:740 F 23 '24 330w

"In despair I turned from this to read once more the Burning of Njal, with its magnificent austerity, its shattering restraint. It is a curious thought what a comparatively modern thing vulgarity in literature seems to be." F. L. Lucas

— New Statesman 23:98 My 3 '24 280w

N Y Times p12 Ap 27 '24 380w

"Mr. Gibson has in the past tended to accumulate waste material for lack of the sifting power of imagination; and now in his latest collection of plays this fault, it seems to us, has become so aggravated that it threatens to stifle that inquiring sympathy to which he owes almost all his past achievements."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p92 F 14 '24 1100w

GIDE, ANDRE PAUL GUILLAUME. Strait is the gate (La porte étroite); auth. tr. from the French by Madame Simon Bussy. 231p $2.50 Knopf

24-4619

In the midst of tales of light loves and sordid passions, comes the story of a love that is stronger than death. Jerome Palissier and Alissa Bucolin, cousins who have known and loved each other from infancy, find the unquestioning devotion of years ripening into a love whose mysterious force leaves them embarrassed in each other's presence, each doubtful of the other's love. For Jerome, marriage seems the natural fulfilment of this new relation, but Alissa, whose love for her cousin has in it an element of religious ecstasy, dares not risk in marriage the diminution of this love which is the whole of life to her. Torn between her longing for Jerome and her determination to sacrifice her happiness in leaving him free, she only succeeds in convincing him that she does not care for him as he cares for her. Physically unable to bear the pain of their separation, her life ebbs away. After her death, a diary which she has left reveals to Jerome a love which unites them at last beyond all possibility of separation.

"The disaster of taking sinfulness too seriously, of reveling in excessive introspection, of slaying the real for the unreal is rendered with unique clarity. It is a beautifully written book which adds to the effectiveness of its moral lessons." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 8 '24 1050w

"No review of the book can quite give its flavor. Sincere, moving and haunting it is the story of a spiritual martyrdom, self-inflicted and inescapable. A special word of thanks is due Dorothy Bussey for her smooth, careful, and sympathetic translation." Grace Frank

+ Lit R p819 Je 14 '24 400w

"André Gide is one of the most important figures in French letters. By many he is even regarded as the greatest contemporary proseur, and 'Strait is the Gate' is an extremely beautiful book." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 118:sup447 Ap 16 '24 1100w

Nation and Ath 36:308 N 22 '24 170w

"'Strait is the Gate' is deservedly the book which made André Gide famous; it is one of the great classics of French fiction since the death of Flaubert." Ernest Boyd

+ New Repub 39:247 Jl 23 '24 2000w

"They are pages out of the great book of life and they illustrate both how infinitesimal and yet majestical the state of man is. A serious purpose underlies the work of Gide, and it is from such purposes that great novelists arise." H. S. Gorman

+ N Y Times p7 F 24 '24 650w

N Y Tribune p7 D 21 '24 60w

"It cannot be denied that the story is probable, nor that it is a legitimate subject for art; but the highest art, whatever depth of perversity or misery it displays, at least displays it under an aspect which implies an eternal justification: M. Gide, for all the subtlety of his interpretation, does not quite do that." Gerald Gould

— + Sat R 138:958 D 27 '24 180w

"This novel is a sharp contrast to the machine-made works of commoner minds, and will be read with great interest by all who are capable of sympathy with its subject. The translation has been made with skill and understanding."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p820 D 4 '24 700w

GILBERT, CLINTON WALLACE. "You takes your choice." 255p $2.50 Putnam

923.2 United States—Poiltics and government. Presidential candidates. Analytics

24-21930

Character sketches of the six presidential and vice-presidential candidates in the 1924 campaign, by the author of the "Mirrors of Washinton." Two chapters are added in which the camp followers of Coolidge and Davis are touched off.

Booklist 21:108 D '24

"A book like 'You Takes Your Choice,' of course, has no permanent value, and its author probably had no intention of writing a political handbook for posterity. Yet it is easy to read, thoroughly interesting without the faintest hint of a log rolling desire on the part of the author, and in most cases witty without malice." Dix Harwood

+ Bookm 60:343 N '24 600w

Cleveland p87 N '24

"'You Takes Your Choice' will not change many votes or disturb the convictions or overcome the prejudices of the voter, but the student of politics and of men cannot afford to ignore its brilliancies, its ironies, its insight or its chuckling but none the less deadly penetrations." C. M. Morrison

+ Lit R p6 S 27 '24 700w

Nation 119:474 O 29 '24 180w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

New Repub 40:205 O 22 '24 1200w

"'You Takes Your Choice' is well worth the money you pay for it." N: Roosevelt

+ N Y Times p1 S 14 '24 2000w

"A great deal of the piquancy of 'The Mirrors of Washington' was in the anonymity, but Mr. Gilbert has survived exposure to write again in his own person, and the result is an equally brilliant piece of journalism. You put down your money and you get a book worth the price." G. H. Grattan

+ N Y Tribune p17 S 21 '24 1100w

GILBERT, C. W.—Continued
"At first we were sure that 'You Takes Your Choice' was a Republican text book. The more we reflect upon it the more we are convinced that the La Follette Campaign Committee should use the money it collects from the labor unions to distribute it among the voters. But it is clever and witty—particularly the study of Coolidge." C. G. Bowers
N Y World p6e S 21 '24 1000w

"Except for the Davis essay, the book may be recommended as on the whole enlightening and useful. It is eminently readable."
+ — Outlook 138:561 D 3 '24 370w

"Perhaps the epigrams and labels are too facile and a bit o'er smart, but we think a voter may well get more light on his choice from these studies than from all the official biographies. Certainly he will have a chuckling time, and a naughty sense of sophistication."
+ Survey 53:99 O 15 '24 900w

GILBERT, OSCAR PAUL. Prince de Ligne; a gay marshal of the old regime; tr. from the French by Joseph McCabe. 221p $3.50 McDevitt-Wilson, Inc. [12s 6d Unwin]

B or 92 Ligne, Charles Joseph, prince de [24-4302]

Prince Charles Joseph de Ligne, 1735-1814, Austrian soldier, writer and diplomatist was one of the picturesque figures of his time. During the reign of Joseph II he held high military and diplomatic positions and was a favorite in almost every court in Europe, especially at the court of St. Petersburg. Among his friends were Marie Antoinette, Catherine the Great, Frederick the Great, Joseph II, Casanova, Voltaire, Rousseau, and Goethe. He has left thirty-four volumes of reminiscence from which the material for this biography is gleaned.

"A narrative of uncommon charm." F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 28 '24 1450w

"It sparkles with the personality of the gay Prince, who darted hither and yon over pre-French-Revolutionary Europe. The greater part of M. Gilbert's book consists of quotations from the Prince's writings, carefully selected, gracefully introduced, always in fine humor." Walter Yust
+ Lit R p870 Jl 5 '24 220w

"He is remembered after a century; he is well worth a book; but it is as a sayer of smart things and as an acute critic of those more potent than himself that he is distinguished among the shades for a remnant of vitality." James Luby
+ N Y Times p6 Je 29 '24 2500w
Sat R 136:599 D 1 '23 660w

Reviewed by Martin Armstrong
Spec 131:756 N 17 '23 700w

"This book is a slight but a pleasant enough tribute to an attractive memory."
The Times [London] Lit Sup p681 O 18 '23 440w

GILBERT, VIVIAN. Romance of the last crusade; with Allenby to Jerusalem; with preface by Owen Wister. 235p $2 (5s) Appleton

940.42 European war, 1914-1919—Campaigns—Turkey and the Near East. European war, 1914-1919—Personal narratives 23-17486

A personal narrative of the Palestine campaign under General Allenby and the capture of Jerusalem. With simplicity and directness and often with humor Major Gilbert recites his experiences with troops on the march, stories of English soldiers fighting their way across the Holy Land, and impressions of natives and Bible scenes. He was in Palestine for three years, staying on a year after the Armistice with the army of occupation.

"The book is full of humor, but also of mysticism, and the profound impression the taking of the Holy City had upon a young man of artistic and delicate sensibilities. If you do not like nonsense or sense or sentiment, there are still plenty of other things in it."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 25 '24 300w

"Major Gilbert, an actor turned soldier, has the rare gift of telling a story directly and yet at the same time coloring it with deft description and small human touches that increase the reader's interest a thousandfold. He has stories here of his men and of the natives that make us laugh and cry, and he gives us, too, a living picture of the brilliance of the East and of the squalor underlying the brilliance. 'The Romance of the Last Crusade' should appeal to every kind of reader."
+ Lit R p528 F 16 '24 240w

"An excellent narrative."
+ Sat R 137:620 Je 14 '24 50w

"Major Gilbert tells a simple and unaffected story of his share in Allenby's campaign."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p358 Je 5 '24 360w

GILKYSON, THOMAS WALTER. Oil. 286p $2 Scribner

24-20559

Oil—that mysterious and trouble-making substance—is the theme of this book wherein the characters are molded and urged on by the irresistible lure of the struggle for oil. On his way home from war adventures in France, Hugh Warwick meets Imogen Marr, a stimulating, restless character, quite the opposite of Hugh's gentle, peace-loving wife Cecil. Thru the influence of Imogen, he is initiated into the oil game by her father, and, successful in his first venture, is given more hazardous undertakings in the oil-fields of Texas and Mexico. Borne on by his blind absorption in the game, and aided and abetted by the fascinating Imogen, he almost forgets Cecil, till the very end, when she comes to comfort him as he lies sick and weary in a hospital in Tampico. The author draws a vivid picture of the actual scouting and drilling for oil, and of the somewhat ruthless business methods followed by the oil men.

Booklist 21:67 N '24

Reviewed by Sidney Williams
Bookm 60:348 N '24 350w

"It is admirably done. And, moreover, it is persistently thrilling and exciting—both the personal stories and the general history. There is not the fault that many otherwise excellent epics have; the book is never dull." Struthers Burt
+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 27 '24 550w

Reviewed by E. H. Wyman
Int Bk R p901 N '24 420w

"A highly commendable piece of work and much above the average first novel. That does not mean that 'Oil' is the last word in novel writing. It is not. Nor does it mean that here is the promised 'great American novel.' But it does mean Mr. Gilkyson has written a vigorous story, the reading of which gave me much pleasure and great satisfaction." W. O. Tewson
+ Lit R p3 Ag 30 '24 520w

"Mr. Gilkyson has indicated enough in his novel to show the potentialities of the subject, and, literature aside, he has written a book that is decidedly absorbing and sustained as a document."
+ — N Y Times p12 Ag 31 '24 750w
N Y Tribune p19 S 21 '24 140w

"The novel is as crude as petroleum fresh from the gusher. But it has a certain strength, raw as that of the product after which it is named, and it holds the reader's attention to its bitter-sweet finish." E. W. O.
+ N Y World p8e S 7 '24 250w
Outlook 138:512 N 26 '24 150w

"Mr. Gilkyson's book is more than an outstanding first novel. It is a faithful and very human portrayal of much of the psychological stuff of our post-war period in America. It reflects truly the eager restlessness that thousands feel, and yet imparts a keen enjoyment to the thoughtful 'reader."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:130 S 20 '24 540w

GILLETTE, KING CAMP. People's corporation. 237p $2 Boni & Liveright
334 Cooperation. Social reform 24-11050

The author's plan for the re-organization of society rests upon the principle of cooperation as against competition. Half the book is given to an explanation of his plan to put a manager in charge of the world factory who should have only the service of the people at heart. He would have a giant corporation, owned by the people, in which all the industries could be federated, acting as a unit and leaping industrial and national boundaries. He also outlines a plan by which this people's corporation could come into existence without violence, injustice or expropriation.

"His book is an interesting piece of work, but its theory will be greatly questioned." J. G.
— + Bookm 59:adv Ag '24 100w
Cleveland p57 Jl '24

"His sincerity is compelling and deep; his analysis of the industrial jungle is shrewd and imaginative, but his solution is quite untouched by the realities which guard the road to Utopia." Stuart Chase
— Nation 118:650 Je 4 '24 1100w

"Mr. Gillette submits his astounding proposal not as a theoretical solution but as an entirely practicable step which could easily be taken within, say, thirty years. Every point is minutely argued, and the innumerable practical illustrations adduced are drawn from a wide range of industrial activities. . . It is difficult to take Mr. Gillette's book seriously, even though he himself is evidently quite serious in what he proposes." W: MacDonald
N Y Times p10 Je 1 '24 880w

"Another Utopia, and to the mind of his reviewer the most hideous to date; which is saying much."
— Outlook 138:241 Je 11 '24 160w

GILMAN, ROGER. Great styles of interior architecture. 264p il $7.50 (30s) Harper
729 Architecture—Details. Interior decoration 24-10523

A study of interior decoration which describes the styles from the point of view of design rather than historically. The period covered is from just before the renaissance to the close of the French revolution and the field is secular architecture, both public and private; church architecture is not included. Furniture and textiles come also into the survey. The illustrations have been chosen not so much to illustrate famous examples as to typify the various styles. A bibliography and glossary are provided and an index to text and to illustrations.

"Few modern works on interior decoration have combined with breadth of information and accuracy of statement so readable a style as Mr. Gilman brings to his popular treatment of the periods which, since mediæval times, have succeeded one another in the development of the hall, the domestic rooms of the home and the larger units that his subject touches. Mr. Gilman is not a stylist, but on the other hand he is not a pedant. His book steers a safe middle course, never brilliant, never profound, never revolutionary, yet admirably fitted for the purpose at hand." W. L. S.
+ Boston Transcript p4 My 24 '24 500w
Reviewed by E. L. Shuman
Int Bk R p736 S '24 130w

"With a vivid text and a more than general outlay of handsome plates the dean of the Rhode Island School of Design has interpreted the various styles of interior architecture which played leading parts."
+ N Y Tribune p23 Je 8 '24 100w
Wis Lib Bul 20:174 Jl '24

GISSING, GEORGE. Critical studies of the works of Charles Dickens; with an introd. and bibliography of Gissing by Temple Scott. ltd ed 165p $3 Greenberg pub., inc., 15 E. 40th st., N.Y.
823 Dickens, Charles

"This volume contains nine papers which Gissing wrote as introductions to Dickens's novels. Not all of them have been printed previously, and they are now collected as an adjunct to his critical study of Dickens." (Introd.) Contents: Introduction; Sketches by Boz; The Pickwick papers; Oliver Twist; Nicholas Nickleby; Martin Chuzzlewit; Dombey and son; Barnaby Rudge; The old curiosity shop; Bleak house; Dickens in memory; Bibliography of George Gissing.

Booklist 21:143 Ja '25
Nation 119:550 N 19 '24 30w

"Such Dickens lovers as are not acquainted with Gissing's delicate and yet trenchant style will find here a great deal of enjoyment."
+ N Y Times p2 N 30 '24 360w

"Gissing can be finely discursive. And he maintains with grace and tact the equable temper suitable to the critic who dares to be warmly appreciative but no special pleader. The most valuable thing he has to give about Dickens's work is his own 'sense of fact.' " G. H. Carson
+ N Y Tribune p12 Ja 11 '25 1000w

"Both to students of the craft of fiction and to admirers of Dickens and Gissing this book will prove acceptable." S. A.
Springf'd Republican p12 O 17 '24 750w

GIVLER, ROBERT CHENAULT. Ethics of Hercules; a study of man's body as the sole determinant of ethical values. 204p $2.50 Knopf
171 Ethics. Psychology, Physiological 24-7328

Dr Givler here attempts to show that the ethical values are determined by the structure and functions of the human body, claiming that he who would understand ethics must first know something of the mechanics of the human organism.

Booklist 21:49 N '24

"Professor Givler speaks to a race of supermen. Most of us, even when fairly young, prefer to contemplate life with a little dressing on it, even if we know there are bones underneath. There is only one but about this mechanist's ethics. It robs life of glamor and certain essentials such as beauty of vague, uncertain form and the sound of the music of the spheres. But it does present something which perhaps some lost soul may cling to." I. W. L.
— + Boston Transcript p5 Ap 26 '24 550w
Cleveland p71 S '24

"As protest against obscurantism in ethics, against externality in morality, against the neglect of bodily needs and physical values in moral decision, The Ethics of Hercules has the advantage of a certain vividness of presentation and the carrying power of evident enthusiasm. As constructive theory however, it is inadequate and incomplete." F. I. MacKinnon
— + J Philos 21:415 Jl 17 '24 420w

GJERSET, KNUT. History of Iceland. 482p $4 Macmillan
949.1 Iceland—History 24-2336

A comprehensive history of Iceland which goes back to the days of the early Phoenicians and the legendary tales of the first voyages to Iceland. The narrative covers the story of the people's national development and social life, their unique political institutions, their literary history and economic struggles, and the climate and natural conditions of the island. Considerable space is given to the development of government and the struggle for autonomy.

"As a whole, the book is sound and scholarly. Moreover, it constitutes the first real history of Iceland in English, and is perhaps the best work on the subject in any language, with the possible exception of Icelandic." M. W. Williams

GJERSET, KNUT—Continued
+ — Am Hist R 29:753 Jl '24 650w
Am Pol Sci R 18:432 My '24 50w
Booklist 20:293 My '24

"Many interesting facts are recorded concerning art and education in the Island, statements which undoubtedly will be a revelation to many readers who regard this island of the far North as yet a scarcely known and sparsely inhabited spot."
+ Boston Transcript p6 F 20 '24 700w

"We have here, for the first time, a clear and comprehensive account of Icelandic history from the settlement to the present day."
+ Nation and Ath 35:452 Jl 5 '24 220w

"If this book shows that there is a public for any History of Iceland, some young scholar may be encouraged to write a good one. His predecessor's footnotes may direct him to sources which he might otherwise have overlooked. They are the only thing of any value in the whole compilation."
— + New Statesman 23:448 Jl 19 '24 200w

"Detailed and bearing every mark of completeness."
N Y World p6e F 3 '24 180w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:333 Je '24
Pratt p35 summer '24
Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 3 '24 210w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p428 Jl 10 '24 700w

GLANVILLE, EARNEST. Claw and fang. 320p il $2.75 Harcourt [7s 6d J. Cape]

"In story form Mr. Glanville gives a series of animal studies. The principal story is the life history of Ngonyama, the yellow maned African lion, which from cubhood carried the hall marks of his royal blood in his wide pads and thick legs. We first meet Ngonyama, a fluffy little ball of soft fur. One day arrived a company of seven stranger lions. They told his parents of a land of promise, far beyond. And soon eleven lions where had been but seven 'streamed off in single file' toward that El Dorado. The education of the already adventurous Ngonyama had begun. Learning to hunt for himself, he learns also of man's hunting. Eagerly one follows the history of this valorous Ngonyama, wherein he carries out honorably the animal traditions he had been taught as a cub. He becomes a mighty hunter—killing his game fairly." —Boston Transcript

"Notable among notable books of its kind."
+ Boston Transcript p3 F 23 '24 600w

"Its South African setting, its detailed description of lion-life there, its beauty and its comprehensiveness make it a book capable of taking its place with the great animal classics." M. G. Bonner
+ Int Bk R p683 Ag '24 100w

"The craft of writing animal stories is a very difficult and very delicate one. For such an undertaking three things are generally necessary. First, a sound knowledge of natural history; second, an almost clairvoyant intuition as to the probable behavior of animals under any given set of circumstances; and, third, literary tact of a high order. Mr. Ernest Glanville in 'Claw and Fang' has proved himself to be master of the first two requirements but, upon occasions, he is sadly lacking in the last. . . In comparison with most books written on Africa this is so interesting that I am reluctant to lay stress upon its failings. But the volume does contain unpardonable lapses in taste. The silly facetiousness of some of the animal dialogues amounts at times to sheer banality." Llewelyn Powys
+ — Nation 118:347 Mr 26 '24 1000w

"The stories, most of which deal with aspects of the life of a lion, are quite good reading. The narration, however, is too consistently breathless." B. D.
+ — New Statesman 22:supviii D 8 '23 80w

"Whether the psychology of lions and of other animals is correctly presented we cannot say. Our reviewing staff is hampered by lack of any of these animals. But the book is readable and is perhaps especially appealing to boys and men."
Outlook 136:318 F 20 '24 110w

"Mr Glanville makes a drama of the life of his subjects, weaving each animal's history with so fine a show of intimacy as to make it far more interesting than animal writers usually do. The book is worth while for young and old alike."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 6 '24 240w

GLOVER, HALCOTT. Drama and mankind; a [2] vindication and a challenge. 192p $3.50 Small [8s 6d Benn]
792 Drama [24-8516]

Seven chapters on the drama. Contents: First thoughts touching the public; The varieties of drama; A glance at the world; Drama and criticism; A note on sentimentality; The limits of drama; Nations, democracy, and conclusion.

"It is not often that a book about the theatre so notable as this makes its appearance. From the ordinary gush and babble about plays and personalities it is absolutely free. Here is a man, inspired by high and broad humanitarian ideals, who realizes to the full the limitations, potentialities and legitimate functions of drama and the important part which it might and ought to play in the promotion of peace and civilization and clothes his argument in forceful, simple and attractive English." J. R. Towse
+ Lit R p4 D 27 '24 1250w

"Glover's 'Drama and Mankind' is a mass of dogmatism, truisms, occasional common sense, all launched at the reader with the cumbrous mechanism of a deus ex machina, unquickened by specific information and generally boring." J. Carter
— N Y Times p4 Ja 4 '25 540w

"Mr. Glover prefers the clouds to the earth and wings his way through a pseudo-philosophical empyrean on a course which leads nowhere in particular. In so far as he claims that drama must appeal to and express the dignity and excellence of man and be not superior but worthy of the common worth, he makes an abstract point about the democracy of great art, which is worth discussing in terms of artistic fact and achievement. But he has no taste for such discussion."
— + Sat R 136:575 N 24 '23 370w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p871 D 13 '23 500w

GLOVER, TERROT REAVELEY. Herodotus. 301p $3.25 Univ. of Cal. [18s Cambridge univ. press]
888 Herodotus 24-7748

A study of Herodotus the man, his homeland of Halicarnassus, his travels and his great history. The author tells how he went about collecting the material for his work, how he was able to achieve such triumph as a historian, and what the Greeks who came after him said about him. Mr Glover shows how the books of Herodotus illuminate the life and mind of the Greeks and their barbarian neighbors.

"Professor Glover presents Herodotus in a flowing and readable account into which he contrives to interweave an astonishing proportion of the good stories and shrewd or naïve sayings of the original as well as parallels suggested by the experience of the past decade." Paul Shorey
+ Class Philol 19:383 O '24 400w

"The greatest praise which one can give to Mr. Glover's book—and it is very high praise—is that, while it has the marks of profound scholarship, it succeeds in always keeping vividly before one this extraordinary charm of Herodotus." Leonard Woolf
+ Nation and Ath 36:155 O 25 '24 600w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p788 N 27 '24 1000w

GLUCK, SINCLAIR. House of the missing. 303p $2 Dodd
24-15987

In the search for his sister who has disappeared mysteriously, Jack Clayton joins the United States Secret service in the hunt for a suspected band of dope smugglers. He becomes at once the quarry of a secret gang, both wealthy and politically and socially powerful, who make away in turn with his sweetheart, his valet, and his co-worker. The hunt ends in a Long Island farmhouse, with the capture of 'the Emperor' of the gang, and the release of his friends.

"It is all very absurd and also quite entertaining."
Lit R p890 Jl 12 '24 180w

"It is the very liveliest kind of a lively yarn, wildly improbable, but so plausibly told that the reader quite believes in the veracity of the narrator. A swiftly moving and often thrilling yarn, well-told and cleverly handled."
— + N Y Times p18 Je 29 '24 320w

N Y Tribune p23 Jl 13 '24 240w

Reviewed by F. V. Roman
N Y World p8e Jl 13 '24 150w

GLUCK, SINCLAIR. White streak. 319p $2 Clode [7s 6d Mills & B.]
24-3537

"Another Clode book of murder and its avengers is 'The White Streak,' in which a son, just returned to his American home after a long stay abroad following the war, takes to the trail of the man who, on the very night of the boy's coming back, shoots down the old father in the study of the family mansion. A safe has been opened and the incriminating report taken of a local investigation. This fact and the murdered man's last words—those of the book's title—are the only clues which Harry Burnham has to work upon."—N Y World

---

"If it be original to permit the reader of a detective story to have little doubt from the very first as to the identity of the criminal the story has originality. Otherwise it lacks that saving grace. However, 'The White Streak' is very far from being what we were cleverly led to think it was. There is that much real mystery in it."
— Boston Transcript p4 My 21 '24 360w

"This detective story is called, upon its jacket, both 'breathless' and 'astonishingly clever.' We have found it neither. We think the style rather crude and the characters rather cheap."
— Lit R p761 My 17 '24 70w

"A tale full of action, primed with the very TNT of lurid letters." E. W. Osborn
N Y World p6e Mr 23 '24 120w

"The plot is well wrapped up, and it is not till the last chapter that the truth is disclosed."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p178 Mr 20 '24 80w

GLYN, ELINOR (SUTHERLAND) (MRS CLAYTON GLYN). Six days. 284p $2 Lippincott [7s 6d Duckworth]
24-5945

"She had had the usual number of flirtations that every beautiful American heiress of twenty-two has experienced and she had found them all Dead Sea fruit of no meaning." But after she met Major David Lamont, Laline Lester had many and varied experiences and life took on a new meaning. David was on his way to France and thence to the Near East, on a difficult piece of secret service work. Laline and her aunt were also bound for France and then for England. Arrived in France, David had six days before leaving for his mission. On the first day he took Laline to visit the battlefields. Guided by a priest they were exploring an old dugout when a sudden explosion entombed them, wounding the priest severely. Before he died, the priest married the lovers. There followed six days of dreadful hardship, but on the sixth day they were rescued and for David there was just time to set out for the East. Laline had not been told of this secret mission and the weeks of his absence were for her a time of misery, but David was successful and all ended well.

Boston Transcript p3 Mr 22 '24 1000w

"It is a certified Grade A Elinor Glyn product."
Lit R p811 Je 7 '24 210w

"At the finish of nearly 300 pages of reckless narrative and slipshod English, we are conscious of the revival of an old wonder as to how it came about that once on a time, perhaps under a blue moon, Mrs. Glyn wrote a truly rather clever book, with even a touch of subtlety in it calling it 'The Visits of Elizabeth.'" E. W. Osborn
— N Y World p7e F 24 '24 450w

Reviewed by Gerald Gould
Sat R 137:135 F 9 '24 360w

"There are certain indications that this absurd story has failed greatly to interest its author, and now and again she frankly throws the task of imaginative realization upon her readers."
— The Times [London] Lit Sup p54 Ja 24 '24 220w

GOBINEAU, ARTHUR, comte de. Golden ² flower; tr. from the French, and with an introd. by Ben Ray Redman. 144p il $2.50 Putnam
945 24-28704

"Although it can stand on its own feet, the newly translated volume, 'The Golden Flower,' as originally conceived, is an integral part of 'The Renaissance.' It consists of five historical essays, each designated to serve as preface to one of the five parts composing Count Gobineau's historic play, and each casting a light on the Count's masterpiece. They were not published in the original volume, and only appeared in France this year. They deal with Fra Girolamo Savonarola, Cesare Borgia, Pope Julius II, Pope Leo X and Michelangelo Buonarroti and more precisely with the backgrounds against which these figures stand as the essential symbols of their time."—Lit R

"Altogether, a stimulating book; for the artist scholar, and everyman; and one that, assuredly, has its lesson for our own day." J: Cournos
+ Lit R p3 N 8 '24 1100w

"Certainly admirers of 'La Renaissance,' whether believers in racial and aristocratic supremacy or not, had reason to welcome any contribution of the author to the story of that golden age. . . We must reluctantly protest against the kind of English into which publishers too often permit the ease and clarity and crispness of the French tongue to be distorted. The language of this version is not really English, but 'translation English' unmistakably, and it is not always accurate translation." C: H. A. Wager
+ — N Y Tribune p10 D 21 '24 950w

GOING, CHARLES BUXTON. David Wilmot, free-soiler. 787p il $6 Appleton
B or 92 Wilmot, David 24-21082

David Wilmot, 1814-1868, is chiefly remembered to-day as the advocate of the Wilmot proviso, attached to an appropriation bill for the purchase of territory from Mexico and prohibiting the extension of slavery in such territory. This was for many years a chief issue in national platforms and has been described as "the basis of the free-soil campaign of 1848 and the republican party of 1860." Wilmot's connection with this issue has overshadowed his many other acts of public service during the critical period of American history from 1845 to 1865. His biographer presents a full picture of David Wilmot as man and statesman and supplies his speeches as far as they have been preserved.

"This fruitful and illustrious life is ably recorded." E. C. B.
+ Lit R p9 Ja 3 '25 450w

GOING, C: B.—Continued

"Notwithstanding all the work that went into the book, perhaps in part because of it, this story is not one to make Wilmot live again. The style is clear and dry and lifeless, and the narrative is too long drawn out." W. L. Fleming

— + Nation 120:97 Ja 28 '25 440w

"It is fairer, on the whole, to regard the book as the biography of the Wilmot Proviso. As such it is as nearly complete as a biography can be." H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p13 D 28 '24 2350w

Outlook 138:463 N 19 '24 240w

"Mr. Going, whose search for material seems to have been commendably thorough, has apparently recovered all that is important to know about a career of notable public service, and in so doing has made a valuable addition to the still short list of practically definitive American biographies." W: MacDonald

+ Sat R of Lit p247 N 1 '24 780w

GOLDING, LOUIS. Sunward. 333p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Chatto & W.]

914.5 Italy—Description and travel

"In 'Sunward' we find a book attractively personal and yet concerned altogether with Italy. The book is equally remarkable for its poetry and its humor, for a purple noon near Sorrento or a ridiculous street brawl between two unbridled housewives. Least of all the books that are full of Italy is it a record of specific places, and within them specific churches and ruins of museums visited; it is rather a record of moods; the mood of a city affecting the writer, the mood of the writer coloring the city."—N Y Times

"He is always enthusiastic and frequently entertaining. Sunward, like Italian sunlight, is very delightful if taken cautiously and for not too prolonged a period. There is not too much of the book; but it is possible to have too much of it at one time."

+ New Statesman 24:sup12 O 11 '24 600w

N Y Times p4 Ja 11 '25 500w

"His pages are packed with humor and youth and poetry; guide-bookishness goes hang."

+ N Y Tribune p17 D 14 '24 230w

"He is throughout sensitive, intelligent and entertaining, even in his most inconsequential chat." J: W. Crawford

N Y World p8e D 28 '24 250w

"There is wit, whimsical fancy, a deal of impertinence and some beautiful writing; what is missing is a real background, that philosophic imagination without which the cleverest writer is but a lost angel." A. E. Coppard

+ — Spec 133:514 O 11 '24 450w

"Verona, says Mr. Golding, is 'full of bright stridency'; the same might be said about this book. Yet the ear which is not too sensitive to the higher wavelengths will lend itself not unwillingly to this tale of travels."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p607 O 2 '24 1050w

GOLDMAN, EMMA. My disillusionment in Russia. 242p $2 Doubleday

947 Bolshevism—Russia. Russia—Politics and government 23-17761

For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

"Miss Goldman writes with more restraint than one would expect of her, but the indictment of Bolshevism is severe enough."

+ Am Pol Sci R 18:425 My '24 110w

Bookm 59:88 Mr '24 100w

"Unfortunately, the present volume only contains the first twenty-one chapters of Miss Goldman's Mss.; the twelve concluding chapters have been omitted through an unavoidable oversight, but will appear in a second and enlarged edition. Meanwhile the author's generalizations can be pretty well inferred from the text as it now stands." H: Alsberg

Lit R p629 Ap 29 '24 1000w

Reviewed by Walter Littlefield

N Y Times p13 Ja 17 '24 1650w

"A convincing indictment of Bolshevism."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 16 '24 600w

GOLDWYN, SAMUEL. Behind the screen. 263p il $2.50 Doran

778 Moving pictures. Actors and actresses 23-17218

The book is less an autobiography than a personal record of screen stars. Charlie Chaplin, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Geraldine Farrar, Rodolph Valentino and plenty of others with whom Goldwyn's experience behind the screen has thrown him are described intimately and good-naturedly.

Booklist 20:255 Ap '24

"Undoubtedly the most sustained piece of satire in the book, and an altogether delightful bit of character work, is contained in the chapter on Elinor Glyn, who floated through Hollywood during the reign of the 'Eminent Authors.' Another commendable quality lies in the author's unwillingness to make emotional capital out of his own rise from obscure poverty to a position of great power and influence in the theatrical world."

+ Bookm 59:91 Mr '24 250w

"Either wilfully or through negligence Mr. Goldwyn has surrendered his right to title as America's foremost humorist. If he had taken the precaution to insert his tongue carefully in one cheek as he wrote 'Behind the Screen' and turned the other meekly toward his inevitable critics he would have come off with easy honors. As it is, he may take whatever comfort he can find in the fact that he has written one of the funniest books of the season, presumably without intending it." J: Anderson

— + Lit R p539 F 23 '24 600w

New Statesman 23:418 Jl 12 '24 300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p358 Je 5 '24 80w

GOMPERTZ, MARTIN LOUIS ALAN (GANPAT, pseud.). Stella Nash. 359p $2 Houghton [6s Blackwood]

24-23376

"Stella Nash had married a polished scoundrel who had deserted her, much to her relief, a year or two after their wedding. She goes to India determined never again to link her destiny to that of any other man, but on the way out she meets a young army officer, a worthy scion of a noble house, whom she gradually comes to love. There are plenty of grounds on which she could obtain a divorce, but it is a fundamental part of her morality that marriage is a tie that can be dissolved only by death. And death dissolves it eventually, but not until she passed through hours of the most poignant suffering. The story centers around the hunt for a fabulous treasure said to have been buried in an abandoned temple in the heart of India."—Lit R

"This is a most satisfactory novel. The plot of the story is subtle and deftly developed, the characters sane, healthy minded men and women whom one would like to have for friends in real life; the dialogue alternately grave and gay. At first the action moves leisurely, but it gathers speed as the story progresses and the denouement is a thrilling climax which carries the reader forward, whether he will or no." E. B. S.

+ Lit R p9 S 6 '24 280w

"There is a great variety of character study and depiction, and all of it is done with a clever and subtle hand."

+ N Y Times p17 N 2 '24 900w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p8e Ag 17 '24 150w

"In trying to combine an emotionally elaborated love story with a story of hidden treasure this novel, if it does not quite fall between two stools, at least sags pretty deeply."

— Outlook 138:560 D 3 '24 50w

"Not only is the scene of action—the hills to the north of Northern Punjab—unhackneyed, but a further relief from the sentimental history of hero and heroine is provided by a really excellent 'yarn' of buried treasure admirably concealed."

+ Spec 132:720 My 3 '24 150w

"A competent and readable story."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p225 Ap 10 '24 170w

GOODWIN, ERNEST. Stiletto. 359p $2 Bobbs [7s 6d Collins]

24-17249

"A tale of Venice in the days of the Doges. The author tells of the beautiful Yolanda, daughter of old Simonino, and how she was married at her father's deathbed to Domenico, who had been his comrade-in-arms. Alessandro, the evil son of the Doge, desires her, and the story runs swiftly through violence and bloodshed to a happy conclusion, after a powerful scene in which the husband and wife, Alessandro, and a young adorer of Yolanda, come face to face."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"However exciting and romantic the episodes he writes about, his setting of fifteenth century Italy certainly renders them plausible. More than that, his manner of telling has made them entertaining as well. It is a good story, done somewhat after the fashion Sabatini has rendered so popular."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 20 '24 340w

"Mr. Goodwin's novel is first-rate entertainment, a tale told with skill and dexterity." H. E.

+ Lit R p954 Ag 9 '24 150w

"The author tells his story with plenty of that circumstance that always gives the air of reality, and his narrative is a succession of rapidly moving scenes and events."

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 17 '24 300w

"Goodwin's novel is full of suspense and action, but his language is often sadly inadequate. However, he works up a situation that for its ingenuity alone makes the novel worth while owning." F. V. Roman

+ — N Y World p8e Ag 3 '24 70w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p269 My 1 '24 50w

GOODWIN, JOHN CUTHBERT. Insanity and the criminal. 308p $3.50 Doran [10s Hutchinson]

132.1 Insanity. Crime and criminals. Psychology, Abnormal 24-10029

A study, for the general reader, of the influence of abnormality on crime. It shows the relationship which modern research, especially psychological research, has found to exist between insanity and crime, outlines the bearing of Freud's discoveries and indicates the hopefulness of psychoanalysis as a method of treatment and investigation. Many cases are given by way of illustration.

"Detailed, in the main dependable, readable, distant (fortunately for our national bigotry these inquiries probe into England's sores, not ours), the volume presents a minimum of statistics, a maximum of appropriate—many of them even illuminative—anecdotes."

+ Bookm 59:612 Jl '24 210w

"It is always a problem how books of this kind secure publishers. It must be because somewhere there are readers for them. They are a typical example of the loose thinking of our time." J. J. W.

— Cath World 119:709 Ag '24 200w

"Mr. Goodwin has enthusiasm and a considerable amount of miscellaneous and valuable knowledge; he is open-minded and 'advanced,' accepting modern psychology and advocating reform of criminal law and prisons. Up to a point his book is successful, and any 'ordinary man' might read it with advantage. But Mr. Goodwin has one serious defect: he never seems to know at any particular point what exactly the question is which he is discussing; and to what conclusion he is travelling. His book, therefore, has the appearance of vagueness, confusion, and disorder."

— Nation and Ath 34:440 D 15 '23 150w

"Mr. Goodwin explores a wide and difficult field of law and psychology, but his industrious book is disappointing. It is a large compilation of popularised psychology, psychiatry, and so on, rather prolix and loosely put together. His book is overloaded by an accumulation of indiscriminate evidence chosen (one feels) as often for its topicality as for its aptness. All that he has to say could have gone into half the space. And there is no index."

— New Statesman 22:458 Ja 26 '24 100w

"The book, developing some of the suggestions made in it, is written in a very readable style and is enlivened with many instances, anecdotes and stories, while its simple and clear explication of the important basic principles of psychoanalysis will be welcomed by many readers."

+ N Y Times p28 Je 8 '24 470w

GORDON, GEORGE BYRON. Rambles in old
2 London. 334p il $4 Jacobs

914.21 London—Description. London—History 24-24086

Among the many books on London this volume has a distinct place. The rambles are those of an archeologist whose chief interest is the great antiquity of London and its unbroken continuity, as indicated in the quotation from Leigh Hunt which opens the volume: "In some parts of London we may go back through the whole English history, perhaps through the history of man." Contents: The geology of London; Topography; Some mediæval monuments; In the approaches to the city; In the byways; The women of London; Tyburn; Merrie England; The Lord mayor and the livery; Ancient customs; Westminster; Whitehall; The throne; Residential London and the boroughs; London bridge.

Booklist 21:146 Ja '25

"That it should be left to a Philadelphian to so thoroughly describe the chief English city is a little surprising, yet of the many books on the subject this one certainly ranks among the best."

+ N Y World p9e O 19 '24 200w

GORDON, JAN and GORDON, CORA JOSEPHINE. Donkey trip through Spain. 273p il $4 McBride [15s Wm. Blackwood]

914.6 Spain—Description and travel 24-18540

Another book of unconventional travels through Spain by the authors of "Two vagabonds in Spain." (Book Review Digest, 1923) With a donkey and a cart just big enough to carry their goods, Jan and Cora Gordon tramped through southern Spain in quest of life paintable in word and picture. They kept away from travelled roads, no road apparently being too rough nor inn too rude to daunt them. By such means they caught the spirit of old Spain recorded by travellers of past days. The humors of the roads, nights spent at none too comfortable posadas and encounters with fellow travellers along the way are described with the same vivacity which marked the earlier book.

"A most entertaining book."

+ Nation and Ath 35:26 Ap 5 '24 60w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p11 Jl 13 '24 500w

"The narrative is agreeably written and though its incidents are inconsiderable it gives a passing glimpse of the Spanish countryside—none too pleasing on the whole."

+ — N Y World p6e Jl 6 '24 100w

"Their book is not harmed because it had a distinguished predecessor; the narrative is lighthearted, its observations are pleasant and worth

GORDON, J. and C. J.—Continued
while. The book is illustrated by its authors—regrettably."
+ — Outlook 137:614 Ag 20 '24 40w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p137 Mr 6 '24 450w

GORDON, MARGERY, and KING, MARIE BURNADETTE, comps. Verse of our day; an anthology of modern American and British poetry. 371p $2 Appleton
821.08 English poetry—Collections 23-16493

The compilers evidently had in mind school as well as popular use of this anthology of modern American and British poetry. The British poets range from Austin Dobson and Thomas Hardy to Wilfred Owen, and the American from Eugene Field to Edna St Vincent Millay. Biographical notes on the poets are included.

"We have a feeling that the editors subordinated sound critical judgment to a pedantic plan of elaborate classification."
— Bookm 59:223 Ap '24 200w

Reviewed by Margaret Widdemer
Int Bk R p646 Ag '24 150w

"Contains numerous distinguished selections by scores of writers, and will well repay the attention of the poetry lover; yet the baser ore is mingled indiscriminately with the gold, and the collection is as conspicuous for what it omits as for what it includes."
— + Lit R p498 F 2 '24 320w

"It is a satisfactory anthology, judged from the point of view of comprehensiveness. The indexing and division are especially praiseworthy."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 16 '24 600w

"A charming book."
+ Wis Lib Bul 19:505 D '23

GORE, CHARLES. The Holy Spirit and the church. (Reconstruction of belief) 366p $2.25 Scribner
230 Holy Spirit. Church. Christianity

The third volume in Bishop Gore's Reconstruction of belief series. In the first two volumes, "Belief in God" and "Belief in Christ" he argued the rationality of the traditional faith in God and in Jesus Christ. The present volume completes his plan by studying faith in the Holy Spirit and the authority of the church and the Scriptures.

Bookm 60:adv D '24 70w

"Dr. Gore has written a book which is calm in manner and rich in historical and scientific as well as theological data." W. K. H.
+ Boston Transcript p6 My 3 '24 250w

Reviewed by J. F. Newton
Int Bk R p656 Ag '24 50w

+ J Religion 4:331 My '24 50w

"It is a most interesting book. The author is well aware of the considerations which historical criticism has brought before us, and he honors the scholarly spirit." G. B. Smith
+ J Religion 4:649 N '24 1550w

"It is extraordinary how many of the most minute matters of biblical criticism and of the most comprehensive problems of theology are rapidly and alternatively reviewed in this volume." H: J. Cadbury
+ Lit R p860 Je 28 '24 550w

"In view of certain recent developments of what is known as Anglo-Catholicism, it is an important book. Bishop Gore is its distinguished representative. Nor could it desire a better. He is a scholar and a man of affairs. Time was when he had more than a bowing acquaintance with Liberalism; 'Lux Mundi' was a milestone: the Tractarian orthodoxy of its generation regarded it with dismay. But its editor has learned nothing and forgotten nothing; he is now where he was in 1889. To say this is to say that, though he has not retracted, he has receded." A. F.
+ — Nation and Ath 34:924 Mr 29 '24 1000w

N Y Times p11 Ap 6 '24 650w

"It is not for me to suggest that Dr. Gore is right or that he is wrong. It would be an impertinence so to do. As a statement of the High Church position, for High Churchmen who already accept that position, Dr. Gore's book is, at once, authoritative and valuable, if at times Rabbinical in its dialectics. But, for anyone uncommitted to that group in the Anglican Communion, it will increase rather than diminish the perplexities of the moment." P. W. Wilson
No Am 219:898 Je '24 1750w
Pratt p9 summer '24

"He is ponderous and discursive; but he compels thought. He is discursive because he thinks aloud, in queer asides and unexpected footnotes, as well as in elaborate treatment of subsidiary questions as they arise. He compels thought by his complete sincerity and the fearlessness with which he speaks his mind. It is his own mind, though it coincides for the most part with commonplace orthodoxy. . . Few will think that he has so reconstructed Christian belief as to endow it with universal appeal, but he has probably done much in contribution to the attainment even of that ultimate goal."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p170 Mr 20 '24 2100w

GORGAS, MARIE DOUGHTY (MRS WILLIAM
2 CRAWFORD GORGAS), and HENDRICK, BURTON JESSE. William Crawford Gorgas; his life and work. 359p $5 Doubleday
B or 92 Gorgas, William Crawford

The widow of Dr Gorgas has collaborated with Burton Hendrick in this account of the life and work of the distinguished American army surgeon who made possible the building of the Panama canal, by removing the chief obstacle to its success—yellow fever. He was later appointed by President Wilson surgeon-general of the army. The greater part of the book is given to his work as chief sanitary officer at Havana and in the Panama Canal zone, where the fight he waged was not alone with mosquitoes but also with a stupid and hostile officialdom. The remaining chapters are given to an account of the application to other parts of the world of the lessons learned at Panama.

"This biography of General Gorgas not only contains the records of much important history, but it is filled as well with interesting and sometimes amusing anecdotes. Best of all, it sums up clearly the tremendous achievement of this one man, who by making the tropics safe and healthful places for the white man to live added to the world almost as much land as did Columbus. There is nothing quite like it in the history of human endeavor." D. L. Mann
+ Boston Transcript p5 D 27 '24 1550w

"Admirable and interesting biography of one of the truly great men of science and the most eminent sanitary expert the world has known. A book which is in keeping with the character of that high-minded, lovable man, a gentle quiet personality, but whose labors in his chosen field were fired by a vision from which nothing could divert his gaze."
+ N Y Times p10 Ja 4 '25 1800w

"An admirably edited biography."
+ Springf'd Republican p5a Ja 11 '25 1800w

GORKY, MAXIM, pseud. (ALEXEI MAXIMOVICH PYESHKOFF). Fragments from my diary. 320p $3 McBride [10s 6d P. Allan]
891.74

"Almost all the entries in this diary are undated. They treat of a variety of subjects—the fascination of fire, the eroticism of consumptives, Anti-Semitism, the incentive to murder, the intelligentsia, the peculiarities of tramps. The later part of the book contains some vivid snapshots of the Revolution. But although the sketches and episodes are disconnected, all of them are significant of the characteristic virtues and failings of the Russian people. . . The people he draws are real characters—he has spoken to them, observed them, noted what they have said; the events he describes have happened—he has witnessed them, sometimes taken part in them. . . There are a few literary allusions in these fragments."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by M. A. Hamilton
Nation and Ath 35:266 My 24 '24 1250w

"Despite Gorki's western prepossessions, what is known as the Russian soul breathes through every paragraph. Every character is living, complete and differentiated, each as he speaks seems to reveal his individual being." J. F. H.
+ New Statesman 23:622 S 6 '24 1700w

Reviewed by A. I. Nazaroff
N Y Times p11 Ja 4 '25 1350w

"These sketches are as formless as life and as casual as conversation, yet they bite into one's consciousness as no stenographic record could." Harry Salpeter
+ N Y World p9e N 23 '24 600w
Outlook 138:650 D 17 '24 120w

"He has lived among people like those described in [his book] for fifty years, and every word in it has the stamp of truth. I should like to impose on everyone taking part in the discussion with the Soviet representatives in Whitehall, the task of mastering this book, and more especially the episode of 'The Shepherd Discusses Learning.' They would learn more of the mental processes of the Russian peasant —and men of the merchant class are little removed from them in mind—from this tale than from a dozen treatises."
+ Sat R 137:513 My 17 '24 180w

"Must contain interesting material but we are always rendered a little suspicious of the authority, authenticity, and reliability of the translation when the translator's name is suppressed."
Spec 132:714 My 3 '24 50w

"Every page of this remarkable book breathes the spirit of Russia, the Russia which so vividly and unforgettably builds itself up in the mind out of the works of such great writers as Dostoievski, Tolstoi, Turgeniev, and Tchekov. In its passages of natural description there is the same realism and melancholy; in the conversations recorded the same groping philosophy, the mental ferment, the sense of fatality; and in the character studies (in which the book is especially rich) the same simplicity, brutality, and subjection to a fixed idea." Martin Armstrong
+ Spec 132:sup800 My 17 '24 1650w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p281 My 8 '24 1500w

GORKY, MAXIM, pseud. (ALEXEI MAXIMOVICH PYESHKOFF). The judge; a play in four acts; auth. tr. by Marie Zakrevsky and Barrett H. Clark. 105p $1.50 McBride
891.72 24-30636

The theme of this play shows how repulsive a man may be who becomes infatuated with his own suffering and who believes he therefore enjoys the right to torment others for what he has suffered. The story is that of an escaped criminal who reforms and becomes rich but whose security is destroyed when a prison-companion hunts him down.

Boston Transcript p3 N 12 '24 400w
Reviewed by J: Ferris
Lit R p9 Ja 3 '25 380w

"On the whole the play does not pan out. It has the moral didacticism of Tolstoi's dramas yet lacks their reality."
— Nation 119:577 N 26 '24 180w

"Gorki is a master of naturalism, of suggesting the most vivid actuality by seemingly effortless strokes. These characters talk neither too much nor too little. They never are forced into artificial climaxes. Even the suicide that culminates the play merges into the realism of the theme. It is this reality, this sense of being, that is, by far, the strongest part of Gorki's talent."
+ N Y Times p4 N 23 '24 1200w

GORKY, MAXIM, pseud. (ALEXEI MAXIMOVICH PYESHKOFF). My university days. 327p $3 Boni & Liveright
B or 92 23-18127

"Gorky has called his third autobiographical volume, 'My University Days,' in a certain spirit of irony. Student at a university, he never became, though his keen observation of people and clear insight into human character made him ever a student of life. He led a vagabond existence for the most part, and the merciless hardness, brutality and squalor that surrounded him are terrible to contemplate. However, the people that crowd the pages of his life history are as interesting as they are varied. Peasants, artisans, scholars, writers, teachers, policemen, government officials—they passed in and out of Gorky's strange, sad life, leaving each one of them a vivid imprint on his keen mind. Through them he learned to build for himself a philosophy of life, and with the memory of them he painted for us those stark, vital pictures which make the unforgettable character of his book."—Springf'd Republican

Booklist 20:263 Ap '24

"The book is marred by the translation; there is scarcely a page on which the simplest idiomatic uses of the English language have not been distorted and prepositions, adverbs, or tenses misplaced. It takes patience and imagination to surmount this garbled hack work; but the book compels and rewards the exercise."
— + Bookm 59:355 My '24 180w

"The book gives a vivid picture of life in the small towns of Russia thirty years ago. At times, however, its sensuous realism seems to lose all sense of art and become merely crude. The narrative is difficult to follow because of its confused and condensed style."
— + Boston Transcript p5 D 29 '23 320w
Dial 77:173 Ag '24 150w

"The translation is slovenly. The dialogues are neither English nor Russian. It is time to understand that Russian, more than any other language, cannot be rendered word for word. The word Khokhol is used at least a hundred times before it is explained. In a semi-historical book like this there should be a wealth of notes bearing on the mentioned names. And practically not a single name in the book is spelled correctly!"
— Lit R p675 Ap 12 '24 460w

"The volume is a colorful panorama which will fascinate every lover of life." J. J. Smertenko
+ Nation 118:712 Je 18 '24 420w

"One suspects that My University Days is written in glowing prose, but unfortunately the translation does its best to conceal it; it is literal to the point of being scarcely literate." L: Mumford
— + New Repub 39:252 Jl 23 '24 500w

"There are few books of autobiography in which the first person singular occurs less often. Gorky is the participator and the observer, not the observed, and if, after reading this book we feel that we know the author better, it is so because of oblique glimpses we have caught rather than of direct views." Harry Salpeter
+ N Y World p7e Ja 13 '24 1200w
Outlook 136:233 F 6 '24 20w

"The story is unified and startlingly clear and simple."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 25 '24 650w

GORMAN, HERBERT S. James Joyce; his first forty years. 238p $2 Huebsch
B or 92 Joyce, James 24-7624

There is more exposition than criticism in this study of the author of "'Ulysses" and

GORMAN, H. S.—Continued
what he has done in literature. Mr Gorman places particular emphasis on that work, which he describes as "the revelation of all life in a single day." He analyzes its subject matter in detail and explains what it attempts to do. Less full expositions are given of his other works: "Chamber Music," his solitary book of verse; "Exiles", a drama; his autobiographical "Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man"; and "The Dubliners," which is the least personal of his books. Mr Gorman is a great admirer of Joyce's strange genius and in his close study of it brings out the main facts of the author's life.

"Taken all in all, Mr. Gorman's 'James Joyce' is a most competent example of the summary of a living artist's work." Laurence Stallings
+ Bookm 59:466 Je '24 420w

"Mr Gorman has performed a useful task. He outlines not only the basic qualities of the author, but also the general scheme of the much-discussed and little-read 'Ulysses.' Mr. Gorman has compressed the story into a few pages, and his accompanying interpretation gives on the whole a reasonable and clear rendering of Joyce's theme which might be secured from the 732-page original only with great labor." W. K. H.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 26 '24 600w
Cath World 119:851 S '24 650w

"Mr Gorman's introduction to James Joyce is very well suited to its purpose. It is, on the whole, an intelligent and comprehensible account of what Joyce has done. . . A first-rate piece of criticism it is not—though it has bits of good criticism in it. But it must be counted to Mr Gorman for righteousness that he has written such a book at all." Edmund Wilson
+ — Dial 77:430 N '24 2250w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd
Ind 112:230 Ap 26 '24 200w

Reviewed by D. B. Woolsey
Ind 113:104 Ag 16 '24 250w

"Mr. Gorman's book is conscientiously executed, with nothing slurred over. The author's chief error of judgment is shown in a too monotonously maintained enthusiasm for his subject; a little depreciation would have made him twice as convincing." Edwin Muir
+ — Lit R p851 Je 28 '24 1750w

Reviewed by Edith Rickert
New Repub 41:181 Ja 7 '25 260w

"Those who want to learn, rather than theorise about James Joyce and his milieu can rely upon Mr. Gorman's painstaking and enthusiastic, but never ponderous or hysterical, study of a writer who has been more talked about than read." Ernest Boyd
+ — N Y Times p7 Mr 2 '24 2000w

"Mr. Gorman in this book tells us something about Mr. Joyce and much about 'Ulysses.' His pages about that book make it seem almost reasonable and sane. As comparatively few readers will ever see 'Ulysses,' it is apparent that Mr. Gorman has done the author a great service."
+ Outlook 136:705 Ap 23 '24 400w
Springf'd Republican p11a Mr 2 '24 80w

"Mr Gorman has the gift of felicitous and revealing phrase. He devotes himself wholly to his task. There is much sensitive, perspicacious writing in the book. Yet the dominant attitude is one of understanding and appreciation rather than of criticism; in critical judgment the book falls below its interpretative level. The value set upon Mr. Joyce's artistic achievement in prose forms is excessive."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 6 '24 1000w

GOSNELL, HAROLD FOOTE. Boss Platt and his New York machine. 370p $3 Univ. of Chicago press

B or 92 Platt, Thomas Collier. New York (state)—Politics and government. Roosevelt, Theodore. Politics, Practical 24-2633

In this study of Thomas Collier Platt, 1833-1901, the author describes the social background, the personal qualities and the methods of a typical state political boss at a time when the boss system was in a particularly flourishing condition. In the late eighties when Platt had reached a position of leadership in the Republican party in New York state, Theodore Roosevelt was coming into national notice and the two men had political relations with each other for about twenty years. The book analyzes their relationship, also Platt's control over legislatures and his relations with the press. Having explained how his power was built up the author shows how it began to decline and disintegrate.

"The political duet—or was it a fugue movement?—which Platt and Roosevelt sang cannot be properly described and appraised without a quick appreciation of its humorous elements. The author fortunately possesses that gift. He draws a fine picture of the 'Amen Corner' and Platt's famous Sunday School class. Nevertheless the reader will close the book with an impression of a chronicle of facts rather than of a drama in which living men are wrestling for some of the greatest prizes that human ambition covets." C: H. Levermore
+ — Am Hist R 29:785 Jl '24 500w

"An extraordinarily broad and brightly illuminated canvas. Many earlier writers have given us excellent accounts of bossism in general, but to Dr. Gosnell's credit it must be said that he has succeeded admirably in depicting throughout all its ramifications and functionings a particular machine, and that a machine which ranks clearly among the most important and most powerful in the history of the country." R. C. Brooks
+ Am Pol Sci R 18:627 Ag '24 600w

"The author cites many authorities. He has shown an understanding of the conditions which brought about such a character as that of his subject. In characterization he has done remarkably well. Platt was neither angel nor devil and cannot be painted in the colors of either. Neither was there any real sweetness nor much ordinary humanity to depict. He is dry as dust, never picturesque, yet in spite of that we are given a vivid and interesting picture." S. L. Cook
+ — Boston Transcript p4 Ja 26 '24 2100w

Reviewed by E. C. Lindeman
New Repub 38:75 Mr 12 '24 1500w

"There is nothing of vituperation in the author's method. He is out after no skins. Rather does he seem a dispassionate scientific investigator in search of knowledge, and if he is a bit free and easy with his knife he is not seeking pleasure through pain. Better still, he is not a boresome reformer, burdening his book with remedies. It is this impersonal, cautious method which makes the work one of the utmost value to students of practical politics. He diagnoses the disease and leaves the remedies to others." C. J. Bowers
+ N Y World p7e Ja 20 '24 1900w
R of Rs 69:446 Ap '24 190w

Reviewed by J: M. Gaus
Springf'd Republican p7a Jl 6 '24 560w

GOSSE, EDMUND WILLIAM. Life of William
2 Congreve. 181p $1.50 Scribner [7s 6d Heinemann]

B or 92 Congreve, William 24-28797

"Much new material has been discovered and gathered by Mr. Gosse since his biography first appeared nearly forty years ago. All this has given his biographer the incentive to survey the old ground, and to bring to his studies of the dramatist much that is valuable in the light of later developments and results which have proved that Congreve and his plays have something in them which deserve a better fate than the seclusion of the library and the classroom."—Boston Transcript

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p4 Ja 3 '25 1950w

"The 'Life of William Congreve' is not the work of a pedant; and there is nothing of pedantry to its pages, and, if Victorian in flavor, it is a book not to be lost sight of in these more flashy Georgian days."

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 11 '25 1250w

"I closed the Gosse life with an intense disappointment. Biography, even as drama, should recreate a man, should make him live. Mr. Gosse writes with the air of exhuming a body and as if he were afraid that it might come to life of its own account. His facts are overwhelming, but a treatise results from their generous display." Laurence Stallings
— N Y World p8e D 21 '24 1350w

"As critic and biographer, Mr. Gosse writes with a clarity that is like the French. He does not appear to be going very deep; but at the end of his straightforward, precise narrative and comment the reader realizes that the picture is complete, and that the care taken over its proportions has unobtrusively told him a great deal."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p723 N 13 '24 700w

GOSSELIN, LOUIS LEON THEODORE (G. LENOTRE, pseud.). Two royalist spies of the French revolution; tr. from the French by Bernard Miall. 269p il $2.75 Holt [15s Unwin]

B or 92 France—History—Revolution. Fauche-Borel, Louis. Perlet, Charles Frédéric

The author is the historian and biographer of some of the more obscure aspects and characters of the French revolution and the First empire. In this book he studies the career of Louis Fauche-Borel, a Swiss bookseller who turned secret service agent and entered the underworld of royalist intrigue and conspiracy, becoming the instrument of their propaganda. Fauche-Borel is the chief character in the book. The other conspirator is Perlet, ex-royalist and police spy.

"This book is an interesting study of one side of the uncertain times following upon the bloody ones of the early Revolution. It is a side of great importance to a knowledge of events of the period, and one not well discussed in general history, although there exists in police archives, as well as personal Memoirs, abundant material. It is a romantic, horrible and vivid side, which, oddly enough has been forgotten." S. L. R.
+ Boston Transcript p5 My 14 '24 500w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
Nation 119:422 O 15 '24 600w

"Even in the hands of so lucid a writer as Monsieur Lenotre it is involved and difficult to follow, yet it is never dull and throws light upon an obscure chapter of modern history. The translation is excellent."
+ — New Statesman 23:74 Ap 26 '24 350w

"It is an interesting and authentic biography that Lenotre has written, backed up by original sources, into which he has gone with scholarly faithfulness, and to which he refers copiously in footnotes."
+ N Y Times p7 Je 29 '24 860w
Sat R 137:266 Mr 15 '24 250w

GOSTLING, MRS FRANCES M. (PARKINSON). Lure of English cathedrals (southern). 184p il $2 Little [5s Mills & B.]

726 Cathedrals [24-12007]

Eight cathedrals of southern England are dealt with—Canterbury, Rochester, Chichester, Winchester, Salisbury, Exeter, Wells and Gloucester. The author has more to say of the human than of the architectural side of these cathedrals. She recounts their history and associated memories, tells stories of their bishops and others connected with them, describes their monuments and something of their architecture.

"Mrs. Gostling recreates the atmosphere of the locality described with an uncommonly compelling touch. . . For those who have visited the cathedrals of southern England, for those who are planning to do so—above all, perhaps, for those who with their bodily eyes will never behold them, these rare interpretations were written."
+ Boston Transcript p4 My 24 '24 380w

"The charm of this book is its feeling, a feeling brought out with a touch of the informal and personal that makes every page delightfully engaging." C. P.
+ Cath World 119:711 Ag '24 300w

"'The Lure of English Cathedrals' by Frances M. Gostling is a delightful guide to the southern cathedrals and cathedral cities." S. F. Reavis
+ Int Bk R p531 Je '24 20w

"To read the book would increase many-fold one's enjoyment of a visit to the cathedrals about which it is written."
+ N Y Times p23 My 25 '24 380w
St Louis p407 D '24
Springf'd Republican p8 Jl 21 '24 250w
Wis Lib Bul 20:176 Jl '24

GOSTLING, MRS FRANCES M. (PARKINSON). Lure of French châteaux. 181p il $2 McBride

914.4 Castles. France—Description and travel [24-26453]

The author describes a tour of the French chateaux—Saint-Germain, Saint-Cloud, Versailles, Fontainebleau, Avignon, Carcassonne, Chinon, Chenonceaux, Blois and others, recalling their origins and historic associations.

Bookm 59:351 My '24 50w

"The French chateaux to which and through which we follow Mrs. Gostling are generally those somewhat familiar to us, and hence having a personal appeal almost as strong as if with our bodily eyes we beheld them." F. B.
Boston Transcript p1 Mr 22 '24 210w
Cleveland p96 D '24
+ Lit R p652 Ap 5 '24 60w
N Y Tribune p27 Je 8 '24 80w

"She has put lure in her title. But she has omitted to include it in the book. Pumped up ecstasy pervades it."
— N Y World p6e Mr 30 '24 110w

"Written in a chatty manner which will be agreeable to some readers; it has the merit of not being dull. But there are others to whom the author's bubbling style will be a little wearisome."
— + Outlook 136:443 Mr 12 '24 40w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:329 Je '24
R of Rs 69:560 My '24 480w

GOSTLING, MRS FRANCES M. (PARKINSON). Lure of the Riviera. 173p il $2 McBride [5s Mills & B.]

914.4 Riviera [24-11337]

The matter of this book appeared ten years ago in "Rambles about the Riviera," for some time out of print. It contains only a part of the earlier book, the part dealing with the eastern portion of the Riviera, and has been carefully revised. It is not a consecutive record of travel but simply a book of detached fragments—passing impressions of old walled towns, feudal fortresses, ancient churches, peasants, saints.

Bookm 59:351 My '24 50w

"The book is entertaining. Meticulous architectural statistics which not infrequently lessen the reader's enjoyment of travel-books are mercifully spared us. And in their place are the color and appeal of ancient legends and tradition, and of those historical associations more romantic than 'romance.'" F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 22 '24 700w

Reviewed by S. F. Reavis
Int Bk R p530 Je '24 50w

"She has a keen eye for the picturesque, and she is especially skillful in suggesting the historic background without being pedantic or prosy about it."
+ Lit R p652 Ap 5 '24 60w

GOSTLING, F. M.—Continued
"Mrs. Gostling makes the reader see and feel the beauty and the spirit of the region; tells about the quaint things seen in out-of-the-way corners. It all makes an entertaining, colorful book, wholly unpretentious, the more interesting because its impressionistic sketches are without sequence and unrelated, so that one can open the volume anywhere and read with pleasure."
+ N Y Times p26 Mr 9 '24 400w

"Not a guide, nor a book of compelling literary charm. But a pleasant, rambling narrative, of no great importance."
+ — Outlook 136:443 Mr 12 '24 20w

GOVEIA, C. J. DE. Community playhouse. 165p il $2 Huebsch
792 Theater, Community 24-4324

"An illustrated, comprehensive manual on the organization and maintenance of a community playhouse with special reference to the needs of the small town or neighborhoods. The author states that the book was designed particularly for the novice in the art of community-playhouse, and theoretical questions have received small attention, the author preferring to make definite statements as to facts, figures and examples. Chapters on 'Lighting,' 'Color,' 'Grouping,' and 'Costume' will answer many troublesome questions, while those on 'Making of the Scenery' and 'Designing of Scenery' are both suggestive and definite. Of special importance are the chapters on 'Acting' and 'Production' with directions, warnings and advice which will go far toward oiling the cogs for the novice in this matter."—Springf'd Republican

Booklist 20:289 My '24

"The need for a practical manual, concise and free from rhapsody, has been urgent, and it has been admirably met in the well-organized volume of C. J. De Goveia." L. B.
+ Freeman 8:550 F 13 '24 120w
Int Bk R p793 O '24 150w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Lit R p609 Mr 22 '24 1050w

"After a short general survey of the possibilities latent in the community theatre, he burrows into the actual problems to be solved, organizing his information with intelligence and presenting it in a manner which makes this volume an indispensable handbook."
+ Nation 118:376 Ap 2 '24 250w
N Y World p6e My 11 '24 40w
Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 13 '24 480w

GRAETZ, LEO. Recent developments in atomic theory; tr. by Guy Barr. 174p il $3.50 Dutton [9s Methuen]
541.2 Atomic theory [23-18311]

A series of six lectures on the atomic theory the purpose of which is to make clear the steps by which the recent revolutionary views about atoms have been obtained. Contents: Molecules and atoms in chemistry, and the kinetic theory of gases; Atoms and ions and electrical effects in liquids and gases—atoms of electricity; The disintegration of atoms in radio-active substances—the nucleus theory of the atom; X-ray spectra and the nucleus theory of the atom; Line spectra and Bohr's model of the atom; Further investigations on the structure of nuclei, atoms, ions and molecules—decomposition of nuclei.

"To anyone desiring careful conclusions, arrived at step by step, and subject to revision, these well-planned lectures should be illuminating."
+ Boston Transcript p3 Jl 12 '24 200w

"It is difficult to find any compelling reason for the appearance of Prof. Graetz's book in English dress. This summary of recent atomic theory was written while the War was still in progress (in fact, part of it is based on lectures delivered in territory occupied by the Germans), and, while it has been revised by the insertion of new matter, imperfectly incorporated with the old, the last revision was nearly two years ago. In consequence, the book is seriously behind times." E. N. da C. Andrade
— Nature 112:895 D 22 '23 360w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p720 N 1 '23 900w

GRAHAM, BESSIE. Bookman's manual. 2d ed rev and enl 627p $3.50 Bowker
028 Booksellers and bookselling. Bibliography—Best books. Reference books—Bibliography 24-11563

The second edition of this valuable reference book is a thorough revision, with the addition of much new material. For descriptive note see Book Review Digest, 1921.

"Not only students of bookselling and booksellers themselves, but students and teachers of English literature and also all those ordinary people who need a reference handbook about books will find 'The Bookman's Manual 'a valuable work to keep close at hand."
+ N Y Times p28 Je 8 '24 280w

"It is a handy manual for an acquaintance with facts about books and authors, and it should be useful to many others besides booksellers. That it is not free from errors is indicated by two or three small mistakes which appear in a casual examination."
+ — Outlook 137:642 Ag 27 '24 60w

"The first edition of Miss Graham's book met with great favor from every class of book handlers. In the second edition, lists have been carefully reëdited, eight chapters are entirely new and many others have been enlarged. A very valuable feature of the book is a list of questions at the end of each classification so that the really earnest user of the book will have little excuse for not being well informed generally not only about books but their authors, character, etc., in many interesting leads. An author index closes a most excellent bibliographical tool."
+ Public Libraries 29:378 Jl '24 360w
St Louis p333 O '24
Wis Lib Bul 20:171 Jl '24

GRAHAM, MALBONE WATSON, jr., and BINKLEY, ROBERT CEDRIC. New governments of central Europe. 683p $4 Holt
342.4 Europe—Politics. Germany—Politics and government. Austria—Politics and government. Hungary—Politics and government. Czechoslovakia—Politics and government. Jugoslavia—Politics and government 24-11783

The rise of the new governments of Germany, Austria, Hungary, Czechoslovakia is here sketched, their constitutions are described in some detail and the influences traced to which the constitutional organization of each is due. The book shows also the various forces which are at work to modify and amend the constitutional machinery. The text of each constitution is given, with some other select documents, and there is a chart for each country portraying political events graphically and the fluctuations of political parties in the state.

Booklist 21:63 N '24

"A mass of information not otherwise accessible regarding the governments of Germany, Austria and the succession States is here gathered into a volume which will be welcomed by all legislators, students, writers and general readers who need light on the afterwar situation in Europe." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 14 '24 950w
Cleveland p93 D '24

"The present volume deserves to be spoken of with the greatest appreciation. It would not be fair to say that it is non-partisan. This term implies a certain lukewarmness which leaves the reader unsatisfied. Mr. Graham's volume is partisan in the best sense of the word. It approves or disapproves of political tendencies, parties, and politicians in a measure warranted by a careful and accurate appraisal of their qualities. It not only effectively records facts but it also helps one to arrive at an intelligent opinion concerning the past achievements and future possibilities of the nations under discussion." Emil Lengyel

+ Nation 119:315 S '24 900w

"One is inclined to doubt whether human nature is an element whose reactions can be plotted in a graph with scientific accuracy; whether 'history repeats itself' can be expressed as a mathematical formula. But whether or not the 'Time Charts' represent an advance in the scientific study of history, the book as a whole is a valuable contribution to the history of post-war Europe." L. P. M.
+ — Nation and Ath 35:544 Jl 26 '24 200w

"Very able summary written with scholarly thoroughness and care." W: MacDonald
+ N Y Times p1 Jl 13 '24 2100w

St Louis p417 D '24

GRAHAM, STEPHEN. In quest of El Dorado. 334p $2 Appleton

917 West Indies—Description and travel. New Mexico—Description and travel. Panama—Description and travel. Mexico—Description and travel 23-14399

For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

Bookm 59:adv Mr '24 190w

Cleveland p38 My '24

"A well-balanced and readable, if not very vigorous, book." Clennell Wilkinson
+ — Nation and Ath 35:94 Ap 19 '24 240w

"The book is full of colour and high spirits, with just enough of history to allow the reader to understand present conditions."
+ Nature 113:887 Je 21 '24 60w

"A fascinating book, in which the two strands, historical and modern, are dexterously interwoven. Aside from its twin motives, romantic enough in themselves, the book is full of the glamor of travel, for few writers possess in such a high degree Mr. Graham's gift of capturing and communicating to the reader local colour and atmosphere."
+ New Statesman 23:18 Ap 12 '24 1250w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p167 Mr 20 '24 1000w

GRAINGER, BOINE. The hussy. 300p $2 Boni & Liveright 24-5107

"A man goes all through his life seeking love here, there, and everywhere and he is called an idealist, but when a woman does it she is called a hussy." This is the theme of the book, obviously sincere and intrinsically tragic, in which a young woman, Constance Nye by name, sets out upon her quest, only to meet at every turn passion for love and disillusion for happiness. "Has life such a paucity of type," she cries, "that it must go on casting the same soul in the same mould?" Disappointed in marriage, as well as outside of it, what hope is there except in losing herself in her work as others have done before her! It is when she is face to face with this last resort, that she encounters Steve Crowell, a one-time lover and the father of her child, dead in infancy. Grown ten years older, and disciplined by his own unhappy marriage, he turns to her again in his loneliness, and in his renewed affection, she ends her quest.

"We regret that a book possessing so true an undercurrent of philosophic thinking should be marred by so many colloquialisms and words of banal association.'"
+ — Dial 77:82 Jl '24 70w

"The author projects a distinctly tough-minded heroine, intent upon living her own life and embracing the new morality whenever convenient. Treated ironically, the story might have had stronger values—but doubtless less popular ones."
Nation 118:617 My 28 '24 70w

"A brief summary can give no adequate idea of the boldness of the book's design, which includes several accurately realized backgrounds, a number of three-dimensional characters, many minor figures, and a thoughtful theme developed with sincerity. If the achievement is not commensurate with the design, one is grateful at least for many a page reflecting a deep and communicable emotion. One is grateful also for a heroine who although she is labelled modern is not chronically adolescent." Grace Frank
+ New Repub 39:53 Je 4 '24 350w

"Miss Grainger has not tried to shock. She is earnest, seeking the truth. She is not startled into hectic frenzy because youth should be inclined to flamboyant passion. She is more original and compelling through her sincerity. She has taken a product of the age and wrought a relentless portrait."
+ N Y Times p8 Mr 2 '24 700w

"Even if a road leads continuously ahead it is much more sensible to walk in approximately a straight line than to zigzag from side to side. The flaw of the book is that it is not firmly contained in an objective mold." Eva Goldbeck
— N Y Tribune p20 Mr 2 '24 800w

Springf'd Republican p7a Je 1 '24 130w

GRANDGENT, CHARLES HALL. Discourses on Dante. 200p $2.25 Harvard univ. press [10s 6d Milford]

851 Dante Alighieri 24-7627

"The eight essays range over a wide variety of topics, from an inspiring statement of Dante's meaning for the twentieth century, to a study of his prosody. The author calls the book a rather belated tribute, for it is a revision of addresses that cluster about the sex-centenary of 1921."—Boston Transcript

"The leading American exponent of Dante presents a closely reasoned analysis of the poet's teachings and a sympathetic penetration into the motives that prompted them."
+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 7 '24 380w

"Like all the writings of this foremost exponent of Dante, this volume is characterized by clear thought, deep scholarship, and genuine enthusiasm." J. T. S.
+ Cath World 119:426 Je '24 360w

"To all readers who are interested in Dante this book will be of permanent value, since Professor Grandgent, as is his wont, expresses in attractive literary form the results of his culture and scholarship, which are both broad and deep." Kenneth McKenzie
+ Lit R p901 Jl 19 '24 280w

"A stimulating analysis of the poet's art."
+ N Y Times p13 My 18 '24 1200w

"A book thoroughly reliable, as the public may rightly expect from so eminent a scholar as Prof Grandgent, it is especially happy in its arresting presentation."
+ Springf'd Republican p12 Je 27 '24 340w

GRANT, ALLAN, pseud. See Smith, A. D. H.

GRANT, DOUGLAS, pseud. See Ostrander, I. E.

GRAVES, CLOTILDE INEZ MARY (RICHARD DEHAN, pseud.). Pipers of the market place. 350p $2 Doran 24-17904

Malvina Braby, broad of shoulders and with the disposition of a saint, finds life for herself and her small son, Stephen, a constant struggle with poverty and the abuse of a besotted husband. Wilfrid Braby, after an absence of several years, returns to his wife a dissipated hulk of a man who employs his time beating his wife and teaching his son to steal. Malvina, mindful of her marriage vows endures this vicious treatment until by a curious turn of affairs a long lost will is found and her husband becomes the owner of the beautiful Brabycott estate. But Malvina stoutly refuses to share his inheritance and she and Stephen and the baby who had recently arrived continue their struggle for existence in their humble thatch-roofed cottage.

GRAVES, C. I. M.—Continued

"The thing is totally without reason, and totally without necessity. Since the novel is by Richard Dehan we are assured of exquisite English and a flawless technique, but honor compels us to add that anything else we felt assured of this time failed us." I. W. L.

— + Boston Transcript p4 Jl 26 '24 550w

Int Bk R p903 N '24 220w

Lit R p906 Jl 19 '24 240w

"Half obliterated trademarks of Dickens, George Borrow, and Hardy are legible here and there. The resulting structure stands up to be looked at but does not move. This is no great misfortune, however, because the author clearly has nowhere to go." R. M. Lovett

— + New Repub 39:307 Ag 6 '24 80w

"The unhappy ending is as much a blunder in art as it would have been a blunder in life, and spoils all that has gone before."

— New Statesman 23:330 Je 21 '24 250w

N Y Times p18 Jl 6 '24 350w

"So far as there is any tale it is freely borrowed from 'Bleak House.'" Isabel Paterson

— N Y Tribune p23 Je 29 '24 800w

"Outside the matter of a foolish vow criminally kept, 'The Pipers of the Market Place' is a story broad in its West Midland dialect and rich in its drawings of character." E. W. Osborn

+ — N Y World p2e Je 29 '24 500w

"An admirable guide for a young novelist; it illustrates everything he should avoid—sentimentalism, pathos, melodrama, gushing verbosity."

— Outlook 138:26 S 3 '24 30w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p306 My 15 '24 140w

GRAY, ALEXANDER. Principles and practice
2 of electrical engineering; rev. by R. F. Chamberlain. 3d ed 448p il $4 McGraw

621.3 Electric engineering 24-21084

"Based on lecture and laboratory course for senior civil, mechanical, and mining students. Brief course, with considerable attention to applications."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:515 N '24

GRAY, EDWARD DUNDAS MCQUEEN. Old Testament criticism. 252p $2.50 Harper

221.1 Bible. Old Testament—Criticism, interpretation, etc. 23-16983

An historical sketch of Old Testament criticism from the second century to the end of the eighteenth. It shows that the researches of nineteenth century scholars do not stand alone, and that the so-called higher criticism is but the modern expression, more definite and comprehensive, of a similar attitude which made its first appearance in the early centuries of the Christian era. Bibliography. Index.

"This is a very valuable work, the only example of its kind in English" F. W. C.

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 9 '24 580w

Lit R p679 Ap 12 '24 200w

"The book partakes of the nature of notes fortified by much research, and, while the scholarly aim is undoubted, and the value of the study apparent, a more consecutive and more literary treatment is demanded."

+ — Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 22 '24 120w

GRAY, JOSLYN. Black-eyed Susan. 221p il $1.60 Scribner

24-10846

"A most unusual story. Sue left her serene New England home, where she was thoroughly spoilt and waited upon, to visit an aunt she had never seen before in Dakota. Had she ever seen her, it is very much to be doubted if she would have dared to take the trip; but that would have prevented us from having this book. She was a most extraordinary character, this aunt, and so were the orphans, Myrtle and Merton. She had her difficulties, which were at times not only very difficult, but extremely puzzling."—Int Bk R

"A charming although mildly melodramatic tale of the West."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Je 11 '24 280w

Reviewed by M. G. Bonner

Int Bk R p616 Jl '24 70w

GRAY, ROLAND PALMER, ed. Songs and ballads of the Maine lumberjacks. 191p $2.50 Harvard univ. press

811.08 American poetry—Collections. Folk-songs, American 24-11155

"The ballads of Professor Gray's collection fall into two principal groups: ballads that are 'popular' in the technical meaning of that word as applied in this field of literature, and 'broadsides.' 'Broadsides' are ballads on topical subjects, composed by a 'poet' or 'balladist' who has them printed and hawks them upon the street. The sources of the several ballads on historical subjects, which range from Colonial days to the recent past, are indicated by the editor. In some cases the authorship is known; in others an initial appearance in newspaper or periodical has to suffice."—N Y Times

Booklist 21:15 O '24

"Mr. Gray has performed a valuable service in gathering these samples of the logger's muse, now fast disappearing from memory, its one shrine, heretofore. They are too good, too vital, and have too long answered the musical needs of a stalwart and large hearted race to be lost in the backwaters of time." S. L. R.

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 24 '24 600w

"It is clear that the reader seeking literary perfection, or even anything near it, will not find it in the rude lines which fill Professor Gray's book. But those of catholic mind will find that the compilation amply repays for the time required to run through the pages; and the volume is an addition to Americana that no collector will wish to be without."

+ N Y Times p14 Je 15 '24 1100w

"Readers who wish for a few hours to call back the life of the past will find the means in this collection, and anyone with a taste not narrowed by excessive sophistication will respond to some of these ballads as he does to those in Child and Percy. In brief, the collection can safely be recommended to any reader who has a taste for the unusual, naive, and spontaneous."

+ Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 27 '24 1100w

GREEN, FITZHUGH. Z R wins. 271p $1.75 (6s) Appleton

24-16567

Lieutenant Bliss Eppley wishes to prove his theory that in the vast unexplored area in the Polar sea lies a continent inhabited perhaps by the descendants of the lost Norwegian colony which had settled in Greenland centuries before. He plans to find this land in the Z R-5, the newest and biggest dirigible built, which is entered in an international race to the North Pole. But certain misunderstandings in the Navy Department serve to discredit him, so he starts out on his own. His main difficulty is one Welchor, who plans to win the race and the land and sell out to an Oriental power, and who is likewise his rival in love. Amid great dangers and thrilling escapes, Eppley reaches the land first and finds it inhabited by a colony of happy, war-hating people with scientific knowledge far beyond that of the southern countries. After many serious complications due to Welchor's unscrupulous deeds, the hero finally vindicates himself, wins his girl, and claims the new land for the United States.

"A story as enthralling of its kind as any we remember." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 2 '24 700w

Cleveland p67 S '24

N Y Times p18 Jl 20 '24 420w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p526 Ag 28 '24 90w

GREEN, GEORGE HERBERT. Mind in action; a study of human interests. 223p $2 Putnam [3s 6d Univ. of London press]

150 Psychology 24-13282

The author of "Psychanalysis in the classroom" gives here a compact study of the mind in clear, concise, everyday speech. He states in the preface: "I have written it to convey to men and women such as one meets everyday the outlines of modern views of the human mind." Contents: Two kinds of advertising; Human instincts; Some important instincts; From instinct to action; Development; The place of reason; Suggestion; Autosuggestion; Daydreaming; The outcropping of interest; Bias; Dreams; Memory; Forgetting; Repression; Personality; Fears; Symbols; Identification; More about identification; Projection; Epilogue; Index.

"Those readers who desire an introduction to the modern developments in this study, and to their practical applications, told in the speech of everyday life, will find it amply suited to their needs." S. L. R.

+ Boston Transcript p1 My 24 '24 380w

"The present author, happily, finds no difficulty in explaining what is known about the mind's action in language that exerybody can understand. . . The author's explanations are not such as to bring puzzled frowns to the brows of the reader." Van Buren Thorne

+ N Y Times p18 Je 8 '24 2000w

"The simplicity of his language and theories should make for illumination in circles where the study of the psyche has been neglected."

+ N Y Tribune p28 Je 8 '24 90w

GREEN, HORACE. Life of Calvin Coolidge. 263p il $2.50 Duffield

B or 92 Coolidge, Calvin 24-17973

An admiring and, as far as the subject permits, intimate biography of the President, by a newspaper correspondent. It supplies his family backgrounds and surroundings and sketches his political career, step by step, from local officeholding in Northampton through his administration in Washington to the point of nomination for the presidency.

Booklist 21:65 N '24

Bookm 60:231 O '24 180w

"As lives of living statesman go this is a very good example."

+ Lit R p14 S 27 '24 180w

New Statesman 24:28 O 11 '24 280w

"It is a full and balanced account of Mr. Coolidge's life, frank from the author's viewpoint, without eulogy and without partisan bias." A. S. Will

+ N Y Times p1 Jl 27 '24 1700w

"Mr. Green seems to find it necessary to argue his subject's case instead of clearly telling his life story, or letting it tell itself. The result gives a tone of strain to the volume that is not pleasing. The book abounds in interesting illustrations."

— + N Y World p8e Ag 3 '24 100w

"The author is witty, critical, and not overlaudatory."

Outlook 137:578 Ag 13 '24 40w

R of Rs 69:670 Je '24 200w

St Louis p386 N '24

Reviewed by Briton Hadden

Sat R of Lit 1:182 O 11 '24 600w

GREENAN, JOHN T., and MEREDITH, ALBERT BARRETT. Everyday problems of American democracy. 506p $1.60 Houghton

307 Social sciences—Study and teaching 24-4468

A new kind of textbook which introduces the case method of instruction into the teaching of problems of American democracy. It is based, not on traditional theories of the social sciences, but on concrete political, social and economic problems of immediate interest and importance—such questions as immigration, the initiative and referendum, limitation of armaments, the League of nations, prohibition and government ownership. The arguments on both sides of each question are presented as fairly as possible and a list of reference readings and of review and research questions is given under each topic.

Am Pol Sci R 18:652 Ag '24 70w

Boston Transcript p4 My 17 '24 200w

"A book that stirs the blood like a plunge into a clear, mountain lake. It's a quick book. It leads without halting from one live topic to another with force and simplicity that are admirable. It is the boldest textbook I have seen in many a day."

+ Educ R 68:220 N '24 1050w

St Louis p338 O '24

GREENE, ANNE (BOSWORTH) (MRS HAR-
[2] RIE WILLIAM GREENE). Greylight. 222p il $1.75 Century

24-20509

The story of Greylight, a white Shetland pony, and Babs, the little girl who owned him, and the little girl's very understanding mother.

"It reflects a commonsense and wholesome attitude toward animals that is born of affection and knowledge."

Booklist 21:72 N '24

"There is one criticism which may be made of the book—the conversations between the pony and the horse. If they had to talk, why did it have to be such slovenly English. It has too much the flavor of writing down to the children. However, judged by a former pony owner, it is a really true story. Ponies do do the things that Greylight did, in just the way he did them. They are the nicest pets in the world, and since all boys and girls can't have them, we feel that this little book is a contribution to the library shelf."

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:157 S 27 '24 200w

Springf'd Republican p7a O 5 '24 320w

GREENE, JAMES HENRY. Principles and
[2] methods of retailing. 287p il $2.50 McGraw

658.87 Retail trade 24-22556

"An outgrowth of a series of lectures and group discussions given in the Evening School of Business Administration and the Retail Bureau of the University of Pittsburgh."—Preface

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:602 D '24

GREENE, L. PATRICK. The Major—diamond
[2] buyer. 277p $2 Doubleday

South Africa, the diamond country, is the setting of this tale of adventure. Aubrey St John Major, an engaging English dandy, is the thorn in the flesh of a notorious band of diamond smugglers who, by means of a frame-up, send the Major to prison for two years. Upon the expiration of his sentence he and his devoted servant Jim resolve to wring restitution from the diamond syndicate for every hour he spent in prison, and the following days are filled with hazard in which the Major's cunning is always more than a match for that of his enemies.

" 'Gripping' such a novel is usually called, and we, for one, would not be unusual."

Boston Transcript p8 N 26 '24 80w

"Here is a 'thriller' in the fullest meaning of the term." H. A. J.

Lit R p10 D 20 '24 80w

N Y World p8e D 7 '24 90w

GREENWALL, HARRY J. Scoops. 288p $3 Stokes [10s 6d S. Paul]

940.48 European war, 1914-1919—Personal narratives [23-13075]

The author is an English newspaper man who has served as foreign and war correspondent on various papers. For many years he made Paris his headquarters and he was there when the war broke out. He tells of his own experiences during the war and his meetings with celebrities, of conditions in France and in Germany today, of the collapse of the Austrian empire and of news gathering in the Balkans.

"Here and there we wonder if his touch is not too rapid. For instance, in a chapter on famous trials, we find in less than eight pages nine proceedings referred to, while in the chapter on royalties he has interviewed his pictures are equally fragmentary. However, there are many chapters which are intensely interesting."

+ — Boston Transcript p3 F 9 '24 260w

Cleveland p62 Jl '24

"Some of Mr. Greenwall's anecdotes are rather pointless, but there are others that are well worth repeating."

+ — N Y Times p14 F 3 '24 780w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p491 Jl 19 '23 280w

GREER, HOWARD C. Chain store accounting.
2 312p il $3 McGraw

657 Retail trade. Accounting 24-21285

"Discusses the functions and requirements of an accounting system for a chain of retail stores. Only a portion of the book is interesting to accountants alone, a large part of the material being general in its nature."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:603 D '24

GREGORY, J. C. Nature of laughter. (Interna-
2 tional lib. of psychology, philosophy and scientific method) 241p $3.75 Harcourt [10s 6d K. Paul]

157 Laughter 24-6031

"Explains and compares the different varieties of laughter, and asserts that their common basic element is diversion—'a pleasant expenditure, upon the body, of energy released from other activities.' "—St Louis

"Those readers who are interested in any study of human emotions and in the psychology of men, will find Mr. Gregory's book both informative and stimulative." S. L. R.

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 15 '24 600w

"Mr. Gregory's plain historical method has resulted in an interesting and at least partially successful account of laughter." Katherine Gilbert

+ — J Philos 21:715 D 18 '24 1650w

"Mr. Gregory is quite safe from the dangers which attend the doctrinaire theorist. He admits authority, or at least suggestion, in over 300 quotations from the most varied authors. The chapters on 'Laughter and Society' and 'Laughter and Aesthetics' are particularly rich in valuable suggestions and the noting of discrepancies in certain narrow observations which have been given too wide an application."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p188 Mr 27 '24 1200w

GREGORY, JOHN WALTER, and GREGORY, C. J. To the Alps of Chinese Tibet. 321p il $6 Lippincott [25s Seeley, Service]

915.15 Tibet—Description and travel [24-4058]

"This book records a four months' trip of two Scottish scientists who traveled mostly afoot for 1,500 miles through Burma and Yunnan in search of geological, zoölogical, and botanical data. They were especially interested in studying the relation of the mountains in these countries to the main chain of the Himalayas. Much of their journey was over routes where an escort was necessary to prevent their being robbed by brigands, and through villages where the natives were unfamiliar with Europeans. The greater part of their account relates to the people and their curious customs."—Outlook

Reviewed by C: de Kay

Int Bk R p525 Je '24 480w

"A very readable book of travel."

+ Nature 113:6 Ja 5 '24 1000w

"These geologists were ever observant of man. Their vivid pictures of the Chinese and their ancient agricultural economy are valuable." W. G. Tinckom-Fernandez

+ N Y Times p13 Ap 27 '24 500w

"An interesting if unsensational account this of a journey of geological exploration to the snowclad mountains of the Tibetan frontier."

+ N Y Tribune p28 My 11 '24 150w

Outlook 136:570 Ap 2 '24 400w

"The authors write not only with geological knowledge, but with clearness and a minimum of technicality. We ordinary folk are thus enabled to enjoy this account of Eastern travel, which though on somewhat familiar lines, is supplemented by new geological date as well as by shrewd observations on China and the races that dwell in its southwesternmost province."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p739 N 8 '23 800w

GREGORY, SIR RICHARD ARMAN. Vault of heaven; an introduction to modern astronomy. 202p il $2.50 Dutton [6s Methuen]

520 Astronomy

The emeritus professor of astronomy, Queens college, London, writes easily and in non-technical language, about our heavenly neighbors, both of the solar system and of the stellar universe at large. New discoveries, new theories, new inventions that have led up to them, how to identify the principal heavenly bodies, their movements and peculiarities, without a telescope—the whole romance of astronomy, is so told as to combine information about the wonders of the sky with a stimulus to further and more detailed study.

Boston Transcript p3 F 9 '24 190w

"The work makes an excellent handbook for a beginner or for one who wants merely a general, elementary knowledge of the wonders of the heavens."

+ N Y Times p22 Ja 20 '24 440w

GRENFELL, WILFRED THOMASON. Yourself
2 and your body. 324p il $2.50 Scribner

612 Physiology 24-23666

A book for children which explains in narrative form how important it is to take care of the body, and how its different parts function. There are interesting illustrations made by the author which will appeal to the imaginative child.

"Dr. Grenfell was able to make drawings of unusual quality to illustrate what he tells the boys is 'far the most wonderful story in the world,' and a truly remarkable story he makes of it. The book takes a unique place in the field of writing for children and will be read with interest by boys and girls as well as by their parents and teachers."

+ N Y Tribune p13 Ja 11 '25 170w

"Children under fourteen and older children who have ceased to take themselves too seriously, will find it delightful and instructive. Most readers of The Survey could read it with enjoyment and profit."

+ Survey 53:244 N 15 '24 170w

GREW, DAVID. Two coyotes. 289p $2 Seltzer [7s 6d F. Unwin]

24-7806

One of the two coyotes of the story is Bailey Bellard, nicknamed 'The Coyote'' because of his utter indifference to the usual mode of living, and his aloofness from his own kind. The other is a little coyote pup, caught in Bailey's traps and tamed by him. At first the pup looks upon Bailey as just another of those creatures stronger than he who have so preyed upon him in his young days. Gradually a strange friendship develops between man and beast, each being served by the other at critically dangerous moments. It is the coming of Grace Withers that upsets Bailey's philosophy and contentment and urges him to be like others. But when he learns of her return to the East, his emotional storm passes and he realizes the unalterable difference between them. Once more he resumes his old life, with the pup for sympathy and companionship.

"It is a good story of nature in the rough and human nature 'with the bark on.'"
+ Boston Transcript p4 My 21 '24 260w

"The most commendable thing about the book is that it does not insult your intelligence by trying to force on you the usual sentimental rot associated with books of this class. It is not an unusually good book." F. A.
— + Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p7 Je 29 '24 620w

"Doubtless Mr. Grew reports the animal's action plausibly enough, but the method of endowing any animal with an entirely human psychology is never very satisfying. Mr. Grew perhaps does it as well as it can be done, but the false note always jars."
— + Lit R p811 Je 7 '24 220w

"Here we have novelty—a story of the wild West without one spurt of fire, one reeling body or even the staccato echo of revolver shots off stage. Those interested in fiction which holds the mirror up to nature will find much in it that will please them. Mr. Grew has succeeded in making a thoroughly readable book."
+ N Y Times p19 My 4 '24 1100w

"A truly strange and interesting Western tale that is out of the ruck of the usual heroic and unreal adventures of cowboys and he-men." J. A.
+ N Y Tribune p23 Jl 13 '24 120w

"The romance is one which will bring welcome and novel refreshment to the readers of American fiction."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p373 Je 12 '24 310w

Wis Lib Bul 20:148 Je '24

GREW, MARION E. William Bentinck and William III. 433p il $5 Appleton [21s Murray]

B or 92 William III, king of England. Portland, William Bentinck, 1st earl of William Bentinck entered the household of the Prince of Orange when he was about twelve years old and between him and the king there existed a special and enduring friendship. He served the king chiefly in a diplomatic capacity and whenever important and delicate negotiations were to be carried on William III entrusted them to Bentinck. Much of the book is a description of these various confidential missions.

"Mrs. Grew has produced a keen and finely visioned study of the times and the relations which existed between the first British monarch of the house of Orange and this man, whose relation to his times might be illuminated to many of this day and generation were we to refer to him as the Colonel House of the reign of William the Third." S. L. Cook
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 7 '24 1250w

Reviewed by Godfrey Davies
Eng Hist R 39:439 Jl '24 1400w

"In her narrative, Mrs. Grew has fallen, to some extent, between the two stools of biography and history, and she might wisely have assumed a little more knowledge in her readers. We are none the less grateful for the new material she has unearthed." C. E. Fayle
— + Nation and Ath 34:930 Mr 29 '24 500w

New Statesman 22:766 Ap 5 '24 600w

"Mrs. Grew has chosen a most interesting subject and has handled it with great skill."
+ Sat R 137:185 F 23 '24 800w

"If Mrs. Grew has not always risen to the height of her argument, she has produced a very interesting book, full of research and information. There are some excellent photographs, but no bibliographical index, which in a book of this kind is a serious omission." Philip Morrell
+ — Spec 131:1046 Je 28 '24 800w

"The author's style is easy and her condensation of diffuse subject matter capable. With unerring taste she selects from the correspondence the phrases which bring the characters vividly before us. The writer avoids scandal and gossip so far as it is possible; when it cannot be omitted she gives us a fair account of the different sides."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Jl 6 '24 950w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p103 F 21 '24 2100w

GREY, ZANE. Call of the canyon. 291p il $2 Harper
24-867

"In reality Zane Grey's West is a hard land. Carley Burch finds it so when she leaves her easy life here to go to Arizona and look for Glenn. Poor Glenn, ill from the war, has found health there, both physical and spiritual, and wants to stay; and he believes it too hard a place for a society girl like Carley. His letter asking Carley if she wished to be released from the engagement starts the story, and we read for 290 pages hereafter how the West tries the Eastern girl's courage and drives her back to the Plaza, and how at last the call of the canyon is too strong for her to resist."—N Y Times

Booklist 20:300 My '24

Reviewed by I. W. Lawrence
Boston Transcript p5 Ja 19 '24 1450w

Cleveland p43 Je '24

"He kneads his material just a little too thoroughly in order to make it palatable for his Eastern guests. His characters are almost all a trifle too self-conscious, too aware of the fact that they are going to make up the spicy ingredients of a book, that they are to add the taste to the feast of the whole massive scenery. True enough, the bulk is of the 'Gold Medal' brand—but it is a brand. It was not ground at an individual mill, but rather is of the wholesale type that will please the known need of the conventional many." Carl Magg
+ — Lit R p555 Mr 1 '24 600w

"Perhaps Carley's 'butterfly' life in Manhattan is too dark a spot in the picture. But the reader does not worry about those slight defects when once Zane Grey's nature descriptions have gripped him. Here scenery does more than fill space. Potent in its influence upon the people of the story, it is a character in itself: the leading character, indeed. The wild, lonely, fearfully beautiful Arizona desert has never been better done." L. H. Robbins
+ — N Y Times p2 Ja 27 '24 1100w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Tribune p24 F 3 '24 1300w

"The story will please Mr Grey's following for it is rather better than some of his recent books. The descriptions are vividly colored, but the romance is only mildly interesting."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 16 '24 420w

"Mr. Grey writes with greater psychological insight than is to be found in the majority of such stories."
The Times [London] Lit Sup p81 F 7 '24 230w

Wis Lib Bul 20:46 F '24

GREY, ZANE. Roping lions in the Grand Canyon. 191p il $1.75 Harper

799 Lions
24-8455

This is a true story of Zane Grey's experiences in the gentle art of roping lions—an art which is far more dangerous than hunting

GREY, ZANE—Continued
them with guns. Accompanied by four western rangers, a Navajo Indian and a pack of superior dogs they descended into the canyon. After a series of incredible adventures, they succeeded in capturing six lions, and what is even more difficult, getting them into camp.

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 26 '24 200w

"All admirers of the outdoors will welcome Mr. Grey's new work."
+ N Y Tribune p28 Je 8 '24 130w
St Louis p348 O '24

GREY, ZANE. Tales of southern rivers. 249p il $4 Harper
799 Fishing. Hunting. Everglades, Florida. Santa Rosa river 24-25336

There are three tales in the book. Two of these describe fishing experiences in the Gulf Stream and in the rivers of the Everglades. The third and longest and most thrilling is an account of Mr Grey's adventures in exploring the unknown Santa Rosa river in the Mexican jungle. The jungle is full of game, the stream, of rapids. The author and his companion embarked on the trip without any knowledge of the river. They encountered cataracts and rapids, jungle animals and insects, alligators and snakes. The illustrations are from photographs.

Booklist 21:100 D '24
Ind 113:409 N 13 '24 30w
Ind 113:521 D 13 '24 200w

"Grey is noted for his descriptive powers. All his books carry this quality. But in this new book, he excels in this faculty, and his knowledge of the equatorial wilderness and waters is spread before his reader in a way that is a treat for the lovers of outdoor life. The book is profusely illustrated with unusually vivid pictures."
+ Springf'd Republican p5a N 23 '24 780w

GREY, ZANE. Thundering herd. 400p il $2 [2] Harper
25-883

Zane Grey's latest novel depicts the days when the buffalo ranged the Texas plains and the Comanche was the white man's subtlest enemy. Thundering herds of buffalo, the scourge of prairie fires and the echoes of Indian battles are the backgrounds against which the romance of Tom Doane and Milly Fayre is dramatically worked out. Tom, a sturdy and courageous Kansas lad joins the Hudnall hide-hunting outfit. He falls in love with Milly whose cruel stepfather Jett also conducts an outfit which is looked upon with distrust by honest frontiersmen. The two groups of hunters take separate trails, but before Milly and Tom meet again they have harrowing experiences with Indians and prairie fires. The story reaches a climax with the vivid portrayal of Milly's perilous ride alone thru a stampeding herd of buffalo.

"The best thing in the book is not the exciting story, though that is exceedingly good, but the vivid pictures which Zane Grey draws of the great herd and its thundering passage over the plain. There is the biggest thrill of the book to be found in the wonderful description of the great stampede." D. L. Mann
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 17 '25 1500w

"Mr. Grey's presentation of these frontier hunters is realistic and probably truthful. The story is spirited, full of action and exceedingly graphic and colorful in its picturing of scenes and conditions. It has, also, no little historical value, as the author has evidently taken pains to make accurate his account of the last years of the vast buffalo herds and some, at least, of the reasons for their disappearance."
+ N Y Times p8 Ja 11 '25 450w

"'The Thundering Herd' is a close family connection of the dime novel of grandfather's school days; a book better written than the old thrillers of the yellow back; a volume bound in substantial boards but lacking nothing at all of the old lurid quality. . . At this distance from the days and the circumstances of its action 'The Thundering Herd' has something of an historical significance. . . Mr. Grey has drawn freely on available resources to make his story authentic in its essentials." E. W. Osborn
— + N Y World p8m Ja 4 '25 500w

GRIERSON, RONALD. Electric elevator equip- [2] ment for modern buildings; a practical guide to its selection, installation, operation and maintenance. 179p il $5 Van Nostrand
621.87 Elevators, Electric 24-15288

"Based on a series of articles which appeared originally in the 'Builder.' Deals with passenger and freight elevators, dumb-waiters, and escalators—only briefly, however, with the last two."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:600 D '24

GRIFFIN, CLARE ELMER. Principles of for- [2] eign trade. 348p $3 Macmillan
382 Foreign trade 24-11585

"Dr. Griffin's treatment of his subject is comprehensive. He weighs the advantages of international trade against the disadvantages and deals especially with the comparative superiority enjoyed by the United States. The factors which determine the volume of a country's foreign trade, the fixing of the rate of exchange, the nature of American exports and imports, the channels of trade, the risk element, Government interference in trade, financing foreign trade, are a few of the themes on which Dr. Griffin discourses with keen understanding."—N Y Times

"Its general aim does not differ essentially from several previous books in the field, though in general it is more successful in selection of material and arrangement. However, the attempt to cover in a small volume, the broad field of international trade from both theoretical and descriptive points of view, cannot be more than superficial." H. R. Tosdal
Am Econ R 14:741 D '24 250w

"Dr. Griffin's work, for simplicity, sincerity and impartiality may be accepted as a guide. The theories evolved by Dr. Griffin are based on sound substrata and, alongside a plethora of facts and figures, form a compendium from which international trade conditions may easily be understood."
+ N Y Times p11 Ag 31 '24 480w
R of Rs 70:110 Jl '24
St Louis p374 N '24

GRIFFITH, WILLIAM. Loves and losses of [2] Pierrot. 75p $2 Dutton
811

Delicate little poems about Pierrot and his friends, Pierrette, Columbine and Yvonne. "By way of confession," writes Mr Griffith in a word of introduction, "this Pierrot is nothing but a Poet, and this Pierrette is nothing but Beauty."

"This book is a splendid reason for supposing that William Griffith died 200 years before he was born. Poetry like this just isn't done today! how can it be? Sheer beauty, as evanescent as the suave kaleidoscope on the king of all soap-bubbles. . . William Griffith, we thank you for this clear beauty; in an hour thirsty-ripe for its rare high tonic." Clement Wood
+ Lit R p5 Ja 3 '25 650w

Reviewed by Arthur Guiterman
Outlook 138:730 D 31 '24 70w

"The great virtue of Mr. Griffith's poetry is a sort of delicate and sustained charm, a butterfly-wing-like softness of touch that is unerring in its almost impalpable emphasis. Of course, his Pierrots and Pierrettes, his Columbines and Yvonnes are obvious symbols, dancing and wistful emanations of the eternally fading beauty of the world and the brevity of of life, and yet he manages to imbue these passionately fond fantasticks with a poignancy that is unmistakable."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:331 N 29 '24 170w

GRIFFITTS, CHARLES HURLBUT. Fundamentals of vocational psychology. 372p il $2.50 Macmillan

150 Psychology, Physiological 24-11340

"An attempt to state in textbook form and without bias such principles of vocational psychology as are needed for employment management and vocational counselling. The book discusses variability and correlation, the older conceptions of physiognomy, methods of interviewing and rating and the development and present value of tests for ability in special occupations and for such qualities as strength, endurance, motor control, dexterity, speed, sensory and perceptual capacity, imagery, imagination, and general intelligence. It includes a chapter on instincts and character and one of practical suggestions for vocational counsellors."—J Home Econ

Booklist 21:92 D '24

"At a time of appeal to psychology as a solvent for all manner of individual, social and industrial problems Professor Griffitts keeps well away from the danger line and is thus enabled to do a real service for those who resort to the science of mind in the interest of vocational activities. Well versed in the tests that have come into use, he stresses the importance of care and accuracy in their application, as well as the dangers sure to result from neglect of these precautions."

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 8 '24 350w

"Too technical for the casual reader but not beyond the use of those familiar with general discussions of the subject and seriously interested in its present status."

J Home Econ 16:659 N '24 180w

Management and Adm 8:98 Jl '24 200w

GRIGG, SIR EDWARD WILLIAM MACLEAY. Greatest experiment in history. 216p $2.50 Yale univ. press [11s 6d Milford]

321.03 Great Britain—Imperial federation. Imperialism 24-20066

Six lectures delivered before the Institute of Politics at Williamstown in August, 1923. They all deal with the British Empire and British policy in the world. It is the founding of the present Empire which the author calls the "greatest experiment in history," and to this subject he devotes his first address. The other subjects with which he deals are the policy of Great Britain toward the Near East problem, British imperialism in Egypt, the treaty of Versailles, the British record in India, and a comparison of British and American imperialism.

Boston Transcript p1 S 6 '24 400w

"Here we have one more of the pleasant little volumes which we owe to the Williamstown Institute. [The author's] chief points of criticism are the restoration of Turkish government over Constantinople and Adrianople and the settlement of the Straits question. The whole discussion of the matter is, however, very inadequate. In dealing with the other subjects the author is on firmer ground."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p546 S 11 '24 600w

[2] GRIMES, JOHN. House ghosts; introd. by Vincent Starrett. 75p il $2 R. O. Ballou, 6148 Ellis av., Chicago

811

"Here, coming from a town of the name of Rockford and from the hand of a man named Grimes, is poetry. And, if the introduction informs truly, it is poetry via the newspaper column!"—Boston Transcript

"It is a good little gift volume, but a better keep-for-yourself volume." D. R.

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 15 '24 580w

"A sensitive assertiveness, precise vision, and philosophic hardihood characterize these poems, the which while not evincing a superlatively trained mind nor faultless craftsmanship, are indubitably the product of high intelligence and literary gift."

+ Dial 77:524 D '24 90w

"We welcome this little book of verse, because John Grimes brings into the field of latter-day poetry a fresh note. He follows the conservative form, but colors it with his own individualized personality. His lines are rich in special and vivid turns of thought, his images as clearly and cleanly expressed as they were undoubtedly clearly and cleanly felt. It is a quotable book of verse."

+ Lit R p987 Ag 23 '24 120w

"Of authentic colyumnists who are deft versifiers there is no recent dearth; 'Don Juan' Grimes is, in the main, a disciple of the initial men, B. L. T. and F. P. A. Yet at times, perhaps by virtue of his more rustic seat of action, he weaves a whimsy out of moonbeams playing upon engines or trolley cars, or over open spaces."

— + Sat R of Lit 1:188 O 11 '24 280w

GRIMSHAW, BEATRICE ETHEL. Sands of Oro. 288p $2 Doubleday

24-1646

An adventure tale of a pattern conventionalized almost to a formula. For its background a remote island off the coast of New Guinea, romantic and sinister. For the high lights, hidden treasure, a giant octopus, bloodthirsty natives, a hero for whom the most incredible tasks and hazards are all in the day's work, a heroine, whose marriage of convenience is conveniently dissolved, and other adventurers of various sorts to fit the requirements of the plot.

Booklist 20:264 Ap '24

"Miss Grimshaw writes with a certain power which sweeps us along. The story is one which you find hard to put down, but not on account of your anxiety about the heroine. She, smug little piece, would inevitably come out all right." I. W. L.

— + Boston Transcript p2 F 2 '24 700w

"It is an entertaining tale, well written, and with a comparatively novel setting, a tale which lovers of adventure stories will find well worth their attention."

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 13 '24 660w

"I think, on the whole, that what makes the concoction so palatable is Miss Grimshaw's admirable scenic effects. She does get into her pages that salt savor of the sea and the dazzling blue of the tropic sky, and the heavy fragrance of exotic flowers. Her Papua is real, even if her Papuans are papier-mache. Anyhow, I foresee clearly that I shall read her next novel exactly as I have read all the others, without a struggle." Isabel Paterson

+ — N Y Tribune p21 Ja 13 '24 1000w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p10m Ja 6 '24 300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p502 Ag 14 '24 100w

GRIZZELL, EMIT DUNCAN. Origin and development of the high school in New England before 1865. 428p il $2.50 Macmillan

379.17 High schools. Education—New England 23-17283

"This volume gives an account of the spread of the high school system into all the New England States and has a brief record of the beginnings of all the individual high schools first established in this section. A description of early methods of instruction and discipline and some of the old curricula may be found here also."—Boston Transcript

Boston Transcript p3 Ja 26 '24 350w

GRIZZELL, E. D.—Continued
"Professor Grizzell has made an unusually valuable contribution to the few available works on which an ultimately satisfactory history of American education may be based." C: Carroll
+ Educ R 67:291 My '24 380w

"Because of the nature of the work, the volume is necessarily tedious reading in places. By personally examining and interpreting the source materials of a period concerning which adequate information has been lacking, the author has made a useful contribution to the history of education." C. V. Good
+ — School R 32:231 Mr '24 800w

GROESBECK, HARRY A., jr. Process and practice of photo-engraving. 260p il $7.50 Doubleday
655.35 Photo-engraving 24-6482

"Definite, practical instruction in details of processes."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:317 Je '24

GROVES, ERNEST RUTHERFORD. Personality and social adjustment. 296p $1.40 Longmans
150 Psychology. Social psychology

Intended especially for those who have to do with children this textbook brings to parents and teachers information of value regarding social conduct, the adjustment of life to environment and the socializing of the instincts and natural impulses. Each chapter is followed by topics for discussion and supplementary readings.

"The author is not so committed either to the postulates or to the terminology of psychoanalysis as to prevent many helpful suggestions growing out of the reading." C. L. Stone
+ Am Econ R 14:367 Je '24 50w

"This is an interesting addition to the rapidly growing collection of books attempting to decentralize psychology, to the end that its materials may help the teacher and (in this book especially) the parents to understand human conduct and profitably to follow the light in their guidance of children." L. A. Pechstein
+ Educ R 67:115 F '24 500w
Survey 51:708 Mr 15 '24 220w
Wis Lib Bul 20:22 Ja '24

GROVES, ERNEST RUTHERFORD, and
2 GROVES, GLADYS HOAGLAND. Wholesome childhood. 183p $1.75 Houghton
173 Children—Management and training. Children—Care and hygiene 24-23187

A practical discussion for parents of child training, from infancy to the period of adolescence. The book stresses the significance of the influence of the home during the early period of childhood, and the importance of the emotional life of the child.

Booklist 21:135 Ja '25

"The book is a praiseworthy effort and contains valuable suggestions."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 4 '25 120w

GRUBER, JOSEF, ed. Czechoslovakia; tr.
2 from Czech manuscripts by A. Brož, S. V. Klíma, and J. J. Král. 256p $2 Macmillan
943.7 Czechoslovakia 24-23728

A statistical survey of the economic and social conditions of the Czechoslovak Republic. There are chapters on the following subjects: population; agriculture; forestry; land reform; coal; water power; industries; foreign trade; commercial and customs policy; railways; postal service; banking; currency conditions; government finance; labor legislation; social welfare; child wefare; housing; crime. These chapters are written by various contributors, mostly government officials and professors.

"This volume contains a number of valuable surveys by students of their respective problems. These names indicate the distinctive value of such a discussion."
+ Boston Transcript p4 D 24 '24 260w

"Professor Gruber's book is exceedingly timely. . . The chapters dealing with social welfare, child welfare, housing conditions and crime give valuable food for thought for those who are interested in the most up-to-date settlement of these vitally important social problems." Emil Lengyel
+ N Y Tribune p8 Ja 18 '25 600w
R of Rs 70:672 D '24 150w

GUEDALLA, PHILIP. A gallery. 249p $2.50 Putnam [10s 6d Constable]
824 Authors, British. Statesmen, British 24-25104

"In the present volume are many literary and political figures: M. Anatole France, Mr. H. G. Wells, Mr. Thomas Hardy, Mr. Bernard Shaw, Mr. Arnold Bennett, Mr. Joseph Conrad, Mr. John Galsworthy, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, Mr. Bonar Law, Mr. Austen Chamberlain, Lord Curzon, Lord Rosebery, Lord Morley, Lord Haldane, Mr. Asquith, Mr. Lloyd George, and many others. There are twenty-nine essays in less than two hundred and ninety pages so that detailed discussion is not to be expected. The idea is evidently to illuminate by flash-light." —Sat R

"The book is as ponderous as a Cardinal with a keen sense of humor, or a Puck with a sense of the profound. Mr. Guedalla is an ardent stylist, with a passion, which we cannot but share, for his own delightful mannerisms." L. W.
+ — Boston Transcript p4 N 29 '24 600w
Cleveland p95 D '24

"One should read no more than one or two of Mr. Guedalla's essays a day. So doing, one may give thanks for excellent cream puffs." D. R.
— + Ind 113:521 D 13 '24 580w

"Here is 'A Gallery' to provide dinner conversation which need not be dull if the diners can only contrive to retain some of the sparkle of these graceful essays. Mr. Guedalla has fewer puns than in 'Supers and Supermen,' and he does not repeat them, as he did so irritatingly in that first collection of similar sketches." Ernest Boyd
+ Lit R p4 N 1 '24 1400w

"His book has little serious value as revelation or interpretation; but it is a brilliant display of wit, satire, and epigram." Gilbert Thomas
+ — Nation and Ath 35:212 My 17 '24 800w

"Mr. Guedalla has wit. He has learning. He has observation. He has a ready, if not very acute, satire. His deficiency is in imagination and sense of character." R. E. R.
+ — New Statesman 23:354 Je 28 '24 1000w

"'A Gallery,' while displaying still the sharp and brilliant strokes of the Guedalla pen, has little substance. Guedalla the satirist, the ironist, has become Guedalla the caricaturist."
— + N Y Times p7 N 9 '24 1050w

"There is always a flash, and sometimes illumination. Mr. Guedalla is frequently unappreciative, frequently one-sided. But he is never ill-natured."
+ — Sat R 137:510 My 17 '24 660w

Reviewed by Humbert Wolfe
Spec 132:842 My 24 '24 1250w

"Mr Guedalla has wit and even intellectual responsibility. But he too often labors his wit and disregards his responsibility."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7a N 30 '24 300w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p265 My 1 '24 1100w

GUEDALLA, PHILIP. Supers and supermen. 321p $2.50 Putnam
824 24-21800

These lively studies of some great and little figures in history are not formal enough to be regarded as character sketches. Mr. Guedalla's "supers" are set up as targets at which to shoot his epigrams. These figures are considered in groups—foreign secretaries, ambassadors, historians, etc. There are longer and more considered studies of such men as Frederick the Great, Louis Philippe, Disraeli, Thiers and Gambetta.

Reviewed by A. B. Maurice
Bookm 60:344 N '24 450w

Ind 113:374 N 8 '24 720w

"Most of us are rather commonplace folks, and one or two epigrams a week satisfy our normal desire for sophistication. If Philip Guedalla would only condescend to realize this, he would be one of the most charming writers of lighter historical biography, made popular by Mr. Strachey. His present work is like an overstuffed plum-pudding. It is too delicious and too rich for those accustomed to turnips rather than truffles." H. P. Preston
— Int Bk R p883 N '24 1300w

"At the risk of an apparent seriousness which he would be the first to deplore, we must recognize in Mr. Guedalla, beneath the intoxicating effervescence, a capacity for earnest thought and eager admiration, which in the end perhaps impresses the reader more than all the fireworks. There is a solid basis of scholarship, a really astonishing familiarity with all the periods of European history, not only in their surface aspects but in their deeper workings and bearings. There is an insight into human character and motive as just and penetrating as it is broad and sympathetic." Gamaliel Bradford
+ — Lit R p2 S 20 '24 750w

Reviewed by H: B. Fuller
N Y Tribune p12 S 21 '24 900w

Outlook 138:468 N 19 '24 40w

"Having gained a reputation for witty characterizations and spirited interpretations, Philip Guedalla proceeds to risk it by publishing a collection of essays that lack even the right to be called smart. Even smartness must have an element of pungency, while Mr. Guedalla's observations sink at times to the level of banality and labored attempts to be funny. Evidently he has become the victim of a formula—the formula of the fresh and the provocative. But without substance any formula fails, and not a few of Mr Guedalla's epigrams in this book are mere verbal contortions destitute of thought."
— Springf'd Republican p12 S 19 '24 350w

GUERARD, ALBERT LEON. Reflections on the Napoleonic legend. 276p $3.75 Scribner
B or 92 Napoleon I, emperor of the French 24-26313

A sympathetic observer of French affairs traces thru a whole century "the enormous shadow of one man" in the effort to discover whether the known facts of Napoleon's career warrant the prestige he has attained. In the first part of the book, the author studies Napoleon as soldier, administrator and popular leader, subjecting the facts to a cold detached criticism which, while not detracting from his great talents, traces much of his success to his mastery of advertising and his ability to appear as the embodiment of the will of the French people. The second part of the book is an examination of the genesis and growth of the legend which, it is maintained, Napoleon himself originated, and devoted his life after Waterloo to elaborating. The third part is a study of the voluminous literature inspired by him at St Helena and continued thru many years in history, drama, poetry and art.

"Professor Guérard can excuse the faults of the nephew, but not those of the uncle. Herein lies the fundamental criticism of the book. Still it is a book that is worth while. The more 'soberly historical' Personality of Napoleon by Dr. Holland Rose and this more lively volume might profitably be read as complements if not antidotes to one another." G: M. Dutcher
— + Am Hist R 30:176 O '24 480w

Booklist 20:297 My '24

"The sober title does not suggest its wealth of keen, witty philosophy, its stimulating style, its trenchant logic."
+ Bookm 59:353 My '24 250w

Cleveland p62 Jl '24

"In the main, Professor Guérard is a fair-minded critic, whose estimate of the Emperor, midway between the blood-and-thunder of orthodox history and the milk-and-water of Professor Arthur Lévy, comes tolerably near to the truth. The most valuable part of his book is to be found in the sections devoted to the myth itself." Philip Guedalla
+ Nation 118:649 Je 4 '24 650w

"Here is a book, indeed! Brilliant, fascinating. The work of one who is alert and independent, clear-minded and hard-headed. A book full of wit, humor, understanding and irony. Built with symmetry and flooded with lucidity. French of the French, in all the best that the expression implies." H: B. Fuller
+ N Y Times p1 F 17 '24 2550w

"A brilliant, sparkling, iconoclastic work, losing nothing to superficiality in the lightness of the touch, and gaining enormously in charm by the author's keen, penetrating and witty comment on the personal and literary qualities of the French authors of a century." C. G. Bowers
+ N Y World p7e F 10 '24 1800w

No Am 219:711 My '24 850w

Pratt p38 summer '24

"Professor Guérard has given us one of the wittiest and most thoughtful studies of Napoleon that we have ever read."
+ Sat R 137:86 Ja 26 '24 750w

"Mr Guerard has sureness and deftness in the making of his points, and his clever use of American expressions and even more of the American outlook on the subject lend an informality to his writing which increases the appeal. It is the treatment of a historic personage in a strictly modern manner."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 10 '24 650w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p114 F 21 '24 110w

GULICK, SIDNEY LEWIS. Winning of the Far East. 185p $1.35 Doran
266 Missions—China. Missions—Japan. Missions—Korea 23-18948

Dr Gulick went to the Far East in 1922 on a special mission for the Federal council of churches. He reports on the work done, on the Christian movement and other significant movements in the countries visited—China, Japan, Korea and the Philippine Islands—on their attitude toward world peace and their international relations. The book opens with a report and interpretation of the great earthquake and fire in Japan.

Booklist 20:246 Ap '24

"There is a great deal that is most interesting in this new book by Dr. Gulick. The only difficulty about Dr. Gulick's new book is his undue emphasis on pacifism, his continual assertion of Christian accomplishments which are merely the result of intelligence, and the orthodox flavor of the entire work."
+ — Boston Transcript p7 F 2 '24 260w

J Religion 4:446 Jl '24 50w

N Y World p6e Ja 20 '24 220w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p375 Je 12 '24 100w

GUSEV, SERGEY IVANOVICH (SERGEY GUSSIEV ORENBURGSKY, pseud.). Land of the fathers; tr. by Nina N. Selivanova. 298p $2.50 Dial press

24-23606

" 'The Land of the Fathers' is, in a sense, a Russian 'Scenes From Clerical Life.' A large part of the narrative is concerned with the Orthodox clergy on the eve of the Revolution. . . The novel is primarily an indictment of this Russian priesthood. Its scenes pass in and around the county seat of Jhinitza. Jhinitza is a mushroom town which unsparing exploitation of the cultivator by the middleman has swollen into a unhealthy prosperity. The church has shared in the spoil. There is a new bell-tower on the monastery, the seminary is full of pupils, new factories and granaries are opened with solemn prayer. . . The attitude of the Orthodox Church to this new economic situation is shown to us largely through the eyes of one young priest. Father Ivan seems to mark a definite departure from the old Tolstoyan ideal. He is no ascetic or idealist but a full-blooded, hearty peasant soul, fond of farming and expert in horse-flesh and in love with his neighbor's wife."—N Y Times

" 'The Land of the Fathers' is an intensely stimulating novel, vibrating with ideas and the poetry of the human soul. The translation, while at times attaining a momentary glow, falls far below what the original must surely have possessed in spiritual quality." W. E. H.
+ — Boston Transcript p4 Ja 14 '25 1250w

"It is written with something resembling the light touch, and the characters are sometimes sober and only mildly neurotic. It is obviously true to life and is important because it emphasizes the lack of a responsible and reasonably benevolent middle class." G. C.
Ind 113:494 D 6 '24 300w

Reviewed by Dorothy Brewster
Nation 119:712 D 24 '24 460w

"Orenburgsky is, by comparison with other Russians, not of the first rank, but he possesses, along with them, that knack for characterization which seems to grow in the soil. The characters are often briefly, tellingly described, but, what is so much more difficult and valuable, they describe themselves." Robert Littell
+ — New Repub 41:148 D 31 '24 1200w

"Orenburgsky's novel is an interesting historical document."
N Y Times p9 N 2 '24 750w

"A Russian reader living in the feverish atmosphere of 1905 was likely to be blind to the melodrama of the situations and the naive rhetoric of the dialogue, but the reader of today, tutored in sophistication by the ironies of recent history, is in a less fortunate position. Not that the novel is without evocative moments and stirring passages. The novelist was fortunate in his translator, who is, on the whole, competent and capable of writing straightforward English." Avrahm Yarmolinsky
N Y Tribune p13 O 26 '24 700w

N Y Tribune p7 D 21 '24 50w

N Y World p9e D 7 '24 400w

"Reading this book one longs for more elevating ideals, for higher thoughts. However, I must agree that Mr. Orenburgsky knows his world and that the background of his story is real and true. To those who are interested in the provincial life of remote Russia the book of Gussiev will give a truthful picture. But I wish to warn the reader that this book was written by its author on a gloomy day." Ilya Tolstoy
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:475 Ja 24 '25 900w

GUTHRIE, RAMON. Trobar clus. 100p $2 Norman Fitts pub., Northampton, Mass.

811 24-773

"The first part of the book is taken up with translations of old Provençal troubadour poetry, and lyrics suggestive or descriptive of times and places associated therewith. Poems on other themes which fill two-thirds of the book, show the [same] influence. They have a certain note of boldness, dash and adventure, of irreverence combined with manly vigor; they sing of wine, war and women with somewhat of the old thrill of troubadour days. Yet they are very modern, especially those couched in bizarre and erratic verse forms, and they display a hard-shelled disillusionment such as we find difficult to associate with old romantic far-off times. Perhaps we detect an after-the-war disillusionment, a repudiation of romance and beauty and at the same time a bitter craving for it."—Springf'd Republican

"The tone of the volume carries with it that peculiarly hollow resonance of mock-mediævalism into which the weaker, less philosophic strains of James Branch Cabell's prose lapse and fall."
— Dial 76:371 Ap '24 140w

"Except when he renders the Provençal, Guthrie is not a careful workman; his hand is a little unsteady even when it copies the models of standardized verse. He has the air of being impatient with the finer details of technique, over which many poets will spend a happy lifetime, and yet at times he can write lines so perfect as to make any craftsman proud." Malcolm Cowley
+ — Lit R p670 Ap 12 '24 550w
Nation 118:212 F 20 '24 40w

"Guthrie may not be a lineal descendant of François Villon; but he is, at worst, of a collateral branch of the family. In spirit, too, he is of the blood of the troubadours; and his scathing arraignment of modern, especially what he considers American hypocrisies sets him apart from many of the poetasters of the day who are known where Guthrie's name has not been heard."
+ N Y Times p25 F 24 '24 450w

"Ramon Guthrie has caught the spirit and meaning of the jongleurs—all the thrill and romance that we associate with them in our minds. He must have steeped himself in the spirit of the troubadours to write after their manner with so much fire and cleverness."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 23 '24 750w

GUTHRIE, RAMSAY, pseud. See Bowran, J: G:

GWYNN, DENIS ROLLESTON. Catholic reaction in France. 186p $1.75 Macmillan 2

282 Roman Catholic church in France

24-24077

Written by an Irish Catholic who has been working in France as a journalist for the past three years, the book is an account of the most important phases of the Catholic movement in France since the war. He deals with the following questions: the actual proportion of modern France that can be regarded as definitely Catholic; the post-war reaction toward Catholicism; the present position and living conditions of the clergy; the relations today between the church and the French government; the relation of French Catholics to reactionary politics; the Catholic press in France; Catholic trade unions; Catholic teaching in regard to birth control.

"One might wish for franker comment on the harm done French Catholicism by the open part played by the Church in the Dreyfus affair, and upon the danger which the monarchist Catholics to-day do their Church's cause; Marc Sangnier's appeal to Catholic and even non-Catholic youth also deserves treatment. But these are slight faults. Non-Catholics, if they will read it, will be helped by this book to understand France." L: S. Gannett
+ — N Y Tribune p12 D 7 '24 430w

"The chapters contain much of interest. The author writes moderately though his work is non-critical in that he proceeds as a Romanist, with many things assumed, not examined or discussed. Parts of the volume have previously appeared in various periodical publications." Raymond Turner
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:416 D 27 '24 950w

GWYNN, STEPHEN LUCIUS. Collected poems. (Appleton library of verse) 109p $1.50 Appleton

821 24-5110

Written by an Irish poet, Ireland is the theme and inspiration of almost all these poems. Several are narrative poems of some length: A lay of Ossian and Patrick based on Gaelic legend; Queen's chronicler, a version of Mary Stuart's story; and Corranbinnie, a grim sea poem.

Booklist 21:61 N '24

"There is no elaborate imagery or wealth of metaphor, but a passionate sincerity."

+ Boston Transcript p3 My 17 '24 200w

"There is a nobility of thought and expression in these poems which comes as a relief to the reader surfeited with too much of the hectic and bizarre in modern verse." C. P.

+ Cath World 119:712 Ag '24 260w

"He handles with a high degree of skill the usual Irish topics in the usual Irish swinging meters. There is mellowness here, metrical skill and consistency of thought and construction."

+ N Y Times p7 My 4 '24 600w

"There is warmth and strength in the 'Collected Poems' of that ardent Irishman Stephen Gwynn. The book, aside from its other contents, is worth more than a glance because of 'A Lay of Ossian and Patrick,' which, though a bit longer than it should be, is that rare thing, a right good ballad." Arthur Guiterman

+ Outlook 136:649 Ap 16 '24 270w

"When he chooses, the evidences of his nationality disappear. He has the power of throwing the reader into a frame of mind, a mood, but he has the handicap of an intermittent poetic sense that betrays him now and then by lines that are entirely prosaic. There are too many of these prose lines to satisfy the discriminating reader, but on the other hand there is definite compensation in other lines that are genuinely good."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 27 '24 150w

Wis Lib Bul 20:124 My '24

GWYNN, STEPHEN LUCIUS. History of Ireland. 549p $4.50 Macmillan

941.5 Ireland—History [24-26384]

A history of Ireland from legendary times to the birth of the Irish Free State. "Mr. Stephen Gwynn, if he does not bring to his work the trained mind of the professed historian, or the capacity for original research, has the advantage that in the events of the past twenty years or more he has played a part as politician and eye-witness, with a knowledge of affairs behind the scenes. He also comes to his work with family traditions on more than one side in politics which enable him to look at Irish tendencies from a dispassionate point of view. As a follower of Redmond, he is not wholly in sympathy with the more extreme manifestations of recent years. It is to the latter pages of Mr. Gwynn's volume that we naturally turn for fresh information, and the straightforward account he gives of the changing tendencies in modern Irish policies will be useful in guiding the reader through a complicated tangle of aims and methods."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"Mr. Gwynn's work is valuable. It will give the general reader a clear comprehension of the past which lies behind present political and economic conditions. The author's sanity, his impartiality, his sympathy, his understanding of political affairs, his literary skill serve him well in the task of historian, and in a broad survey his presentation of the long drama of international and interracial relations from the Elizabethan conquest to the Sinn Fein revolution takes on something of the appearance of a masterpiece." J. F. Kenney

+ Am Hist R 29:754 Jl '24 700w

Booklist 20:333 Je '24

"Mr. Gwynn's style is markedly restrained and his narrative brings out very clearly the epic qualities of Irish history."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 22 '24 650w

"On the whole, Mr. Gwynn has produced a work of considerable worth. He has in a clear and simple fashion thrown much light on the problem that was and is Ireland and has done it with such a sense of fair play that his history ought to travel far afield in the English-speaking world." J. F. C.

+ Cath World 119:426 Je '24 320w

Cleveland p87 N '24

"We recommend this book as the first which has covered all Irish history with the aid of modern researches, and as a non-propagandist and honest attempt by a patriotic Irishman to put the whole story into proper proportions." Edmund Curtis

+ Lit R p950 Ag 9 '24 400w

"It is a well-proportioned, well-written piece of work, uncommonly sober and fair, a dispeller of ignorance, not another of the magic potions of propaganda. Yet this sober story by its very sobriety can purge with pity and terror more than those tales, written in blood and tears, which sometimes pass for history. The blood and tears are where they should be—in the story, and not in the writer's pen." E. P.

+ Nation and Ath 34:610 Ja 26 '24 850w

"Those who seek a glorification of Ireland, or a vindication of England in her dealings with Ireland, should not read this book. For Mr. Gwynn, unlike many who in the past have essayed to write about Ireland, has handled his material in scholarly fashion. His statements and the interpretations drawn from them are not based on emotion, but on hard, incontrovertible facts." H. L. Carman

+ New Repub 39:335 Ag 13 '24 500w

"If he has not given us all that could be desired—it is questionable if in the existing state of Irish historical research any man could do this—he has given immeasurably more than his predecessors in the same field. He interprets the past in the light of the present, but with a scholar's bias in favour of sanity and balance, and for the first time in a popular Irish history we get light without propagandist heat." J. W. G.

+ New Statesman 22:516 F 9 '24 1200w

"It falls short of being a work of the first order, but it is a very notable and valuable book."

+ — Outlook 137:516 Jl 30 '24 200w

Pratt p34 summer '24

"Mr. Gwynn is a man of letters, and hence he has written a very pleasing book. Indeed, he has gone far, in our opinion, towards conquering what is perhaps the greatest foe that Ireland has had to contend with throughout her long dull and bloody history. We need hardly say we allude to the indifference on the part of the rest of the world to what went on there."

+ Sat R 136:702 D 29 '23 600w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p14 Ja 10 '24 1200w

"Mr. Gwynn writes vigorously and clearly, and largely from personal experience."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p602 O 2 '24 870w

H

HAARDT, GEORGES MARIE, and AUDOUIN-DUBREUIL, LOUIS. Across the Sahara by motor car; with an introd. by M. André Citroën; tr. from the French by E. E. Fournier d'Albe. 256p il $3.50 Appleton [12s 6d Unwin]

916.6 Sahara desert 24-26931

The rough journey across the sands of the Sahara desert from Touggourt to Timbuctoo was made in small caterpillar cars—a cross between motor-car and tank, designed especially for the purpose. The perilous trip involved

HAARDT, GEORGES MARIE—Continued
many mechanical trials, long-distance distribution of petrol, etc., as well as the difficulties of crossing gorges and wind-swept plains and encountering sandstorms. The full story of the difficult journey, which was accomplished in twenty days, is told by the leaders of the expedition, with numerous illustrations.

Booklist 21:107 D '24
Boston Transcript p8 N 12 '24 330w
Nation and Ath 35:726 S 13 '24 550w
Reviewed by Blair Niles
N Y Tribune p9 O 26 '24 1000w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p473 Jl 31 '24 700w

HACKETT, FLORENCE. With benefit of clergy. 286p $2 Boni & Liveright
24-12280

A tale of a marriage which could end only in tragedy. Jeremiah, son of the soil, a simple and God-fearing man, was over-persuaded by an ambitious brother to marry Mary Anne Cooney. From the first day of their marriage to its dissolution, Jeremiah was the victim of a great injustice. Mary Anne was a slattern and gloried in the fact. True, she gave him a daughter on whom he showered all his pent-up love. Pretty, sweet and fine she was growing up and then came the tragedy. Jeremiah was called away to bury the same ambitious brother who arranged the match and he returned home to find his little daughter dead. Mary Anne had beaten and neglected his child. With murder in his heart he went to find her, but Mary Anne had fled with Jeremiah's money and his hired man. The author has caught the spirit of Irish country life in her descriptions.

Booklist 21:27 O '24

"There are many excellently written fragments in this novel. Still the material remains uninteresting. A short story would have sufficed."
— + Boston Transcript p4 Ap 9 '24 280w
Dial 77:436 N '24 60w

"Admirable in its original conception, the story is impressive by reason of the distinction with which it is told. Miss Hackett has revealed positive achievement in her command of craftsmanship, her capacity for unerring selection of incident and detail, and her ability to subdue her material to an almost perfect design. . . . The whole is an impressive and moving picture of life. It is a book to be recommended without hesitation to readers who are not averse to fiction which happens also to be art." Lloyd Morris
+ Int Bk R p553 Je '24 550w
Lit R p710 Ap 26 '24 400w

"With Benefit of Clergy is beyond a doubt the work of a genuine artist, and has all the earmarks that indicate that a new and original mind is working on the novel form in Ireland." M. M. Colum
+ New Repub 39:163 Jl 2 '24 650w

"An honest and vivid book, well done, and replete with well-drawn characters."
+ N Y Times p19 Ap 6 '24 520w

"This book is a workmanlike product of the dingy school of fiction. There is nothing salient about it, nothing to be remembered. Nobody could conceivably read it twice. We recognize its minute fidelity to fact, to physical appearances and human traits. It is a piece of technically perfect but quite uninspired naturalism."
+ — Outlook 136:614 Ap 9 '24 140w

"One is puzzled sometimes to say how these plain tales of lowly people are able to lay hold on interest but they do lay hold strongly. Perhaps their power is owing merely to the fact that they are simple, sincere, and so deeply penetrative into character and its consequences. . . The book can be read with leisurely reflective appreciation."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Je 1 '24 220w
Wis Lib Bul 20:126 My '24

HADLEY, CHALMERS. Library buildings; notes and plans. 154p il $3.50 A.L.A.
022 Library architecture 24-26751

"The title gives no clue to its scope, tho this is fully explained in the Foreword to be limited to small buildings costing less than $50,000. The author was for three years Secretary and Organizer of the Indiana Public Library Commission, was for about thirteen years librarian of the Denver Public Library and has been Secretary of the American Library Association as well as President. The first third of the book is devoted to general suggestions regarding principles of planning, construction and equipment. . . Of the twenty-five buildings shown, sixteen are branch libraries, six village libraries, one a college library, one a technical high school library, and one an architect's design for a rural library. The illustrations include fine exterior views excellently reproduced from photographs, first floor plans, occasionally a basement and numerous attractive interiors. The latter are well chosen to illustrate the furniture layout, such as tables and chairs, wall shelving and delivery desk, light fixtures and other equipment. Each plan is accompanied by a page or more of judicious description covering date of erection, size, type of architecture, material, cost, special features and an occasional gentle criticism."—Library J

Booklist 21:5 O '24

"Mr. Hadley's large experience as an organizer and administrator has given him a masterful grasp of his subject. The pages of the book fairly bristle with the results of this experience. It also accounts for the style, which is generally didactic and occasionally argumentative. . . It should be in every library, large and small. It will be useful not only for those who are going to build, but also for those who have built on account of its many practical suggestions for the management and operation of library buildings." W: F. Yust
+ Library J 49:777 S 15 '24 1950w
St Louis p379 N '24

HADOW, SIR WILLIAM HENRY. Citizenship. 240p $2 Oxford [6s Milford]
320 Citizenship

"This little book makes a thorough-going study of the bases, the principles and the purposes of citizenship, or, more definitely, of the individual's relations to the organized community. The author, who is Vice Chancellor of Sheffield University, delivered the ten lectures which comprise the volume in the University of Glasgow a little more than a year ago. He has searched for his material through the whole history of civilization and the records man has made of his theories, his visions, his arguments, his experiments upon this subject; and in these chapters he makes a brief and rapid survey of all the riches of human thought and endeavor with which his search was rewarded."—N Y Times

"His scholarship is exact, but his wide reading combined with a retentive memory seems to make him very discursive. In the course of his narrative he discusses a multitude of interesting topics, though some of them are of doubtful relevance." A. K. L.
+ — Boston Transcript p4 Mr 1 '24 700w

"His book is full of interesting sidelights, ranging from a description of the Iroquois Confederacy to the history of roadmaking in Great Britain, and from an account of the teaching and practice of citizenship at the East Oxford School to a discussion of the League of Nations." A. E. Zimmern
+ Nation and Ath 34:840 Mr 15 '24 320w

"This is a very odd book. The difficulty is to know what it is all about. It darts from one subject to another in the strangest way. Some of his book is enjoyable; but it is all table-talk, not a connected treatise."
+ — New Statesman 22:520 F 9 '24 170w

"Of surpassing richness in its scholarship."
+ N Y Times p10 F 10 '24 350w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p1 Ja 3 '24 3200w

HAGEDORN, HERMANN. Roosevelt, prophet of unity. 142p $1 Scribner
B or 92 Roosevelt, Theodore 24-9695

A panegyric on Roosevelt which seeks to define his aims and the nature of his service to America.

"It is an interesting and vigorous elaboration of Roosevelt's idea of the 'square deal.' "
+ Am Pol Sci R 18:655 Ag '24 50w
Booklist 21:65 N '24

"This is a compelling interpretation and inspiring estimate that the author has given to us of America's man of action." T. C. R.
+ Boston Transcript p2 My 17 '24 390w
Cleveland p80 S '24

"Mr Hagedorn is enthusiastic, loyal, earnest and painstaking; also, by reason of his keyed-up style and his strong penchant for hero-worship, somewhat monotonous. But he has a thesis, and a mighty one, and he goes at it with a will; he sums up, with greater brevity and poignancy than most books on the subject can show, the services that Roosevelt performed." H: B. Fuller
+ N Y Times p19 My 25 '24 400w
N Y Tribune p26 Ag 10 '24 130w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:377 Jl '24
St Louis p354 O '24

HAGGARD, SIR HENRY RIDER. Heu-Heu: or, The monster. 265p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Hutchinson]
24-7945

One more story of the dauntless Allan Quartermain. In the midst of an African thunder shower Allan and his Hottentot man, Hans, took refuge in a cave which Hans knew about. On the wall was a huge picture of a devil god, Heu-Heu, painted hundreds of years before by the bushmen. Allan was interested and went to Zikali, an old Zulu wizard, to find out more about Heu-Heu. He learned that there were still worshippers of Heu-Heu in a remote part of Africa and in attempting to solve the mysteries thereof he nearly lost his life.

Cleveland p67 S '24

"It is a story written in the old familiar Rider Haggard style, which means that it is well-written and interesting, not perhaps on a par with the best of the earlier stories, but still better than the average of other authors. The author has never lost his remarkable ability to make the impossible seem plausible and in some curious way to penetrate and understand primitive conditions so that he seems to foretell anthropological discoveries."
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Je 1 '24 220w

" 'Heu-Heu' ranks as one of those glamorous romances that have opened to so many an intellectual path through the Dark Continent, books which perform the prime requisite of good fiction."
+ Lit R p729 My 3 '24 440w

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas
New Repub 39:217 Jl 16 '24 280w

"A tale that enchains the interest from start to finish. There is overmuch talk in it."
+ — N Y Times p9 Ap 6 '24 700w

"Sir Rider Haggard is a born teller of yarns. Of that finer art which can lift the mere wonder tale to the realm of tragedy, poetic fantasy, or high romance he is not possessed; but the gift within its limitations is genuine"
+ Outlook 137:200 Je 4 '24 250w
Springf'd Republican p7a Je 1 '24 350w

"His strokes may not be as dashing, varied, and ingenious as they once were, but he is a master of those that he has retained. He relies in this romance on his old strokes."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p78 F 7 '24 460w

HAHN, LEW, and WHITE, PERCIVAL, eds. Merchants' manual. 614p il $5 McGraw 658.91 Retail trade. Drygoods 24-985

"Primarily for the retail dry-goods merchant, but useful also in a much wider field. Deals with store location, lay-out and equipment, organization, operation and personnel. A single chapter is devoted to merchandizing."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

---

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:203 Ap '24

HALDANE, JOHN BURDON SANDERSON. Daedalus; or, Science and the future. 93p $1 Dutton
504 Science. Biology 24-9007

"This small book makes clear certain tendencies of the times and shows how these tendencies are the concomitants of the amazingly rapid developments in biology and chemistry and it foreshadows a world of the future which is as unlike the world as we know it as the world we know is unlike the world of the Middle Ages. Among the prophecies he makes are: That within fifty years light will cost about a fiftieth of its present price and there will be no more night in cities. That with the exhaustion of the world's supply of oil and gas the sun and wind will be drawn upon as the source of mechanical power. That within 120 years a completely satisfactory diet will be produced chemically. That with the production of synthetic food on a large scale agriculture will disappear. That by 1951 children will be produced by ectogenesis. That disease will be abolished and death will become a physiological event like sleep."—N Y Tribune

---

Booklist 21:10 O '24

Reviewed by W: K. Holland
Boston Transcript p4 My 31 '24 450w
Cath World 119:705 Ag '24 250w

"Mr. Haldane's is a brilliant little book, sparkling here and there with a witty thought or turn of phrase, often daring in some casual statement. It is a provocative book that may shock the reader—it probably will shock a good many conservative people—but unless he is hopelessly stodgy it will stir him into the deepest and keenest thinking he has done for many a day. And for those forward-looking souls for whom the future is always the essence of mystery and romance it will be a challenge that will set their brains a-tingle."
+ Int Bk R p810 O '24 450w
Lit R p11 S 13 '24 200w

"We hope that Mr. Haldane's booklet will not lack readers—they will find in it not only entertainment but also food for much thought."
+ Nature 113:740 My 24 '24 500w
New Repub 40:206 O 22 '24 850w

"The principal merit of the little book lies in the tremendous stimulus with which it sends off the thoughts of the average educated layman into entirely new directions. Mr. Haldane certainly succeeds in justifying his claim that the biologist is the most romantic figure of today, and he exposes the inadequacy of all purely technical and political forecasts of the future." E. S. Bagger
+ N Y Times p1 Ap 6 '24 4200w

"This small book of ninety-one pages might well become the testament in a new faith. It is profoundly revolutionary and it envisages startling possibilities. It is a work of imagination and of logical reasoning from exact science." Burton Rascoe
+ N Y Tribune p21 My 11 '24 950w
Outlook 137:320 Je 25 '24 200w
R of Rs 70:112 Jl '24 20w

"Even more interesting than the contents of the book is the spirit in which it is written. There is a kind of youthful gallantry and romanticism which is, if typical, of great promise for the future of science. Mr. Haldane is open to all possibilities; he lives in a wide universe. The extent and profundity of the modern universe of science as revealed in this book, and the vigorous optimism and enthusiasm of the author, typical, we believe, of the modern scientific outlook, will help any reader to understand why science is the dominating intellectual activity of our age."

HALDANE, J: B. S.—Continued
The Times [London] Lit Sup p74 F 7 '24 1050w

HALE, GEORGE ELLERY. Depths of the universe. 98p il $1.50 (7s 6d) Scribner
523 Astronomy 24-12145

The three chapters in this little book have appeared during the last two years as articles in Scribner's Magazine. They relate for the most part to observations and discoveries made at Mount Wilson and thus continue the series begun in "The New Heavens." (Book Review Digest, 1922) Contents: The depths of the universe; Barnard's dark nebulæ; Sunspots as magnets.

"The three articles tell engagingly and authoritatively of the methods by which astronomers have recently been plumbing the depths of space and of the results obtained." E. C. S.
+ Am J Psychol 35:616 O '24 90w
Booklist 21:56 N '24
Lit R p893 Jl 12 '24 180w

"Dr. Hale is one of the world's most eminent astronomers, and he writes with an authority that will commend the book to the scientist. However, is it essentially a work for the layman." James Stokley
+ Lit R p14 Ja 3 '25 800w
Nation 119:501 N 5 '24 20w

Reviewed by Oliver Lodge
Nature 114:3 Jl 5 '24 1400w
Outlook 137:578 Ag 13 '24 40w
R of Rs 70:112 Jl '24 60w

"A very comforting little book. It is a short, lively and well-written account of some progresses in astronomy since mediaeval times."
+ Spec 132:882 My 31 '24 100w

HALIDE EDIB. Shirt of flame, Ateshden Ceumlek; with an introd. by Florence Billings. 267p il $2.50 Duffield
24-28227

The author of the novel is acknowledged to be the greatest of modern emancipated Turkish women. She is the first Turkish graduate of the American college in Constantinople, and the first woman to hold an official post in the Turkish cabinet. The action of this story, of which she is her own translator, takes place during the Greco-Turkish war in Asia Minor. A young soldier who lost both of his legs and has a bullet in his brain tells the tale. The central figure is Ayesha, a young woman of Smyrna who, having been brutally outraged, rises to rebellion. Ayesha's powerful personality wins many admirers—Ihsan, the commander of her forces, Rifki, a young boy lieutenant, and also Peyami and his cousin Djemal—all courageous men who finally die for her. With indomitable fortitude Ayesha works for the redemption of Smyrna and on the eve of victory makes the supreme sacrifice.

Boston Transcript p3 N 1 '24 1250w

"Halidé Hanum is her own translator in this new book and, although there is a certain ruggedness and stiltedness in the form, I am not sure but that it adds to its vitality. At any rate, 'A Shirt of Flame' burns its way in to the reader's mind and becomes a part of his thought. It is certainly a worthy book." E. S. Alexander
+ Lit R p10 N 8 '24 380w

"So good a work, so well knit and carefully handled in point of revealing the spirit of the new Turkey that it deserves to be read."
+ N Y Times p19 N 23 '24 750w

"Its passion is burningly genuine and there are moments of dramatic exaltation, but, as a whole, it lacks the coherence necessary to an entire artistic success."
— + N Y Tribune p13 O 26 '24 600w
N Y World p9e N 23 '24 240w

HALL, GRACE E. Patchwork. 108p $1.50 Dodd
811 24-14885

Another book of poems on homely themes by the author of "Homespun." Miss Hall gives voice, simply and poetically, to "the usual common songs" which repeat themselves in the heart.

"Miss Hall does not write unless she has something about which to write. She does not clothe trite thoughts with pretty words. There are no discordant sounds of brass and tinkling cymbals in her writings. There are rather the mellow tones of the flute, the liquid notes of the harp and the deeper chords of the 'cello. If anything, Miss Hall lacks the sprightlier airs. A judicious interspersing of lighter themes with slightly heightened color would improve the collection."
+ — Boston Transcript p4 Ag 2 '24 300w

"Miss Hall's poems, while they appeal to simple 'homespun' folk, do so by none of that sentimental, optimistic rhetoric which is an easy way to popularity. On the contrary, she is concise and quaintly decorative in her expression, and her sympathetic handling of the simple themes shows at the same time poetic feeling and artistic reserve. She has the uncommon gift of being understood by those on whose everyday lives she reveals the light of poetry, themselves knowing nothing of poetry in the literary sense, and of giving pleasure to those who read poetry 'for the very words' sake.'" R: Le Gallienne
+ N Y Times p10 S 7 '24 350w

Reviewed by Arthur Guiterman
Outlook 138:730 D 31 '24 50w

HALL, JOSEF WASHINGTON. See Close, U., pseud.

HALL, SAMUEL ROLAND. Business writing:
2 articles — house organs — reports — advertisments; methods of gathering data and of writing business copy of news, educational and promotional character. 222p il $2.50 McGraw
659 English language—Business English
24-21440

"Instruction in writing magazine and newspaper articles and other material of general appeal. Presupposes a knowledge of the principles set forth in the author's 'Handbook of business correspondence.'"—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:603 D '24

HALL, SAMUEL ROLAND. Handbook of sales management. 995p $5 McGraw
658.8 Sales management 24-2466

A review of modern sales practice and management, illustrated by the methods and experiences of representative selling organizations. The book shows how modern sales principles are applied to good effect in actual selling work. It gives results of the experience of hundreds of successful sales organizations. Sales and sales management are discussed from the manufacturing, wholesaling and retailing points of view, and the cost of selling is treated with special thoroughness.

"Mr. Hall is an adept in advertising and merchandising, and he has drawn upon his extended experience in this book of a thousand pages. If after a perusal of the treatise the prospective salesman is not qualified to go forth and sell any commodity on earth, then he must be a dull oaf indeed."
+ N Y Times p14 Mr 30 '24 280w

HALL, SAMUEL ROLAND. Retail advertising and selling. 590p il $5 (25s) McGraw

658.8 Advertising. Retail trade. Salesmen and salesmanship 24-6010

"Advertising, merchandise display, salesplanning, salesmanship, turnover and profit-figuring in modern retailing, including Principles of typography as applied to retail advertising, by Richard M. Boren." (Subtitle) "Valuable handbook. Outlines methods used by a number of successful firms. Devotes considerable space to scientific salesmanship and methods of training." (Pittsburgh Mo Bul)

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:366 Jl '24

St Louis p378 N '24

HALLMARK, HARRYDELE. See Rittenhouse, A., pseud.

HAMBIDGE, JAY. Parthenon and other Greek temples; with a preface by L. D. Caskey. 103p il $6 Yale univ. press

722.8 Architecture, Greek. Parthenon 24-17955

In this book Mr Hambidge presents in detail, by means of the most careful measurements and analyses, the evidence on which he bases his theory that the Parthenon was designed in accordance with the principles of proportion called by him "dynamic symmetry."

"One of the most important events in the architectural and archæological world, and a matter of interest to artists as well, is 'The Parthenon and other Greek Temples.'" H. P.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 9 '24 1250w

"This book, rich with geometrical computations and drawings, is not for the layman. For the architect interested in abstract problems relating to the construction of ancient temples it should prove absorbing." J: Cournos

+ Lit R p985 Ag 23 '24 300w

HAMILTON, COSMO. Four plays: The new poor, Scandal, The silver fox, The mother woman. 350p $2.50 Little

822 24-10048

"Cosmo Hamilton in his 'Four Plays' treats of the modern woman in amusing and occasionally in satiric vein. In 'Scandal,' Miss 1924 is a flapper, suddenly turned serious—a modern version, perhaps, of that first of all flapper plays, 'The Taming of the Shrew.' Both in 'The Silver Fox,' and 'The Mother Woman,' Cosmo Hamilton reveals the clash of feminine wills. Although triangle plays in the sense of wrecked marriages, both dramas delve more deeply into human affairs. Violet, the masterful modern of 'The Mother Woman.' may run her own life and her husband to suit herself, but in the end she suffers extinction as a woman by the natural craving of the man for human sympathy, understanding and companionship. 'The New Poor,' a social satire, obviates the need for characterization, and plays only with contemporary foibles."—Springf'd Republican

Cleveland p52 Jl '24

"All of these plays are constructed with moderate skill and attain at least a moderate degree of interest; none of them deals with new subjects or treats any old subject with outstanding originality or with striking success." S. A. C.

— + Lit R p921 Jl 26 '24 150w

"'Four Plays' is a volume which may be read for amusement by the general public with enjoyment equal to that of a student in contemporary drama."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Je 13 '24 250w

HAMILTON, COSMO. Unwritten history. 407p il $4 Little

B or 92 24-7550

Cosmo Hamilton, novelist and playwright, writes naturally and freely about many of the things in which we are interested. He tells us about his own efforts to make a name for himself and the experiences he has had. Most of the book is given to sketches of British and American celebrities—of the stage, in politics, literature and society, with whom he has come in contact. A dozen of his caricatures are included.

Booklist 21:23 O '24

Bookm 59:474 Je '24 220w

"Sane, happy and altogether charming and enticing book." S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 12 '24 650w

"An altogether enticing book. . . In spite of the engaging manner in which he depicts the men and women of his acquaintance, it is when writing of himself—or, rather, of himself in connection with other persons—that Mr. Hamilton is most entertaining." S. A. Coblentz

+ Int Bk R p598 Jl '24 1700w

"The dominant note of the whole book is its geniality, its amusement, and its understanding of the due humorous proportions of life. The volume will prove a mine of anecdote to the compilers of literary gossip. It is full of 'good stories,' some of them not without a tiny spice of malice, most of which are brand new. The general tone of the whole could be better for such a book: always simple, unposed, frank enough but never intruding unnecessary minutiae, and, above all, steadily good humored. A delectable volume." H. L. Pangborn

+ Lit R p668 Ap 12 '24 800w

Nation and Ath 35:392 Je 21 '24 160w

New Statesman 23:418 Jl 12 '24 350w

"These reminiscences in themselves are no better and no worse than their kind, but they derive a good deal of value from their relation to Cosmo Hamilton's own varied and prolific experience as a writer. The first-hand history of how Cosmo Hamilton wrote and (more important) sold his novels and plays has the value of the reports of laboratory experiments for those who are in the same business." Elmer Davis

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 20 '24 1800w

"Easy and often profitable reading."

+ N Y Tribune p27 Ap 27 '24 150w

"As we peruse the pages of his 'Unwritten History' all fears that his satiric pen might have been too pointed in describing his acquaintances quickly vanish." W: Johnston

+ N Y World p7e Mr 30 '24 680w

"An absence of self-idealization marks the whole of 'Unwritten History,' which makes it personal and enjoyable, communicating an unconstrained camaraderie between the author and the reader." F. V. Roman

+ N Y World p7e Je 1 '24 400w

"An up-to-date autobiography of the kind which to-day is written while the author is still young; breezy, consciously dashing; rather ephemeral, but, on the whole, good fun."

+ Outlook 136:704 Ap 23 '24 50w

St Louis p354 O '24

"Mr. Hamilton has written a very bright and entertaining volume of reminiscences."

+ Sat R 138:45 Jl 12 '24 300w

"This is a lively piece of journalism which by its very energy of style carries the reader on from chapter to chapter. It is all rather breathless, and the construction of the sentences is occasionally a little awkward." P. Ripley

+ Spec 131:128 Ja 26 '24 680w

Springf'd Republican p6 My 26 '24 950w

"Most people have got very tired of all this talk about 'celebrities,' especially those of the social world, of the stage and letters. It needs special literary skill and special experience to make it fresh, and Mr. Cosmo Hamilton—successful litterateur as he is—does not display these special qualities. He is rather a clever caricaturist, and reproduces a little of his work in this direction."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p341 My 29 '24 200w

HAMILTON, ERWIN HUGH. Elementary thermodynamics of automobile engines. 287p il $3 McGraw

621.43 Automobile engines 23-12354

"Text-book, presupposing knowledge of physics, algebra, and trigonometry. Presents fundamentals only, omitting the details of various commercial types except in typical, illustrative cases."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

---

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:200 Ap '24

HAMILTON, MRS MARY AGNES (ADAMSON) (ICONOCLAST, pseud.). England's labour rulers; foreword by S. K. Ratcliffe. 136p il $1.50 Seltzer

923.2 Labor party (Great Britain). England—Biography 24-10633

Brief sketches, with pen-and-ink portraits, of the twenty-seven men and one woman who made up the first British Labour government.

Bookm 60:100 S '24 170w

Reviewed by S. F. Wicks
Nation 119:49 Jl 9 '24 100w

Outlook 138:181 O 1 '24 170w

"The sketches are written with vivacity and discernment and condense a good deal of essential information into a few paragraphs. One hesitates to pronounce upon their accuracy and impartiality. But as they go but little beyond mere matters of fact and record, they are at least useful as a 'Who's Who.'"
+ — Springf'd Republican p5a My 18 '24 650w

Wis Lib Bul 20:177 Jl '24

HAMILTON, MRS MARY AGNES (ADAMSON) (ICONOCLAST, pseud.). J. Ramsay MacDonald; the man of tomorrow; with an introd. by Oswald Garrison Villard. 290p $2.50 Seltzer

B or 92 MacDonald, James Ramsay

A character study of Great Britain's Labor prime minister. With sympathy and evident admiration for his subject "Iconoclast" shows the kind of man he is, as thinker, politician, speaker, writer, leader, studying his career insofar as it helps to an understanding of his personality.

Booklist 20:336 Je '24

Bookm 59:350 My '24 130w

"This sketch of the English Premier's achievements is most valuable in its analysis of his war psychology. The book does have the inevitable defects of a full dress 'campaign life' of a great leader. It fairly wins the distinction of a thorough-going disillusioned criticism and appreciation." F. B. N.
+ Boston Transcript p13 Mr 29 '24 850w

Cleveland p80 S '24

"The average reader will probably lay down this biography with a feeling that the biographer has been partially successful at least. It is short on biographical details. But it does give an interpretation of the character and ideas of the new premier that make him stand out as a distinct and powerful personality." C. P. H.
+ — Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p10 Mr 16 '24 2100w

"A widely known English author and editor who writes over the pen name of Iconoclast has done a critical study of the man and his background, which should go far toward explaining to Americans both MacDonald and the cross-currents of the English political situation." H. V. DeVree
Int Bk R p277 Mr '24 1250w

"Iconoclast, who is, we are given to understand, Mary Agnes Hamilton, English novelist and editor, has drawn a very sympathetic portrait of the first British Labor Premier, but one which is apparently without serious exaggeration." Howard Devree
+ Lit R p561 Mr 1 '24 750w

Reviewed by S. F. Wicks
Nation 119:49 Jl 9 '24 720w

Reviewed by L. Mumford
New Repub 38:316 Mr 14 '24 550w

"A study of MacDonald's personality that lacks, not insight, but familiarity. The study gets MacDonald's strength: it hardly hints at anything else. In this book, MacDonald appears always as if on show; there is hardly a glimpse of the man off duty, no revelation of him apart from his politics and his public personality. Within these limits the book is a good presentation—of him as he seems; it may be also a good presentation of him as he is. But it tells more how his devout followers feel about him and why they feel it than what he himself feels or thinks. It is written in hot devotion." G. D. H. C.
+ — New Statesman 22:399 Ja 12 '24 300w

"The author has produced a work of biographical portraiture that is refreshingly novel in conception and execution, and people on both sides of the Atlantic will be grateful for the light which he has thrown on his subject." A. S. Will
+ N Y Times p1 Mr 9 '24 3200w

"The most timely biographical character study on the market to-day." C. G. Bowers
+ N Y World p6e Mr 2 '24 2150w

"It is written, of course, from a Socialist point of view, but not in a blindly partisan manner or spirit, and, while the portrait given us is that of a highly gifted and uncommonly sincere personality, it has shadows as well as high-lights, limitations as well as rich possibilities. A book, in a word, that must be held highly valuable to the understanding of our own day and its dominant tendencies."
+ Outlook 137:516 Jl 30 '24 370w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:377 Jl '24

Pratt p38 summer '24

Reviewed by P. U. Kellogg
Survey 52:242 My 15 '24 780w

Wis Lib Bul 20:96 Ap '24

HAMILTON, MRS MARY E. The policewoman; her service and ideals. 200p $1.50 Stokes

352.2 Policewomen 24-8065

New York city's first policewoman writes this account of the service of women on the police force in the special work of protection and crime prevention. The book treats of the qualifications and training of policewomen, their organization as a unit of the police force and their work in the field for which they are especially fitted, that of protective officers for the welfare of children, girls and women.

"Miss Hamilton has described in vivid style and with a soundness of judgment the importance of the policewoman in the work of police protection and crime prevention."
+ Am Pol Sci R 18:834 N '24 100w

Booklist 21:8 O '24

Cleveland p54 Jl '24

"As Raymond B. Fosdick well says in his brief foreword, it is a 'vivid little book,' which makes 'a most interesting picture' of the development the policewoman's possible service has had already and 'suggests the principles for its sound expansion.'"
+ N Y Times p14 Je 15 '24 450w

N Y Tribune p13 O 26 '24 170w

Outlook 137:642 Ag 27 '24 30w

"Women who have thought of entering this field can do no better than to take Mrs. Hamilton's book as a guide, and the general public will find in it the best obtainable statement of what it is possible for women to accomplish in this new vocation for women, in the direc- of police protection and crime prevention."

+ R of Rs 70:111 Jl '24 120w

St Louis p337 O '24

Wis Lib Bul 20:145 Je '24

HAMMERTON, JOHN ALEXANDER, ed. Wonders of the past; the romance of antiquity and its splendors. 4v v 2-4 259-555; 557-819; 821-1180p il ea $5 Putnam

913 Archeology. Architecture, Ancient

For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

Booklist 20:262 Ap '24 (Review of v 2)

Booklist 21:20 O '24 (Review of v 4)

"The various articles which comprise the book are more descriptive than historical, more popular than scientific; and one of the chief values of the work is in its illustrations, which are delightfully abundant and excellently chosen and reproduced."

+ Bookm 59:89 Mr '24 120w (Review of v 2)

"The second volume of 'Wonders of the Past' maintains fully the high standard set by the first member of the series. Here again the text is comparatively sketchy, and in places inadequate, but its shortcomings are magnificently atoned for by the beauty, the variety, and the artistry of the abundant illustrations."

+ Bookm 59:357 My '24 140w (Review of v 2)

Bookm 59:748 Ag '24 120w (Review of v 3)

"The profuse illustrations maintain the high standard set by the previous members of the series, and the text, while scanty, is exceedingly readable and conveys much valuable information."

+ Bookm 60:353 N '24 140w

Boston Transcript p3 F 16 '24 900w (Review of v 2)

"A notable undertaking here reaches its third volume and furnishes fresh evidence of the difficulty of exhausting the 'wonders of the past.'" E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 18 '24 600w (Review of v 3)

"There are no signs of exhaustion in this fourth and closing volume of a remarkable work; its material seems rather to have increased in richness and value as the close is reached, and this by an appropriate culmination, having regard to the wealth of resources in reserve such as it would take many more than four books to exhaust." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 9 '24 600w Review of v 4)

Boston Transcript p3 F 16 '24 900w (Review of v 2)

"'Wonders of the Past' has a vivid style. The contributors include eminent men whose names are almost imbedded in a talus of degree-initials, yet they have come down from Parnassus to tell us in concise, crisp words of the marvels of ancient days. They have set upon this record the imprimatur of accuracy and yet given to its pages an irresistible popular appeal." J: W. Harrington

+ Int Bk R p282 Mr 24 '24 1900w (Review of v 2)

New Repub 40:79 S 17 '24 200w (Review of v 4)

"The volume contains several features that will make it more valuable for the studiously inclined reader, including a map of the important sites of ancient culture that circled the Mediterranean, a synchronized table of events showing the main tendencies of ancient history with references to the pages of these volumes upon which the descriptions can be found."

N Y Times p17 Jl 27 '24 400w (Review of v 4)

"It is a modern representation of the kind of book which children used to look at on Sunday afternoons, but it is undeniably interesting."

+ — Outlook 136:235 F 6 '24 110w (Review of v 2)

Outlook 138:26 S 3 '24 40w

R of Rs 70:448 O '24 80w

HAMMOND, JOHN LAWRENCE LE BRETON, and HAMMOND, MRS BARBARA (BRADBY). Lord Shaftesbury. 313p $3.50 Harcourt [12s Constable]

B or 92 Shaftesbury, Anthony Ashley Cooper, 7th earl of A24-664

"Lord Shaftesbury was an English statesman who fought all his life—that is to say, the greater part of the Nineteenth Century—for certain concrete expressions of social justice. In his youth he saw children of seven working in mills and mines from five in the morning to eight at night. Striving at first almost alone, he had to overcome, in the first place, the mass inertia of British public opinion. In the long run, he succeeded in this, and more than any other British statesman of his time he deserved and won the gratitude of England's poor. This biography is confined chiefly to the more obvious aspects of Shaftesbury's public life."—R of Rs

---

Booklist 20:297 My '24

Eng Hist R 39:154 Ja '24 400w

"In an age of large two-volume biographies it is as comforting as surprising to find the story of one of the longest-lived and most useful of Victorians adequately told in a book of 276 pages. It is even more surprising to find how clear an impression is given of the subject's personality with only the briefest record of his home and private life as boy or man." Norman Thomas

+ Nation 119:291 S 17 '24 1100w

Outlook 136:322 F 20 '24 140w

R of Rs 69:334 Mr '24 140w

HAMMOND, JOHN WINTHROP. Charles Proteus Steinmetz; a biography. 489p il $4 Century

B or 92 Steinmetz, Charles Proteus 24-21903

Charles P. Steinmetz, 1865-1923, was another of those immigrants to America who like Pupin brought ideals with him along with his great scientific gifts. In his early twenties he landed at Castle Garden as a steerage passenger with no money and almost no English. Escaping deportation by the barest chance, he found friends in America from the first and opportunity to develop his electrical genius. From a helpful association, for some years, with a Yonkers manufacturer and inventor, he went to a thirty years' connection with the General Electric company as consulting engineer, where he earned his title of "wizard." Mr. Hammond, who is also associated with the company, is his authorized biographer and to him Dr. Steinmetz himself gave many of the facts from which this many-sided picture of the man has been drawn.

Booklist 21:65 N '24

"The book is highly readable."

+ Bookm 60:350 N '24 200w

"Much of the material was given by the inventor's heirs and the record has their written approval, Mr. Hayden writing the foreword. The work is well done and is worthy of the calibre and character of its subject." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p4 S 24 '24 780w

"Mr. Hammond tells the story fully but stodgily, without rousing the reader, without lifting even a corner of the veil that shrouds from curious eyes a luminous soul caged in a crippled body, but steadily and systematically battling through the seas of ignorance toward the headland of truth." Arthur Pound

— Ind 113:234 O 4 '24 580w

"The story is told interestingly and authoritatively. The book is well worth reading, for not the least important reason that, through the achievements of this penniless, deformed immigrant of 1889, this country is once more shown to be a real 'land of opportunity.'"

HAMMOND, J: W.—Continued
+ Management and Adm 8:540 N '24 120w

"The time will come, let us hope, when some one will give us a more exhaustive biography of Charles P. Steinmetz. Mr. Hammond has given us the surface facts, but he has not delved deeper."
— + N Y Times p14 N 2 '24 1600w
Outlook 138:258 O 15 '24 200w

"The author has given us a good straightforward account of his life and character, and if the volume lacks the literary value and dramatic interest of the life of our other great immigrant electrician, Michael Pupin, that may largely be laid to the fact that it is a biography, not an autobiography." E. E. Slosson
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:141 S 27 '24 780w

"His book is pleasantly and entertainingly written, and though not at all exuberant in praise, it shows enthusiasm and loyal affection of the 'little giant' and cannot fail to instil like feelings in the hearts of its readers." E. M. Jewett
+ Springf'd Republican p7a O 26 '24 700w

Reviewed by R. W. Bruère
Survey 53:289 D 1 '24 600w

HAMSUN, KNUT. Children of the age; tr. from the Norwegian by J. S. Scott. 288p $2.50 Knopf
24-4583

A story of the decline of the rural aristocracy of Norway as centering about Lieutenant Willatz Holmsen of Segelfoss manor. Together with its distinct traditions, Holmsen had inherited a debt so great that he could never hope to pay it. A lonely, isolated man, denied even the companionship of his wife thru a curious estrangement between them, he gives unstintedly to all who look to him for aid, and generously supports his immense household. Then one day comes Tobias Holmengraa—far-famed King Tobias of distant lands—and buys a piece of his land for a home. Very gradually, his courteous persistence brings him more and more of Segelfoss manor, for the Lieutenant, too proud to economize is in need of great sums of money for the travels of his wife and son. Time passes, and where once his lands had stretched to the sea, a busy little settlement grows up. When the home at Segelfoss is practically in the hands of Holmengraa, the now old Holmsen, still proud and unyielding in spirit, takes up his abode in some old tile-buildings. While digging there one day, he discovers a box of gold coin—the treasure said to have been buried by his grandfather. He dies shortly after, before his son can reach him, leaving him a legacy of both riches and culture, but in place of a feudal manor, a small estate looking upon a thriving seaport town.

Booklist 20:300 My '24

Reviewed by A. W. Porterfield
Bookm 59:233 Ap '24 1000w

"Hamsun's method may be called objective or behavioristic. He writes a plain tale which differs from the ordinary in its wonderful consistency. He steers straight ahead. He never turns back to retrace his course and thus he makes his novel reflect with accuracy the actual and inevitable physical passage of time. His landscape is dynamic, movement pervades everything with a sense of velocity that is constant." R. H. Allen
+ Boston Transcript p5 F 16 '24 1300w

"'Children of the Age' is not so great a novel as 'Growth of the Soil.' It has something of the same epic quality, but the theme has not the same universal appeal." I: Anderson
+ — Int Bk R p394 Ap '24 580w

"If there be some individual who has never read a Hamsun work he is going to regard this as one of the really great novels of 1924. For the student of Hamsun it is, however, a bit disappointing. It contains all of the Hamsun notions and devices from the time he published his first book." A. W. Porterfield
+ — Lit R p787 My 31 '24 1000w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Nation 118:563 My 14 '24 400w
Nation and Ath 35:sup258 My 24 '24 160w

"It is slow-moving, tragic at times, poignant and even memorable, and, like all Hamsun's other work, bears the stamp of a highly individualized genius." E. R.
+ New Repub 39:166 Jl 2 '24 160w

"Perhaps the further north you get the more proud you become of being a 'character.' There are two such characters in this book and though both are well done the story that wanders rather aimlessly between them is a little pointless." Ralph Wright
— + New Statesman 23:196 My 24 '24 100w

"There are times when one cannot help wishing the author had indulged a trifle more in direct statement, even while one is admiring the deftness and sureness of touch he displays throughout."
+ — N Y Times p8 F 3 '24 1000w

"The book itself has the simplicity and intimacy and profundity characteristic of Hamsun's work, and the same clear twilight atmosphere. It has little of the ecstasy and the lyrical quality of 'Victoria'; its issues are not always distinct, and it is, as a whole, put together loosely. The climaxes come straggling in instead of huddling close upon each other. But in detail it is rare and full of magic." L. P. Hartley
+ Spec 132:885 My 31 '24 320w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p728 N 13 '24 650w
Wis Lib Bul 20:68 Mr '24

HAMSUN, KNUT. In the grip of life; auth. English version by Graham and Tristan Rawson. 158p $1.75 Knopf
839.82 24-4998

This four-act play, which was recently produced by the Moscow art theater in New York, introduces Hamsun to America as a dramatist. It is Juliane Gihle who perhaps more than any one else in the play is "in the grip of life." She had been beautiful and noted as a singer but with the waning of her beauty and popularity she had married a rich old man. The consequences are boredom and unhappiness. She is rapidly going down hill and as the play ends the destiny she had prophesied for herself seems about to be fulfilled.

"A curiously undramatic exposition of the final tragedy in the life of a woman to whom physical love has been the aim and end of existence. . . It is probable that but for the merciful opaqueness of the Russian language many of its New York spectators would have revolted from its sardonic implications." Ernest Boyd
Lit R p885 Jl 12 '24 500w

"'In the Grip of Life' is not one of his most important works although it deals with a favorite theme—the hopeless uselessness of age when the warmth of passion, which to a romanticist gives life its meaning, is drawing irresistibly away." J. W. Krutch
Nation 118:563 My 14 '24 390w

Reviewed by V. Sackville-West
Nation and Ath 35:722 S 13 '24
St Louis p382 N '24
The Times [London] Lit Sup p613 O 2 '24 210w

HANBURY-WILLIAMS, SIR JOHN. Emperor Nicholas II as I knew him. 271p il $6 Dutton
B or 92 Nicholas II, emperor of Russia. European war, 1914-1919—Russia [22-20740]

A sketch of the late Emperor Nicholas II and some of the persons and events connected with him written from notes gathered by the author in diary form during the years of the war which he spent in Russia as chief of the British military mission, 1914-1917. The sketch is sympathetic to the Emperor whose mistakes, it is maintained, did not arise from want of devotion to his country or to the cause of the Allies. "These notes are in no way the defence of a system. They are a defence of a person."

"The book is interesting chiefly because it has many pleasant pictures of the unfortunate household, especially of the emperor and his charming young son, and, understanding as it does, the character of the empress and all that led up to the ultimate tragedy, it makes valuable reading to a student of Russia."
+ Boston Transcript p6 Ja 23 '24 280w

Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 9 '24 600w

"Uninteresting to anyone but the author himself. Yet some of his observations add to the picture of the character of the late Tsar and disclose some of the conditions which existed in the Russian army during the war. On the whole, however, the book is hardly worth reading; and the price is quite unnecessarily high." Alexander Petrunkevitch
— + Yale R n s 13:597 Ap '24 70w

HANLEY, GEORGIA ELDREDGE. One-eyed fairies. 214p il $1.50 Lothrop
372.54 Sewing 24-7533

"Sewing for girls is made easy by this method. Sir Bodkin with his loyal subjects, the needles, teaches little folks all kinds of plain and fancy stitches in twenty-four lessons. The germ of each lesson is put in rhyme and is also illustrated by entertaining pictures and diagrams."—Boston Transcript

"The most practical kind of work is taught by the play method."
+ Boston Transcript p4 My 3 '24 60w

Reviewed by M. G. Bonner
Int Bk R p547 Je '24 20w

N Y Tribune p26 Jl 20 '24 150w

Reviewed by G. M. Goldman
N Y World p7e My 18 '24 80w

"This book might well be used in the kindergarten school."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Je 1 '24 70w

HANNAY, JAMES OWEN (GEORGE A. BIRMINGHAM, pseud.). King Tommy. 327p $2 Bobbs
24-5197

"The Rev. Thomas A. Norheys, Irish curate, had invested his patrimony in German marks. When the mark crashed Tommy decided that Berlin was the only place where they would do him any good, so he went there to spend them while he could. On his trail came Count Istvan Casimir of Lystria, an engaging conspirator, and Miss Janet Church, a Scotch old maid, who wanted to consult the Lystrian patriarch on the portentous subject of World Peace through the Union of the Christian Churches. A confusion of identity led to delicious alarums and excursions in Central Europe. Tommy, witty, debonair, Irish, in spite of his clerical complexion, wooed the charming Calypso, [princess of Lystria], and staged a resounding coup d'état in Lystria. The end as well as the means of a thoroughly diverting imbroglio is made plausible by the author's skill in putting Irish on the ball."—Lit R

Booklist 20:338 Je '24

"Every bit of this story is the most exquisite bit of character work."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 23 '24 250w

"Altogether, 'King Tommy' is deftly tossed and highly amusing foam, and there are more than a few brightly iridescent streaks in the bubbles Mr. Birmingham has blown in sheer exuberance of Irish spirit." Howard Devree
Int Bk R p822 O '24 600w

"George Birmingham at his best can be very delightful. Even in such a book as 'King Tommy,' where he is not at his best, he is most amusing."
— + Lit R p662 Ap 12 '24 800w

"Not so good as his most recent tale, 'Found Money.' But it is very amusing, and though not an Irish tale, contains much that could have been written only by George A. Birmingham."
— + N Y Times p8 Mr 9 '24 1050w

"It is all as thin as gossamer, but as deftly woven; what you might call sheer entertainment."
+ N Y Tribune p27 Ap 20 '24 650w

"As a counter-irritant to the gruesome details of Near East life presented by fund drive committees King Tommy's antics are balm to the overexerted sympathies." Malcolm Ross
+ N Y World p7e Mr 9 '24 120w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:292 Je '24

HANSHEW, MARY E., and HANSHEW, THOMAS W. Riddle of the amber ship. (Eng title The amber junk). 319p $1.75 Doubleday
24-9435

Cleek, the man of forty faces, is here given another opportunity to work miracles. Scotland Yard has been warned that a plot is abroad to attack a young Chinese prince on his way to Oxford, having in his possession the Amber ship—an invaluable collection of jewels. Cleek meets the prince and conducts him to the house on the hill, the home of Octavius Spender, an esteemed Oxford don with whom the boy is to live. During the night a shot is heard—later a woman's piercing scream cuts the air, whereupon follows the discovery of the murdered don and the mysterious disappearance of the prince. In the tracing of this double-barreled crime Cleek uncovers the machinations of a secret society which brings the story to a tense climax and the solution of the riddle.

"Even a detective mystery run-around yarn ought to have some measure of plausibility, and, while its actors need not greatly resemble human beings, they should not be too absurd. Even murders, jewel robberies, and mysterious impersonations pall on one when they are overdone, as this example is."
— Lit R p794 My 31 '24 150w

"He is known as The Man of Forty Faces, and he really should have an adventure for each face." A. D. Douglas
N Y Tribune p27 My 4 '24 280w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p6e Ap 27 '24 110w

Springf'd Republican p7a My 25 '24 140w

"It is a book for boys; no one else could enjoy its numerous absurdities."
— The Times [London] Lit Sup p97 F 14 '24 100w

HARBARGER, SADA ANNIS. English for engineers. 260p $2 McGraw 620.7 Technology—Language. English language—Rhetoric. Engineering 23-12621

"Useful text-book for undergraduate students."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:73 F '24

HARBEN, HENRY DEVENISH. Love letters to a dead woman. 253p $2 Seltzer [6s Chatto & W.]
24-4620

A London barrister whose love for a woman had been the central fact of his life, but whose irresolution lost her, writes these letters after her death, in which he tells the story of the ripening of their friendship from the day of their first meeting. By dipping into the years that had been theirs together and calling up their happy memories he unfolds a love story of real beauty and dignity with no shadow to darken it except regret for his own timidity.

HARBEN, HENRY D.—Continued

"The story is interesting but neither absorbing nor captivating. The hero reveals himself a pathetic, although common, mixture of snob and fool. He is constantly missing the fine points of life and the more delicate phases of his relationship with Olive. The other characters are seen through the eyes of Lockwood and are ordinary as well as uninteresting." J. J. Smertenko

— + Lit R p860 Je 28 '24 580w

"It is the story of a gentleman. And because gentlemen are almost as rare in modern fiction as in pure love, it is a most uncommon novel. Not only is the treatment of love unusual, but also the technique. The novel is written in letter form, with deft craftsmanship."

+ N Y Times p14 Mr 23 '24 650w

"Now that Mr. Harben has unburdened himself, and has, in so doing, given promise of fine perception and sensitive observation, let him do something a little less somber; something with an occasional shading of humor; and, most of all, something a little less one-sided." Kenneth Fuessle

N Y Tribune p25 Je 1 '24 800w

"The result is—and is meant to be—sentimental rather than romantic, intimate rather than tremendous, touching rather than tearing: but it is quite literally enthralling. Here is a book like no other in kind." Gerald Gould

+ Sat R 136:336 S 22 '23 820w

"A simple story of unsuccessful love, unsuccessful in the vulgar meaning of the word, does not have very much compulsion over the reader unless it is exceptionally sincere. Love-letters to a Dead Woman conveys the sense of a real emotion such as might fill the life of a man."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p618 S 20 '23 320w

HARBORD, FRANK WILLIAM, and HALL,
2 JOHN WILLIAM. Metallurgy of steel; v. 2 Mechanical treatment. 7th ed rev 533p il $12 Lippincott; for sale by Van Nostrand [32s Griffin]

669.1 Steel—Metallurgy

"A standard British work, constituting the most exhaustive treatise on the subject."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:436 O '24

HARDEN, MAXIMILIAN. Germany, France and England; tr. and ed. by William Cranston Lawton. 326p $2.50 Brentano's

327.43 Germany—Politics and government. Germany—Foreign relations—France. France—Foreign relations—Germany. Germany—Foreign relations—Great Britain. Great Britain—Foreign relations—Germany 24-5496

"The author discusses the chances for future peace in Europe, taking into consideration the individual viewpoint of each of the three leading nations involved, and compares the German occupation of France in 1871 with the present-day French occupation of the Ruhr."—Ind

"The most morally courageous book that has come out of Germany since the war. Harden's text, Franco-German coöperation, is not novel, but his sermon upon it surpasses in frankness, force, prophetic ire, and prophetic fire, all previous preachments upon the subject. . . Altogether this book contains a more brilliant brief for France—and incidentally a more plausible, though in a broader sense not hostile, bill of grievances against Great Britain—than France herself has produced in all the mountains of controversial writing under which the world now labors." V: S. Clark

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Je '24 740w

Booklist 20:333 Je '24

"A volcanic mass composed of scalding invective, encyclopædic information, historical half truths, political misinterpretation, and rattling good sense. As usual, Herr Harden thinks little of his reader; he pours forth his dynamic phrases, the power of which is still preserved in the translation, apparently regardless of sequence and anxious merely to rid himself of their unspoken burden. But no matter how difficult, especially in its earlier portions, this volume manifests with supreme force the virtues of Harden as political writer." C: Seymour

+ — Bookm 59:462 Je '24 600w

Ind 112:184 Mr 29 '24 60w

"From the midst of Harden's tireless harangue of assertions and abuse one longs for some constructive plan. The style, too, is harsh, abrupt, lacking in persuasive calm. Jolted rather roughly from thought to thought, one frets to dispute with the hot-headed author. Nevertheless, the book remains a vital, thorough, absorbing interpretation of things we need to know." B. P.

— + Ind 113:49 Jl 19 '24 400w

"Wit, heat and light distinguish the book, and the translator has dressed it excellently."

+ N Y Tribune p29 My 4 '24 180w

"Harden is the ablest journalist in Germany and at all times free with his pen. He tells the truth to his countrymen with untempered frankness, sparing none in his criticisms and letting facts stand out on their merits. His words must ring hard in junker ears."

N Y World p6e Mr 9 '24 360w

"Herr Harden occupies the impregnable moral position of one who only after proving himself the severest critic of abuses at home, turns his attention to abuses abroad. There is not an apologetic word in his book. It is undeniable, moreover, that he sees the whole European situation with a superior wholeness and intensity. Abused by his enemies and tortured within by his own spirit, he speaks out with commanding sincerity—and doubtless with an excess of emotion. Immensely well informed, he can say nothing simply, and is instructive only through sarcasm and innuendo. But it is a wholesome book—a book to be read."

+ — No Am 219:712 My '24 700w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:300 Je '24

R of Rs 69:333 Mr '24 150w

St Louis p336 O '24

HARDINGE, H. C. M. Whirlwind. 460p $2 (7s 6d) Putnam

24-5201

"The story of a frivolous young wife who runs away from her husband, whom she has married with expectations, because he refuses to sacrifice his literary aspirations and go into the family business in finance for her material benefit. Her wild plunge for spendthrift happiness ends in total wreckage, but before she is out of the story she has robbed her deserted husband of the years of his best possibilities. As the book is finished Desmond Antrobus has at least the compensations of middle-age love and a newly revealed son."—N Y World

"The book is remarkable for its temperance in this era of literary excess. There were plenty of opportunities for the author to have gone in for sensuality and eroticism, but such was not her (or his) aim. We shudder when we think of certain situations in the hands of some of the modern writers." W. B.

Boston Transcript p3 My 10 '24 1150w

"'Whirlwind' is decidedly unusual, decidedly itself, and most decidedly good."

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p10 Ag 24 '24 530w

"Whirlwind will no doubt be received somewhat after the fashion of the little girl who had a little curl right in the middle of her forehead, for those who find it good will think it very, very good and those who find it bad will think it horrid."

N Y Times p22 Ap 27 '24 660w

"It is a gorgeous concatenation of absurdities, to which the author's prattling explanatory asides add the final touch of humor." Isabel Paterson

N Y Tribune p25 My 4 '24 900w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p6e Ap 27 '24 100w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p602 S 12 '23 440w

HARDMAN, OSCAR. Ideals of asceticism; an essay in the comparative study of religion. 232p $2 Macmillan [12s S.P.C.K.]

248 Asceticism. Mysticism 24-7325

The book describes the ideals of asceticism and its place in the history of religion and in the life of Jesus Christ. It makes a plea for a revival of Christian asceticism and its application to the cure of society.

Boston Transcript p7 Ap 26 '24 560w
Cath World 119:560 Jl '24 800w
Int J Ethics 35:204 Ja '25 420w

"A presentation of the various ascetic ideals in so attractive a manner as to have an appeal even for the modern man. The author is thoroughly versed in the history of the world's religions, so that his work on this problem is an important monograph in the comparative study of religions."
+ J Religion 4:328 My '24 50w

Reviewed by Ryan Walker
N Y Times p16 Ap 20 '24 1650w

"Interesting as a scholarly survey and interpretation of the historic function of asceticism and as a statement of the possibilities of Christian asceticism today. Treating a difficult and in many ways repugnant subject, Mr. Hardman succeeds in giving it historical interest and a measure of ethical timeliness."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 My 6 '24 420w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p154 Mr 13 '24 2000w

HARDY, CHARLES OSCAR. Risk and risk-bearing. 400p $3.50 Univ. of Chicago press

330.1 Risk

A collection of readings by many specialists on the element of risk in its various economic aspects, as it enters into the security market and stock speculation, insurance, guaranty and suretyship, labor, etc. There are sections also on ways of dealing with risk, the business cycle and business forecasting, and the social aspects of risk-bearing.

"The general attitude of the author toward business practices is remarkably well balanced. The author finds much to praise, much to condemn and much to question but it does not appear that his attitude is other than that of the analyst and student who is primarily concerned with what we should preserve of the present order, what we should eliminate, and what new devices we should adopt. The general theory of risk is well presented, as is its application in specific fields." R. H. Blanchard
+ Am Econ R 13:729 D '23 750w

Reviewed by D. H. Roberston
Econ J 34:608 D '24 520w

"Students will find his book useful; the general reader will find it dull. A really critical survey of the subject remains to be written, and badly needs writing."
— + New Statesman 22:612 Mr 1 '24 210w
Pol Sci Q 39:182 Mr '24 140w
St Louis p371 N '24

HARDY, THOMAS. Famous tragedy of the Queen of Cornwall at Tintagel in Lyonnesse; a new version of an old story, arranged as a play for mummers, in one act, requiring no theatre or scenery. 77p il $3.50 (6s) Macmillan

822 Tristan 23-17445

An experiment in "harmonizing" the different versions of the legend of Tristram and Iseult. "Mr Hardy has adopted Bedier's theory of one parent poem from which the rival versions are descended, and resolved the contradictions by imagining that when Iseult of Ireland heard that Tristram was dying she hastened across the sea to him; that her sail was falsely reported black; that on learning of her lover's death she did not stop to verify the report but returned to Cornwall; that Tristram, reviving from his death-like swoon, set sail for her, and his wife after him; that disguised as a harper he entered King Mark's castle, where he is stabbed by the drunken husband who in turn is stabbed by the Queen who then leaps from the cliffs into the sea. There is nothing left for Iseult of the White Hands to do but to return mournfully to Brittany, while Merlin epiloguizes." (New Repub)

"A play wherein tragic power and poetic beauty are inseparable, and produce in the imagination of the reader that sustained incandescence which is an effect only of noble art." Lloyd Morris
+ Int Bk R p111 Ja '24 1600w

"The story is thus reduced almost to its bones, but it is not bare. Behind these hoarse and halting verses there is true harmony, and beneath this wintry exterior there is passion." Mark Van Doren
+ Nation 118:38 Ja 9 '24 600w

"The extreme simplicity of the action, quite apart from the play's occasion, belongs absolutely to the mind which conceived the colossal simplicity of 'The Dynasts.' It is a beautiful piece of shapely artistic logic—the work of a man whose imagination cannot be active except as the achievement of that keen delineation and subtle coherence which we call form. And the very thing which most modern versions of the story evade or slur or botch—the contest of the two Iseults—is the thing which Mr. Hardy's genius holds most securely." Lascelles Abercrombie
+ — Nation and Ath 34:491 D 29 '23 800w

"The style is harsh and halting, ill-suited, one would think, to dramatic recital. The rugged convolutions and inversions, the uncouth neologisms, are bare and barren substitutes for the passionate splendors of Wagner's music and the shimmering redundances of Swinburne's epic narrative. To find charm and romance one must turn not to the text but to the two drawings that accompany it, painstaking yet poetic imaginary reconstructions of the exterior and interior of the mighty prehistoric castle that fronted the Cornish Sea." S. C. Chew
— + New Repub 38:23 F 27 '24 800w

"To its mummers it belongs; for to the reader it is, to tell the truth, rather dull; and the geatest charm of this little green volume is Mr. Hardy's bewitchingly drawn frontispiece of an imagined Tintagel—the poet relapsing for a moment into the architect from whom he sprang." F. L. Lucas
+ — New Statesman 22:484 F 2 '24 250w

"The lyrics are better than the blank verse, but not one of them has that stark and yet exquisite rightness which distinguishes Mr. Hardy at his lyric best."
— Sat R 136:704 D 29 '23 700w

"It is inevitable that, in a writer of Mr. Hardy's venerable age, there should be an occasional dryness in the poetry, an occasional accentuation of idiosyncrasies which are the 'reverse'—the negative side—of a writer's genius. To ignore this would be to pay a poor compliment to so fine a poet as Mr. Hardy; the more so when the play contains so much that is real and moving." Martin Armstrong
+ — Spec 131:904 D 8 '23 450w

"It may not add to Hardy's stature as a poet, it will hardly heighten the known thrill of the old story whose interest is eternally renewed, but it adds another fine tribute to the power of the tale itself, and it lends itself well to playing."
+ — Theatre Arts Mo 8:281 Ap '24 90w

HARGER, WILSON GARDNER. Rural highway pavements, maintenance and reconstruction; a discussion of general principles illustrated by current and recommended practice. 637p il $6 McGraw

625.711 Pavements. Roads 24-4490

"A general work on road planning, design, construction, maintenance and reconstruction. Is for the most part a book of specific data rather than a discussion of principles. Includes information on materials, tests, and specifications."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:313 Je '24

HARGRAVE, JOHN. Harbottle. 347p $2 Lippincott [7s 6d Duckworth]

Dazed by his losses in the war—the death of his two sons and the defection of his wife—Harbottle sets out with rucksack on back on a modern Pilgrim's Progress to find the meaning of his ravaged life and to recapture some of his lost illusions. His encounters and conversations along the way make up the book. The people he talks with are all as muddled as himself, but each one is trying to convince himself that he has found a philosophy and a panacea. Each unfolds his principle—the scientist, the artist, the occultist, the socialist, the devotee of radiant health—but death puts an end to poor Harbottle's pilgrimage before he has accomplished his quest.

"It is exceedingly well written. It lacks emotion. Throughout the story the author's talent for detachment is untiring. He has a passion for being non-committal. Yet there lies underneath the thread of narrative, a fine unswerving search for truth. That is to be respected in the author, who evidently hates shams. He possesses only a fair sense of humor. As as essayist he might reasonably hope for a wider circle of readers." D. F. G.
+ — Boston Transcript p4 O 15 '24 550w

Int Bk R p824 O '24 220w

"It is peculiarly a book which needs to be read fully, carefully, to get its whole significance. It is always engrossingly interesting as narrative; it holds many strongly dramatic scenes; its character analyses are subtle, and it is not without humor. Its artistic faults are obvious enough, but one may ignore them in a book so well worth while." H. L. Pangborn
+ — Lit R p4 O 11 '24 400w

"Such prolixity is tiring; and so is poor Mr. Harbottle, but the scope, scheme and detail of the book have points, and it is a thoughtful novel, whether a first or not." Rose Macaulay
— + Nation and Ath 35:sup247 My 24 '24 240w

New Statesman 23:628 S 6 '24 120w

"A very long and very repetitious commentary on life."
N Y Times p8 O 26 '24 680w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e S 21 '24 100w

"If one were to regard this simply from the angle of execution, of literary technique, it would be possible to find some fault as it is rather too long drawn out, holding occasional unnecessary repetitions, and the author's manner is sometimes annoyingly staccato, to the point of being affected. But there is meat in it, and the very marked individual excellence of the subject matter makes it a book of more than passing interest."
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:34 Ag 9 '24 390w

"The book is over-long and apt to be hysterical in style; but its survey of human ideals and avocations is interesting if exhausting. The individual scenes are well done, with humor and excellent characterization; but there is little method in their sequence, and the preponderance of discussion over incident makes the story appear at times like the minutes of an itinerant debating society." L. P. Hartley
— + Spec 132:810 My 17 '24 140w

"We may congratulate Mr. Hargrave on having written a book full of sincere feeling, which, whatever its purely literary merits may be, will find a response in the hearts of a great many men and women."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p284 My 8 '24 550w

HARKER, LIZZIE ALLEN (WATSON) (MRS JAMES ALLEN HARKER). Broken bow. 312p $2 Scribner

24-23807

The story opens with an account of an ardent school girl friendship between Susan Collett and Hesper Stowe whose mother kept a restaurant and so was under the social ban of the "proud Colletts." Little Hesper dies, but twelve years later when Susan is twenty-two she meets another Stowe, Hesper's brother Alfrey, now a distinguished author. The two are meant for each other but their love must wait till Alfrey gets disengaged from the wrong girl. Once more the Collett prejudice asserts itself but the family comes around in the end for they all love the delightful Susan.

Reviewed by M. A. Murphy
Int Bk R p140 Ja '25 350w

"A pleasant, honest story, delicate and accurate in its artistry, and essentially truthful to human nature."
+ Lit R p10 O 25 '24 150w

Spec 133:792 N 22 '24 70w

"To the ready touch with which the author paints the charm and humour of young children she adds a keen insight into the whims and foibles of their elders and the power of constructing a consecutive but many-sided narrative."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p653 O 16 '24 270w

HARMON, BEATRICE E. Mosaics. 63p $1.25 Yale univ. press [6s 6d Milford]

811 24-687

"The eighteenth volume in the Yale Series of Younger Poets. Miss Harmon seems to have found in the beginning the same swing of freedom that characterizes the work of Edna Millay. At times she is reminiscent of Alfred Noyes, again one would think that she had but laid down a copy of Poe."—Boston Transcript

Reviewed by D: Morton
Bookm 59:347 My '24 50w

"For all her subconscious following of better poets, she has originality and the ability to sing lightly—but not too lightly; and those who read her poems will 'listen and love them and know that she tried.'"
+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 1 '24 380w

— + N Y Times p12 F 10 '24 190w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p55 Ja 24 '24 90w

HARN, ORLANDO CLINTON. Lead, the precious metal. 323p il $3 Century [10s 6d J. Cape]

669.4 Lead 24-7206

"The author follows the metal from the mine through the refining processes, and into its many uses both in the metallic form and in its many chemical compounds. He describes its manifestations in paint, building construction, babbitts and solders, petroleum refining, ammunition, musical instruments, pigments, glass, pottery and enamels, and rubber."—N Y Tribune

"It is the most comprehensive popular compendium of facts about lead yet issued."
+ N Y Tribune p29 My 4 '24 100w

"A comprehensive and interesting book about one important metal."
+ Outlook 136:749 Ap 30 '24 50w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:368 Jl '24

"The book is illustrated and is in popular style, but it is fairly comprehensive and rests on scientific data."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 30 '24 100w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p599 S 25 '24 150w

HARPER, CHARLES GEORGE. More queer
2 things about London. 256p il $2.50 Lippincott [7s 6d C. Palmer]

914.21 London—Description [24-21935]

"Here is a mixture of queer things as mixed as London herself—the water gates, the fire companies and their marks, the Bank of England, door knockers, epitaphs, the Court of St. James, keystones and their masks, and so forth."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Cleveland p88 N '24

"Mr. Harper is an engaging writer whose style has a certain genial flavor not unlike that of the better known wanderer in London, E. V. Lucas." Sherril Schell
+ Lit R p15 D 27 '24 280w

"If the present book is not quite so full of curious facts as its predecessor, it is still full enough to justify its publication."
+ New Statesman 23:392 Jl 5 '24 360w

"He skips about entertainingly from one discovery to another almost too rapidly to be thoroughly instructive, yet supplying much amusing information."
+ N Y World p9e O 19 '24 50w

"A pleasant guide-book for leisurely wanderers in London."
+ Outlook 138:341 O 29 '24 20w

"The 'more queer things' are chips from Mr. Harper's workshop, presented with too much confidence in the reader's appetite. After all, not everything is worth recording, and though the most trivial scraps about a great city may be redeemed by an interesting presentation, Mr. Harper has here been too careless to bother about an engaging setting for his fare."
— Sat R of Lit 1:403 D 20 '24 100w

+ Spec 132:66 Jl 12 '24 550w

"Mr. Harper found his book 'Queer Things about London' so popular that he has written another. The subject is inexhaustible and he is an enthusiast. One can understand his popularity, for though he writes in rather a rough and ready way, and one could do without his facetiousness, especially in verse, he is always interesting."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p391 Je 19 '24 300w

HARPER, CHARLES GEORGE. Queer things about London. 256p il $2.50 Lippincott [7s 6d C. Palmer]

914.21 London—Description [23-18041]

"A fascinating account of some strange nooks and corners of the greatest city of the world. Mr. Harper writes appreciatively and entertainingly on old street signs and lamp posts, old shops and museums, and old city streets and customs. The book is illustrated with humorous pen and ink sketches by the author and can be used as a guide."—Cleveland

Boston Transcript p2 My 24 '24 650w

Cleveland p37 My '24

Reviewed by S. F. Reavis
Int Bk R p531 Je '24 70w

Reviewed by Alfred Stoddart
Lit R p14 S 13 '24 250w

"For all who care for such things, especially if they visit London, the book will be a treasure trove. The author is rather given to making obvious comment, which is annoying, but often makes amends for this by humorous viewpoint or sally of wit."
+ — N Y Times p10 Mr 2 '24 1750w

Outlook 136:443 Mr 12 '24 30w

Sat R 136:138 Ag 4 '23 150w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p443 Je 28 '23 160w

HARRINGTON, KARL POMEROY. Catullus and his influence. (Our debt to Greece and Rome) 245p $1.50 Marshall Jones

874.2 Catullus, Caius Valerius 24-2570

A study of the Roman lyrist whose "love lyrics have been the model of all succeeding ages down to our own." The author shows the influence of his poetry from his own day to ours, in Rome, in continental Europe and in England.

Booklist 20:331 Je '24

"To interpret Catullus, the 'poet's poet,' is a difficult undertaking. But Professor Harrington succeeds in showing his fundamental humanness, and in explaining something of his consummate art." H. L. Pangborn
+ Bookm 59:604 Jl '24 50w

"Mr. Harrington writes cheaply about one of the best of all poets. He is more familiar than his subject happens to allow, he is something of a prude; and when it comes to tracing echoes of Catullus in English poetry he omits to mention the most brilliant example—Marvell's 'To His Coy Mistress.'"
— Nation 118:351 Mr 26 '24 50w

HARRIS, CORRA MAY (WHITE) (MRS LUNDY HOWARD HARRIS). My book and heart. 318p $3 Houghton

B or 92 24-8389

When Mrs Harris gave this title to her autobiography, she chose well. Born over a half century ago, her life has been one largely of struggle and hardship which the record of those years shows clearly. This is a purely personal biography, in which the reader learns to know intimately and sympathetically the author of "The Circuit Rider's Wife." Thru her eyes we see her childhood, her girlhood, her womanhood and marriage. Particularly interesting are the years when she and her god-fearing husband, Lundy Howard Harris, worked and lived together.

Booklist 21:23 O '24

"Like the stories in 'A Circuit Rider's Wife, this personal account is torn from the very fibre of her homespun existence, and it possesses her rare scriptural exaltation tempered by unfailing humor."
+ Bookm 59:606 Jl '24 200w

Cleveland p46 Je '24

"Events of her childhood, of her youth, marriage; of illness and recovery, the death of her husband and of her beautiful daughter, are touched upon lightly, tenderly; the deepening strength of her own soul as it passes through these things is clearly revealed; and always, from beginning to end, the glowing spark of humor lives." M. T. H.
+ — Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p22 Ap 20 '24 500w

"The strength of 'My Book and Heart' lies in the straightforwardness and simplicity with which the story is told, tho the friendly atmosphere pervading it is not to be ignored. The book may be likened to a rambling, reminiscent talk with a friend—a wise, loving friend, who turns a witty phrase as naturally as she breathes, and who seemingly has been born sentient of everything." M. A. Murphy
+ Int Bk R p615 Jl '24 420w

Reviewed by Hamilton Holt
+ Int Bk R p871 N '24 4000w

"Here is a picture of plain, homely life, with its hard and even bitter experiences, illuminated by the writer's vision and sincerity. . . As human and intimate a document as one often reads."
+ Lit R p745 My 10 '24 450w

"We are left with the impression of having met a woman of character whose strength has not overcome her sweetness, and who sees more clearly, though not farther, than many of her contemporaries."
+ New Statesman 23:628 S 6 '24 130w

"Into this frank revelation she has poured a personality more real than most of the people you know at first hand. There is implicit poetry,

HARRIS, CORRA MAY—Continued
ruggedness, courage; and, strangely peeping out of churchly associations and more somber shadows in her life, a Puckish spirit makes itself felt even in repression." Howard Devree
+ N Y Times p16 Je 29 '24 1450w

"She doesn't make a good book of this. She is too self-conscious and smug about the righteousness of her living."
— Outlook 137:548 Ag 6 '24 250w
Pratt p37 summer '24

"A frank, buoyant, humorous and human record of a courageous Southern woman's life."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 13 '24 1100w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p478 Jl 31 '24 100w

"An absorbing and unconventional book."
+ Wis Lib Bul 20:125 My '24

HARRIS, FRANK. Contemporary portraits, fourth series. 318p $2.50 Brentano's [10s 6d G. Richards]
920 Biography 23-18138

"A book in which Mr. Harris records his views of some forty well known people. These include American Presidents, Trotsky and many Russians, scientists, painters, and Charlie Chaplin—with whom the writer visited Sing-Sing Prison."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 20:263 Ap '24

"If gargoyles be portraits, Mr. Harris's Charlie Chaplin, Gorky, Mark Twain, Woodrow Wilson, and Sing Sing must be tolerated—even though they suggest that quondam mastery seems now sinking into senility."
— Bookm 59:87 Mr '24 130w

"The average reader must summon up at least enough philosophy to bear with the author's contempt, always vigorous and often ill-mannered, for some of the things which he holds in affection and respect. In fact, if he finds real pleasure in a full third of what he reads, he will be fortunate. It is in some of his purely literary portraits that even the benighted reviewer finds Mr. Harris most enjoyable." S. L. C.
— + Boston Transcript p6 F 9 '24 520w
Cleveland p62 Jl '24

"Mr. Harris has a great deal of information, an individual point of view, an interesting style, and extraordinarily bad manners. He has known many interesting people, both eminent and insignificant, and could write delightfully of them if he would; but half his essays leave a bad taste."
— Lit R p561 Mr 1 '24 550w

"Mr. Harris's extremely individual style often succeeds in conveying vivid, penetrating impressions of human character with an astonishing economy of words. He has a passion for humanity, for the souls of men, not their shells. Some of Mr. Harris's estimates of character we cannot endorse, but while we differ we feel them to be absolutely sincere; he has never been a man to allow public opinion to stand in the way of the championing of his own convictions."
+ — Sat R 137:62 Ja 19 '24 1100w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p48 Ja 24 '24 1100w

HARRIS, FRANK. Undream'd of shores. 336p $2 Brentano's [7s 6d G. Richards]
24-11139

"The stories are not cut to any standard length of pattern, and are bizarre rather than original in plot. The scene shifts from the shabby underworld of London or Paris to countries where colors are blinding and scents stimulating. Some are mere incidents—just one striking example or another of life's little ironies, informed with the cynical touch and brevity of a Maupassant. Others are frank adventure, others again more serious stuff, full of a bitter and disillusioned philosophy of life." (N Y Times) Contents: A mad love; Akbar: "The mightiest."; A fit of madness; A Chinese story; St. Peter's difficulty; Love is my sin; As others see us; A lunatic? In Central Africa; The extra eight days; The great game; The temple to the forgotten dead; My last word.

"These are florid tales, which few will be anxious to read twice. Mr. Harris is eager to impress us with the fact that he has voyaged to distant lands. But peregrinations alone cannot make stories. These particularly are so completely empty, so far from interesting that their author's temerity in offering them to us is worth wondering about."
— Boston Transcript p4 Je 4 '24 260w

"Interesting, informative, even sympathetic." Madelin Leof
+ Lit R p8 S 6 '24 250w

"In execution the stories are often extremely dexterous; but in almost every case the hollowness of the theme makes a mockery of its meticulously woven covering. Whether in Europe, Asia, Africa or America, whether artists, torturers, native princes or prize-fighters are his subject, Mr. Harris manages to make them all unconvincing. The characters flutter and move until their situation faces them; and then, like Medusa, it turns them to stone. Atmosphere and dialogue survive better, for Mr. Harris's observation serves him well. It is judgment and invention that fail him. . . Unquestionably enormous in its extent, Mr. Harris's experience stands like a vast engine, motionless; the power is absent that would make its wheels go round." L. P. Hartley
— Nation and Ath 35:120 Ap 26 '24 260w

"They have not the superficial brilliance which the esthete craves, nor the breezy 'all's well with the world' quality that assures acceptance in the popular magazines. They are well worth reading, all the same, these essays, in the realm of unhampered imagination, by a combative and rarely independent spirit."
+ — N Y Times p8 Je 1 '24 850w

"Love, pity and understanding have been with Mr. Harris as he wrote, sometimes almost to the detriment of the artistry of his stories. The 'Undream'd of Shores' are so fascinating in the reading that this criticism seems ungracious; yet it must stand. It takes little from the distinction or the beauty of these unusual stories, each one of which is not only original in itself, but full of images and ideas stimulating and delightful to ponder when the book is laid away." R. S. Alexander
+ — N Y Tribune p23 Ag 3 '24 400w

"Short stories have been written in the first person singular before, but the best short stories are those which give a perfect illusion of reality, and that is not accomplished by the intrusion of the narrator. . . Certainly, this device is not persuasive if used in stories which, through careless construction of character or plot, are themselves ridiculous, for a short story must have a semblance of reality." H. S.
— N Y World p2e Je 29 '24 450w
Spec 133:604 Ap 12 '24 460w

"In these stories we are transported from continent to continent with the facility which comes of a natural ease of description and the economical expenditure of local colour. The reader is in turn amused and excited, sometimes hurt and often charmed, till it becomes a difficult matter to say at what point precisely conviction is lacking."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p142 Mr 6 '24 600w

HARRIS, FRANKLIN STEWART, and BUTT, NEWBERN ISAAC. Scientific research and human welfare. 406p $2.50 Macmillan
609 Scientific research. Inventions
24-22058

Here is given a picture of the changes in everyday life which have been brought about during the last hundred years as a result of scientific research. The authors tell how the cause of disease was found and specific diseases were conquered, how methods of communication have developed, and of the discoveries and inventions which have revolutionized agriculture, engineering and mining, manufacturing and home management. The appendix gives a chronology of scientific discoveries.

Booklist 21:97 D '24

"The volume is written in remarkably simple language and style. Though it deals with all the sciences and brings in the latest discoveries, the authors have not found it necessary to fill their pages with the technical terms and symbols which most scientists are unable to avoid. If you think it is easy to write so simply about science, just try it." E. E. Slosson

+ Sat R of Lit 1:323 N 29 '24 550w

HARRISON, MRS MARGUERITE E. (BAKER). Red bear or yellow dragon. 296p $3 Doran

915 East (Far East)—Description and travel 24-9116

Mrs Harrison's new adventure took her into the Far East—to Japan, the Amur province, Korea, China and Siberia. While she was on her way changes in the map of eastern Siberia brought about her arrest in Chita. She travelled across Siberia to Moscow as the involuntary guest of the Soviet government and remained in prison until released by the efforts of the American relief administration. The countries thru which she travelled are marked by the trails of the dragon and the bear and where they cross each other storm centers arise. Mrs Harrison describes the "political weather map" as she found it in this record of her experiences day by day.

"She can be counted on to give a social, political, and economic view of each place she visited, and her severely journalistic style, although it robs the account of any personal charm, nevertheless makes it sound, trustworthy and unbiased."

+ Bookm 59:479 Je '24 220w

"The book should be of vital interest to everyone today for the problem of the Far East has suddenly become, to a new extent, our own. Mrs. Harrison is remarkably non-partisan." I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 17 '24 1750w

Cleveland p64 Jl '24

Ind 112:241 Ap 26 '24 10w

"Altogether this record of a courageous, intelligent, inquisitive traveler among the mysteries and dangers of the Soviet hinterland inspires respect and keeps our interest." L. K.

+ Ind 112:289 My 24 '24 330w

"Lively reading." S. F. Reavis

+ Int Bk R p528 Je '24 100w

"Mrs. Harrison made her goal too comprehensive. Her exploits are consequently as mild as their object is magnificent. . . It is a dauntless adventurer indeed who thinks that intimate glimpses into the lives of the great or the near-great can be obtained in one-night stands or in single interviews." Mary Beard

— Nation 118:590 My 21 '24 850w

New Repub 40:208 O 22 '24 280w

N Y Tribune p29 My 4 '24 260w

"Without possessing any great claim to the reader's serious attention, Mrs. Harrison's brisk, gossipy chronicle of her tour through Japan, Korea, northern China, and Siberia, and of her involuntary second visit to Soviet Russia, may be read with interest as well as enjoyment."

+ Outlook 137:36 My 7 '24 140w

HARRY, MYRIAM, pseud. Springtide in Palestine. 205p il $4 Houghton [15s Benn]

915.69 Palestine—Description and travel. Zionism [24-29213]

"The title of Madame Harry's new book is frankly symbolical. After many years of absence she has revisited Palestine in the Spring of the year—when, on the hills, the cyclamen push up through the stones, and in the valleys there is water, singing among the green. She has seen, in that rejuvenated land, Jews coming and going to their tasks with a conviction, a zest, and an idealism that she never saw there before; and it is for her as if a new Springtide were flowering for the outcast people of the Hebrews. Madame Harry's pilgrimage ended at Jerusalem, in Holy Week; and as she tells of the ritual outside the Wailing Wall we see something of the workings of the spirit that has led to the present rejuvenescence."—Sat R

Booklist 21:146 Ja '25

"Mme. Harry observes with the eye of the poet as well as that of the trained investigator. Her descriptions glow with a color and an imagery uncommon in even travel-studies of the 'Holy Land.' " F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 30 '24 1250w

Cleveland p88 N '24

"Her descriptions are artistically concrete, her portrayals more than life size. In every page she manages to convey a cross-section of palpitating life. The book is poorly edited. The account necessarily contains many Hebrew terms. These terms are spelled without any attempt at uniformity; most often they are not given phonetically, but fancifully. Because the book is well printed and bound it should not be marred by careless editing." C: A. Madison

+ — Lit R p14 S 27 '24 360w

"If it is, perhaps, too much to hope that propaganda should be written with restraint, it is at least reasonable to expect that it should not be published under titles which amount to false pretences. The trusting reader of this book is led by the title to look for a more or less romantic work of travel. What he gets is a Zionist tract written in a style bordering upon the hysterical."

— New Statesman 23:264 Je 7 '24 200w

Outlook 138:181 O 1 '24 180w

"The book is, in fact, a confession of conversion to Zionism; and as such it is hardly to be expected that the reader will find in it those finely calculated evidences he might have wished. It is a little too impassioned for that. Nevertheless, Madame Harry had exceptional opportunities to study the activities of the new Jewish communities; and she has used her opportunities well."

— + Sat R 138:46 Jl 12 '24 430w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p330 My 29 '24 520w

HART, IVOR BLASHKA. Makers of science; mathematics, physics, astronomy; with an introd. by Charles Singer. 320p il $2.75 Oxford [6s Milford]

510.9 Science—History. Scientists [24-6250]

"Mr. Hart heads his chapters each with the name of a great scientist, using these as pegs on which to hang the scientific history of their times rather than as the subjects of detached biographies. The work forms a connected story of some of the broader movements in the field of the physical and mathematical science, no attempt having been made, owing to limitations of space, to include the biological or chemical branches. The great names chosen are Aristotle, Roger Bacon, Copernicus, Johann Kepler, William Gilbert, Galileo, Descartes, Newton, Robert Boyle, Ampère, Davy, Ohm, Faraday, Kelvin and Einstein. The 120 illustrations, many from old and unusual prints, add value to the volume."—N Y Tribune

---

Boston Transcript p5 D 22 '23 300w

"The summary of the mathematical and scientific work of Aristotle, Archimedes, Euclid, and Ptolemy is lucid and interesting; so also is the account of the work of Roger Bacon. Very readable, too, are the accounts of the method by which Kepler established his laws of planetary motion, and that of the respective parts played by Pascal, Torricelli, and Boyle in working out the physics of the atmosphere. Newton, Davy, and Faraday receive adequate treatment; but if a future edition of the book is called for it may be hoped that the last 40 pages may be expanded, in order that more space may be devoted to distinguished living workers." F. W. W.

HART, I. B.—Continued
+ — Nature 113:118 Ja 26 '24 200w

"It is full of interesting anecdotes and unknown information, though not 'popular' writing in the American sense of the word." E. E. S.
+ New Repub 39:166 Jl 2 '24 50w

"The distinguishing feature of the work is the author's success in conveying in relatively few words the gist of a great discovery." B: Harrow
+ N Y Times p14 Mr 2 '24 620w
N Y Tribune p28 My 11 '24 120w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:328 Je '24

HART, JEROME ALFRED. Golconda bonanza. 315p $2 Pioneer press, 1035 Mason st., San Francisco
23-17116

"John Fairfax owns the Golconda mines, and 'Bonanza Bill' Archer the Washoe group. Harry Sterling and Edgar Faulkes are the superintendents of the rival factions. Besides being rivals in business, these two men are also rivals for the fair Sylvia, the daughter of 'Bonanza Bill.' The dispute that 'all the shootin' is fur' concerns a pocket of fabulously rich silver ore, a bonanza, that Archer believes to be located just outside the boundaries of his claim and within Golconda territory, and which the Golconda owners are not aware of at all. The main theme of the book deals with the attempts made by Archer and Faulkes to ruin their rivals, force down the stock so they can buy it up and get control of the mine, and then go ahead and locate the bonanza."—Boston Transcript

"The characterizations are subordinated to action. The characters in the book are known and remembered for what they do rather than for what they say and think. And in this type of story, of course, such a method is the proper one to adopt. Mr. Hart may not have the best technique or the best method of narration, but there is nothing the matter with his imagination." W. B.
+ — Boston Transcript p6 F 20 '24 700w
N Y World p6e My 11 '24 70w
Outlook 137:613 Ag 20 '24 20w
Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 16 '24 200w

HART, JOSEPH KINMONT. Discovery of intelligence. 431p $4 Century
370.9 Civilization. Education—History
24-21912

From the moment when man first discovered in himself the power of intelligence he has been seeking new and better ways of living and working, but he has had to contest every inch of the way with age-old habits and customs. These have come to be known as folkways. With the majority, the authority of these folkways is final but there are always individuals who break away from the group and experiment with different ways. This book follows the story of these experiments and the long battle for freedom to make other discoveries, to explore, without interference, all the promising lands of intelligence. The author is especially concerned with the field of education—the task of freeing it and bringing to bear upon it the same intelligence which has already brought greater freedom in science, industry and politics.

Booklist 21:136 Ja '25
Boston Transcript p2 O 25 '24 770w

"The value of Professor Hart's book is twofold: its value in itself, and its stimulation to thinking and relating onward." H. A. Potamkin
+ Lit R p12 D 6 '24 370w

Reviewed by C. E. Ayres
New Repub 40:300 N 19 '24 1150w

"It should have a wide appeal and will probably be found interesting, even fascinating, by those readers whose interest in the historical panorama of the human race has been aroused and stimulated by the histories of Mr. Wells and others."
+ N Y Times p20 O 5 '24 400w
N Y World p9e Ja 11 '25 160w

"On the whole, stimulating and interesting, though now and then vague and rhetorical."
+ — Outlook 138:652 D 17 '24 160w

"Of making many books there is still no end, and most reading of them is weariness of the flesh. This, however, is a book to read, if one will risk shaking the hold of folkways. It is not words, words, words—honest and eager brain-work is every sentence." C. F. Ansley
+ Survey 53:229 N 15 '24 720w

HART, JOSEPH KINMONT. Social life and [2] institutions; an elementary study of society. 423p il $1.80 World bk.
301 Sociology 24-13826

"Before the subject of sociology can make much headway in the senior high school, one outstanding obstacle will have to be removed, namely, the dearth of textbook material in sociology written for senior high school students. 'An Elementary Study of Society,' is in many respects a very valuable addition to the material in the social studies field. The author divides his book into two parts, the first dealing with the development and organization of society and the second with the problems, the tasks, and the promises of society."—School R

"The book is intended for high school study; and by its simplified but inclusive method of approach should prove itself valuable for that purpose."
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 9 '24 120w

"Professor Hart sets out to introduce the school boy to society and does it skillfully and well. He has apparently observed what kind of pictures children like to look at, for his illustrations possess distinct charm. He takes one through the picturesque origins of social institutions and lands him among the real problems of to-day."
Educ R 68:168 O '24 260w
R of Rs 71:111 Ja '25 80w

"The discussion throughout is concrete, attractive, clear and appealing. Enough illustrations are scattered through the book to aid materially in making it concrete. The writer knows of no better book in its particular field than this one. This, however, is not saying a great deal in its praise, inasmuch as the number of high-school sociology texts is almost too small to mention." R. M. Tryon
+ School R 33:74 Ja '25 460w

HARTMAN, LEE FOSTER. Standardized mah jong; a manual of tactics for mixed hands, cleared hands, one-double game. 311p il $2 Harper
795 Mah jong 24-19364

Mr Foster who is a member of the Mah jong standardization committee in the foreword of his book states: "The present volume, while it presents fully the fundamentals for beginning players, is an innovation in that it attempts to present a system of Mah Jong tactics applicable to the three forms of game which are most popular in the United States and which are now officially recognized in the American Code of Laws for Mah-Jongg." The book is illustrated with examples of important plays and also contains the American code of laws for mah jong.

Booklist 21:100 D '24

"The professional player will commend the book because it teaches the beginner the skillful game as it should be played with 136 tiles rather than the 144 in which the 'luck pieces,' the Seasons and Flowers, are used." C. H.
+ Lit R p11 S 6 '24 120w

Reviewed by E. K. Moy
Sat R of Lit 1:164 O 4 '24 660w

HARTMANN, CYRIL HUGHES. La Belle Stuart. 280p il $5 Dutton [12s 6d Routledge]

B or 92 Richmond and Lennox, Frances Teresa Stuart, duchess of. Great Britain—History—Stuarts, 1603-1714 [24-18369]

Frances Teresa Stuart, 1648-1702, was famous as the most beautiful woman in the court of Charles II. She resisted the king's persistent advances and married for love the Duke of Richmond and Lennox. In addition to the romance of her story, her biography affords a picture of court and society in her day. Many contemporary letters are quoted. Her most famous portraits are reproduced and the original medal of her as Britannia engraved on British coins to this day.

"Mr. Hartmann tells his portion of British history with an able pen. He does not content himself with mere narration nor dry historical matter. He mixes careful erudition with impertinent cross references by one Pepys. If he does not always see biography as the way to 'make history interesting by throwing a high light on a central figure and establishing a relation between all the conditions and incidents of the time and that figure,' at least he writes entertainingly of a period that most workaday citizens of the world know only by hearsay." W. E. H.
+ — Boston Transcript p4 D 10 '24 950w

"Mr. Hartmann's book is more than a biography. It is an intimate picture of the court of Charles II." E. B. Smith
+ Lit R p9 N 1 '24 450w

"Mr. Hartmann's study is very well done. His book gives you a real feeling of the atmosphere of this extraordinary time. It has also some excellent illustrations." P. M.
+ Nation and Ath 35:572 Ag 2 '24 800w

"Although Mr. Hartmann is a timid and grudging champion, he at times has a true vision of his heroine as she really was, but, like nearly all writers on this period, he is far too preoccupied with its licentiousness, too much the moralist and too little the historian. Nevertheless, he has given us a documented story of La Belle Stuart that does enable us to understand why all the men of her time acclaimed her person, and why some, like Evelyn, did homage to her honour."
+ — New Statesman 23:332 Je 21 '24 550w
Outlook 138:381 N 5 '24 20w
Spec 132:21 Jl 5 '24 720w

"His book is written agreeably and in good taste, if without any exceptional literary distinction."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p336 My 29 '24 680w

HASKINS, CHARLES HOMER. Studies in the history of mediaeval science. (Harvard univ. Historical studies) 411p $6 Harvard univ. press [28s Milford]

509 Science, Medieval 24-23665

"This volume makes no attempt at a complete history of medieval science. He gives us rather an elaborate, and searching investigation of a number of striking and important incidents in its early course. He unravels the lives and works of several heroes of what may be called the 'Arabian revival of learning,' with a skill, patience, and learning that have long been appreciated by scholars. The work is essentially a piece of 'research,' and is very fully documented."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"Scholarship at its best will be found in this wonderfully detailed account of Middle Age science." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p6 N 1 '24 850w

"The thanks of all who are interested in the Middle Ages are due to the assiduous and penetrating scholarship of Professor Haskins in unravelling the records of the purveyors of antique knowledge to Western Europe in the twelfth and early thirteenth centuries." H: O. Taylor
+ Lit R p6 O 25 '24 1150w

"A fine work which fully sustains Professor Haskins's reputation as a scholar and as a man of letters."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p813 D 4 '24 1500w

HASLUCK, F. W. Athos and its monasteries. ^{2} 214p il $5 Dutton [12s 6d K. Paul]

914.96 Athos, Mount

Mount Athos, the holy mountain, at the extremity of the peninsula of Athos, has been famous since the early Middle ages for its communities of monks. The first part of the book tells the history of Mount Athos and its monastic system. The second part is a description of the twenty monasteries, their history and architecture. The illustrations include sketches of the monasteries and plans of several, and a sketch map of Athos.

"The book is so lifeless and donnish that only a sense of duty got me through it." H. J. Massingham
— Nation and Ath 36:sup386 D 6 '24 60w

"The scheme of the book is such as to render some previous knowledge of the place and its monasteries advisable if they are to get the full value from it. What seems to have interested Mr. Hasluck most is the architecture and the monastic organization, and in these respects the book is admirable and of the highest value. The visitor on the spot will find it indispensable."
+ Sat R 138:638 D 20 '24 130w

"This book does much to add to our deep regret that its author should have laid down his pen for the last time and can never charm or enlighten us with another volume."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p722 N 13 '24 1350w

HASTINGS, HUDSON BRIDGE. Costs and profits; their relation to business cycles. (Pollak foundation for economic research. Publication no. 3) 168p $2.50 Houghton

338 Business cycles. Cost. Profit 23-14421

The thesis maintained thruout this somewhat technical analysis of the upward swing of the business cycle is that production during this time is not regulated by the current demands of individual buyers but by dealers and outside speculators who cause a great overdevelopment of industries. Stocks continue to accumulate. The value of goods produced exceeds the consumers' purchasing power. The result is a commercial crisis, followed by a period of depression during which surplus stocks are slowly liquidated.

Reviewed by W. A. Paton
Am Econ R 14:317 Je '24 1600w
Ann Am Acad 114:158 Jl '24 300w
Boston Transcript p2 F 9 '24 200w

"The book is to be commended as stimulating and thought-provoking, even if one feels that there is still a great deal more to be said." C. F. Bickerdike
+ — Econ J 34:95 Mr '24 720w

"Mr. Hastings has presented a novel and stimulating discussion of the underlying causes of the cycle. No one who is interested in the business cycle can afford to neglect a thorough reading of this book." A. H. Hansen
+ Lit R p492 F 2 '24 1100w

Reviewed by H: R. Mussey
Nation 117:744 D 26 '23 240w

"In 168 pages of close analysis [this book] presents without a splinter of unnecessary intellectual lumber a thesis which might easily have occupied a volume of three times the size. Its freshness lies not in the basic theory, which has been more or less vaguely suggested before by numerous writers, but in the precision of the method." G: Soule
+ New Repub 39:52 Je 4 '24 520w

HASTINGS, WILLIAM THOMSON; CLOUGH,
2 BENJAMIN CROCKER; and MASON, KENNETH OLIVER, eds. Short stories; a collection of types of the short story. 394p $2.25 Houghton

Short stories—Collections 24-23920

A volume primarily designed for use in schools and colleges. An attempt is made to represent as many distinguished authors of short stories as possible, and to include a considerable variety of ways of telling a short story. Biographical notes are included. Contents: Of the churl who won paradise, anonymous; A remarkable passage of an apparition, by Daniel Defoe; Mr Higginbotham's catastrophe, by Nathaniel Hawthorne; The masque of the red death, by E. A. Poe; Barbazure, by W: M. Thackeray; The death of the Dauphin, by Alphonse Daudet; The outcasts of poker flat, by Bret Harte; Sieur George, by G: W. Cable; Providence and the guitar, by R. L: Stevenson; Little soldier, by Guy de Maupassant; False dawn, by Rudyard Kipling; The love-letters of Smith, by H. C. Bunner; A village singer, by M. E. W. Freeman; The Buddhist priest's wife, by Olive Schreiner; The visits, by Henry James; The pace of youth, by Stephen Crane; The widow's cruise, by F. R. Stockton; Tucson Jennie's jealousy, by A. H: Lewis; A question of habit, by W. W. Jacobs; The furnished room, by "O. Henry"; The mezzotint, by M. R. James; The sculptor's funeral by W. S. Cather; The western islands, by J: Masefield; The verdict, by Edith Wharton; The highwayman, by Lord Dunsany; The secret sharer, by Joseph Conrad; [From] Three heavy husbands, by James Stephens; The dead man, by J: Galsworthy; Mehmish, by H. G. Dwight; Araby, by James Joyce; The three kings, by W: Caine; Marriage à la mode, by Katherine Mansfield; The mockbeggar, by Sheila Kaye-Smith; Notes.

"With 'Short Stories' before one as examples of the newer text-books, one can not but be impress with the fact that educational methods, in literature at least, have made most excellent progress." Kenneth Fuessle
Int Bk R p99 Ja '25 160w

Lit R p10 D 20 '24 150w

HAVERFIELD, FRANCIS JOHN. Roman occupation of Britain; rev. by George Macdonald. 304p $6 Oxford [18s Milford]

942.01 Great Britain—History—Roman period, B.C. 55-A.D. 449 24-15890

"The six lectures which form this volume were originally delivered in 1907, but the matter has been brought down to date, considerably expanded and revised by Mr. Macdonald, who was able to use for that purpose the copious manuscript notes and partial revisions made by Professor Haverfield himself. The lectures are preceded by a sufficient biographical notice by Mr. Macdonald. The first lecture gives an interesting rapid survey in retrospect of the study of Roman vestiges in Britain from Camden's time to the present. One lecture is given to the purely military occupation and two to the 'civilization of the province,' i.e. to the cultural life of the southern, non-military settlements. Finally he treats of the passing of Roman Britain into Saxon England, and there is a brief appendix upon the 'XXVIII cities' of the Celtic supplement to Gildas's 'Lamentation.' The book is well indexed."—Lit R

Lit R p889 Jl 12 '24 250w

"The book will at once take its place as the standard work on Roman Britain, the one book on the subject which is indispensable not only to the specialist but to everyone who takes any interest in the early history of Britain." R. G. Collingwood
+ Nation and Ath 35:383 Je 21 '24 600w

"One of the greatest uses of Professor Haverfield's book will be to put local researchers and societies in the way of doing more careful and scientific work. It is a fascinating book."
+ New Statesman 23:390 Jl 5 '24 550w

"These lectures are admirable, well-arranged, full of information, without being congested, interesting from the first word to the last, while the notes and illustrations contain references to everything germane to the subject that has been done since his time. I do not see how any one with the slightest feeling for the history of this country can fail to be attracted by it."
+ Sat R 137:492 My 10 '24 500w

HAWEIS, STEPHEN. Egyptian love. 255p $2
2 Doubleday

24-24691

Reincarnation is the pivot on which this story turns. Most of the action takes place on a liner bound from England to Australia, on which Joseph Pyecote and his friend Ellicot, Cambridge students, are passengers. They are travelling steerage for experience and find it, Ellicot in the seductive charms of an Italian, and Pyecote in the magnetism of Abus, a young Welsh woman of unusual beauty. Pyecote looked forward to a sensual love affair with Abus, but her charm and stately bearing changed his attitude towards her to one of true affection. Abus, meanwhile, relates to Pyecote experiences in an earlier incarnation as a native of Egypt, and he finally discovers in her the Biblical character of Potiphar's wife Zuleikha from whom Joseph fled in terror.

"There are unusual and arresting qualities evident in Stephen Haweis's short novel which make one regret that they do not dominate it to the exclusion of those less noteworthy." E. C. Beckwith
+ — Lit R p9 O 25 '24 410w

"Almost—but there are exceptions—Mr. Haweis has achieved a novelty. The theme itself remains thin; little more than romantic tinsel, but his manner of treating it is highly interesting. The whole thing is a tour de force, but it is carried through with real cleverness."
+ — N Y Tribune p12 Ja 18 '25 200w

"A good story for such as like that sort of a story." E. W. Osborn
+ N Y World p8e O 19 '24 140w

HAWES, CHARLES BOARDMAN. Whaling. 358p il $5 Doubleday

639.2 Whaling 24-29656

"Wherein are discussed the first whalemen of whom we have record; the growth of the European whaling industry, and of its offspring, the American whaling industry; primitive whaling among the savages of North America; the various manners and means of taking whales in all parts of the world and in all times of its history; the extraordinary adventures and mishaps that have befallen whalemen the seas over; the economic and social conditions that led to the rise of whaling and hastened its decline; and, in conclusion, the present state of the once flourishing and lucrative industry."—Subtitle

Booklist 21:139 Ja '25

"If you want to sit by your fireside and enjoy some evenings of real excitement at the same time, read 'Whaling.' You will run the gamut from heavy tragedy to rollicking comedy."
+ Boston Transcript p3 N 15 '24 350w

Reviewed by Frank Shay
Lit R p8 D 6 '24 600w

"Here is everything you may want to know about whales and whaling, from the earliest times. The book is packed with picturesque and stirring incidents." B. D.
+ New Statesman 24:supxii D 6 '24 120w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p5 N 16 '24 520w

"Mr. Hawes's book is decidedly a book for every one who is a lover of ships and the sea. It covers the whaling epic in a more competent, accurate and thoroughly readable manner than any book I have yet seen. It is the final word on the subject."
+ N Y Tribune p1 N 16 '24 1000w

"He has written them into a book that is masculine and comprehensive and thrilling."
+ N Y World p8e D 21 '24 920w
Springf'd Republican p7a D 7 '24 210w

HAWKES, CLARENCE. Gentleman from France; an Airedale hero. 200p il $1.50 Lothrop
24-7131

The "gentleman" of the title is an Airedale terrier seen once by a great actress and straightway bought by her. On a visit to America Pierre runs away to roam at will, but is glad to go home again. Twice he goes to war for France, each time playing his part bravely and intelligently. His last deed is to deliver an urgent message thru smoke and shell-fire, reaching headquarters lamed and blinded. Such is the general's pride in him that Pierre is officially cited for bravery, provided with the best surgeon at hand and sent home to Madame to rest.

"In this story, as in his previous books, Mr. Hawkes shows a great love and understanding of animals."
+ Boston Transcript p2 My 10 '24 70w

Reviewed by M. G. Bonner
Int Bk R p883 Ag '24 30w

"Young readers will perhaps enjoy this charming tale all the more if they know that its author has been totally blind since boyhood, but that he has conquered the obstacle of such an appalling disability and has won regard and success as author and lecturer and the ability to enjoy as much as any one many of the best and finest pleasures of life."
+ N Y Times p16 My 4 '24 300w
N Y Tribune p28 Jl 27 '24 60w

"Like so many of the good children's books of to-day, adults will enjoy this with the youngsters." G. M. Goldman
+ N Y World p7e My 18 '24 80w
Springf'd Republican p7a D 7 '24 250w

HAWKSWORTH, HALLAM. Clever little people with six legs. 294p il $1.60 Scribner
595.7 Insects 24-5602

"An entertaining and instructive study of the common insects. Subject matter is arranged according to seasons, but the analytical index brings all the information about each insect together. Evolution is treated in easily understood terms with apt illustrations."—Wis Lib Bul

Cleveland p83 N '24

"A book to be equally welcomed as a schoolbook for nature students, and as a book of entertainment for those who would like to know more of the curiously similar ways between insects and ourselves!" M. G. Bonner
+ Int Bk R p683 Ag '24 130w

"One of the more valuable features of the book is the outline of what may be seen of the insects out of doors each month of the year. This feature alone should stimulate the interested child to hunt about in the open for evidences of insect life. The accounts of the doings of the insects are most personal, but accuracy does not seem to be sacrificed for this."
+ Lit R p732 My 3 '24 100w

"Having already touched the childish fancy with his histories of a grain of dust, a pebble, and other natural phenomena, Mr. Hawksworth has adventured no less successfully into still livelier realms."
+ N Y Tribune p24 Je 22 '24 80w
Wis Lib Bul 20:149 Je '24

HAWTREY, SIR CHARLES HENRY. Truth at last; ed. with an introd. by W. Somerset Maugham. 331p il $5 Little [21s T. Butterworth]
B or 92 24-23496

These are the memoirs of an English comedian very popular in his own country and well remembered in America in "A message from Mars." His memoirs are by no means confined to the stage. He was as keenly interested in horse racing as in acting, and he has missed few Derbys. Several chapters in the book are devoted to his racing experiences and the horses he has backed.

Reviewed by Philip Hale
Ind 113:493 D 6 '24 600w

"He was always a little in terror of a pen. His letters, usually brief, were inclined to be pedantic. He wrote like a schoolmaster. Heredity tells. One is not disappointed to find, therefore, that his reminiscences are written with a noticeable feeling of fright, a distinct self-consciousness, a lack of freedom, and a complete absence of the Hawtrey touch. Interesting and valuable they are as a history of his time and a record of the London stage from its bread and butter days." Cosmo Hamilton
Lit R p2 N 1 '24 1200w

"Hawtrey was only a perfunctory recorder—a hurried, good-tempered, rather breathless man setting down notes of what had happened to him and feeling, one can be sure, that all the spice went out of his story as he told it. Now and again he makes a little confidence or tells a vivid story, but for the most part the book is a jumble of old race cards and old play bills, among which the reader must be prepared to do a little artful skipping for himself."
— + Nation and Ath 35:518 Jl 19 '24 180w
N Y Times p7 N 2 '24 1000w

"An autobiography more mannerly and amiable it would be hard to find. But 'The Truth at Last' is not really important except that it has drawn gently and without malice a clear picture of one who was a life-long example of the British public school ideal."
+ — N Y Tribune p14 D 21 '24 620w
N Y World p9e O 26 '24 280w
Outlook 138:381 N 5 '24 30w

"Hawtrey will live long in the affectionate remembrance of those who knew him. The manner of man he was is vividly set forth in this clearly veracious autobiography." J. R. Towse
+ Sat R of Lit 1:260 N 8 '24 1350w
Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 31 '24 90w

"The truth at Last contributes to stage history only a scattering of unadorned facts. Concerning the high art of comedy, of which Mr. Hawtrey was so shining an example, there is scarcely any mention except in Mr. Maugham's preface and concluding notes, but of the magnetic individual who was at the same time 'the most finished comedian of his generation' we have a vivid and engaging picture." Rosamond Gilder
+ Theatre Arts Mo 9:68 Ja '25 190w

"The memoirs of many actors have simply the interest of a record, and no one cares much whether they or their biographers write well enough to make a real book of their lives. But there is about Hawtrey, as his jottings for all their crudeness show, a unity of character that seems to prolong the comedy when the footlights are turned down."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p384 Je 19 '24 560w

HAY, IAN, pseud. See Beith, J: H.

HAY, MARIE. Evil vineyard. 216p $2 Putnam

"The plot hangs upon the marriage of an ambitious young woman to an elderly archæologist, who captures her by the force of his intellect. Of course, in due time, she realizes that she has made a mistake. when the proper young lover appears. All that is conventional enough, but the thing is staged in a delightfully eerie old castle, La Vinaccia, 'the evil vineyard' on the shore of Lake Maggiore, which is just the place for uncanny spirits. It also involves a sort of reincarnation and re-enactment of an ancient tragedy."—Lit R

HAY, MARIE—Continued

"Clever as she is in suggesting dire happenings, which she never thinks of explaining, Marie Hay wearies us with the apathy of her story. Her paragraphs about Rome, her comments on its social life, may be excellent. Her knowledge of certain Europeans who are socially at loose ends is perhaps discerning. But as one English critic said 'she can't get on with her story.'" D. F. G.
— + Boston Transcript p5 Ap 19 '24 520w

"It thins a little toward the end when the conclusion is a bit too obviously indicated, but it holds attention pretty well, and the author's manner is pleasing."
+ — Lit R p710 Ap 26 '24 250w

"Miss Hay undoubtedly writes as the artist draws—from the life. It is this type of thing, this careful and admirable delineating of character and setting and atmosphere, that lift 'The Evil Vineyard' from the class of 'spook' fiction into the select group of workmanlike and even distinguished books."
+ N Y Times p12 Je 15 '24 780w

HAYES, LILIAN. Thirtieth piece of silver. 326p $2 Macmillan
24-24944

After Judas had betrayed his Master he threw the thirty pieces of silver before the Sanhedrin, and went out and hanged himself. This story concerns itself with one piece of silver, the thirtieth, which unheeded rolled out of sight, and eventually got back into circulation. As it traveled thru the ages, everyone who possessed it was afflicted with a cruel and traitorous spirit. So, this Judas coin, handsomely mounted in an amulet, works its wickedness in ancient Rome, Norman England, the Peru of the Incas, Venice, Holland and finally in Europe in 1940.

"Had Miss Hayes possessed the ability of a Poe or a Stevenson she would, with the theme in hand, have produced a masterpiece. But the theme required a Stevenson or a Poe. It is Miss Hayes's misfortune, not to be held too heavily against her, that she fell far short of the possibilities. She has succeeded in producing what, on the whole, is a fairly dramatic piece of work, and the lure of each new episode keeps the reader engaged to the end."
+ — N Y Times p9 N 2 '24 880w
Outlook 138:415 N 12 '24 40w

HAYNES, FREDERICK EMORY. Social politics in the United States. 414p $3.50 Houghton
329 United States—Politics and government. Political parties—United States. Socialism in the United States. United States—Social conditions 24-7080

These studies form a survey of the principal parties, organizations and movements in our political history and the differences in economic and industrial interests which gave rise to them. The author traces the origin of socialism in the United States, the labor, single tax and nationalist, movement, the Progressive party, the Nonpartisan league and the new agricultural bloc.

Reviewed by F. T. Carlton
Am Hist R 29:781 Jl '24 700w

Reviewed by H. F. Gosnell
Am Pol Sci R 18:626 Ag '24 420w
Booklist 21:52 N '24
Cleveland p55 Jl '24

"Here is a piece of historical writing that has been waiting a long time for the right combination of sympathetic mind and practiced hand both of which Professor Haynes possesses." Arthur Pound
+ Ind 113:77 Ag 2 '24 350w
Nation 119:550 N 19 '24 230w

"One can scarcely read the book without forming a broader and truer conception of the political history of our country or without being inclined to give more thoughtful consideration to the ideas advanced by those groups whose convictions prevent their allying themselves with either of the dominant political oganizations. And if Professor Haynes can accomplish even a little in this direction, he will have made a distinct contribution to the progress of civilization."
+ N Y Times p7 Ap 27 '24 1600w

Reviewed by C. H. Gaines
No Am 219:885 Je '24 320w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson
Outlook 137:362 Jl 2 '24 110w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:354 Jl '24
R of Rs 69:670 Je '24 200w

"It deals in an interesting and scholarly manner with the trend of the socializing movement in American life from the foundation of the American republic to the revolt of the present-day farm bloc."
+ Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 20 '24 1050w

"A temperate and scholarly review." F. T.
+ Survey 52:638 S 15 '24 160w

"Written from a disinterested point of view and in readable style. Brings together much information hitherto available only in scattered form."
+ Wis Lib Bul 20:145 Je '24

HAYWARD, ARTHUR L. Dickens encyclopedia. 175p il $6 Dutton [15s Routledge]
823 Dickens, Charles—Dictionaries

An alphabetical dictionary of references to the characters and places mentioned in Dickens's novels, with notes on obscure allusions and phrases. When possible, the originals of the characters have been identified.

N Y Times p21 Ja 11 '25 360w

"Intended as a 'first aid' to the so-called 'Dickensians,' but having its interest, usefulness and welcome flavor for all readers of Dickens or students of English literature, and not without value for the occasional consultant of reference books."
+ Springf'd Republican p6a D 6 '24 400w

"This is a fascinating work for the lover of Dickens to browse upon."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p632 O 9 '24 260w

HEADLAM, ARTHUR CAYLEY. Church of [2] England. 296p $3.75 Longmans [12s Murray]
283 Church of England

The Bishop of Gloucester here reviews the history and purpose of the Church of England and discusses its doctrine, worship and organization, its relation to other religious bodies and its mission in the world today. There is an appendix by H. Maynard Smith.

"The bishop gives us an interesting story of how the Church of England came to be what it is—a history that is touched with emotion." T. C. R.
+ Boston Transcript p5 N 22 '24 720w

"The book is true to the author's own position, both in its strength and in its limitations. It is English in its sincerity and candour and its general tone of restraint and sanity. It is English in its emphasis on character, and no less so in its prejudices. But we think the author has never properly understood the mystical element in Christianity, or those unexpressed aspirations which clothe themselves in the Catholic cultus."
+ — Sat R 139:11 Ja 3 '25 780w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p720 N 13 '24 560w

HEARD, GERALD. Narcissus; an anatomy of [2] clothes. 150p il $1 Dutton [2s 6d K. Paul]
391 Clothing and dress

"Taking as his inspiration so seemingly trivial a matter as man's attire, Mr. Heard ranges in a series of brilliant, linked discourses the speculative gamut of the history and theory of clothing and architecture, which he would likewise prove inseparable. On so shifty a foundation he rears a sprawling if spectacular edifice, many of whose rococo ornaments are contrived with a rare delicacy, gargoyles of an exquisite insolence."—Lit R

"This disconcerting thought is dextrously hounded through 150 pages in which allusion is authoritative though scant; but supposition and hazard, virile. The author shows small respect for accepted evaluations, exalting, for instance, the civilization of the almost forgotten Cretans, the while he belittles the artificialities and fripperies of the Greeks, 'these amazing mongrels.'" Hugo Sonnenschein

Lit R p14 Ja 24 '25 460w

"An erudite yet sprightly metaphysic of mode. Its moderate difficulties resolve upon examination into fairly assimilable material, if you will take the time and trouble, and its flavor of philosophical wildness, lacking not a certain mischievous intention underneath, is piquant enough to keep you well awake." Will Cuppy

+ N Y World p8e Ja 11 '25 1600w

Outlook 139:118 Ja 21 '25 10w

"The greater part of the book is a farrago of advanced psychology, æsthetic theory, biology, and more obscure sciences. The author has some knowledge of primitive art, is a determined maker of phrases, and quotes a large number of authorities on many subjects."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p654 O 16 '24 30w

HEARN, LAFCADIO. American miscellany; articles and stories now first collected by Albert Mordell. 2v 227;265p $6 Dodd

814 24-24066

Mr Mordell presents in these two volumes fifty articles and stories which are the result of research of forgotten files. For the most part they represent Hearn in the early seventies when he was eking out a living by writing for the Cincinnati and New Orleans newspapers. His range is a large one but emphatic of his interest in grotesque and horrible subjects. A lengthy introduction by Mr Mordell gives the various stages of the journalist's career in this country.

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p4 O 25 '24 1400w

"He could write about anything and make it interesting, and when the subject especially fitted his mind he could make it extremely fine. Rumor has it that the American days of Hearn are shortly to receive a biographical dress. In that case 'An American Miscellany' will prove to be a valuable adjunct. In any case it is a contribution to American letters." H. S. Gorman

+ N Y Times p11 O 19 '24 2200w

HEARN, LAFCADIO. Creole sketches; ed. by Charles Woodward Hutson. 201p il $2 Houghton

814 24-10002

"The book consists of sketches written by Hearn in New Orleans, 1878-81, for The Item, a daily paper published in that city. Hence one more illustrious name is added to the columnists. He writes on Old-fashioned Houses, Creole Servant Girls, Latin and Anglo-Saxon; on such subjects as why people who live in flat lands do not sing aloud as do those who dwell among mountains; he predicts that the French element will survive in Quebec after the Creole has been absorbed in Louisiana; and every now and then he writes a pure song in lyrical prose."—N Y Times

---

"It is seldom enough that the early journalistic pieces of even the most famous have sufficient merit to make their perpetuation justifiable on literary rather than documentary grounds. It is a real tribute to the genius of Lafcadio Hearn that these pieces are worth reading for their own sake."

+ Bookm 59:608 Jl '24 100w

Boston Transcript p6 Ap 19 '24 770w

Cleveland p68 S '24

"In short, and finally, this is a book to be read from beginning to end, and a reader of distinction will not fail to do so, and then, hand on heart, unless he is a niggard, thank Mr. Hutson for the good pleasure he has bestowed upon him." Grace King

+ Lit R p804 Je 7 '24 620w

"This latest posthumous work, 'Creole Sketches,' written for a newspaper, is not inferior in interest and value to any other of his productions that I have seen. It is characteristic of so fastidious an artist, that although these papers were written with no thought of preservation, but merely to save his body from starvation, there is not a single slovenly or carelessly made paragraph. If we had only this one small book, we should know that the author was an original genius." W: L. Phelps

+ N Y Times p5 My 18 '24 1300w

Outlook 138:216 O 8 '24 20w

R of Rs 70:336 S '24 80w

HEARN, LAFCADIO. Essays in European and Oriental literature; arranged and ed. by Albert Mordell. 339p $2.50 Dodd

804 Literature 23-13678

"These essays have been taken from the old files of the New Orleans 'Times Democrat' and represent Mr. Hearn's efforts between 1882 and 1887. They reflect the same attitude toward realism and idealism that characterized his later writings, and the same interest in the literature of the Far East."—Bookm

---

"They are written in a journalistic style, in too short form for any extended defense of the positions taken. Perhaps the enthusiasts of Mr. Hearn will enjoy the book, but for those whose interest is lukewarm at best, there is little of entertainment."

— + Bookm 58:583 Ja '24 180w

"These papers testify to the enthusiasm, the alert curiosity, and the fine critical perceptiveness of their author, who kept his mind free from the journalistic treadmill by his discoveries and his appreciations of French, Hindoo, and Japanese literature. Some of his findings are as applicable today as they were when they were written in the eighties." Lisle Bell

+ Nation 118:sup450 Ap 16 '24 450w

"Hearn's mental processes were incisive, his critical faculty acute, and in style and color his diction was remarkable."

+ Outlook 135:318 O 24 '23 70w

"Whether the papers would attract anything like such attention today, apart from a name as celebrated as Lafcadio Hearn's has since become, is open to question. It is certain that they will add nothing to his fame nor will they attract serious notice to any large degree beyond the circle of his avowed admirers."

— + Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 1 '23 650w

"Doubtless most authors would wish their editorials to be buried with them, yet Hearn's reputation will suffer nothing by this journalistic revival. Indeed, it will gain, since our admiration for the lectures in Japan is qualified by the circumstances."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p741 N 8 '23 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 20:123 My '24

"This sensitive work of the 'eighties shows Hearn's fineness of calibre, and his eagerly roving mind. But it is sad to find him succumbing to current clap-trap; infatuated with the sentimentalisms of Edwin Arnold, and exalting 'The Light of Asia' over the 'cold poetry' of the other Arnold." V. D. Scudder

+ — Yale R n s 13:817 Jl '24 340w

HEARNSHAW, FOSSEY JOHN COBB. Democracy and labor; a sequel to Democracy at the crossways. 274p $4.25 (10s 6d) Macmillan

321.8 Democracy. Labor and laboring classes [24-13828]

This volume which is dedicated to "all constitutional working men and women" embodies the main conclusions of "Democracy at the crossways" and also incorporates new material accumulated during the years 1918-23. In the epilogue the author states "the main purpose of the writing of this book has been to plead for democracy as against direct action; for personal freedom as against Socialism in all its protean shapes; for faith and fellowship as against materialism and Class War." The book is divided into four parts: Part I, Democracy; part II, Labour; part III, The false lights of democracy and labour; part IV, The true way of progress. There is also a book list supplementing that in his previous work.

"We are glad indeed that so useful and so opportune, so skillful and informed, a contribution as the book before us should be made to the wise, forceful discussion of our present problems." L. L. Price

+ Econ J 34:449 S '24 1550w

"Mr. Hearnshaw's book, with its treasure of terse statement, is warmly to be recommended."

+ Sat R 137:354 Ap 5 '24 210w

Reviewed by G. R. S. Taylor

Spec 132:198 Ag 9 '24 90w

"Its tone is too uniformly shrill to make a strong impression. . . The defect is the more to be deplored because the book deals with matters of great moment and has many merits, being very easy to read and to understand, and therefore eminently suited to the general public for which it is intended."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p275 My 8 '24 950w

HEART of a father; a human document by a well-known public man; with a preface by Sir James Marchant, and others. 76p $1 Houghton [2s Allen, & U.]

134 Spiritualism

A father who had lost under tragic circumstances a dearly loved and unusually promising young son writes this little experience book to tell of the psychic revelation which came to him that his son was living and could be communicated with in the spirit world.

"The little book is written in a beautiful style, the simple and tender expression of deep and absorbing emotion."

+ N Y Times p10 O 26 '24 350w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p467 Jl 24 '24 40w

HEDRICK, WILBUR OLIN. Economics of a food supply. 336p $2.50 Appleton

338.1 Food Supply. Farm produce—Marketing 24-2382

The purpose of this account by the professor of economics in Michigan agricultural college is to tell the whole story of the way in which food comes to the consumer. Consideration is given to the physical and biological sources of food supply, but the main effort has been to show the devices and methods by which these natural resources have been turned into food. Beginning with an account of foodstuffs and food values, successive chapters deal with the problems of production, marketing and distribution, the part played by the middleman, the various food trades, food prices, public control of food purity, and food supply and food distribution by government.

"It provides in simple language a unique and valuable discussion from the economic standpoint of this most important subject of the food supply. . . The last five chapters are the most valuable in the book. These chapters are original, suggestive, interesting, and in the discussion of food distribution by the government the author rises to the point of enthusiasm. The whole book is genial and readable—a real accomplishment in a book almost encyclopedic in scope." O. E. Baker

+ Am Econ R 14:309 Je '24 600w

Booklist 20:324 Je '24

"Informing reading."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 1 '24 440w

Cleveland p56 Jl '24

"Dr. Hedrick's book is unique in its comprehensiveness and in its interesting style. He has avoided technical terms and has made use of simple and colorful English. Some of the passages, indeed, are likely to cause the reader to run to the cupboard for a bite between meals." F. W. Henshaw

+ Detroit News p12 Jl 27 '24 340w

Wis Lib Bul 20:172 Jl '24

HELIODORUS, bp. of TRICCA. Aethiopian romance; tr. by Thomas Underdowne; rev. and partly rewritten by F. A. Wright; with an introduction. (Broadway translations) 323p $3 Dutton [7s 6d Routledge]

24-10967

"This is a welcome addition to the 'Broadway Translations.' Heliodorus's Aethiopica is among the most charming of romances—a novel of lovers' faith and trials in Egypt amid thieves, pirates, witches, wanton princesses, crafty priests and various other personages proper to a full-blooded tale of adventure. Of Heliodorus himself next to nothing is known, but it seems probable as Mr. Wright says, that he wrote at the beginning of the third century after Christ."—New Statesman

"In the present edition F. A. Wright of Cambridge University has rectified Underdowne's errors and made the book readable for those unfamiliar with Elizabethan English, withal preserving wherever possible the beauty of Underdowne's prose. And for this picturesque, musical language alone the book is well worth reading." Daisy Neumann

+ Lit R p889 Jl 12 '24 500w

"Underdowne deserves more reputation as an 'Englisher' than he possesses. He is of the domestic type of translator, like Holland and, to some extent, North, and is full of jolly colloquialisms that fit the narrative to a hair. Mr. Wright's Introduction might surely have been fuller. He makes no attempt to explain, for instance, who Heliodorus was."

+ — Nation and Ath 34:640 F 2 '24 200w

New Statesman 23:234 My 31 '24 200w

Outlook 136:440 Mr 12 '24 50w

HELLER, FRANK, pseud. (GUNNAR SERNER). Grand Duke's finances; tr. from the Swedish by Robert Emmons Lee. 351p $2 Crowell

24-23178

This book is a continuation of the exploits of Philip Collins, the Swedish detective. The setting of the story is the Island of Minorca whose impoverished ruler Don Ramon XX is at his wits' end to redeem an unfortunate pledge made to the Grand Duchess Olga of Russia. At this juncture appears Philip Collin, alias Professor Pelotard. He cleverly recovers a valuable love letter which the duke had indiscreetly pawned, rescues a beautiful woman in distress, and throttles a revolution. It all ends with the sudden appearance of the grand duchess and a Russian wedding aboard a battleship.

"Always entertaining, lifting the scenario quite above the level of a mere tale of picaresque adventuring." H. L. P.

+ Lit R p10 N 8 '24 270w

"Those who have enjoyed the various adventures of Philip Collin, Mr. Heller's intrepid and most resourceful swindler, will find that he has been provided in this new story with room for the full scope of his unusual character and attainments."

+ N Y Times p26 O 26 '24 260w
Outlook 138:381 N 5 '24 50w

HELLER, FRANK, pseud. (GUNNAR SERNER). London adventures of Mr. Collin; tr. from the Swedish by Pauline De Chary. 344p $2 Crowell

24-8654

Philip Collin is an engaging criminal who is obliged to flee from his native Sweden to escape the arm of the law and who continues his escapades in London with gay abandon and complete success. Contents: Limousine 12, M. 1000; The story of the absent-minded gentlemen; The sorrowful adventures of Mr. Isaacs; The mystery of the lost bullion; Mr. Collin becomes a landlord; Mr. Collin's holiday agency; The blue-eyed lie.

Cleveland p51 Jl '24
Int Bk R p858 N '24 20w

"'Frank Heller' shows his fine touch in these serio-comic puzzle stories with which he began his literary career, but they do not measure up to his later achievements as displayed in 'The Emperor's Old Clothes' and the 'Marriage of Yussu Khan.'" H. L. P.

— + Lit R p874 Jl 5 '24 120w

"Mr. Heller sometimes demands a good deal from his reader in the matter of credulity, as in 'The Story of the Absent-Minded Gentlemen,' but for all that there is something engaging in the idea of seeking out absent-minded collectors of objets d'art and charging them several times over for expensive purchases."

+ — N Y Times p8 Je 22 '24 300w
N Y Tribune p24 Jl 13 '24 200w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p2e Je 29 '24 120w

"Tired people and detective-story fans will delight in 'The London Adventures of Mr. Collin.'"

+ Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 20 '24 180w
Wis Lib Bul 20:213 O '24

HELLMAN, SAM. Low bridge and punk pungs. 112p il $1.25 Little

817 24-21405

These slangily humorous tales are burlesques on auction bridge playing and mah jong. Contents: Low bridge; High bridge; Eight clubs, doubled; Punk pungs.

"This is an excellent selection, combining Mr. Hellman's various methods for charming his readers."

+ Boston Transcript p8 O 4 '24 200w

"Mr. Hellman proceeds to twirl the loose ends of repartee and badinage in as pleasant a manner as possible. He is never tedious; the brevity of the book hints at something like judicious selection. He is more apt to be over-eager."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:231 O 25 '24 390w
Springf'd Republican p6a D 14 '24 100w

HEMON, LOUIS. My fair lady; tr. by William Aspenwall Bradley. 226p $2 Macmillan

23-17165

A collection of eight short stories by the author of 'Maria Chapdelaine.' They are French in manner but only two of them are French in scene, the others being incidents of London life. The title story is a charming sketch of two old men meeting after long separation and recalling memories of their boyhood and of little Liette, whom they had both loved. The tales are slight, almost plotless, and all are pitched in a minor key. Contents: My fair lady; He-who-sees-the-gods; The last evening; The old woman; The destiny of Miss Winthrop-Smith; Truth fair; Fear; Lizzie Blakeston.

+ Booklist 20:218 Mr '24

"Grim and grimly appealing, the stories bring into high relief against the sordid backgrounds figures strangely assorted. Yet they are kin in a common knowledge of life's disillusion. . . To one reader, 'The Last Evening' stands out among them all, uniquely conspicuous. A picture of Hogarthian realism, etched with a stark simplicity as compelling as it is pitiless." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ja 26 '24 550w
+ Cleveland p5 Ja '24

"By the simplest of means, he creates a mood of tragic tenderness which sustains itself through the limpid grace of the prose; not a stroke is added for the mere sake of the story."

+ Dial 76:198 F '24 50w

"They never rise above the level of the competent feuilleton and will hardly impress English or American consumers of magazine fiction." Ernest Boyd

— Lit R p574 Mr 8 '24 160w

"It shows the unmistakable signs of early work. It is green fruit which has not attained the delicate, symmetrical perfection of 'Maria Chapdelaine.' But it excels in its understanding of the human heart. Praise should be given Mr. Bradley, the translator, by whose skill the work loses nothing in the English rendering." Laura Benét

Nation 118:375 Ap 2 '24 650w

"I should say that the short stories of My Fair Lady, although less vital than Maria Chapdelaine, are at least its equal in craftsmanship." Katherine Keith

New Repub 40:183 O 15 '24 700w

"They are beautifully wrought and definitive unities, all distinctly within the tradition of the French conte."

+ N Y Times p9 D 9 '23 420

"There is a sustained quality in the style of this book which is too rare. I cannot think that William Aspenwall Bradley, who made the translation from the French, can have lost much of its savor. There are descriptions and comments contained herein whose like one will thumb through many volumes before finding." Bruce Gould

+ N Y Tribune p23 Ja 20 '24 720w
Wis Lib Bul 20:26 Ja '24

HENDERSON, ARCHIBALD. Washington's southern tour, 1791. 340p il $15 Houghton

B or 92 Washington, George. South—Description and travel 24-445

"Washington's tour of the North in 1789 has attracted the attention of historians because it was his first Presidential trip. His expedition through the South in the spring of 1791 has received little notice because it was attended by no particular episodes. Mr. Henderson now succeeds in filling 300 interesting pages with a record of the tour. Its worth is not biographical, for it throws no new light whatever upon Washington. But it is valuable 'itinerary,' filled with information upon cities, towns, and local residents of prominence, while it embodies much social history, particularly upon modes of travel and hospitality. No journey ever taken in America had more the character of a state procession than this three months' tour from Philadelphia to Savannah and back, accomplished between March 21 and June 12."—Lit R

Am Hist R 30:158 O '24 600w

"Altogether Mr. Henderson has given us a volume of historical value, because it shows the great President studying at first hand the problems of his people, and of intense local interest along the line of his journey. It is revealing alike to the student and the antiquary." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 9 '24 1650w

Reviewed by J: W. Harrington
Int Bk R p363 Ap '24 2500w

"Mr. Henderson has done his work with signal thoroughness and accuracy, though also with a certain prolixity. He has left no

HENDERSON, ARCHIBALD—Continued
source unexplored—newspapers, manuscript collections, and family traditions. The characterizations and brief biographies of Southern figures are valuable." Allan Nevins
+ — Lit R p556 Mr 1 '24 1200w
New Repub 39:165 Jl 2 '24 260w

"Mr. Henderson has done his work admirably. The eighty-seven illustrations give the book an added interest for the reader and value for the historical student." N: Roosevelt
+ — N Y Times p1 Ja 27 '24 1800w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:327 Je '24

HENDERSON, DANIEL MACINTYRE. Harp in
2 the winds; lyrics from a garden, and songs of city, sea and road. (Appleton lib. of verse) 140p $1.25 Appleton
811 24-28249

Poems of direct and popular appeal which have been widely scattered in various periodicals.

"A light, compelling breeze tunes Mr Henderson's poetic harp in 'A Harp in the Winds' to melodious attention. Stirs, but does not startle; vibrates but does not throb—is, truly, a harp."
Boston Transcript p5 D 17 '24 100w

"Even if the penetrating editor of the Saturday Review had not penned a foreword to Daniel Henderson's 'A Harp in the Winds,' the book would stand squarely on its feet and cast a shadow. For these are poems derived from and indebted to the central sources—gardens and snow and ships and traffic and people and pioneer history." Joseph Auslander
+ N Y World p8e D 14 '24 140w

HENDERSON, GEORGE C. Keys to crookdom; with an introd. by August Vollmer. 429p il $3 Appleton
364 Crime and criminals 24-24381

The author shows the different types of criminal in action—automobile thieves, burglars, bandits, swindlers, murderers, etc.—taking up each class of offender separately and analyzing his methods, motives and mentality. The book also describes the way the police work and methods of crime detection. Appendices provide definitions of the most important classes of criminals and a brief dictionary of criminal slang.

"There is no doubt about the universal appeal of this book. It is so clearly written and interestingly arranged that student criminologist, jaded reader and venturesome youth alike will find in its pages the satisfaction they seek." P. M. Wheeler
+ Lit R p6 Ja 3 '25 410w

"This book, notwithstanding its motion picture sounding title, is a widely observed, profoundly studied contribution to that exact knowledge of the criminal, his motives, causes, methods, purposes, which is carrying criminology on toward the goal its students have in view."
+ N Y Times p23 N 9 '24 650w
Reviewed by P. F. Sifton
N Y World p9e N 16 '24 950w
Outlook 138:381 N 5 '24 50w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p785 N 27 '24 950w

HENDERSON, HELEN WESTON. Loiterer in
2 London. 434p il $5 Doran
914.21 London—Description 24-25309

A loiterer will have no difficulty in finding the places described for they are admirably illustrated by photographs and the author also furnishes the historical associations of the landmarks and stories of well-known people.

Booklist 21:146 Ja '25
N Y World p9e N 2 '24 50w

"This is conscientiously written, well printed, and excellently illustrated from photographs. It is, physically, a very heavy book, and should be read from a lectern, unless you are feeling vigorous."
+ — Outlook 138:381 N 5 '24 30w

HENDRYX, JAMES BEARDSLEY. At the foot of the rainbow. 331p $2 Putnam
24-21396

The Canadian Northwest provides a colorful background for the romance of courageous Irma Boyne and Gus Janier, whose love for the open spaces marks him a free-lance adventurer. Irma is seeking her father who a year previously started out to find the lost mines of the Indians. Gus aids Irma in her search, but there is much interference on the part of a trio of knaves—a boot-legger, a renegade of the North West Mounted, and a New Yorker, who are all diligently seeking for John Boyne and his claim. Gus Janier comes upon the body of Boyne murdered, and Crowley of the North West, upon circumstantial evidence, charges Gus with the murder. Captain Downey at this moment steps in, proves Janier's innocence and arrests the real murderer. Then Irma and Gus embark upon a new and joyous life.

"Even while we are ungrateful enough to confess that the plot of the story is somewhat threadbare, and that our conviction remains unchanged that the Janiers and Irmas of fiction never were 'on sea or land,' we also confess that we followed eagerly their perilous adventures."
+ — Boston Transcript p4 O 8 '24 480w
Lit R p11 O 4 '24 100w
N Y Times p21 D 28 '25 480w
Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e S 14 '24 100w

HENLE, JAMES. Sound and fury. 267p $2.50 Knopf
24-21358

Goody Guthrie of Harpersburg, Ohio, is an individualist. He belongs to the ruling class. The episodes of his boyhood, his college career and service in war are an expression of the ruling-class philosophy. But when he marries an intellectual woman his ruling days are at an end. The book reaches its climax in the downfall of Goody when he becomes entangled in scandal and is killed in a fight with the Ku Klux klan.

"Mr. Henle's Goody is a virile, a deeply interesting study of an average life as lived by an unusual individual; the climax is too dramatic; it would have been truer to life had the tale pursued the usual course of anti-climax—truer and more satisfying. But in any case, if this is Mr. Henle's first attempt at novel writing it augurs well for his future."
+ — Boston Transcript p4 O 22 '24 320w
New Repub 40:151 O 8 '24 240w
N Y Times p9 S 14 '24 400w

"Mr. Henle is entitled to a hearty welcome, for he has something to say and he says it clearly with a clean efficiency. Its construction is also sound, orderly and in good proportion as to its parts." H. L. Pangborn
+ N Y Tribune p9 S 21 '24 700w
Sat R of Lit 1:150 S 27 '24 500w

HENNESSY, MICHAEL EDMUND. Calvin Coolidge, from a Green Mountain farm to the White House. 197p il $1.75 Putnam
B or 92 Coolidge, Calvin 24-6257

"It goes without saying that this biography is more or less in the manner of a campaign document. Doubtless it is intended to be used for that purpose. The author, who is a Boston newspaperman and has written a book on Massachusetts politics, is frankly eulogistic from the first page to the last. His treatment is largely superficial in his discussion of his subject's career, achievements and characteristics, and his account of President Coolidge's life is little more than a mere gathering together of the rather comprehensive newspaper publications concerning him. And he has made his book authoritative as far as it goes by his constant method of turning to those who knew the man personally for information concerning any given step in his career. He treats rather fully some of the little known episodes in the President's life."—N Y Times

"Mr. Hennessy's sketch brings out all that is human in the President's character, and for that reason may be warmly commended." H. E. Armstrong

+ Int Bk R p511 Je '24 1700w

N Y Times p20 Mr 30 '24 460w

N Y World p6e My 11 '24 340w

"With the best will in the world, there seems but little he can say concerning the singularly taciturn man who to-day stands at the head of the Nation."

Outlook 136:650 Ap 16 '24 230w

"The work is an appreciation, almost an eulogy, of its subject, but it does tell the story of Calvin Coolidge, from his birth to the close of last year, in considerable and no doubt trustworthy detail."

+ Sat R 137:537 My 24 '24 580w

HENRY, BARKLIE MCKEE. Deceit. 314p $2 Small

24-14711

"'Deceit' is a novel written by an undergraduate. The book is serious, almost to the point of solemnity. The innermost circles of the society of Boston and Palm Beach are revealed with detailed attention that accumulates in—well, futility? In casting his story in the pattern of a diary, Mr. Henry chose a difficult medium in which to tell a novel of serious intent. He tells his story through the reactions of a man of forty who has lived, up to the beginning of the novel, the life of a prep school teacher. It is indicated that after leaving college his life had been one of studious seclusion. At forty he inherits $20,000 a year and a house on Beacon Hill—a situation brimming with amusing possibilities."—N Y Times

"There is a sophomoric attitude running through this book. . . In Angela—even in the irony of the name—Mr. Henry has attempted to picture the 'vampire,' not a very successful portrait. What is successful in the story is the give and take of the conversation, the ease with which the life of the leisure classes is pictured, and the occasional bits of atmosphere which reveal the charm of Beacon Hill." D. L. M.

— + Boston Transcript p6 Ag 13 '24 900w

"Mr. Henry's ineffectual attempt to hit off snobbery has terminated in unconscious, perhaps, but surely ribald burlesque. We must disagree with the blurb of 'Deceit'—we found this novel neither clever nor delightful."

— N Y Times p9 Je 29 '24 450w

N Y World p6e Jl 6 '24 50w

HEPBURN, MRS ELIZABETH (NEWPORT) (MRS CHARLES LEVIN HEPBURN). Fulfillment. 362p $2 Holt

24-10642

The justification for divorce is the theme of this story. Brent Appleton, a brilliant young lawyer, finds no contentment in his marriage with Frances, in spite of her beauty, for she prefers to lead her own life exclusively. For years Brent tries to satisfy himself with his work and his young niece. It is Aline, a friend of his wife, who leads him into infidelity but not to happiness. This is to come thru Diana, a woman strong enough to keep her love and Brent's untarnished till the time of his divorce from Frances and his disentanglement from Aline.

"'Fulfillment' is a vital story. It may not agree with the strict tenets of orthodoxy, but it is very human. It deals sanely and decently with an everyday problem, and it condones the physical rather than condemns the moral. Well written and well constructed, it is thoroughly acceptable."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 28 '24 530w

"There are some books in which it is not easy to detect the reason for one's annoyance. They are well written, admirably constructed, their characters are human and convincing. . . Yet they are not good. They are not fresh or significant in their viewpoint. There is something indefinably tepid, torpid, dilatory and dull in their constitution which cannot be attributed to any particular factor. It is to this category that 'Fulfillment' belongs."

— + N Y Times p9 My 18 '24 1450w

"Brent Appleton's difficulties with love and marriage are discussed in a manner so well bred, that at times it becomes mawkish; it is the everlasting triangle reduced to a puppet play."

— N Y Tribune p25 My 11 '24 440w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p7e Je 29 '24 100w

"This situation in the novel of twenty years ago would be handled with reticence and not much hope. Everybody would misunderstand everybody else, and the upshot would be a matter of chance, or destiny, unaided by the common sense of the persons involved. In Mrs. Hepburn's version the whole affair is talked over fully by all hands, the wife steps out of the way, the vamp relents, and true love comes into its own. It is all very sensibly arranged, and skillfully chronicled." H. W. Boynton

+ Outlook 137:442 Jl 16 '24 280w

"'Fulfillment' satisfactorily represents the higher average in fiction that seriously develops the theme of sex and marriage."

+ — Springf'd Republican p5a Je 29 '24 300w

HERBERT, ALAN PATRICK. Man about town. 287p il $2 Doubleday [6s Heinemann] 827

For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

"A thoroughly amusing book. With equal facility the burlesques and droll dialogues should stir the risibilities of American readers from New York to San Francisco, as they have moved to a possibly more decorous laughter the readers of that famous British journal, Punch."

+ Bookm 59:223 Ap '24 270w

"Priceless, this—or—but it must all be read to be appreciated. There is something, perhaps an ease, which one finds in English humor, that gives it a luxurious essence quite its own. Probably it is that the Englishman knows he is funny. The American only hopes so."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ja 30 '24 300w

"I can recommend Mr. Herbert. He is thoroughly urbane. He dwells lovingly upon a single situation in the manner characteristic of the richest British humor, where the American treatment would be more staccato, more sensational. But he seldom dwells too long." W: R. Benet

+ Lit R p559 Mr 1 '24 800w

Reviewed by Rollin Kirby

N Y World p6e Ja 13 '24 500w

HERBERT, ALAN PATRICK, and others. Double demon, and other one-act plays. 205p $2 Appleton

822 24-26901

A group of four one-act plays which have the endorsement of the British drama league. Contents: Double demon; St. Simeon Stylites; Thirty minutes in a street; Pan in Pimlico.

"Most of those who have searched for the perfect one-act play are convinced that no such animal exists. But the four plays which make up the volume, 'Double Demon,' are as near the desired object as one is likely to find." P. A. Hutchison

+ N Y Times p6 Je 15 '24 250w

Theatre Arts Mo 8:575 Ag '24 140w

HERBERT, WILLIAM, pseud. See Croly, H. D:

HERD, SANDY. My golfing life, told to Clyde Foster; with a foreword by Field-Marshall Earl Haig. 246p il $5 Dutton [10s 6d Chapman & H.]

B or 92 Golf [23-17975]

From a caddy on the St Andrews links Sandy Herd worked his way up to the open championship of Great Britain and to an international reputation. In these good-humored recollections of his golfing life he recalls the golfers he played with or taught to play, and he tells many good stories of golf and golfers in Scotland, England and the United States. The three concluding chapters are given to practical instructions on the game.

"Engrossing narrative of one of the foremost figures in the golfing world of yesterday and today." W. B.

+ Boston Transcript p6 F 9 '24 390w

"Here is a chance for the many of us who know too well how not to golf to do something about it and learn how to golf." A. D. Douglas

+ Int Bk R p444 My '24 120w

"Recollections of a golfing life which is as rich in stories worth telling as any the links possess. There are scores of humorous stories about small men and great. It is a thoroughly sportsmanlike and generous book."

+ Lit R p777 My 24 '24 110w

"Sandy Herd was a great golfer in his day: but hardly communicates his secret to the poor dubs who want to be great golfers in their own day. That is not to be expected, at least in a book."

Springf'd Republican p5a Je 29 '24 200w

HERFORD, ROBERT TRAVERS. The Pharisees. 248p $2 Macmillan

296 Pharisees 24-10493

An account of the history and teaching of the Pharisees. It is in general a vindication of this ancient Jewish sect, so exact in its observance and interpretation of the law, which appears in such an unfavorable light in the Gospels and called out the rebukes of Jesus. The author describes the origin and main principles of Pharisaism and shows its significance as an element in the religious development of mankind.

"It is the strongest argument for the better side of the Pharisees that we have seen, but we are hardly ready yet to throw over the New Testament and the picture of the Pharisees, contained therein, for this proclaimed by the modern and scholarly champion." T. C. R.

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 12 '24 320w

J Religion 4:554 S '24 50w

"This is a scholarly and learned work, German rather than English in its thoroughness."

+ Nation and Ath 35:60 Ap 12 '24 200w

"In an interesting book, an English Hebrew scholar carries further the historical revaluation of this devout but misunderstood sect. A work of his on the subject appeared 12 years ago. It has been rewritten in the light of further study on his own part and recent researches of German scholars. Mr Herford does not write entirely without controversial aim, but he writes without undue Jewish bias."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 My 28 '24 780w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p248 Ap 24 '24 360w

HERGESHEIMER, JOSEPH. Balisand. 371p $2.50 Knopf

24-22278

The action of Mr Hergesheimer's latest novel takes place in Virginia in 1782, the Virginia of Washington and Jefferson, where lives the hero, Richard Bale, on the plantation known as Balisand. Bale is an ardent Federalist, a man of strong convictions and high ideals, with an absorbing passion for Washington. He is a guest at the house party of his friend Gawin Todd, a staunch Jeffersonian, while Todd's engagement to Lavinia Roderick is being celebrated. When Lavinia and Richard meet they tragically fall in love. Todd refuses to release Lavinia and Richard challenges him to a duel. Before the duel is fought Lavinia is killed in an accident. Sixteen years later Richard, now married and father of three daughters, meets Gawin Todd in a tavern. There is a quarrel concerning politics, somehow Lavinia's name is mentioned, a duel is arranged—and the owner of Balisand dies in the arms of a friend, just as the canoe bringing him back touches the wharf where his wife awaits him.

Booklist 21:67 N '24

Bookm 60:488 D '24 300w

"As usual, the prose of Mr. Hergesheimer is beyond reproach. He has a beautiful style, and he makes his words mean something. The full force of them is brought out. The descriptive powers of the author are notable and he knows also how to make us believe in his characters. Like Conrad again there is a majesty to his style, a slowness, a careful dignity, that so few writers are able to command. . . By 'Balisand' he can move by sentiment, but not by sentimentality, those who enjoy his novels. And let us add that in those to whom Mr. Hergesheimer has no appeal, the breath of romance, of love, of living is no more." Karl Schriftgeisser

+ — Boston Transcript p3 S 27 '24 1000w

— + Ind 113:199 S 27 '24 700w

"The book as a whole must rank as one of Mr. Hergesheimer's best. It is free from the mannerisms that mar some of his earlier work. It is carefully finished in the texture of its style. It is clear and soundly thought out in its main conception, and admirable in its dramatic construction—a story rich in its content and satisfying in its artistry. That it falls short of being what one might safely call a 'great' novel is largely because Mr. Hergesheimer (in common with most, even of our best, novelists) has not the rare, profoundly comprehending, humorous geniality that underlies the work of the few indubitable masters. Within its obvious limits, it is not uncritical to call this a 'masterpiece,' especially in contrast to the bulk of the literature of the day." H. L. Pangborn

+ Int Bk R p776 O '24 680w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton

Lit R p3 S 27 '24 1050w

"The gallery of little Southern landlords, who condescend to all the themes under the sun when they deign to express their grotesque opinions, is so uniformly snobbish that Mr. Hergesheimer seems to have overlooked it. There is not a passably human character in the book." E. Muir

— Nation and Ath 36:334 N 29 '24 320w

New Repub 40:151 O 8 '24 200w

"The artificiality is reflected in meaningless affectations of language, and in an endless analysis of motives and feelings that strives to startle us into conviction by would-be vivid and simple phrases. The actual story of Balisand is overloaded with a carefully-woven but tiresome thread of American politics after the war of independence." J: Franklin

— New Statesman 24:336 D 20 '24 140w

"From the first page to the last the reader is impressed by the care he has taken with details. 'Balisand,' a novel of the unfamiliar post-Revolutionary period of American life, is a masterpiece of pictorial, static art. The properties of Mr. Hergesheimer's stage set are chosen with knowledge and arrayed with skill. Only when one comes to the action of the story is one disappointed, for there is no action."

— + N Y Times p4 S 14 '24 900w

Reviewed by Carl Van Doren

N Y Tribune p1 S 21 '24 600w

"Mr. Churchhill and others—none so gifted as Mr. Hergesheimer—manage somehow, despite their Shakespearean actors, to weave a story of the whole colonial cloth. Mr. Hergesheimer does not. 'Balisand,' for all its worth, is not a good picture of Colonial Virginia. He must either soil his hands or still have readers pointing to his early 'The Three Black Pennies' as his best work." Laurence Stallings

— N Y World p6e S 14 '24 900w
St Louis p399 D '24

"It takes a very exceptional talent to make the politics of an old era interesting. Mr. Hergesheimer has, everybody knows, a very exceptional talent: but in 'Balisand' he has certainly set himself a task beyond his own powers. It is magnificent, as a tour de force: but I must confess that I have found it extremely dull." Gerald Gould
— + Sat R 138:958 D 27 '24 340w

"The years have perfected Mr. Hergesheimer's art while they have disciplined his exuberant imagination. Always interesting, always sincere in his treatment of life, he has written nothing more impressive than this realistic novel of the romantic past in Virginia. 'Balisand' is a rich, a rare, a beautiful book." Ellen Glasgow
+ Sat R of Lit 1:123 S 20 '24 1300w

"Though Mr. Hergesheimer has failed to create in Bale a character capable of supporting all the significance with which he is loaded and still remaining a real figure, the secondary parts are well filled. The best parts of 'Balisand,' brief intense situations or brightly coloured evocations of gay assemblies, may be not unfairly matched with the author's earlier work; but the general level of interest is not well maintained, in spite of the ambitious subject."
— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p794 N 27 '24 500w

HERING, DANIEL WEBSTER. Foibles and fallacies of science; an account of celebrated scientific vagaries. 294p il $2.50 Van Nostrand
133 Errors, Popular. Occult sciences. Imposters and imposture 24-5112

Contents: Introduction; Astrology; Almanacs; The transmutation of metals; The perpetual motion; The overturning of scientific hypotheses; Divination; Geographic mania; Hoaxes; Prophecies; Charlatanism; Radiation; Other ancient chimeras; Appendixes.

"The book is thoroughly readable. Its interest is heightened by well selected portraits and other illustrations. It is well designed to encourage true and discourage pseudo-science. It is tolerant of the deluded without sparing those who would knowingly delude. It recognizes the difficulties often experienced in drawing the line between these two classes."
+ Eng N 92:733 Ap 24 '24 270w
Lit R p748 My 10 '24 500w

"The chief interest of the book is the light it throws upon the folly of mankind, not only of the so-called uneducated masses, but also frequently of the highest intellects of the age." G. C. S.
Nature 114:458 S 27 '24 1100w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:347 Jl '24
R of Rs 70:112 Jl '24 20w

HERING, OSWALD C. Economy in home building; with a consideration of the part played by the architect. 210p il $5 McBride
728 Architecture, Domestic 24-28972

An architect, writing from the experience of twenty-five years' practice of his profession, explains the architect's relation to home owner and contractor and suggests various directions in which economies may be effected in planning, construction, materials, etc.

Boston Transcript p4 N 22 '24 240w

"Most useful to the prospective client is this chatty volume in its smooth explanation of the duties and value of the architect as the instrument of economical and artistic success in building." M. A. F.
+ Lit R p13 D 13 '24 230w

"Written in a readable style. . . And he champions his thesis convincingly as well as interestingly."
+ N Y Times p10 O 26 '24 450w

"Mr. Hering has few reticences about his personal affairs, and gives one frankly the benefit of his own experiences, with the result that the prospective builder has much to learn from his book."
+ N Y Tribune p13 Ja 11 '25 300w

"Many pictures and valauble hints."
+ Outlook 138:340 O 29 '24 20w

HERMANN, GEORG, pseud. See Borchardt, G. H.

HERRICK, ROBERT. Waste. 449p $2 Harcourt
24-8369

"'Waste' is Mr. Herrick's version of the history of the United States since the '80s of the last century as, in a long and rich experience, he has seen it. He writes of his epoch not to tell a story or to record facts, but to expose its shortcomings. 'The will to dominate, the will to possess' . . . in America he found this blind force dominant. It wastes the energies of every character in the novel; it keeps the hero ineffective; the grip of property falls upon even the high-souled Cynthia at last. . . Squalor is his theme, spiritual squalor. Jarvis Thornton is a child in a home made squalid by the discontent of a mother who feels abused because she is not rich. He escapes to a university where squalid desires for social distinction and easy wealth pull back harder than education can pull on. His own creative desires have to be put aside so that his family may have their selfish way. When he gets his head up once again, a predatory female works upon his senses and sucks him dry, and so it goes."—Lit R

Booklist 21:27 O '24

"'Waste' is a sad novel, a rather terrible novel in its way, and yet its author does not leave it merely a piece of destructive criticism. Unlike so many novels of today, it is no mere voicing of discontent." S. L. R.
Boston Transcript p1 Ap 26 '24 600w
Cleveland p42 Je '24

"He brings to his writings not only conscience and intelligence, but a capacity for accurate observation and a disposition to reflect upon what he has seen." Lloyd Morris
+ Int Bk R p466 My '24 1400w

"'Waste' is not a cheerful book, for its author is not cheerful about America. A sour, captious book it is not. If its bankers are all either vain or predatory, or both, its mothers selfish or mean, its gay folks lacking in ultimate courage, nevertheless the human race is not dispraised. In contrast to other satires of its school, there are more men and women that are lovable than hateworthy. It is the possessive instinct that Herrick attacks, not the possessor." H: S. Canby
Lit R p687 Ap 19 '24 920w

"Mr. Herrick's chill despair has blighted to some extent his work. There is no more intelligent student of national life than he, and no one who has described from a fuller knowledge or in a more concrete manner typical examples of the working of our system. But grace of style he certainly has not, and his stories move with a heavy tread because they are told by a man who, in the bitterness of his disillusion, has lost all enthusiasm and is sustained only by an intellectual love of integrity and a cold hatred of its opposite." J. W. Krutch
— + Nation 118:588 My 21 '24 950w
Nation and Ath 36:26 O 4 '24 220w

"Mr. Herrick's latest novel is, with different degrees of merit, a document, a commentary, and a work of art. He does not compromise. His documents cover their ground with a precious courage; his commentaries never mince and palter but strike directly at the heart of every theme, as he understands it. Doubtless it is too late to expect of him that he will ever achieve that flexibility which is at least as much a gift as an achievement or that he will ever successfully cultivate the graces which spring from other dispositions than his. Meanwhile he rises among his contemporaries like a rock, battered but unsubmerged, weathered but unbroken." Carl Van Doren

HERRICK, ROBERT—Continued
+ New Repub 38:235 Ap 23 '24 1100w

"While Mr. Herrick develops his theme quite exhaustively, even exhaustingly at points, he does not do it with any great degree of art. He is more intent on the moral man than on the style; that is to say, he is essentially a propagandist, a novelist of argument. But he does a neat piece of work, he is always interesting, and his book should be read if for no other reason than its importance as a first-rate social document."
+ — N Y Times p9 Mr 30 '24 680w

"All in all, it seems to me that 'Waste' is a very good novel—perhaps Mr. Herrick's best, but a trifle too long. It is intelligent and human." Will Cuppy
+ N Y Tribune p29 Ap 27 '24 1450w

"'Waste' is a good novel, suffering from occasional dulness, as do all such stories of a family. It is relieved by honesty and perception. A little more wit would have made it doubly as pleasant as it is." Laurence Stallings
+ N Y World p11 Mr 26 '24 150w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:344 Jl '24
Spec 133:706 N 8 '24 70w
Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 10 '24 380w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p610 O 2 '24 600w

HERVEY, HARRY. Where strange gods call; pages out of the East. 349p il $3 Century
915 East (Far East)—Description and travel
24-23065

The lure of romance takes the author into the farthest cities of the world—Canton, Kioto, Zamboanga, Singapore, Rangoon. The book is a record of his personal reactions to persons and places rather than a discussion of political or economical problems. Mr. Hervey gives delightful sketches of the strange people he meets—the girl in the rose-madder dress, Chang Yuang, who might have been an emperor, Madame Hana-no-Hana, a faded but charming courtesan, the man with the blue "cummerbund." He also describes some of the magnificent mosques and temples of these ancient cities.

"In an intimate and confidential manner he records the passing show as he sees it. He does more. He interprets it with facile pen and a tender imagination." D. F. G.
+ Boston Transcript p4 O 18 '24 770w
Ind 113:325 O 25 '24 30w

"Everything interests him. Mr. Hervey's reactions to the multi-colored, many-voiced places and scenes are virtually never wrong. He has a fresh mind and the gift of words, and when you are with him, you see." H: J. Forman
+ Lit R p4 D 6 '24 900w

"'Where Strange Gods Call' is full of beauty and of poetry." Blair Niles
+ N Y Tribune p9 D 14 '24 600w

"There is freshness, vividness and the effect of actuality in all these 'pages out of the East,' and a touch of the style encountered in the same writer's novels."
+ Springf'd Republican p6a D 14 '24 280w

HERZEN, ALEKSANDR IVANOVICH. Memoirs; pts. 1-2, tr. from the Russian by J. D. Duff. 384p $4 Yale univ. press [18s 6d Milford]
B or 92
23-13462

"A compilation from scattered autobiographical writings of Herzen, published during his exile; the first part taken up with his childhood and education, the second with his life in prison and exile. He expresses a deep pessimism with regard to Czarism and the future of Russia, and the conviction that the Russian character is the source of all her woes. Although an aristocrat Herzen was a champion of the poor and humble and believed the peasant superior to any other stratum of society."—Booklist

Booklist 20:298 My '24

"Of a broad and solid education, gracefully urbane, he wrote in a style which possessed the keenness of Voltaire and the wit of Heine but was tempered by the emotionalism of conviction that was Nietzsche's. It is, therefore, with great satisfaction that one greets the first volume of his memoirs." Alexander Kaun
+ Freeman 8:522 F 6 '24 2400w

"I can think of no greater service that I might render my friends in the capacity of reviewer than to recommend the reading of this book." J. J. Smertenko
+ Nation 117:691 D 12 '24 760w
New Statesman 23:102 My 3 '24 500w
Sat R 138:638 D 20 '24 160w
Reviewed by Gerald Bullett
Spec 131:512 O 13 '23 1150w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p715 N 1 '23 1150w

HERZEN, ALEKSANDR IVANOVICH. My past and thoughts; auth. tr. from the Russian by Constance Garnett. 2v 364;412p ea $2 Knopf [3s 6d ea Chatto & W.]
B or 92
24-18774

"The memoirs of Alexander Herzen contain not only the personal record of a life of engrossing interest; they offer as well a commentary on the complexion of social and political life in Russia during the first half of the nineteenth century, which adds immensely to an understanding of that period and of the events that have followed it. They do not, therefore, include the period in which he accomplished his most effective work in the Russian revolutionary movement; they do not relate his part, which was a considerable one, in that phase of the movement which resulted in the liberation of the serfs in 1861. That will fall within the scope of the remaining three volumes, which are to be issued in the Spring. The first two volumes describe the growth of liberal thought in Russia from the Decembrist uprising of 1825, in which he was too young to participate, down to 1847, picturing it against a background of the blackest official corruption and oppression."—N Y Times

"In these Memoirs, Herzen shows himself a minute observer, with a mind which tempered with common sense always and wit often that which he drew into it. He is diffuse at times, many times, the very heart beats of those whom he knew seem recorded, but in spite of this loquacity indeed, often because of it, his picture of the life and time in Russia during the years from 1812 to 1840 are unsurpassed." S. L. R.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 12 '24 800w
Cleveland p95 D '24

"Herzen's memoirs are written with charm and dignity. Through them runs a note of simplicity and of sympathy which captivates immediately." Madelin Leof
+ Lit R p968 Ag 16 '24 430w

"I know few autobiographies which can compare with Herzen's in charm, power, and interest, and at moments they reach heights which are not far from the level of great literature. The most striking thing about this book is the wideness of its appeal: it has so many different merits that I can hardly imagine anyone deserving the name of reader who would not find something in it to arouse his enthusiasm. It has certainly roused my enthusiasm, and it is many months since I have enjoyed three or four hours over a book as much as those which I have spent with Herzen." Leonard Woolf
+ Nation and Ath 35:17 Ap 5 '24 1150w

"This Russian classic is of absorbing interest. Here old Russia is presented by a master-hand; no one has shown its features better. In his vivid writing, with its overtones of melancholy, we see many heart-breaking tragedies of the sudden arrest and hear the screams of the tortured."

+ New Statesman 23:102 My 3 '24 500w

"The memoirs of Alexander Herzen belong in the first rank of published reminiscences. They have all the values which can properly be identified with a work of this kind. They are rich in historical portraiture, they are tinctured with a ripe philosophy, and they have an enduring, literary vigor and charm." J. D. Adams

+ N Y Times p3 Jl 6 '24 2500w

"I do not know any book which gives a better picture of the semi-patriarchal relation between master and serf—domestic or peasant. It is a first-class piece of writing."

Sat R 137:358 Ap 5 '24 180w

"His memoirs are interesting all through, and in presence of what is going on to-day in Russia, they ought to be read with even greater attention than that they would have commanded at any other time." Princess Radziwill

+ Sat R of Lit 1:28 Ag 9 '24 1000w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p251 Ap 24 '24 1000w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p812 D 4 '24 480w

HESSER, ETHELDA DAGGETT. Inner darkness. 301p $2 Harper

The scene of this tragic story is the Indiana farming country and its plot is centered in the household of a prosperous farmer of the community, Saul Dascom. The insufficient cause of the tragedy is a pretty, frivolous, and sensual young school teacher whose advent to Barton's Mill sets aflame the passion of Saul and his son Gabriel. Saul's passion is of the flesh and illicitly indulged but Gabriel's is of a different order. The result in both cases involves others in its disaster and ends in the break-up of the Dascom family.

"There is something new and vital and true in Mrs. Hesser's story. We feel this very clearly. We have had a great many novels following in the footsteps of Main Street and building up for us a realism founded upon an exceedingly clever truthfulness of details. It is in the big things, in the large truths, that we find Mrs. Hesser's excellence. That is why her story is true to life." D. L. Mann

+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 1 '24 1100w

Reviewed by L. A. Garing

Int Bk R p478 My '24 550w

"Twice at least in the relentless weaving of a sardonic fate around her characters she achieves a compelling power. . . The worst criticism which can be passed on this newest of Indiana writers is that her work is so earnestly relentless in its infusing purpose that at times it fairly lumbers under its heavy sincerity."

+ — Lit R p599 Mr 15 '24 330w

"The name of the author of 'Inner Darkness' is one that is new, but it is one that should not be forgotten. Miss Hesser has her faults as yet, but they are faults that can be outgrown and which in no case militate against a brave and uncompromising portrayal of life."

+ — N Y Times p16 F 24 '24 900w

Reviewed by L. B. Gilkes

N Y Tribune p20 Mr 2 '24 850w

Springf'd Republican p11a Mr 2 '24 350w

Wis Lib Bul 20:98 Ap '24

HEWES, LAURENCE ILSLEY, and SEWARD, HERBERT LEE. Design of diagrams for engineering formulas and the theory of nomography. 111p $5 McGraw

510.8 Graphic methods. Engineering—Tables, calculations, etc. 23-17301

"Presents principles of the diagrammatic representation of engineering formulas. Based on work at Sheffield scientific school (Yale) where the work has formed 'a supplementary course in applied mathematics and refined drafting.' "—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:358 Jl '24

HEWETT-THAYER, HARVEY WATERMAN. Modern German novel. 295p $2.50 Marshall Jones

833 German fiction 24-24599

"Mr. Hewett-Thayer does not so much seek first principles as give very full information on the method and the plots of the more important German novelists of the past fifty years. He compiles a source-book packed with particular details. He has no case to prove except the case of good literature. He discusses the realist Fontane, the naturalist Kretzer, the romanticist Huch, the aristocrat Ompteda, the Swiss Zahn, the war novelists, and the novelists (such as Wassermann) who did not write about the war. He sets up no absolute standards; he is content to describe the plots and contents of the more important books, to suggest their excellencies and their defects, and to relate them to the work of men like Zola and Flaubert, Dickens and Dostoevsky."—Nation

"It is a good piece of work, well written, unradical in its views, informative and most discriminating." A. W. Porterfield

+ Bookm 60:527 D '24 500w

"Prof. Hewett-Thayer's volume is not essentially a textbook. It was written to serve the general reader, as well as the student, who wishes to form an acquaintance with contemporary German literature. The author has shown himself not only a careful critic but an engaging essayist as well, with the result that 'The Modern German Novel' is both informative and entertaining." K. O. O.

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 27 '24 900w

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas

Nation 119:474 O 29 '24 150w

"The arrangement of the book is grotesque. Wassermann is given more space than Mann, whose most exquisite work, 'Tonio Krüger,' is not mentioned at all. The author indicates no lines of development in modern German literature, and secures no interior order in his welter of names and books. This is all the more deplorable when one considers that good work is being done by German novelists, and that it is almost unknown in this country." Edwin Muir

— Nation and Ath 36:118 O 18 '24 150w

"It is an intense psychic conflict that makes modern German literature interesting, and any account of it, though necessarily ending in a question mark, must go more thoroughly than this book into that underlying aspect of it."

— New Statesman 24:116 N 1 '24 1150w

HEWLETT, MAURICE HENRY. Last essays. 314p $2.50 Scribner [8s 6d Heinemann]

824 [24-17347]

"Maurice Hewlett's executors have collected in this volume the essays which he contributed in his last years to various periodical publications. They wisely decided to reprint the essays as the author left them, although Maurice Hewlett would have revised them before putting them in a book. There are papers in it on peasant life, its limitations and its virtues: on peasant poetry, ballads and folk-songs: on Iberian and Scandinavian England: on French authors and writers of memoirs: on Pepys's morals and Dorothy Osborne's letters: on the flowers of the field and of the garden. The whole gives a very pleasant picture of the man of letters who has taken himself and his books into the country."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"With a kind of Olympian simplicity, tinged with delightful prescient mischief, Mr. Hewlett contemplates the horizons of men and books, as a god might look at his world."

+ Bookm 59:744 Ag '24 280w

HEWLETT, M. H.—Continued

"Those persons who do not care very much for modern novels and like to have their discomforts sorted will find the matter well threshed out by Mr. Hewlett in his references to other literary ages, especially the eighteenth century. A charming and intelligent man apparently wrote this book, which is, with a few lapses, a model of clearness for critics, who are not clear. Its author possesses a benign dignity and he recalls an ancient sage, like Epictetus." J. W. Lane, jr.

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 24 '24 1300w

Cleveland p68 S '24

"The most copious collection of Hewlett's work that falls under the head of miscellaneous, 'Last Essays,' has the varied character of most collections of casual essays. There are bright spots and dull. There are passages wrought with exceeding skill and others that groan slightly under a heavy hand." L. G. Shaw

+ — Lit R p844 Je 21 '24 600w

Reviewed by G. H. Carson

Nation 119:169 Ag 13 '24 350w

"Mr. Hewlett's essays are a delight to read because, for one reason, they appear to have been written so easily. It is the essays about the country that are the best. Those about books, delightful as they are, have their limitations. There is one though—it is on Ballad-origins—which for critical acumen it would be hard to match in all that has ever been written on the subject." L: Harrox

+ — Nation and Ath 35:296 My 31 '24 550w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 39:104 Je 18 '24 1500w

New Statesman 23:164 My 17 '24 1400w

N Y Times p10 My 25 '24 3000w

"The criticisms have body as well as form, are controversial as well as stimulating. A dozen men may have written the essays, for Hewlett's in them is but an essayist's style, but the criticisms breathe personality." Kenneth Fuessle

+ N Y Tribune p24 Jl 27 '24 480w

"These are rather slight performances after 'Little Novels of Italy' but are not without charm and interest."

+ — N Y World p7e Je 15 '24 60w

St Louis p383 N '24

Sat R 137:438 Ap 26 '24 450w

Reviewed by J: Freeman

Spec 131:562 Ap 5 '24 850w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p204 Ap 3 '24 1100w

HEWLETT, WILLIAM. White Stacks. 288p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Hurst & B.]

24-13709

For old times' sake Victor Stanniforth, a young poet, invited his school friend, Cyril Bellamy, to visit him, little realizing the effect this visit would have upon the whole community. Cyril, adventurer and bluffer, took the little town of Maplehurst by storm. His popularity was tremendous. The Faringdon family of White Stacks accepted him unreservedly, while Olive, the eldest daughter, decided to marry him. Only Victor was uncomfortably suspicious of this exuberant person, who produced roulette wheels, made himself treasurer of societies, and generally did the sort of things that are not done. At length Miss Gedge, the town's social censor, discovered that Cyril was an adventurer. Had he not absconded with funds and eloped with Olive? The town was agog when in burst Cyril with his bride. A prosperous, bland and jubilant Cyril had returned to disprove these statements— and to fool these same people all over again.

Booklist 21:28 O '24

Boston Transcript p5 My 10 '24 450w

Cleveland p51 Jl '24

"'White Stacks' contains no succession of breathless pages—in fact, it hardly falls into the plot-novel class at all—but it does contain much decorous good fun, a deal of deft characterization, and it has about it withal a certain well-bred air."

+ N Y Times p9 Ap 20 '24 700w

"The book certainly deserves, and will probably get a number of readers. It is lively, humorous—in regard to character rather than to idea or word—well devised; in short, engaging reading." Bruce Gould

+ N Y Tribune p28 My 4 '24 480w

Outlook 137:319 Je 25 '24 220w

Reviewed by Gerald Gould

Sat R 136:49 Jl 14 '23 120w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p454 Jl 5 '23 280w

Wis Lib Bul 20:126 My '24

HEXT, HARRINGTON, pseud. Who killed Cock Robin? 350p $2 Macmillan

24-7110

"Cock Robin is a nickname, of course, and it belongs to one of the twin daughters of an English Archdeacon. The other sister is known to her intimates as Jenny Wren. Dr. Norton Pelham marries Cock Robin after a whirlwind courtship and loses by his act the millions expected from a rich uncle who has had other plans for his nephew. Mystery follows the subsequent decline and slow death, apparently, of the young Mrs Pelham. But is it really Cock Robin who dies, and if so, how and why does the tragedy come about? Mr. Hext gives the answer."—N Y World

---

Cleveland p43 Je '24

Reviewed by S. A. Coblentz

Int Bk R p607 Jl '24 300w

"His manner is almost indescribably wooden. His people orate at each other; they do not converse in normally lively dialogue. In this new story the singular clumsiness of manner gets badly in the way of the action. It takes a long while to get things really moving, but when they do start they go with the effect of an avalanche."

+ — Lit R p794 My 31 '24 400w

"'Who Killed Cock Robin?' is one of those stories which will not permit the reader to go to bed until the last page has been turned and the mystery solved."

+ N Y Times p25 Mr 30 '24 560w

"A tale richly adorned with thrills and surprises." E. W. Osborn

+ N Y World p6e Ap 20 '24 140w

Outlook 137:110 My 21 '24 100w

HEYER, GEORGETTE. Instead of the thorn. 345p $2 Small [7s 6d Hutchinson]

24-7673

"Elizabeth Arden, essentially a prude, educated in the most antiquated way, entirely ignorant of men, is, as her father proudly puts it, 'a modest violet in the dell.' Stephen Ramsay a successful young novelist, a light-hearted bohemian, wise in the ways of the world and with no ingrowing inhibitions, is smitten by Elizabeth's shyness and modesty, and the result is an immediate marriage. From the first moment trouble starts. Neither can adjust one's self to the other. Elizabeth eventually runs away, and while away on her own she has an opportunity to judge other men and get that education which her careful upbringing had denied her. Then she bethinks herself that Stephen isn't so bad after all."—N Y Times

---

"It is so easy to read, it is so recognizably human, the characters are so completely in their role, and the conclusions grow so quietly out of the premises that one has gone straight through the story almost without realizing what skill and insight have gone into its creation. It is an unpretentious novel full of wisdom and fragrance."

+ Lit R p842 Je 21 '24 350w

"The situations are amusing, and there is a lifelike quality in Miss Heyer's work, but it is impossible not to think that she is convinced that the typical wife should be a secondary party in the marriage contract. The book is really well written, with a high degree of humor and a certain comprehension of consistent character development."

+ — N Y Times p16 Ap 12 '24 750w

"One's reactions to dainty Elizabeth are not unpleasant after so many months of the flapperish type of female, but, needless to say, the preposterous story only emphasizes sex in a different and even more prurient way."

— + Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 20 '24 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p838 N 29 '23 160w

Wis Lib Bul 20:126 My '24

HEYWARD, DU BOSE. Skylines and horizons. 74p $1.25 Macmillan

811 24-4807

Poems of the primitive life of the southern mountains. The book is divided into three sections: Skylines, poems written in the Great Smokies of western North Carolina; Other poems; Horizons, poems of the South Carolina low country.

"Carefully written and beautifully visioned verse." J. F.

+ Bookm 59:339 My '24 150w

"On the whole, we may regard Mr. Heyward as an oasis in the poetic desert of the South."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 12 '24 270w

Cleveland p70 S '24

"It would be no service to Mr. Heyward, and a distinct disservice to the cultural advancement of the south to hail 'Skylines and Horizons' as a masterly volume. It isn't. By comparison with the books of the great lords of song its worth is modest indeed. But if there are no standards of measurement to apply to poets except those of Homer and Dante and Shakespeare, then it is out of the question to measure our southern poets at all. Hold the thing down to his own class, though, and Heyward stands up tall—so tall, in fact, that no one is now qualified to discuss the state of letters in the south without having read his work." G. W. J.

Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p22 Ap 20 '24 1500w

"It is sheer relief to read these fresh and glowing poems. It is good to turn South—not West, not Middle West!—where there is background different, but no less authentic, than the gray (and often beautiful) background of New England." J. L. McL.

+ Ind 113:50 Jl 19 '24 550w

Reviewed by J. T. Shipley

Lit R p958 Ag 9 '24 430w

Nation 118:sup454 Ap 16 '24 40w

"Mr. Heyward's poetry will be appreciated by widely different temperaments and for almost contradictory qualities—but each true-lover of poetry may find there something of special beauty." E. G.

+ New Repub 39:108 Je 18 '24 120w

"This return to America that reveals itself in some of our younger poets is one of the most encouraging manifestations of the contemporary scene. It is from such work only that a native tradition and literature may take root."

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 30 '24 750w

"It is the highland, not the lowland, poems of Mr. Heyward which really haunt the memory; they possess power, poignancy, and beauty, and often interpretative or dramatic value as well."

+ Outlook 136:571 Ap 2 '24 450w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p503 Ag 14 '24 250w

HIBBARD, LAURA ALANDIS. Mediæval ro-
2 mance in England, a study of the sources and analogues of the non-cyclic metrical romances. 342p $3.50 Oxford

821 Romances, English 24-25129

"Professor Hibbard has rendered a service to medieval scholarship by grouping together for study the non-cyclic middle English romances. She finds some thirty nine of these romances, which she classifies under the titles of Romances of Trial and Faith, Romances of Legendary English Heroes and Romances of Love and Adventure. She first gives a comprehensive and accurate statement of versions of each romance, showing the relations, if any, with Continental versions, then a discussion of origins and a well-ordered bibliography, in which she lists the texts, the manuscripts and the modern printed editions. In the second part of the bibliography she cites the studies of the romances which have appeared since 1900."—N Y Tribune

"Her work has been done with careful, critical accuracy, allowing small scope for speculation, but the treatment is never arid."

+ Lit R p10 D 27 '24 210w

"The value of such a summary of versions and scholarly theory cannot be easily stated. Her work becomes at once the starting point for the medieval student and the guide for the mature scholar. In its accuracy, its clear exposition, its comprehensive survey and its ordered arrangement it sets a mark for American scholarship." F. A. Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p12 D 14 '24 280w

"Her discussions of the nearly forty romances she includes in her list are done with admirable skill. She has summarized the investigations of others with such good judgment and has added so much by her own studies that these English tales gain a new impressiveness. It is no mere collection of titles with mechanical digests of the books and articles referred to, but something better than that. It should stimulate further study of the field it covers, and it ought to attract new readers to the romances themselves."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:419 D 27 '24 200w

HICHENS, ROBERT SMYTHE. After the verdict. 532p $2 Doran [7s 6d Methuen]

24-18269

Clive Baratrie, engaged to the sportswoman, Vivian Denys, is on trial for the murder of the notorious Mrs Sabine whose one-time lover he had been. The jury proclaims him "not guilty"—but after the verdict he finds himself prey to the morbidly curious and the subject of malicious gossip. He marries Vivian and they go to South Africa where he assumes another name thinking thereby to sever all connections with the horrible affair. But even here the marital happiness of Clive and Vivian is threatened with destruction by the sinister haunting presence of the dead woman. The fear and horror of it almost bring them to the point of separation until Clive, unable to endure the torture of Vivian's suspicions writes a full confession of his relations with Mrs Sabine.

"For a narrative based on a sensational plot we think it too long and too wordy. But Mr. Hichens has great ability in creating a mystery tale. He has decided power over words and over the creation of persons by his words. His dialogue is good. He writes with a virile, sure style." Madelin Leof

+ — Lit R p12 Ag 30 '24 360w

"Mr. Hichens writes in a powerful, deliberate manner with unflagging interest."

+ Nation and Ath 35:626 Ag 16 '24 120w

N Y Times p22 S 21 '24 700w

"It is all foreign territory—like the 'Garden of Allah' itself. But it is a very complete artificial world. . . It is tedious at times, through iteration; but the effect is gained, of emotional intensity, as by the monotone of a drum." Isabel Paterson

+ — N Y Tribune p23 Ag 3 '24 1300w

N Y World p7e Ag 31 '24 120w

HICHENS, R. S.—Continued

"Psychologically the book is subtle and strong. The situation is naturally an anguishing one, but the agony is prolonged over altogether too many pages."
+ — Outlook 138:461 N 19 '24 150w
St Louis p399 D '24
The Times [London] Lit Sup p476 Jl 31 '24 460w

HICHENS, ROBERT SMYTHE. The last time. 315p $2 Doran
24-4509

Four long short stories make up the volume. The first, "The Last Time," is the story of the change brought about in the life of Henry Strickland by Mrs Armitage, a charming French-American widow. Strickland and his wife Jeanne have been separated for two years. Mrs Armitage's own life had been ruined by her terrific temper, and her much loved husband had been killed after one of their many quarrels. After meeting Jeanne in Paris, Mrs Armitage went to England and by telling the story of her own life to Strickland, persuaded him to return to his wife. The other stories are: The letter; The villa of the sea; The façade.

"There can be no doubt of Mr. Hichen's ability to write charmingly and with force when he feels like it, but it is only too evident from these stories that there are times when he does not feel like it. And then his prose, his characters, even his incidents, grow mechanical. They do not seem to be especially animated with life. It is only in occasional passages that the real Hichens reveals himself."
— + Int Bk R p678 Ag '24 250w

"Each of the Hichens foursome claims individual attention for both style and content, and all merit the chance of permanence which the mere publication in book form always holds out."
+ N Y Times p25 Mr 9 '24 800w

" 'The Façade' is a comedy pure and simple. Indeed, its simplicity affords one of its strongest charms. We treasure this Ariadne tale among the precious novelties of a reader's busy season." E. W. Osborn
+ N Y World p7e F 24 '24 350w

HILDEBRAND, ARTHUR STURGES. Magellan; his life and adventures by land and by sea. 261p $2.75 Harcourt
B or 92 Magellan, Ferdinand 24-25756

An account of the life of the first circumnavigator of the globe and the adventures of his voyage. Beginning with a description of the state of geography in the year 1493 and the ambitions of the Portuguese nation to find a route to the East, the author follows the trail of Magellan from his coming as a lad of thirteen to the court at Lisbon, on his voyage to India with the Portuguese armada, the return to Lisbon, and then, when Magellan had transferred his allegiance to Spain, on the eventful trip across the South Pacific.

Booklist 21:149 Ja '25

"It is an epic story fitly and fully told." T. C. R.
+ Boston Transcript p6 N 29 '24 500w

"Mr. Hildebrand, like the man in Kipling's story, must have seen these things, for he writes of them so surely and vividly. He has put in his book the urge to know the world that prompted the Portuguese sailors to sail off to the unknown seas." Oliver Claxton
+ Lit R p9 N 8 '24 250w

Reviewed by Alfred Stanford
New Repub 41:48 D 3 '24 800w

"A thrilling, stimulating story—and it is in a thrilling, stimulating fashion that Mr. Hildebrand tells his tale."
+ N Y Times p2 D 14 '24 900w

"In writing 'Magellan' Mr. Hildebrand consulted the sources diligently and the picture of the explorer and the record of the voyage, are a happy combination of fact and skilful, vivid writing. Magellan lives again."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 4 '25 1950w

"Save when the author's own sensitive impressions of the sea appear to grace his narrative, the very personal charm of his style, its impressionistic gaiety, disastrously affects the dignity of his great subject. Here, where we look for a picture of an age impressive with achievement, and of men dignified by courage, we are confronted by a puppet show." Rockwell Kent
— + Sat R of Lit 1:478 Ja 24 '25 780w

HILL, EDWARD BURLINGAME. Modern French music. 406p il $4 Houghton
780.9 Music, French. Musicians, French
24-19471

The assistant professor of music at Harvard university has written this study of French music since the Franco-Prussian war, within which period "the achievements of French composers have outranked all contemporary schools, with the possible single exception of the later Russians." Beginning with an account of the causes leading to this great advance in originality and technical mastery the author follows the rise of instrumental music and analyzes the creative personalities of those who have brought it about. Among the musical personalities discussed are Emmanuel Chabrier, Gabriel Fauré, Erik Satie, Vincent d'Indy, Henry Duparc, Marie Guy Rapartz, Alfred Bruneau, Gustave Charpentier, Henri Rabaud, Claude Debussy, Paul Dukas, and the so-called "Group of Six," of whom Milhaud and Honegger are the most conspicuous figures.

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 23 '24 1500w

"The strictly critical portion of the book, while it will be of more interest to the general reader, who will hurry over the catalogue of this or that Frenchman's compositions, is not so valuable to the student of music as the purely biographical."
Ind 113:134 Ag 30 '24 700w

"In view of the dearth of good musical criticism in America and the rhapsodic muddiness that some of our leading musical critics proffer us instead of clear elucidations, Professor Hill's volume appears especially distinguished." G. B. Munson
+ Lit R p11 S 6 '24 200w
N Y World p8e Ag 3 '24 50w

Reviewed by H: T. Finck
Sat R of Lit 1:144 S 27 '24 1300w

HILL, LEONARD ERSKINE. Sunshine and open air. 132p il $3.50 Longmans [10s 6d E. Arnold]
613.19 Heliotherapy [24-19983]

A book setting forth the results of scientific research into the curative effects of air and sunlight, and in particular the influence of the Alpine winter climate.

"Full of solid information based on careful observations and experiments."
+ Boston Transcript p2 O 4 '24 50w

"A most valuable contribution to the theory of Radiotherapy and Open Air Treatment."
+ Spec 132:886 My 31 '24 280w

HILLYER, VIRGIL MORES. Child's history of the world. 480p il $3.50 Century
909 History, Universal 24-23067

The author, who is headmaster of Calvert school, Baltimore, has tried out the materials which he used in this book on various groups of pupils year after year. He makes of this world history for young readers a continuous stream, telling the story of what has happened century by century and epoch by epoch, not by nations.

Booklist 21:116 D '24

"His style is even simpler and more colloquial than Van Loon's. In places it seems almost flippant, but undoubtedly it will hold the attention of the child."

+ — Springf'd Republican p6 O 6 '24 240w

Survey 53:242 N 15 '24 180w

HILTON, JAMES. Passionate year. 320p $2 Little [7s 6d T. Butterworth]

24-23737

A story of English public school life at Millstead school, but more particularly the story of Kenneth Speed's year as master there. Kenneth was young and exceedingly popular until he fell in love with and married Helen Ervine, daughter of the head of the school. Helen was a difficult person to live with and she was jealous of her best friend Claire. As his life became more difficult Kenneth found himself turning more and more to Claire for sympathy and understanding. When events came to an absolute impasse Helen and Kenneth went away for a time to the seashore. Then one night Helen drowned herself, trying thus to make amends.

"Mr. Hilton is not a good diagnostician so far as diseases of the heart are concerned. On the other hand his account of the contracted, depressing routine life of a group of masters in an English public school is the most valuable thing in the story." D. F. G.

— + Boston Transcript p15 Mr 29 '24 560w

Cleveland p43 Je '24

"The story cannot be called convincing, shifting as it does its point of view for no sufficient reason. It might have been a powerful one, but its power must lie chiefly in the telling. Mr. Hilton has not achieved this difficult task. Another defect in the loose construction of the book is the number of 'blind trails' which are started and never followed to a conclusion."

— Lit R p764 My 17 '24 480w

New Repub 39:252 Jl 23 '24 90w

N Y Times p27 Ap 20 '24 860w

"The book has a fresh savor. It leaves behind that sense of indubitable contact with living persons." H. W. Boynton

+ Outlook 137:34 My 7 '24 200w

Spec 132:211 F 9 '24 70w

"Though the story may fairly be called extravagant, the emotions overwrought, and the style verbose, that is not all that should be said of it by any means. There is a true feeling for character in the descriptions of its persons, a sense of atmosphere about all the scenes in which they take part."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p853 D 6 '23 220w

Wis Lib Bul 20:213 O '24

HIND, CHARLES LEWIS. Landscape painting, from Giotto to the present day. v 1 (Universal art ser.) 314p il $8.50 Scribner [25s Chapman & H.]

758 Landscape painting 24-26190

The first volume covers the period from Giotto to Turner. A list of "important landscape dates" is included and an index. Illustrated with 108 reproductions in monochrome, most of them full-page, and a colored frontispiece.

"Carefully chosen, well written and beautifully illustrated."

+ Booklist 20:255 Ap '24

"It is an entertaining and most instructive work and creates a keen appetite for the second volume." N. H. D.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 1 '24 850w

"As fascinating a series of chapters in the history of art as could be imagined; and Mr. Hind has sifted quite a considerable proportion of the enormous amount of material available for his study, even though he is evidently unacquainted with much that has been written on the subject, and certain phases are skipped over in a manner which is out of place even in a book which addresses itself 'to the average man and woman, not the expert.' "

+ — Sat R 137:15 Ja 5 '24 320w

HIND, CHARLES LEWIS. Life and I; the era of Julius Caesar, aged 3-4. 233p $2.50 Dodd [6s Lane]

824 24-26079

Brief, informal and cheery essays by a column-writer of the Daily Chronicle. The amusing questions or observations of Julius Caesar, a delightful small boy aged three, give many of them their point of departure.

"As delightful a volume of informal articles as one can find. They are leisurely and philosophic, touched with humor and strongly colored with sentiment."

+ Bookm 59:227 Ap '24 120w

Reviewed by R. M. Montgomery

Int Bk R p724 S '24 550w

N Y Tribune p18 Ja 6 '24 140w

Wis Lib Bul 20:124 My '24

HINE, MURIEL. See Coxon, M.

HINKLEY, EDYTH. Mazzini; the story of a great Italian. 287p $6 Putnam [12s 6d Allen & U.]

2

B or 92 Mazzini, Guiseppe

"In this book is told once more the familiar story of the Italian Risorgimento: the cards are shuffled into another combination; the light centers on a figure which subordinates Garibaldi, Cavour and Victor Emmanuel, who in their turns have often enjoyed the same bright distinction. The present volume, through the multitude of its expressed obligations, seems almost a compilation, but it is redeemed by the employment of a few letters and papers hitherto unpublished."—N Y Tribune

---

New Statesman 24:82 O 25 '24 1300w

"Mrs. Hinkley's book, the result of long years of dwelling on her subject, is full of tender feminine sympathies and vibrant indignations. Mazzini, as an exile in London, comes close to her heart, and his cramped years in England provide a good share of her material." H: B. Fuller

+ N Y Tribune p4 O 19 '24 1300w

"There is not, in English at least, and scarcely anywhere else if at all, so careful, complete, and critical, if sympathetic, a study of the great Italian as is here presented." W. C. Abbott

+ Sat R of Lit 1:345 D 6 '24 600w

"Within limits it is a good book, and Mazzini is a historical character with whom everybody should have made acquaintance. But the limits within which Mrs. Hinkley's book is good are the limits of what has already been written about the subject, and that is not little."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p586 S 25 '24 1050w

HIRST, MARGARET E. Quakers in peace and war; an account of their peace principles and practice; with an introd. by Rufus M. Jones. 560p $6 Doran [16s Swarthmore press]

289.6 Friends, Society of. Non-resistance

24-9888

"For nearly three hundred years the Society of Friends has held that war is inconsistent with Christianity. This historical study shows how far the Friends have maintained their peace 'testimony' in face of actual war. It tells of their sufferings for this belief in many countries of their work to relieve the victims of war, and of the seventy years of unarmed government in Pennsylvania. The book draws largely from official records and manuscripts, and is the first complete and authoritative study of the subject. It includes the Quaker

HIRST, MARGARET E.—Continued
aspects of the War of Independence and the Civil war, and ends with the year 1920."—Publisher's note

---

Booklist 20:320 Je '24

"An amazing and noble story." J. F. Newton
+ Int Bk R p655 Ag '24 60w
Nation and Ath 34:352 D 1 '23 250w

"Her story is full of entertaining anecdotes and is fascinating reading."
+ New Statesman 22:522 F 9 '24 170w

"The author, who is Cambridge lecturer in the University of Birmingham, has done her work well, in the modern scientific spirit and in accordance with modern methods in the writing of history, treating her subject objectively, without bias, depending on original sources for her materials, and aiming only to make her narrative a true and accurate account."
+ N Y Times p26 Ja 27 '24 650w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:298 Je '24

Reviewed by E. M. Wrong
Spec 131:294 F 23 '24 500w

"The outline of their story has an epic simplicity and beauty, and we are grateful to Miss Hirst for having traced it so clearly. She has interesting chapters on developments in the American colonies, where the Quaker position was tested as it has been tested nowhere else, and even survived the demoralizing influences of worldly success."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p760 N 15 '23 1400w

HOBHOUSE, LEONARD TRELAWNEY. Social development; its nature and conditions. 348p $3 Holt [12s 6d Allen & U.]
301 Sociology [24-4357]

This volume is the fourth of a series by Professor Hobhouse which forms a connected analysis of social values and the nature of human society. The preceding volumes were "The Metaphysical Theory of the State," "The Rational Good" and "The Elements of Social Justice." The object of the present volume is to analyze the actual nature of social life and the conditions of its development.

Reviewed by A. W. Small
Am J Soc 30:216 S '24 1950w
Boston Transcript p5 My 24 '24 520w
Cleveland p93 D '24

"One cannot but respect the immense labour and intellectual fairness which he devotes to the dissection of society and to tracing the conditions of its development. Perhaps, when one has finished the book, one feels that the results are not quite commensurate with the effort which it has required from both the writer and the reader, but this feeling of disappointment cannot obscure the fact that, if Professor Hobhouse does not go very deep, he stirs up the surface, and so makes it easier for the next digger."
+ — Nation and Ath 34:932 Mr 29 '24 150w

Reviewed by C. E. Ayres
New Repub 39:164 Jl 2 '24 1100w

"His book is exceedingly difficult reading, sometimes approaching the unreadable. And this is a great pity; for it is full of good things to reward the patient reader."
+ — New Statesman 22:764 Ap 5 '24 950w
N Y Tribune p25 Jl 27 '24 60w
Outlook 137:112 My 21 '24 10w

"We reckon this book as one of the dozen contributions to serious thought in that form that have been produced in a twelvemonth."
+ — Sat R 137:88 Ja 26 '24 650w

"The argument herein presented is not for the reader's 'leisure moment.' One may not lightly accept the conclusions of the author; neither may he lightly reject them. There is substance of great discussion here. To anyone whose mind is still able to engage the problems of social reorganization today, who wants materials with which to think and irritating questions about which to think, this book should come as a great boon." J. K. H.
+ Survey 52:244 My 15 '24 950w

"The reader who goes quickly through his pages will find stimulus and suggestion on subjects new and old. But the student who patiently weighs the statements on the main issue paragraph by paragraph, and tries to form a consistent, intelligible conception of what the author means by social development, will be disappointed. The apparently substantial structure of the argument crumbles under examination. . . His view of social development is unconvincing and inconclusive."
— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p260 My 1 '24 1200w

HODGETTS, EDWARD ARTHUR BRAYLEY. Moss from a rolling stone. 304p $3.50 Dutton [10s 6d Dent]
B or 92 24-18260

Reminiscences of an English journalist and newspaper correspondent who has spent a lifetime in travel—Prussia in the 'sixties, America after the Civil war, Paris under the Second empire, Russia in the reign of Alexander II and Alexander III, Armenia and the Near East, South Africa at the time of the Boer war, and between times, London, Paris and New York.

Bookm 60:96 S '24 100w
Nation 119:605 D 3 '24 210w

"The glimpses of the great in the volume are numerous and interesting. He saw the making of much history between the régime of the third Napoleon and the great World War."
+ N Y World p2e Je 29 '24 200w
Outlook 138:27 S 3 '24 20w

"We have enjoyed Mr. Hodgetts's collection of reminiscences, and we are glad to hear that the chiel, having got safely berthed in the city, is still busy taking notes, the results of which we shall no doubt in the fullness of time enjoy. Most writers of reminiscences tell us far too much about themselves, forgetting that they are usually the last persons about whom one wants to hear; but Mr. Hodgetts, like Croker, Crabb Robinson and above all Greville, knows how to keep himself well in the background, only coming forward with necessary explanations at the proper times."
+ Sat R 137:304 Mr 22 '24 550w

"Mr. Hodgetts draws with skill and discretion upon his long experience of travel and journalism. . . The chapters on Russia (a country with which the author is peculiarly well acquainted) contain some informative and much amusing matter."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p178 Mr 20 '24 480w

HODGETTS, EDWARD ARTHUR BRAYLEY. Reasonable religion; Emanuel Swedenborg, his message and teaching. 252p $2.50 Dutton [6s Dent]
289.4 Swedenborg, Emanuel. New Jerusalem church

This book, written by the president of the Swedenborg society, comprises a brief sketch of Swedenborg's life and a popular exposition of his teaching concerning life and creation, the origin of evil, ethics, sex, revelation, prayer, the sacraments, the church, the soul, the hereafter, and the Godhead.

"Swedenborg's teachings are here presented in such a way that they can be easily grasped and digested by the untheological reader." E. E. F.
+ Bookm 59:adv Ap '24 120w
N Y Times p26 F 17 '24 240w
N Y Tribune p16 S 21 '24 100w
St Louis p369 N '24

"A work which gives an authoritative exposition of the teaching of one who has exercised and is still exercising a deep influence on the religious development of the West."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p735 N 1 '23 150w

HODOUS, LEWIS. Buddhism and Buddhists in China. (World's living religions ser.) 84p $1.25 Macmillan

294 China—Religion. Buddhism 24-4131

Professor Hodous, who has given sixteen years of missionary service in Foochow, reproduces in this volume the actual thinking of a trained Buddhist mind in regard to the fundamentals of religion.

"Unlike most little books on oriental religions, this is not a traveler's narrative but a really valuable contribution to an appreciative understanding of the actual thought forms and controlling attitudes of Buddhism as the religion of living people."

+ J Religion 4:328 My '24 30w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p479 Jl 31 '24 60w

HOFFMANN, ERNEST THEODOR WILHELM. Weird tales; tr. from the German by J. T. Bealby. 344p $2.50 Scribner

A24-248

A one-volume edition of the tales of Hoffmann containing eleven of the best known and most fanciful of the famous tales. Contents: The Cremona violin; The Fermata; Signor Formica; The sand-man; The entail; Arthur's hall; The doge and dogess; Master Martin the cooper; Mademoiselle de Scuderi; Gambler's luck; Master Johannes Wacht.

Booklist 20:230 Mr '24

"The publication of 'Weird Tales' in an English translation may be a sign that Hoffmann's popularity in Germany is beginning to spread to the rest of the world. It is a pity that he has not had a better send-off. The translation is awkward, without style, without finesse, although the publishers assert intrepidly that it is celebrated." Edwin Muir

— + Freeman 8:498 Ja 30 '24 1800w

HOGUE, RICHARD WALLACE, comp. and ed. British labour speaks. 282p $2 Boni & Liveright

331.8 Labor and laboring classes—Great Britain. Labor party (Great Britain) 24-28881

A collection of addresses by members of the late Labor government and of the Labor party in England. Contents: Introduction, by R: W. Hogue; Some aspects of labour's ideals, by J. R. MacDonald; The financial policy and programme, by Philip Snowden; Women workers in British industry, by M. G. Bondfield; The trades union congress, by Fred Bramley; Industrial unrest, by B. S. Rowntree; The organisation of women in the labour party, by Marion Phillips; The quality of justice, by Charles Gore; Profits and service, by S. W. Pascall; Labour and foreign affairs, by Leonard Woolf; The basis of British industrial life, by J. L. Hammond; Labour's advancing ideals, by Herbert Elvin; Guild socialism, by G. D. H. Cole; Trade boards, by J. J. Mallon.

"It is a valuable, if unconventional, symposium. We may agree or disagree with these pioneers but we must respect their genuine zeal for a more abundant life." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p1 N 16 '24 1050w

"This collection of papers lacks something of unity and system, if one seeks merely a presentation of the more recent stages of the British Labor movement. An introductory article supplying a bony structure of bare fact would perhaps have added, for the American reader, hitting power to the somewhat disconnected musculation of opinion and argument. But the book will impart, even to the average reader not especially up on foreign labor matters, some forcible impressions."

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:324 N 29 '24 600w

HOLCOMBE, ARTHUR NORMAN. Political [2] parties of to-day. 399p $3 Harper

329 Political parties. United States—Politics and government 24-25814

"A study in American politics discussing the constitutional, economic and sectional bases of both the major and minor parties, outlining their history and predicting what may be expected of them in the future."—Cleveland

Cleveland p93 D '24

"The book is thoughtful and thought-provoking. The author has gathered a vast amount of hitherto unpublished and, indeed, unclassified, material which is most valuable to the student of practical or historical politics. He has succeeded in making his use of it highly interesting to the reader."

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p12b N 30 '24 650w

Outlook 138:341 O 29 '24 10w

St Louis p5 Ja '25

"Prof Holcombe's is the most complete and searching investigation of this great game of politics; it will inevitably prove a suggestive book of rules for the coach in the dugout and the voter on the sidelines."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a D 28 '24 1200w

HOLLAND, BRYAN T. A certain man. 361p $2 Small

24-7678

"The central figure in this tale is not so much the 'certain man' who fell into adversity, being one of the many British officers who could find no work after the war, as is his rescurer, the Rev. John Ffoulkes. The action of the story moves around the process of rescuing the nearly 'down and out' Roger, which involves his ultimate capture of the lady whom the rescuing curate loves."—Lit R

"Mr. Holland's style is pleasant, he individualizes his characters agreeably and if the plot is somewhat trite, it is sufficiently enlivened by the attractive young widow, Biddy, and her various love affairs."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 12 '24 150w

Cleveland p50 Jl '24

"Being the grandson of the author of 'Cranford' is plainly a happy career for Mr. Holland, for there is a natural simplicity of manner in his writing and a sufficiently humorous and pathetic sentiment in his attiude toward life that mark him an authentic descendant of Mrs. Gaskell."

+ Lit R p810 Je 7 '24 300w

"There are bits of well-done dialogue, occasional touches of humor, and here and there a scrap of characterization which makes one feel that if the author could get rid of some of his verbiage as well as his liking for far-fetched and unreal situations, he might perhaps write a passably good novel. But a very much better and more interesting tale than this slight and very commonplace one would be spoiled by the excessive 'wordiness' which requires a page to tell what could be more effectively related in one or two sentences."

— + N Y Times p25 Ap 6 '24 280w

N Y Tribune p27 Ap 20 '24 500w

Springf'd Republican p7a S 14 '24 150w

Wis Lib Bul 20:148 Je '24

HOLLAND, NORAH M. When half gods go, and other poems. 124p $1.50 Macmillan

811 24-7240

The title-poem, which is a mystery play, and a fairy fantasy make up half the volume. The other half consists of short poems and lyrics, including several poems on Ireland.

"This book is an inconsequential addition to our library of contemporary verse. It is not bad, like some; neither is it up to average of many others. Its main fault lies in its lack of originality and ability to say the 'older nothing in the newer way.' "

HOLLAND, NORAH M.—Continued

— Boston Transcript p4 Je 14 '24 100w
Ind 112:241 Ap 26 '24 10w

"A thin treacle of lyricism, emotions long ago exploited, tinkle-tinkle technique bathed in its 'proper' hues, here pursue their abstract beauties innocuously."

— Lit R p714 Ap 26 '24 100w

HOLMES, ARTHUR. Controlled power; a study of laziness and achievement. (Mind and health ser.) 219p $1.75 Little

131 Laziness. Mental hygiene 24-12842

From his experience as professor of psychology in the University of Pennsylvania and assistant director of its psychological clinic Dr Holmes writes helpfully and sympathetically about the varieties and causes of laziness, how it can be cured and how body and mind can be controlled for the greatest efficiency. All along the way he illustrates with cases which have come under his own experience.

"Parents as well as teachers and students of psychology should own this little book, which holds such store of helpfulness and inspiration."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 18 '24 260w
Wis Lib Bul 20:171 Jl '24

HOLMES, EDMOND GORE ALEXANDER. Dying lights and dawning. (Martha Upton lectures given in Manchester college, Oxford, 1923) 222p $2 Dutton [6s Dent]

230 Religion. Supernatural. Roman Catholic church

The thesis upon which the book is developed is that the idea of spiritual evolution must take the place of the supernatural element now prevalent in the religious beliefs of both East and West, if religion is to renew its strength. Contents: The idea of God; The genesis of the supernatural; The fallacies of supernaturalism; The fruits of supernaturalism—(1) The life of the community, (2) The life of the individual; The gospel of spiritual evolution; The prophet of spiritual evolution.

Boston Transcript p6 Je 28 '24 250w
New Statesman 23:202 My 24 '24 200w

HOLMES, J. H. In primitive New Guinea; with an introd. by A. C. Haddon. 307p il $6 Putnam [21s Seeley, Service]

919.5 New Guinea

"It is unusual to find a missionary with a genuinely scientific turn of mind; a man who can describe the manners and customs of the people amongst whom he has worked without allowing his religious bias to prejudice his description, without, indeed, offering much comment of any sort upon the facts which he sets down. Mr. Holmes is such a missionary. He has spent twenty-five years in New Guinea, and has studied the natives as no mere traveller can do. His professed purpose in this book has been to present Papuan life from the point of view of the Papuan, and he deals copiously with every aspect of that life devoting chapters to Folk Lore, Marriage Customs, Art, Occupations, Games, Religious Observances, Languages, Property Rights."—New Statesman

"He has been able to make a really valuable and sympathetic contribution to the study of primitive races. His book is a mine of interesting and thoroughly entertaining information, plentifully illustrated with both photographs and sketches."

+ New Statesman 22:678 Mr 15 '24 140w

"The Rev. Mr. Holmes has carefully assembled with a scholar's chariness and a rare Christian charity fascinating data on the ethnology and culture of the various primitive tribes he knows so intimately." W. G. Tinckom-Fernandez

+ N Y Times p13 Ap 27 '24 500w

"He has given us a book fascinating in its interest for the anthropologist and affording much food for reflection to the philosopher and psychologist."

+ Sat R 137:187 F 23 '24 780w

"On the theology, the myths, and legends of the people Mr. Holmes does not tell us much. While we are grateful to him for what he has given us, we cannot but wish that he had given us a good deal more. The loss of some of his notes to which he refers, may perhaps be partly responsible for a certain meagreness in the treatment of some topics about which, after his long experience, the author might have been expected to furnish us with more ample details. It is to be hoped that future inquiries on the spot may yet fill up some of the gaps in Mr. Holmes's otherwise valuable record of these interesting tribes."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p232 Ap 17 '24 1550w

HOLMES, SAMUEL JACKSON. Louis Pasteur. 246p il $1.75 Harcourt

B or 92 Pasteur, Louis 24-3906

"This is a simple, accurate summary of the life of Pasteur, boiled down from such biographies as those of Vallery-Radot and Emile Duclaux. There is no pretense of understanding the man himself; dramatic moments are recounted but the drama is omitted. In short, an expanded encyclopedia article."—Nation

"This is a delightfully written review of the life of Pasteur, and should appeal to the general reader fully as much as to the student of medicine or bacteriology. There have been many books written on the life of this great Frenchman, but for simplicity in the discussion of technicalities and for general literary style it is difficult to conceive of a book which could more readily command the interest of the reader."

+ Am J of Public Health 14:348 Ap '24 200w

"The story of his great achievements is on record in a dozen or more volumes, some of English origin, others as translations from the French. But for a compact survey of the whole subject, doing justice alike to its personal and to its scientific aspects, the reader interested will do well to take Dr. Holmes for his guide."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 19 '24 450w

"Well written and well worth study." B. C. A. W.

+ Cath World 119:281 My '24 250w
Nation 118:512 Ap 30 '24 50w

"The style in which Professor Holmes has written the book is admirably adapted to his theme and purpose, for its simplicity and clarity make it an excellent medium for the effective presentation of the high achievements, the ardent nature and the humble heart of its subject."

+ N Y Times p26 F 17 '24 280w

HOLMES, SAMUEL JACKSON. Studies in evolution and eugenics. 261p $3 Harcourt

575.1 Heredity. Evolution. Eugenics 23-12889

"Essays on such topics as social betterment and eugenic progress, heredity and the mind, whether birth control is an aid or a menace to eugenics, and the biological effects of race mixture. Some of the papers are reprinted from periodicals. The author is Professor of Zoology at the University of California."—Cleveland

"So much nonsense has been written in its name, that one picks up a book on eugenics with considerable apprehension. It is groundless so far as Prof. Holmes is concerned. His book is perhaps unique in its constant analysis of the biological assumptions underlying evolutionary and eugenic thought." Leslie Spier

+ Am Anthropol 26:264 Ap '24 1150w
Booklist 20:203 Mr '24
Cleveland p7 Ja '24
Nation 118:211 F 20 '24 90w

Reviewed by E. W. MacBride
Nature 113:667 My 10 '24 2000w

"These 'Studies in Evolution and Eugenics' range over a wide field and, though Professor Holmes is always acutely critical and sometimes highly original, they are chiefly of value as summaries of the most recent tendencies in a science that is, as yet, in a rudimentary state of development and confused by abstruse and wordy controversy." J: Corbin
+ N Y Times p11 Ja 6 '24 700w

"Dr. Holmes has a style well suited to a popular exposition of such themes."
+ R of Rs 69:224 F '24 150w
Spec 132:680 Ap 26 '24 220w

"At times the author's language becomes somewhat incoherent. On the whole, however, the book is readable and if the student does not agree with all that appears between its covers, he is at least prepared by reading it to go further into the subject understandingly."
+ — Springf'd Republican p10 S 24 '24 160w

"Dr. Holmes has collected in this volume a set of essays written in easy language for laymen, but full of ripe learning and exact knowledge. He gives a broad-based and balanced judgment on these difficult themes; and we commend his book to biologists as well as to the wider public for which it was written."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p202 Ap 3 '24 500w

HOLSLAG, CLAUDE JOSEPH. Arc welding
² handbook. 250p il $2 McGraw

621.39 Electric welding 24-14479

"Describes in a clear, practical, and detailed manner the methods to be followed in the various kinds of arc-welding operations."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:600 D '24

HOLST, HELGE, and KRAMERS, H. A. Atom and the Bohr theory of its structure; an elementary presentation; with a foreword by Ernest Rutherford. 210p il $4 Knopf

541.2 Bohr, Niels Henrik David. Atomic theory [24-3189]

An account for the lay reader of Bohr's work in connection with the atomic theory which gained him the Nobel prize for physics in 1922.

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:309 Je '24

HOOKER, MRS FORRESTINE (COOPER). When Geronimo rode. 325p $2 Doubleday
24-6735

In this story of the struggle of civilization against savagery Mrs Hooker has selected one of the most colorful episodes of history. Geronimo, dreaded leader of the hostile Apaches, has been hunted by the American soldiers without success. The women in those southwestern army posts were heroes, too, and not the least of these was Bonita. If it was a dangerous time, it still had its opportunities for romance. There were the two men who loved Bonita—Jerry and Roy—and the misunderstanding which sent Jerry away made Bonita miserable. Then Roy, true soldier, kept his faith with Jerry, at the sacrifice of his own love for Bonita. And there in the dust of the desert Jerry awoke to consciousness and happiness. Much historical data is included and tribute is paid to the loyalty of the colored troops.

"The uncommonly strong personal touch makes not only appealing but compelling a 'true story' of one of the most dramatic compaigns ever waged against the fiercest of the North American Indians." F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 26 '24 720w

"Her picture of the period of garrison and campaign and the details of locale is in the highest degree accurate. The interest of her book resides almost entirely in its historical material. Otherwise it would be but a very average novel."
+ — Lit R p761 My 17 '24 180w

"A living picture of vivid scenery does not prevent her romantically conceived characters from being puppets."
+ — N Y Times p9 Je 8 '24 280w

"It is a vivid tale of things that used to be, involving both the fighting and the love-making of brave men." E. W. Osborn
+ N Y World p7e Mr 30 '24 130w

HOOKER, RICHARD. Story of an independent newspaper. 237p $2 Macmillan

071 Springfield Republican 24-20767

The one-hundredth anniversary of the founding of the Springfield Republican is made the occasion for the writing of this history of a newspaper widely recognized for its courage, independence and influence, which from the beginning has turned the eyes of its readers outward, beyond their local interests to the world at large. The book is a narrative of the personalities which have made the paper, notably Samuel Bowles, first, second and third, the causes for which the paper has fought and its part in national politics.

"It is a pleasure to record that this piece of journalistic history has been well and modestly done by Richard Hooker. No newspaper man can read it without gaining in professional pride." A. P.
+ Ind 113:347 N 1 '24 400w

"This is a greatly needed and model newspaper history, compact, illuminating and interesting, and written with all modesty." O. G. Villard
+ Nation 119:386 O 8 '24 500w

Reviewed by C: H. Clark
No Am 220:362 D '24 840w
R of Rs 70:447 O '24 120w

HOOL, GEORGE ALBERT, and KINNE, WILLIAM SPAULDING, eds. Movable and long-span steel bridges. (Hool and Kinne structural engineers' handbook ser.) 496p il $5 McGraw

624 Bridges 23-13770

"Text-book containing both descriptive and theoretical matter. Includes bascule, vertical-lift, swing, continuous, cantilever, suspension and arch bridges."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:200 Ap '24

HOOL, GEORGE ALBERT, and KINNE, WIL-
² LIAM SPAULDING, eds. Reinforced concrete and masonry structures; comp. by a staff of specialists. (Structural engineers' handbook lib.) 786p il $6 McGraw

693.5 Concrete, Reinforced. Concrete construction 24-14252

A practical and detailed discussion of every important element entering into the design and construction of concrete and masonry structures.

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:510 N '24

HOOL, GEORGE ALBERT, and KINNE, WIL-
² LIAM SPAULDING, eds. Steel and timber structures. (Structural engineers' handbook lib.) 695p il $6 McGraw

624 Structures, Theory of 24-4030

"Presents a concise and authoritative treatment of various topics generally found in books on structural engineering, such as steel office buildings, steel mill buildings, timber framing, slow-burning construction, roof trusses, timber bridges, short-span steel bridges, and engineering materials. Among topics less frequently found are steel tanks, chimneys, and the detailing, fabrication, and erection of structural steel."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:598 D '24

HOOL, GEORGE ALBERT, and KINNE, WILLIAM SPAULDING, eds. Stresses in framed structures, comp. by a staff of specialists. (Structural engineers' handbook lib.) 620p $5 McGraw

624 Strains and stresses. Structures, Theory of 23-17400

"Gives general theory and explains in detail the methods of computation which have proved most convenient in practice."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:313 Je '24

HOPKINS, B. SMITH. Chemistry of the rarer
2 elements. 376p il $4 Heath

546.3 Chemical elements. Earths, Rare 23-17395

"A good introduction to the chemistry of those elements about which little is known, and which usually receive little attention in the study of inorganic chemistry."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

"By 'rarer' the author designates all the elements that are little known, either because they are really rare or because they have been neglected from lack of interest or of importance, or have been but recently discovered. Since more than half of the elements are included, the text is necessarily somewhat encyclopedic in character, but the writer has skilfully avoided monotony, and has succeeded in bringing together the most important and interesting facts bearing on the subject, from widely divergent sources." S. C. Lind

+ Ind & Eng Chem 16:324 Mr '24 290w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:507 N '24

HORN, JOHN LOUIS. Education of exceptional
2 children. (Century education ser.) 343p $2 Century

371.9 Education of children. Children, Abnormal and backward 24-12910

"'A consideration of problems and policies in the field of differentiated education.' Classifies supernormal children as mentally, temperamentally and physically exceptional and discusses each of the three groups in its relation to the public schools."—Cleveland

Booklist 21:52 N '24

Cleveland p94 D '24

"The treatment is stimulating. The book is written in non-technical style and covers the field in a manner sufficiently thorough for the needs of the general reader." W. C. Reavis

+ El School J 25:311 D '24 500w

HORNADAY, WILLIAM TEMPLE. Tales from nature's wonderlands. 235p il $2.50 Scribner

590.4 Natural history. Animals 24-24160

Dr Hornaday's book is divided into two parts. The first consists of tales of the past—the coming of some of our big game to North America, the frozen mammoths of Siberia, the tyrant dinosaur of Hill Creek, Montana, and some strange armored animals. In part two he describes the strange plant life of the Sonoran desert, coral reefs of St George, Bermuda, the wonders of the ocean floor, Antarctic penguins, India as a hunter's paradise and the wonder-ape of Borneo.

Booklist 21:136 Ja '25

"The present volume is a fitting complement to others from his pen. It is written with exceptionally clear imaginative insight and in a style that appeals to young and old alike. The entire book is a masterpiece of its kind."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 3 '25 550w

"Scattered through the book are a few hunting and fur-trading stories, but the naturalist, the collector, the picture maker and the engineer share heroic honors with the beasts. The illustrations are admirable." Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Tribune p9 Ja 11 '25 600w

"Writing primarily for the young, Dr. Hornaday has produced out of the deep well of his knowledge a volume that will equally interest the elders."

N Y World p8e O 5 '24 240w

Outlook 138:261 O 15 '24 20w

Sat R of Lit 1:269 N 8 '24 150w

"This book tells us of the most wonderful things in natural history past and present with abundant fascination."

+ Springf'd Republican p14 N 21 '24 450w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p763 N 20 '24 220w

HORNE, ERIC. What the butler winked at. 273p $3 Seltzer [12s 6d T. W. Laurie]

914.2 England—Social life and customs. Servants 24-5495

A butler who has spent over fifty years in service writes this naïve narrative of his experiences. There are occasional lapses in grammar and spelling but none in the homely directness of the style. The record is a shrewd commentary on the ways of the gentry and on life below stairs. Eric Horne's experiences have made him something of a cynic. He has no illusions about the aristocracy.

"From the standpoint of sheer entertainment this is one of the best volumes of memoirs published this season. From the angle of psychology it is likewise of value."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 2 '24 540w

Cleveland p95 D '24

"This volume seems entirely authentic and all it purports to be. It is a rather unique human document, but except to the student of the psychology of the domestic servant in England or the social investigator, it is not particularly interesting."

+ — Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Jl 27 '24 500w

"A most amusing and at the same time an enlightening account of life Belowstairs, with a piquant 'inside' on the habits of those Above. The grave, slightly illiterate style is humorous as Daisy Ashford's was humorous. And from this composite of details which strive to make a reality of what to most of us is still romance is built up a more subtle picture: the aspect and attitudes of a mind in livery."

+ Nation 118:591 My 21 '24 80w

"Though the author has evidently had difficulty in wrestling with the intricacies of grammer and spelling, though his style naturally lacks polish and though his story had been made public in the crude form in which it was first written, yet the book gains something from its very imperfections and is a more convincing and perhaps a more impressive document because of the slightly illiterate atmosphere with which it is pervaded."

+ N Y Times p26 My 11 '24 480w

"It is more than a guide, however valuable; it is a most entertaining book, the very Odyssey of Butlery."

+ Spec 131:19 Ja 5 '24 700w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p691 O 18 '23 290w

HORR, GEORGE EDWIN. Christian faith and eternal life. (Ingersoll lecture for 1923) 53p $3 Harvard univ. press

237 Immortality 23-13304

"A portrayal of the Christian belief in the future life based largely on a study of New Testament passages."—J Religion

"It is a book for every teacher of religion to ponder over."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 26 '24 420w

Cath World 118:705 F '24 450w

J Religion 4:110 Ja '24 40w

HOSIE, DOROTHEA (SOOTHILL), lady. Two gentlemen of China; with an introd. by Professor Soothill. 2nd ed 316p il $5 Lippincott [21s Seeley, Service]
915.1 China—Social life and customs
[24-11218]

"Born in China, the daughter of Professor Soothill (former President of the Shansi University), and educated at Newnham, the author went back to start a school for the young daughters of the Manchu Court Circle." (New Statesman) "Lady Hosie's study of family life in China was written with the cordial consent of the heads of the two patrician Chinese families in whose homes she was a welcome guest. Nothing more intimate or explanatory has been written of China and its people. So closely did Lady Hosie come to know her friends that she was accepted on the footing of a relative, calling the heads of the families Uncle and Aunt and being treated by them almost as one of their own children, with whom, in turn, she mixed as a sister." (Nation and Ath)

Cleveland p88 N '24

"This Englishwoman, born in China, wins respectful attention at once by refusing to generalize from her own individual observations. She does not attempt to pass judgment on Chinese family life in general, but sets down in agreeable, chatty style, what she can vouch for herself." J: J. McLaughlin

+ Lit R p14 S 6 '24 440w

"Lady Hosie, in a curiously simple and sober style, which at times suggests that she is thinking in Chinese, gives us a series of character-sketches that helps us to know Kung Ta Jen, the upright judge and fine gentleman, Kung Tai Tai, his imperious, shrewd, and kindly wife, and their sons and daughters, as we know our own friends."

+ Nation and Ath 34:476 F 9 '24 160w

New Statesman 22:640 Mr 8 '24 700w

Reviewed by Mary Siegrist

N Y Times p19 Ja 11 '25 1700w

Outlook 138:652 D 17 '24 80w

St Louis p384 N '24

"It is not always simple to fit an adjective to a book, but there is no difficulty in the present instance. Lady Hosie's book is charming. It is delightfully easy to read, is informing without being in the least didactic, and is of genuine value and importance in helping towards an understanding of a people who are certainly among the most interesting in the world."

+ Sat R 137:108 F 2 '24 620w

"In a brief introduction Professor Soothill, while admitting the possibilty that he may be partial, declares roundly that if there exists anyone better equipped to offer such a book as this to the public he has not met her. Nor is he likely to meet her. Lady Hosie's qualifications for her task are undoubted, and her book achieves its object in a most satisfying way."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p71 F 7 '24 980w

HOTCHKISS, GEORGE BURTON. Advertising copy. 471p il $3.50 Harper
659 Advertising 24-11587

"My book is a treatise on the art of writing advertising messages, considered as a branch of English Composition. The other arts and sciences involved in the complex business of advertising I have touched occasionally, but only in so far as they effect the problem of writing copy."—Preface

"There is ample proof that he thoroughly understands his subject and the result of his efforts is a valuable contribution to advertising literature. The book was written primarily for students and newcomers in the advertising field, but the subject is discussed so thoroughly that it should prove of considerable value to anyone interested in it."

+ Management and Adm 8:95 Jl '24 200w

"Mr. Hotchkiss treats his subject practically and throughout with a regard for the seriousness of his task and the happy results of its teachings when they are assimilated by the readers."

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 13 '24 260w

"The reader is told in clear-cut style and with constant illustration, how to compose messages to the public that combine literary merit and business utility. Mr. Hotchkiss thoroughly covers the field in twenty-one well-stuffed chapters. The book is for the expert as well as the novice."

+ N Y Tribune p27 Je 8 '24 70w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:366 Jl '24

Wis Lib Bul 20:173 Jl '24

HOUDINI, HARRY. Magician among the spirits. 294p il Harper
134 Spiritualism 24-10324

A noted magician gives the results of many years of study and investigation of spirit manifestations which he has approached, so he assures the reader, with complete open-mindedness and a sincere desire to arrive at the truth. He follows the history of modern spiritualism from the days of John Dix to the present, giving accounts of the noted mediums and the methods used by them. One chapter reveals how mediums obtain information and another one is devoted to magicians as detectors of fraud. His conclusion, after twenty-five years of research, is that he is farther than ever from a belief that communication has been established with the spirit world.

Booklist 21:6 O '24

"If the reader is in search of entertainment as well as of information, he will find both in Houdini's pages. He will learn much about the arts and the tricks of a dozen or more men and women remarkable for their ability to hoodwink a credulous portion of the public, and he will pay Houdini the tribute of adding a valuable book to the library of Spiritualism." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 21 '24 1200w

"It is to Mr. Houdini's credit that he reveals no personal animosity to the noxious tribe he has here pitilessly exposed to public contempt. What distinguishes Mr. Houdini's book from most of the earlier books on the same subject, is that he himself wishes that spiritualism was true." Brander Matthews

+ Int Bk R p576 Jl '24 1350w

"Houdini plays some surprising tricks with the English language. He may be able to escape from any man-trap extant, but he is frequently quite helpless in the coils of syntax." R. F. Dibble

— + Nation 119:683 D 17 '24 200w

N Y Times p18 Je 1 '24 1500w

"His book is an entertaining, wise piece of craftsmanship, even though its literary pretensions are necessarily not of the highest." J: Armstrong

+ — N Y Tribune p22 Je 1 '24 1850w

"It is written with moderation, and it should be read attentively as the books of confirmed spiritualists by any man who wishes to make up his mind, freely and without prejudice, on the subject."

+ Spec 133:516 O 11 '24 120w

Springf'd Republican p5a Je 29 '24 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 20:209 O '24

HOUGH, EMERSON. Mother of gold. 327p $2 Appleton
24-3532

"A romance of hidden treasure dealing afresh with the legend of a fabulous mine lost near the Mexican border since the days of the Aztecs. As the story goes, the search for this mine is being carried on by two parties. In one lot is Barry Allison, the favored lover of Mary Westlake, a beautiful girl of Ohio. On the other side is Randall Trent, a fellow who does not need the hidden wealth but who has tried to force himself upon Mary and who seeks to drive Allison from the field of love by beating him to the lost mine. Allison and one of his mates actually get into the stronghold of the gold, we are told. They are driven out by the same earthquake which brings death to Trent and his pilot, who have made a daring aeroplane descent into the hidden valley. But Barry carries away with him enough of the valley's yield to assure a future of plenty, besides happiness, to Mary and himself."—N Y World

HOUGH, EMERSON—Continued

Booklist 20:338 Je '24

"Mr. Hough can tell an excellent story, with vigor. He sweeps us along, writing with clarity and with enough character drawing to raise this novel to the same high rank his other novels have enjoyed. The background is effective. Suggestions of folk-lore, of Mexican customs and traditions of races even before the Spanish rule give substance to the book. The love story is simply told and the combination makes the book excellent reading"
+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 19 '24 300w
Cleveland p24 Mr '24

"Taken all in all, it is a not very successful attempt to do the sort of thing that Rider Haggard does, with a good borrowing of Kipling's ideas."
— + Lit R p794 My 31 '24 460w

"In 'Mother of Gold' Mr. Hough attempted a theme that is light both in prose and subject matter. It is the usual type of romance fiction which one runs across in various adventure magazines and from which, it was to be hoped, Mr. Hough was about to extricate himself."
— N Y Times p8 F 17 '24 500w
N Y World p7e F 24 '24 250w
Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 10 '24 200w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p225 Ap 10 '24 90w
Wis Lib Bul 20:97 Ap '24

HOUGHAM, ARTHUR. Hammer marks. 316p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Unwin]

This semi-autobiographical novel is written by a man whose trade by necessity, even as the hero's, is house-painting. Arnold Brooke, born in the slums of Birmingham, cannot gain the recognition of his art that he craves and is forced to do more menial work. When even that gives out, he suffers all the agonies of hunger and poverty and the frustration of his hopes. Relief comes for a little while with a new job and the fulfilment of his love. But again his joy life is short-lived, for the cancer inherited from his father exacts its final toll from him.

"'Hammer Marks' is an uneven book but it is a fine one. There are splashes of ecstatic beauty, of genuine inspiration in it. Never for a moment is it slow or wordy." M. L.
+ — Lit R p10 O 4 '24 250w

"One thinks instinctively of Gissing, by nature a better artist, but heavily inoculated with the bitterness and self-pity Mr. Hougham has overcome. For all his crudity—and it may be that he will never produce a less crude book than this—it is not absurd to couple him with Gissing, because the impulse out of which he writes is an intense inner faith. It looks as if only under that condition can observation have any value for creative purposes." J: Franklin
+ — New Statesman 23:599 Ag 30 '24 780w

"'Hammer Marks' is written very badly. The conversations are excessively stilted at times and there is no perspective to the book. Its one virtue is the always visible driving urge of the writer to express himself in literature."
— + N Y Times p17 Ja 4 '25 480w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e S 21 '24 100w
Spec 133:298 Ag 30 '24 90w

"Parts of it are written with a strained sincerity, but the extravagant and ungrammatical style makes the book nearly unintelligible, and the author's striving for cleverness is exceedingly irritating."
— The Times [London] Lit Sup p450 Jl 17 '24 60w

HOUSE, C. A. Canaries. 257p il $3.50 McKay [10s 6d Cage birds]

636.6 Canaries

The first half of the book is given to canary care and breeding, with a chapter on exhibiting. The second half is devoted to the characteristics of the different breeds. Fully illustrated.

"Mr. House's knowledge of his subject could not easily be surpassed, and his full but not too lengthy recommendations on all points of breeding, feeding, exhibiting, and tending in health and sickness will be valuable to all those of lesser experience in his hobby."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p162 Mr 13 '24 250w
Wis Lib Bul 20:122 My '24

HOUSMAN, LAURENCE. All fellows and The cloak of friendship. 192p il $2 Harcourt [6d J: Cape]

[24-11794]

"The people of Housman's newest book of fables are simple folks once removed from life. They are mystic shades moving aginst a background of Catholic legend and superstition. They are remote but still vaguely familiar, illustrating, as they pass, the sublimated virtues and vices of the mediæval Christian world. Out of the mouths of idiots speak the things of the spirit; kings are desolated and made meek that they may inherit the kingdom of heaven; a woman sins and the Virgin is compassionate because 'she has loved much'; a foundling is blessed by the company of heaven because he pitied a salamander, lonely in the fire; a poor priest quenches the thirst of a lost soul, wandering distressed upon the earth, and wins his place among the saints."—Lit R

"Perhaps its audience will not be a very wide one, but those who do like it will think it beautiful." M. G. Bonner
Int Bk R p547 Je '24 50w

"The stories are told in the simplest language, brightened with frequently beautiful images. But what distinguishes them most is the directness of the narrative, uninterrupted by philosophical or descriptive asides." Neil Martin
+ Lit R p780 My 24 '24 550w

"He possesses a keen mind that pierces beneath exteriors, and he can capture a personality with a high degree of verisimilitude. There is wit in this work, sound thinking and a delicate sense of dramatic values." H. S. Gorman
+ N Y Times p5 Mr 9 '24 820w

HOUSMAN, LAURENCE. Echo de Paris. 72p $1 Appleton [3s 6d J. Cape]

822 Wilde, Oscar Fingall O'Flahertie Wills

24-5689

A record in dramatic form of a conversation which took place in Paris in 1899. Mr Housman invited three friends to meet Oscar Wilde at luncheon. Mr Housman and two of his friends are seated outside a little restaurant. Wilde joins them and the conversation turns on many subjects, led by Wilde who was a brilliant conversationalist. The third friend appears, sees Wilde is the guest and passes on, but Wilde has noticed the slight. He tells two of his allegorical stories and he then too, drifts away.

"Memory and conscience which embraces charity have here combined into making Mr. Housman, the pale mimic, as it were inanimate mouthpiece for one of the brightest, best, most substantial little tragi-comedies in English."

+ Bookm 59:473 Je '24 120w

"It is a brilliant and fascinating conversation, and in part so typical of Wilde that it is evident that Housman's memory has not played him false altogether."

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Jl 13 '24 160w

"It purports to recapture 'the magic of Oscar Wilde's conversation,' and to epitomize the tragedy of those last days of ostracism in Paris. Mr. Housman succeeds in the latter intention, though with rather an elaborately arranged device. . . The scintillations of Wilde are not only a bit obviously contrived for their appropriateness to Mr. Housman's intention, but somewhat conscious in themselves."

+ — Lit R p728 My 3 '24 260w

"In choosing to make his foreground bright and the tragedy only by implication Mr. Housman has shown an exquisite sense of dramatic fitness and his little play is nearly perfect." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 118:483 Ap 23 '24 720w

"The first of the fables which Mr. Housman makes Wilde tell is as good as the best of those which he actually wrote in the Poems in Prose and the whole dialogue conveys most deftly the tone of the fin de siècle—its wit, its silliness and its charm." E. W.

+ New Repub 41:101 D 17 '24 410w

New Statesman 21:740 O 6 '23 1650w

"Although this playlet is plainly a 'dethronement,' another picture of a failure, it is patent that Wilde is no less than a hero to Mr. Housman, and, indeed, perhaps it would not be going too far to assert that the living writer views the older man as a martyr. The irony of life is implicit in Wilde's career, and Mr. Housman brings this out most clearly." H. S. Gorman

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 9 '24 1150w

"Brilliant dialogue, sparkling with epigram, stirring in sentiment."

+ N Y World p6e My 11 '24 140w

Outlook 136:653 Ap 16 '24 30w

Spec 131:808 N 24 '23 420w

Springf'd Republican p7a D 30 '23 470w

"The spontaneity, paradoxical brilliancy and velvety smoothness of Wilde's talk have been admirably preserved by Mr Housman."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 26 '24 300w

"The difficulty of producing a reasonable imitation of Wilde's conversation has been overcome so successfully that we sometimes feel that one of his essays is being read by one of the characters in his comedies—there is that combination of verbal wit and bold intellectual paradox."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p663 O 11 '23 460w

"This is not a play for the stage, but a glimpse, by a great artist, into the meaning behind the 'appearance of things,' a study full of wit and wisdom, beauty and philosophy which no artist of the stage or other-where can fail to find enriching."

+ Theatre Arts Mo 8:425 Je '24 140w

HOVELAQUE, EMILE LUCIEN. China; tr. by Mrs Laurence Binyon. 272p $3 Dutton [7s 6d Dent]

915.1 China—Civilization 23-18398

A sympathetic and deep-reaching study of Chinese civilization, the philosophy that underlies it, its dominant and lasting traits, and the causes and direction of its evolution. Beginning with what seemed essential in the first impressions which the author received from China, he attempts to penetrate into the permanent world within, to trace China's origins as revealed in her religion, institutions and art and to explain her relations with the western world.

Bookm 59:adv Mr '24 340w

"One contemplating a visit to China could not possibly better begin his acquaintance with that ancient land than by a perusal of this charming book." Hamilton Bell

+ Lit R p14 S 6 '24 650w

"M. Hovelaque writes brilliantly and forcefully, with a keen sense for the decorative possibilities of language and a very great facility in the painting of vivid and gorgeous pictures in his descriptions. So eloquent and colorful is he sometimes that he can put the reader's better judgment to sleep with the intoxication of his words. His book is, in effect if not in purpose, an impassioned plea for a better understanding in the Occident of the fundamental qualities of Chinese civilization."

+ N Y Times p14 Ja 27 '24 1700w

HOWARD, FRANCIS MORTON. Old firm. 282p $2 Dutton

24-17251

Mr Howard in this book continues the robustious doings of that lovable quartet, Messrs Dobb, Tridge, Clark and Lock who now form a "signdikit" to buy their heart's treasure, "The Gladys Jane." They are unexpectedly chosen as the crew of this ship which the dyspeptic millionaire, James Pidgett, has transformed into a smart yacht. Once again abroad "The Gladys Jane" the "signdikit" becomes peculiarly enmeshed in the domestic affairs of the Pidgett family. The secret love affair between Nora Barton, niece of Mr Pidgett, and "Mr Smith," and the irregularities of young Stanley Pidgett are happily solved by the inventive powers of Mr 'Orace Dobb and his able companions.

Boston Transcript p8 O 11 '24 350w

"Mr. Howard's cockney dialect is unfailingly delightful, his plot in 'The Old Firm' ingenious, and his characterizations clever. He has a large fund of inventiveness and supplies the quartet of old salts with abundant opportunities for humorous tricks and guileful rascalities. He writes easily and fluently. His place among the humorists ought to be assured already; if it isn't 'The Old Firm' will help to make it secure." Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p956 Ag 9 '24 220w

N Y Times p9 Ag 10 '24 460w

Reviewed by Morris Gilbert

N Y Tribune p25 Ag 10 '24 470w

"Certain it is that a more whimsical, more human, more rascally book we have not read since its predecessor, 'The Happy Rascals.'" F. V. Roman

+ N Y World p8e Ag 3 '24 100w

Outlook 138:649 D 17 '24 100w

"It is a ponderous, elephantine jocosity, but amusing if taken in small doses; an attempt to swallow it whole leads to indigestion."

— + Sat R of Lit 1:51 Ag 16 '24 100w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 31 '24 100w

HOWARD, SIDNEY. Three flights up. 286p $2 Scribner

The four stories which make up the book are novelettes in length. The interest of all four is psychological and each depends on the cumulative effect of one revealing detail after another. The first story is of a woman artist of great skill who paints a fake Holbein that proves to be of itself a great picture. The last tale is a character study of an indomitable dressmaker who bravely surmounts her trials. Contents: A likeness of Elizabeth; Transatlantic; Mrs Vietch: a segment of biography; The god they left behind them.

Lit R p15 N 15 '24 350w

"The inevitable element of surprise which the short story form demands is provided in overflowing measure, but without the slightest sense of strain. Mr. Howard astounds in doing with his characters and to his characters what must have been foreseen."

+ N Y Times p8 N 2 '24 820w

HOWARD, SIDNEY—Continued

"In 'The God They Left Behind Them' Mr. Howard undertakes an exploration of supernatural forces. It is a dangerous mingling of parable and narrative and character study, and Mr. Howard carries it off superbly. Some of his passages reach an unparalleled intensity, almost frenzy, of prose, without seeming forced or insincere." J: W. Crawford

+ N Y World p9e N 16 '24 300w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 4 '25 200w

HOWE, MARK ANTONY DE WOLFE. Barrett Wendell and his letters. 350p il $4.50 Atlantic monthly

B or 92 Wendell, Barrett 24-24596

Barrett Wendell, 1855-1921, was engaged for nearly forty years in teaching English at Harvard university. The writer of numerous books of literary criticism and history he was also an abundant and delightful letter writer, and it is from his letters that this biography is largely made. They clearly show the man and his opinions for in them he speaks his mind freely on many subjects.

Booklist 21:109 D '24

"The book not only makes interesting reading but supplies one with a valuable index to the character, personality, and habits of thought of one of the most notable of recent critics and educators."

+ Bookm 60:511 D '24 150w

Reviewed by J. E. Chamberlin
Boston Transcript p1 O 4 '24 3800w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd
Ind 113:373 N 8 '24 520w

"It is not as a narrative of unusual or spectacular incident that this book deserves perusal, nor even for such personal glimpses and vignettes as those of the pungent, cogent personality of Roosevelt or the political attitude of Senator Lodge. What will recommend it to many who never knew Wendell in the flesh is its consistent portraiture of the man whom the editor justly summarizes as 'to the core of his being faithful, wise and kind.'" Fullerton Waldo

Lit R p4 O 25 '24 850w

"His opinions so vigorously insisted upon in conversation and personal letters, obtruding themselves too often in sober passages of his writings, were largely whimsical, whose very perversity endeared Wendell to the discerning. It is unfortunate that the record of his life prepared from his correspondence by M. A. De W. Howe should seem to stress just those pet ideas of class, those political and social beliefs which meant least, not to himself but to those who recognized the man beneath the arabesque of temperamental opinion in which he delighted to drape himself in endless improvisation." Robert Herrick

— + New Repub 41:sup6 D 10 '24 1250w

N Y Times p10 D 12 '24 1850w

"A beautiful book, moving and significant." S. P. Sherman

+ N Y Tribune p1 D 7 '24 3500w

Reviewed by Burton Rascoe
N Y World p8e O 26 '24 900w

Outlook 138:731 D 31 '24 280w

"Mr. Howe has presented, working, no doubt from a mass of documents, a balanced picture; one would like, I think, less suppression of himself, more of his pleasant anecdote. But he has consistently maintained the purpose of the book. And he has constructed a thoroughly readable and inspiring biography." Roger Burlingame

+ Sat R of Lit 1:199 O 18 '24 1950w

"This unique figure is entertainingly revealed, mostly in his own words, in Mr. Howe's book—an addition to the authentic portrayals of American personalities even if the subject was not characteristically American."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a O 5 '24 600w

HOYT, ARTHUR STEPHEN. Spiritual message of modern English poetry. 290p $2 Macmillan

821.09 English poetry—History and criticism 24-2940

Of the two aspects of poetry—the artistic and the prophetic—the author argues for the latter as the true definition, and his book is a study of English poetry of the last hundred years to show how it has expressed the higher thought and impulse of the race. Chiefly he studies Wordsworth, Tennyson, Browning, Matthew Arnold, and, among modern poets, John Masefield, Wilfrid Wilson Gibson and Alfred Noyes, as interpreters of the deeper things of the spirit.

"It is a book to be read with great pleasure and profit." E. E. F.

+ Bookm 59:adv Ap '24 110w

J Religion 4:448 Jl '24 30w

Lit R p875 Jl 5 '24 90w

"The volume is meant primarily for preachers, for Dr. Hoyt's business was the training of preachers; but there is value in it for other persons interested in the intertwined threads of life, literature and religion."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 My 20 '24 350w

"Mr. Hoyt's eloquence is copious, but the critical mind will hardly follow his rhapsodies whole-heartedly. . . It is a thoroughly well-meaning book, with the fluency and readableness of the popular teacher, and its numerous poetical extracts at any rate provide good reading."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p581 S 18 '24 250w

HOYT, HELEN. Apples here in my basket. 82p $1.50 Harcourt

811 24-11461

"Helen Hoyt's revelatory poems of feminine passion, of love and regret, tell their own story swiftly and with some degree of beauty. They are quite different from any love lyrics we have had recently in America. They are more frankly physical than those of Edna St. Vincent Millay, yet in spite of that they are sprung from a more conventional viewpoint. Miss Millay writes of light and passing loves with cynicism or quiet remembrance; Miss Hoyt's is one deep and all effacing love."—Bookm

"Her book contains excellent lyrics and excellent lines." J: Donelson

+ Bookm 59:604 Jl '24 80w

"Certain of the critics, we believe, have spoken of Helen Hoyt as belonging to the group of poets which includes Sandburg, Bodenheim, Masters and Lindsay. Possibly by that they mean that she is typically American, which she is. Her intensity is almost overwhelming. That more than mere words goes into her verse is evident. But as far as her being of that exclusive clique we do not think she is, as they say, quite up to it." K. S.

— + Boston Transcript p3 My 31 '24 850w

"The cover of this volume gives promise of a beauty Miss Hoyt does not quite attain. Her rhymed verse seems to protest somewhat in this form; her blank verse shows no mastery of fundamental rhythm; her emotion is seldom more than a surface note, and her thought falls short of the precision and clear vision poetry demands." J. T. S.

— + Lit R p877 Jl 5 '24 240w

"The simplicity of a complete abandonment to love is here and it is capably conveyed to the reader, although the level of the book is no more than fair. Miss Hoyt touches no high points of poetry and it is apparent that her muse is distinctly limited in its flight. Because this is so the balance of the virtue of the book rests on the predicated attitude of the poet. And in so far as the attitude is sincere 'Apples Here in My Basket' is worth reading. It has already been implied that the sincerity is unquestioned."

+ — N Y Times p12 Jl 6 '24 800w

"Quickened with emotion, like sunlight on dark water, are the poems of Helen Hoyt. They have the exuberance of young passion, and delightful flashes of color. Resonant and rhythmic are her brief sketches, palpitating like butterfly wings." B. S. Wagstaff

+ N Y Tribune p22 My 25 '24 350w

"They are fresh, sincere, passionate but not beautiful poems, nor, we feel, very deep or universally appealing."

— + Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 17 '24 350w

HUBBARD, WILFRANC. Donna Lisa; an Italian idyll. 285p $2 Macmillan

24-3168

Very little really happens in this leisurely story of life in Rome, in tourist and diplomatic circles. Maisie Carteret, a pretty young Virginian on the way to Rome to visit her aunt Donna Lisa, the princess Agrippini, falls in with two Englishmen, Admiral Sir John Culverin and his nephew Jem Danyers, who are also journeying to Rome on a diplomatic mission. But instead of the obvious happening, Jem becomes re-involved with a charming Italian divorcée and Maisie after finding her Romeo in a handsome but impoverished Italian count and being deserted by him, seems headed toward a happier engagement, this time to a likable young secretary of the British legation.

"From it one learns nothing of Roman life, and its revelations of rural Italian life are so slight as to be negligible."

Int Bk R p523 Je '24 240w

"The whole performance is social comedy of a high order." H. W. B.

+ Lit R p842 Je 21 '24 280w

"It is not sustaining mental food, but it is out of the ordinary diet, and with its twin suggestions of romantic possibility and unsentimental yielding to circumstance, it is a fair picture of the Anglo-Saxon mind, lured, baffled and trapped by the age-old snares of human nature and Italy, working in unfair conspiracy."

+ — N Y Times p22 F 17 '24 600w

N Y World p7e F 24 '24 180w

"One likes this story for several reasons: the character drawing is remarkably good; the author's knowledge of Italians, both those in society and those among the working classes, is close, and he is sympathetic in both directions; the setting and local color both in and out of Rome are admirably rendered; moreover, the dialogue flows easily and has a strong spice of humor."

+ Outlook 136:399 Mr 5 '24 180w

HUDDLESTON, SISLEY. Poincaré; a biographical portrait. 192p $2.50 Little [7s 6d F. Unwin]

B or 92 Poincaré, Raymond. France—Foreign relations [24-15209]

The Paris correspondent of the London Times has written, not a chronological biography of Poincaré, but a series of studies of the French premier and war-time president in his various capacities as man, patriot, Lorrainer, writer, president, prime minister, diplomatist, etc. This method causes overlapping and prevents an orderly arrangement of material, but it builds up a steadily clearing impression of the man and of French policy since the war.

Booklist 21:23 O '24

Bookm 59:744 Ag '24 120w

Reviewed by I. W. Lawrence

Boston Transcript p4 Jl 19 '24 1100w

Cleveland p87 N '24

"Mr. Huddleston has written just such a book as is needed to make the European situation clear. And he has made it clear because he himself thinks clearly, and puts the rubbish to one side." W. K. Kelsey

+ Detroit News p14 Je 15 '24 600w

Reviewed by W: L. Langer

New Repub 40:179 O 15 '24 380w

"Mr. Huddleston has always sought to combine a strongly critical attitude towards French policy with the equally strong affectionate regard in which he holds the French people; and in achieving and maintaining this very difficult balance, in our columns and in those of the correspondent he has been for the past two years, he has been singularly successful. . . His book is very much more than the portrait of a single man; for a great deal of what he writes is only accidentally connected with M. Poincaré. It might better be described as a very careful friendly and detached study of the mentality and policy of France from 1918 to 1924. It is based on real and intimate knowledge of all the relevant facts, and is written in an eminently readable style. To those who wish to understand the real issues of the problem of Franco-British relations in connection with the urgent task of reaching a stable settlement with Germany we could not recommend a better book."

+ New Statesman 23:164 My 17 '24 1100w

"If M. Poincaré had actually selected a biographer to interpret his personality and the important events of his career to English readers he could not have made a happier choice than Sisley Huddleston, Paris correspondent of the London Times. The successor of the famous de Blowitz has presented a literary portrait which gives to the English reader a distinct, at times a striking, illusion of the reality." Walter Littlefield

+ N Y Times p1 Je 29 '24 2500w

"Lively and informative volume."

+ N Y Tribune p28 Je 8 '24 110w

"His account of a great French figure is sympathetic, scrupulously fair, and studied from the life."

+ N Y World p7e Je 1 '24 550w

Reviewed by E. H. Gaines

No Am 220:161 S '24 1000w

St Louis p386 N '24

"The reader, when he lays down this volume, will find it difficult to resist the conclusion that it is ill-written, ill-constructed and ill-conceived. . . Its faults of style and construction, though grave, would not in themselves be necessarily fatal to the book. It is a much more profound failure, a fundamental falling short, that spoils the book and prevents it from being of any real use to students of foreign affairs."

— Spec 132:674 Ap 26 '24 1550w

Springf'd Republican p7a Je 1 '24 60w

Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 13 '24 70w

"Mr. Huddleston, who has had exceptional opportunities of studying his subject, gives us a pleasantly written sketch of the man who more than anyone else has been responsible for French policy during the last twelve years. The book is written without much method."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p209 Ap 3 '24 160w

HUDDLESTON, SISLEY. Those Europeans; studies of foreign faces. 297p $2.50 Putnam

923.2 Europe—Biography. Statesmen

24-24085

Biographical studies by a correspondent for the British press on the continent of Europe. Contents: Macdonald; Clemenceau; Masaryk; Millerand; Sir John Bradbury; Lyautey; Primo de Rivera; Joseph Caillaux; Lloyd George; Anatole France; Mussolini; Poincaré; D'Annunzio; Sir William Goode; Stresemann; The Pope; General Sikorski; Mustapha Kemal; Dr Dorten; Lord Cecil.

Bookm 60:508 D '24 320w

"The book is intimate and entertaining. It throws a searchlight, not too penetrating, on many known and unknown corners of present-day European politics." S. L. R.

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 15 '24 760w

Cleveland p87 N '24

"No one who wishes to be better informed about the leaders of present day Europe can afford to miss this book. On every page there are evidences that the author knows Europe and its leaders intimately. The author has that incomparable sureness and deftness of touch which only master craftsmen possess."

HUDDLESTON, SISLEY—Continued
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 O 5 '24 760w

"Mr. Huddleston writes from a broad experience, with accurate information, a fair and unbiased opinion of the European scene. It is good journalism of the most honorable sort." D. R.
+ Ind 113:374 N 8 '24 310w

Reviewed by C: W. Thompson
Int Bk R p95 Ja '25 750w

"Mr. Huddleston possesses a clear and compact literary style." Bruce Gould
+ Lit R p16 Ja 24 '25 580w

"Mr. Huddleston is a veteran journalist, and undoubtedly, at his daily task, a very capable one. Breadth in the sense of extension, of getting about to many people and places, he shows in his book. Unhappily he seems to possess no other dimension." Arthur Ruhl
— + Nation 119:605 D 3 '24 700w

"One cannot help regretting that he did not spend his powers on a quarter of the number, and so avoid the sketchiness of journalistic portraiture. As it is, his book is less a gallery of portraits of those men who have done most to make or to mar the Europe in which we live to-day than a commentary on European politics since the War. The impeccability of Mr. Huddleston's taste in that matter is well known."
+ — Nation and Ath 36:450 D 20 '24 800w

Reviewed by Nathaniel Peffer
New Repub 41:177 Ja 7 '25 140w

"It is sketchy, but the strokes are firm. The real excellence of Mr. Huddleston's book lies in its inclusion of background." J. D. Adams
+ — N Y Times p1 O 5 '24 2550w

N Y Tribune p9 Ja 18 '25 220w

Reviewed by F. V. Roman
N Y World p8e N 9 '24 770w

"Each sketch would go well with the morning's ham and eggs, but taken together they leave an unsatisfactory impression."
— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p735 N 13 '24 420w

HUDSON, STEPHEN. Tony. 224p $2 Knopf
24-10842

"Tony" is another instalment of the history of the Kurt family, filling the interval between "Elinor Colhouse" and "Richard Kurt." It takes up the story at the point where Richard comes back to England bringing his American wife Elinor with him. Richard's brother Tony tells the story in the form of a monolog addressed to Richard. It is concerned with his own intrigues and his brother's and the doings of the smart set in London, Paris and the Riviera. The tale of their worthless lives is told with an easy cynicism and an air of complete detachment and irresponsibility.

Boston Transcript p3 Je 14 '24 500w
Dial 77:265 S '24 50w

"It is a triumph for Mr. Hudson to have given significance and beauty to a theme so apparently sordid, setting everything down with the modesty and cleanness of art." Edwin Muir
+ Lit R p819 Je 14 '24 1150w

"The method of narration used is technically wrong: the easy smoking-room manner is all very well for anecdote or episode, but a direct method of address, when couched in the unimaginative slang of modern ennui, quickly loses effect."
— Nation and Ath 35:60 Ap 12 '24 160w

"The characters are some of the dreariest in fiction, belonging to the stupidest section of the rich. They are convincing and alive, but I still fail to see what Mr. Hudson's object is in spending so much talent on people with such empty, tiresome, uninteresting souls." Raymond Mortimer
— + New Statesman 22:734 Mr 29 '24 220w
N Y Times p8 My 18 '24 850w

"It is, in spite of its superficiality, a fascinating and marvelously realized story. Mr. Hudson's technique is superb. The issue recurs, none the less, that, with so suave and mellifluous a method, it is a pity that Mr. Hudson has the vice of 'upper middle-class British thinness' of material." J. W. C.
+ — N Y World p7e Je 1 '24 300w

"There is inevitably a certain monotony about such a story; but its air of worldly wisdom and its vivid description of shady characters and sunny scenes will win it some popularity."
+ — Sat R 137:274 Mr 15 '24 130w

"There is a good deal of rather artificially brutal talk; there are episodes so sordid that they appear to have been painfully invented as illustrations of the depths to which cads, cheats and liars will descend; and there is never a breath of life. Mr. Hudson is clever enough, he writes well enough, he can do you a pretty line in sensuous description, but his book is a mere tour de force. There is a priggishness of vice as well as of virtue, and they are equally dull." Gerald Gould
— + Sat R 137:305 Mr 22 '24 240w

"The story is a squalid one; the characters, with two or three exceptions so disreputable as scarcely to be interesting; any sharpness of situation is lost either through the oblique narration or through the comprehensible reticence of Tony himself." L. P. Hartley
— Spec 132:508 Mr 29 '24 460w

"He succeeds in giving an extremely vivid picture of a certain wealthy social set into whose lives it is perhaps flattering to be introduced so intimately, though only a reader of the mentality of Tony would consider it the whole, or even an important part, of the world."
— The Times [London] Lit Sup p158 Mr 13 '24 480w

HUDSON, W. H. Hudson anthology; arranged
2 by Edward Garnett. 381p $3 Dutton [7s 6d Dent]
828 24-28799

Selected passages varying from nine pages to less than a page in length, from the works of Hudson. The anthology is arranged in three sections: (1) South American nature and bird books; (2) English nature and bird books; (3) Romances and tales.

Reviewed by Muna Lee
N Y World p8m Ja 4 '25 1100w

"The truth seems to be that, with two exceptions only, Hudson is almost better in a copious anthology like this one, than in the two dozen volumes that comprise his 'Works.' The exceptions are of course, 'Far Away and Long Ago,' the most abidingly beautiful autobiography of our time, and 'A Shepherd's Life'; snippets from those are altogether inadequate. But the others could well bear a stiff pruning, and Mr. Garnett's knife was as sharp as his eye was sure."
Sat R 138:314 S 27 '24 600w

"Mr. Garnett has done his work sensibly and well; he has, on the whole, chosen good, simple, straightforward extracts. Most of them are nature-observation, and perhaps Mr. Garnett might with advantage have chosen more from the novels and short stories."
+ — Spec 133:476 O 4 '24 150w

"Affords an adequate survey alike of the eminent naturalist's utterly unforced and velvety style and of his marvelously subtle and sympathetic observation of birds."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 D 10 '24 450w

"Whether as critic or friend, no one was better equipped for making the choice than Mr. Edward Garnett. Seeing what this book holds and what it suggests, and how impartially it covers the whole range of his books, one undoubtedly gets a heightened impression of his power and ceases questioning his style."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p767 N 20 '24 500w

HUEBOTTER, HARRY ADOLPH. Mechanics of the gasoline engine. 313p il $4 McGraw
621.43 Gas and oil engines 23-15149

"Concerned with actual mathematical calculations in engine design. Though calculus is essential in the development of the formulas introduced, it is not required for their application."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:200 Ap '24

HUESTON, ETHEL (POWELSON) (MRS E. J. BEST). Coasting down East; with pencil drawings from nature by Edward C. Caswell. 304p $3.50 Dodd
917.41 Maine—Description and travel 24-24645

Description, history, legend and romance are combined with a slight thread of personal narrative in this account of a motor tour along the Maine coast from Kittery to Calais. Illustrated with pencil drawings.

Booklist 21:146 Ja '25
Boston Transcript p3 D 13 '24 700w
Cleveland p96 D '24

"Ethel Hueston is candidly, chattily, at times a bit complacently, feminine. Her narrative of the trip is vivacious, informal, and makes easy reading. She views old landmarks with romantic curiosity and retails the legends associated with them. Historical background and local gossip are brought in entertainingly to give more than visual interest to the places she visits." Lawton Mackall
+ Lit R p5 N 8 '24 400w

"Contains charming sketches, both in pencil and in print, of the towns and bays along the way."
+ N Y Times p26 O 12 '24 270w.

Reviewed by Blair Niles
N Y Tribune p9 N 2 '24 280w
N Y World p9e O 19 '24 140w
Outlook 138:467 N 19 '24 60w

"It might be urged that there is not in the book very much of the sights, sounds and scents of coast or, indeed, very much of anything except the author's cheerfully feminine penchant for narrating incidents and conveying flippant impressions and dipping into history and legend now and then for the sake of atmosphere or seasoning. But it will have to be admitted that her piquant phrasing imparts a really amusing vitality to trifles."
— + Springf'd Republican p7a O 5 '24 900w

HUESTON, ETHEL (POWELSON) (MRS E. J. BEST). Prudence's daughter. 309p il $2 Bobbs 24-9667

"Ethel Hueston's storied Prudence—she of the Parsonage—grown up and married, has a daughter, Geraldine, who also grows up, but, unlike her mother, develops the wisdom of the new age. Miss Hueston tells of the adventures into which Geraldine is led through her search for the new freedom. It is a tale of Jerry in New York—Jerry being short for daughter's formal name—and of Prudence in Des Moines. The parsonage influence is strong to keep Jerry straight and destiny is kind to give her love."—N Y World

"The novel is delightfully written." E. B. S.
+ Lit R p10 S 13 '24 160w

"It is all quite pleasing to read, but so light as to float immediately out of the reader's mind after it is finished."
+ — N Y Times p9 My 11 '24 330w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p6e My 11 '24 100w

HUGHAN, JESSIE WALLACE. Study of international government. (Crowell's social science ser.) 401p $2.75 Crowell [10s 6d Harrap]
341 International law and relations. League of nations. International cooperation
23-13381

"The present study of international government is not a plea for or against the present League of Nations per se, but is, as its name implies, an analysis of the efforts at government between and among nations since the dawn of civilization. Its pages endeavor to trace international government from primitive to modern society, bringing out its connection with the present world movements of nationalism, imperialism, and internationalism. It shows, for example, how the Papacy during the Middle Ages approached a form of international government and how modern history has brought a gradual development along the legislative, executive and judicial lines. The historical portions are followed by an analysis of the constitution and achievements of the actual League, and, last of all, by a consideration of its specific problems in the light of economics, biology and social psychology."—Preface

Am Pol Sci R 18:418 My '24 300w
Cath World 119:567 Jl '24 240w
Cleveland p54 Jl '24

"The gathering and sifting of so great a mass of material and the organizing this mass into a systematic treatise, meant labor long and arduous, and a power of selection at once keen and discriminating. Miss Hughan has apparently missed no phase of the question of the international ideal. . . The book should appeal to every student of present day problems." G. D. M.
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p10 F 24 '24 420w

Reviewed by W. MacDonald
Nation 118:286 Mr 12 '24 300w
R of Rs 68:558 N '23 110w

Reviewed by Alpha Buse
Survey 51:413 Ja 15 '24 340w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p115 F 21 '24 140w
Wis Lib Bul 20:65 Mr '24

HUGHES, HATCHER. Hell-bent fer heaven. 187p $1.50 Harper
812 24-10955

A drama of the Carolina mountains which has for its central figure Rufe Pryor, a religious fanatic and weakling who is, in Grandpap Hunt's phrase, "hell-bent fer heaven." He is a trouble breeder and his religious perversity takes the form of a fierce hatred of joy. He rouses the dormant feud between the Hunts and Lowries which nearly leads to murder and does his best to separate lovers. Yet thru all the strife which he stirs up he is apparently convinced that he is an instrument of the Lord.

Booklist 21:16 O '24
Cleveland p52 Jl '24

"The comedy is never superficial, it is inherent in the characters. There is no conscious striving for comic effect. The dialogue is racy and close to the soil—to the primitive lives of the mountain folk." F. H. K.
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Ag 10 '24 650w

"A play of genuine distinction, skillfully written, with effective scenes and well-drawn characters." Herschel Brickell
+ Lit R p754 My 17 '24 750w

"Mr. Hughes has succeeded in telling a story thoroughly suited to the popular stage and yet in making its intellectual implications unmistakable." Carl Van Doren
+ Nation 118:68 Ja 16 '24 700w

"The average reader will, we think, find it encumbered by too much religious discussion and sermonizing, chiefly by persons whose notions of theology are as primitive as their passions. And this discursive tendency, added to much tedious repetition, makes for dull reading."

HUGHES, HATCHER—Continued
— + Outlook 137:158 My 28 '24 600w
Wis Lib Bul 20:176 Jl '24

HUGHES, RUPERT. Golden ladder. 354p $2 Harper
24-13016

